UNC Roars Back In Second-Half Surge

Evans Vetoes Single Honor Council

Tar Heels Top Clemson 62-51; Stanley Hits 16

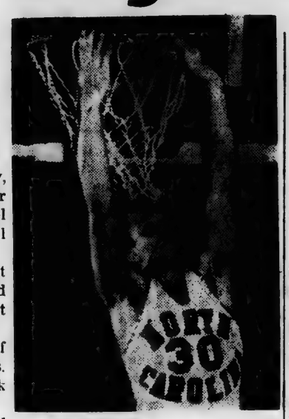
By BILL KING

REYNOLDS COLISEUM, Raleigh—Sophomore forward Ray Stanley, a bench-warmer for most of the season, provided the Carolina Tar Heels with that "Cinderella" touch here yesterday and the Chapel Hillians battled their way into the semi-finals of the ACC basketball tournament against State with a 62-51 victory over Clemson.

It took a magnificent second half surge by the Carolinians to get by the rugged and inspired Clemson club which held a halftime lead of 24-19 and built up margins of as much as 12 points during the first stanza.

Carolina hit a miserable 25.9 percent of its shots in the first half and didn't get its first basket until after six minutes and 25 seconds. A man to man defense and some personnel maneuvering by Frank McGuire got the Tar Heels rolling toward the end of the half.

Stanley's 16 points was second only to Pete Brennan who tossed in 22 and turned in a fine performance despite the fact he was double teamed most of the way. But it was Stanley, real jumping jack, who bagged 10 rebounds and provided the spark the Tar Heels needed to sweat through this toughie.



Although Carolina found the range at the beginning of the second half and finished the game with a 40.7 shooting accuracy, it wasn't until nine minutes and 14 seconds into the second half that the Tar Heels were able to gain the lead. Clemson had led throughout the contest until Brennan tossed in a free throw to make it 35-34 with 10:46 remaining. From there, Carolina built onto that lead and Clemson never contended again.

Walt Gibbson, a bespectacled sophomore from McKeesport, Pa., started out like a one man wreck-

New Bill To Put Juries Into Present System

By PRINGLE PIPKIN

With a veto Student Body President Sonny Evans killed last night the Student Legislature's bill which would provide a single council composed of both men and women which would try both men and women.

By a vote of 41-0 the Student Legislature voted to cancel the election concerning the Honor Council amendments to the Student Constitution to be held Tuesday.

Roger Foushee (SP) introduced on the behalf of Sonny Hallford, Student Body Attorney-General, and George Ragsdale, Chairman of the Men's Honor Council, a bill to revise the Honor Council composition but to retain two separate councils.

With the exception of the separate councils this bill is identical to the early bill, which called for a jury and a council of five to try Honor Code violations.

The jurisdictions of the Honor Councils remain the same, and, therefore, no constitutional amendment is needed. The Student Constitution lets the Student Legislature determine the composition of the Honor Councils, and so there will be no campus wide vote.

The Student Constitution makes statements only about the jurisdiction of the councils and can be changed only by a campus-wide vote.

No Delayed Rush

By a wide margin Gary Green's (SP) bill to delay rush was defeated. The Carolina Quarterly was granted $650 upon the passage of Pat Adams' bill. Other bills were held in committee.

"Now, the people involved are confused, bitter, and there is disunity of grave dimension throughout Student Government. I have become convinced that the jury system if installed in this sort of an atmosphere (a unitary council) would be doomed to failure," Evans said.

He explained that "the concept of juries is a sound one which ought to be installed into the present system."

Lost Contact

"Perhaps the system has lost contact with the students," Evans said. Asserting that "the judicial power has gravitated toward a narrow segment of the student body," he stated that 14 men of a 15 man Honor Council are in fraternities.

Ten of the 14 men are from three houses. He said the same situation existed in the Woman's Council.

"I for one, though I am in a fraternity, deplore the fact that our justice system is administered by representatives of one-sixth of the student body to the other five-sixths."

"This is not to imply collusion or incompetence, . . . but the situation is very unhealthy for the proper administration of campus justice. Perhaps this is the reason for the loss of contact," he commented.

He said, that the student freedom lay "in a vigorous Honor System administered by democratic courts and supported through the respect of all of the student body."

Arthur Miller's 'View From Bridge'—A Modern Tragedy In Greek Form

Arthur Miller's "A View From The Bridge," to be presented by The Carolina Playmakers in The Playmakers Theatre Wednesday through Sunday at 8:30, is a modern tragedy in the Greek form. Reminiscent of Euripides' Hippolytus, the play concerns a man whose love for his ward leads to his death.

Representing the chorus-commentor in the play is the figure of Alfieri, a lawyer, played by John Sneden of Tenafly, N. J. Sneden will be remembered by campus audiences for his portrayal of The Daulphin in "The Lark," Mr. Lundie in "Brigadoon" and Caesar in "Androcles and the Lion." Sneden is a senior in Dramatic Art.

First Leading Role

As Catherine, the young niece, Margaret Starnes, Raleigh, will appear in a leading role for the Playmakers for the first time. She has been seen at East Carolina College in "Blithe Spirit," "Riders to the Sea," and "Antigone." This fill she played in the Playmakers studio production of "No Exit."

Ken Callender, Greensboro, enacts the role of Eddie, the leading figure in the play, whose failure to understand the passion for his niece brings about his tragic downfall.

Page Williams, Fort Thomas, Kentucky, plays Beatrice, Eddie's wife. Her work at the University of Kentucky has included roles in "The Lady's Not for Burning," "Detective Story," "The Taming of the Shrew," and "The Innocents."

Director

"A View From The Bridge" is directed by Thomas M. Patterson, veteran director who also presented Miller's earlier "little man" tragedy, "Death of a Salesman."

Tickets for "A View From The Bridge" are available in The Playmakers Business Office, 214 Abernethy Hall, and Ledbetter-Pickard. All seats are reserved at $1.50.

Real Gone Explorer

CAPE CANAVERAL, March 6 (AP)—Explorer II, intended as a second U. S. satellite, definitely did not go into orbit, its makers announced today.

Scientists said that the fourth stage rocket—a 40-inch tube—failed to ignite and did not drive the satellite up to orbital speed of 18,000 miles per hour.

They said the tube-like 32-pound satellite was not protected against high heating and probably burned up in the friction of the atmosphere some 1,900 miles from Cape Canaveral where it was fired at 1:28 p. m. (EST) yesterday.

Why Do You Shake?

WILMINGTON, N. C., March 6 (AP)—The Navy said today it was not using any munitions in its offshore exercises sufficient to cause an inland seismograph to record a shock. The announcement deepened the mystery of the earth tremors along this coastal area.

Dr. Gerald McCarthy, who operates the seismograph at UNC, said today that his calculations showed that two earth tremors recorded yesterday originated "10 miles south of the mouth of the Cape Fear River."

The two tremors yesterday were the seventh and eighth recorded in the area since Feb. 17, the first four came on successive days between 9:25 a.m. and 9:55 a.m. Then

Associate Ed Crowther Leaves For World's Fair

Frank H. Crowther, associate editor of The Daily Tar Heel, has been notified of his acceptance as guide demonstrator for the Brussels World's Fair, opening April 17 in Belgium.

He will leave Chapel Hill Sunday, with plans to meet other U. S. delegates to the Brussels Fair in New York on March 28. The group then will sail for Europe.

Official notice of his acceptance came by telegram Thursday from Sen. John Marshall Butler of Maryland.

Crowther's appointment to the U. S. delegation came from Congress voted additional funds for the fair, the greatest of the traditional international expositions held during the past 100 years.

The fair seeks "to bring the peoples of the world together in an atmosphere of peaceful exchange, and to rekindle human values and step forward to understaning among nations."

"The theme of the exhibition," reads the fair's official publication, "as symbolized by the Atomium, is a declaration of faith—mankind's ability to mold atomic age to the ultimate advantage of all nations and peoples."

Crowther will be among more than 200 guide demonstrators sponsored by the U. S. State Department and individual states within the union. Expenses of all delegates are financed by the respective governments.

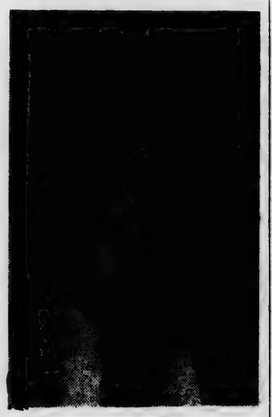
Crowther, who lived in France two years while working with the State Department, will spend about two and one-half months in Paris with friends after the fair. He will return to UNC for the spring session, 1959.

UNC Debators Enter Tourney In New York

A UNC debate team are entered in the Brooklyn College Eleventh Annual Invitational Debate Tournament which began yesterday and continues through Sunday.

The affirmative team consists of John Brooks and Tom Long, and on the negative team are Taylor McMillan and Bill Willis.

The topic for debate is "Resolved: That the requirement of membership in a labor organization as a condition of employment should be illegal."



Around 40 teams are expected to participate in the Brooklyn College tournament, which is the last invitational tournament UNC debators will participate in this year. There will be five rounds of debate in the tournament.

Reservations Due For Women's Rooms

Room reservations for summer school or the fall semester are being made now through Wednesday in the dormitories and not in the Dean of Women's office as had been done for previous semesters.

Coeds have been reminded that they must first pay a $10 deposit fee in the basement of South Building before filling out applications for rooms.

Room reservations may be made in the dormitory between 8 p.m. and closing hours Monday through Fridays.

UP Convention Dates Changed Due To Conflict

The days for the University Party conventions have been changed because of a conflict with the Interfraternity Council and Panhellenic Council sponsored concert Monday night, according to an announcement yesterday by Syd Shuford, UP chairman.

The convention meetings have been re-scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday nights. Tuesday night at 7:15 the remaining legislature seat nominations will be made, as well as for senior class officers and National Student Association coordinator.

Student government officers will be nominated Wednesday night at 8 o'clock.

Would Be Unfair

In announcing the change in days, Shuford said, "I feel that it would be unfair to the IFC and Panhellenic to deliberately confict with their concert as this is for a most worthy cause, that of furtherance of harmonious relations between the Greek letter societies and the people of the Chapel Hill area."

This concert is to be presented by Ralph Marterie's orchestra Monday night at 8 o'clock in Memorial Hall.

Symposium Conflict

Shuford said that the conventions are being held next week because of the Carolina Symposium which begins March 16 and continues throughout that week.

Shuford urged all sororities and fraternities to arrange their chapter meetings as best so as to permit adequate representation at convention sessions.

No Senior Diplomas Unless Frat Bills Paid

The Interfraternity Council in its meeting Monday night considered a bill introduced by Frank Malone providing that seniors who have not paid their house bills by graduation will not receive their diplomas. The bill was passed unanimously and will be sent to Sam Magill, director of student activities, for administration approval.

In other action Monday the Greek Week project was set. Fraternity pledges will help the Chapel Hill Jaycees clear an area for housing purposes next week.

A discussion of fraternity problems occupied a considerable portion of the meeting. It was not disclosed exactly what problems were discussed, but suggestions on the problems will be heard at next meetnig.

Tickets to the Charity Concert jointly sponsored by the Panhellenic and Interfraternity Councils were handed out to member fraternities. The concert will feature Ralph Marterie and will be held March 10.

Psychotherapy Is Discussed At Grad Club Meet

"Psychotherapy, if employed correctly, is a unique human relationship, from which all competition is eliminated betwen the two participants," Dr. Harley Shands told the Graduate Club supper this week.

Dr. Shands, who is associate professor of psychiatry in the School of Medicine, discussed the overall methods used in psychoanalysis, which he discribed as "doing nothing skillfully."

A most important knowledge for a psychotherapist is how to use silence at the proper time, while letting the patient talk out his thoughts, Dr. Shands said. The therapist must exercise self-control to avoid giving the expected response which the patient thinks his statements will bring.

"The novelty of psychotherapy is the belief that a person gains

Honor Council's Revision: Pig In Legislative Poke

The bill to revise the student judiciary has now been kicked around in such haste and with so little direction that nothing but confusion has been produced in student minds.

Even among the legislature are persons who hardly understand, from one week to the next, what they voted on the last session and what new amendments will be offered next. They, too, are confused.

If nothing else, the whole fiasco should teach our political leaders that the haste with which they acted has resulted in only ill-conceived proposals that should have been ironed out long before the first bill was presented to the legislature.

Due to this haste, the original bill has been amended and reamended with such frequency that only those who are responsible for its drawing should be expected to keep pace with the numerous revisions.

Under these circumstances, it is not fair to the student body to impose upon them an election to determine the course of a proposal which they are at loss to understand. The student body should hardly be expected to pass judgment on such vague legislation.

If, in fact, the legislature wants to thrust the judicial revisions upon the students for acceptance or defeat, then those revisions should be defeated for the sole reason that to accept them would be buying a pig in a poke.

However, we believe that those who understand the measure sincerely desire its passage. Consequently, it would be in their own interest to delay action on it until every thinking student at UNC has convinced himself of its merits or shortcomings.

There should at this time be no election date set for the constitutional amendments requisite to acceptance of the new male-female council. It should be set only after students and politicians alike know what they will be voting on when they go to the polls on the announced day.

It seems to us rather ridiculous to say now that an election will be held two weeks hence, and its outcome will determine the course of a revised judiciary for which we don't yet have a plan. Yet that is precisely what the current calendar calls for.

An example of the indecision and lack of direction which has characterized the whole proposal is the cancellation of a scheduled forum Wednesday night. That cancellation was due to a legislative argument over another amendment to the original bill.

Now, there's nothing wrong with differences of opinion on what a given bill should or should not include. But these should come before and not after a date is announced for a public forum at which the pros and cons of the considered bill are to be discussed.

One week after the judiciary revision bill was presented to the legislature — the very day it was passed — we noted that our student solons had acted with too much haste — and we advised them to slow down in the future.

Obviously, they failed to listen. For that reason they may defeat single-handedly a basically good provision which many students will certainly kill unless they understand more about it.

THE CHARLOTTE OBSERVER

How Long Can He Say No?

Logic and reason are on the side of Secretary of State Dulles in rejecting Russia's latest proposal for a pre-Summit meeting of foreign ministers.

The Kremlin wants the ministers to meet next month, and the heads of state in June.

It asks a strict guarantee that the Summit conference will be held, whatever happens at the pre-session parley.

The Russian leaders make it clear they will only discuss issues embraced by their recent propaganda line — disarmament, nuclear weapons, trade and cultural relations.

They even rule out the reunification of Germany, or the plight of the satellite countries.

They want the Summit meeting expanded to include representatives from countries other than the Big Four, such as Poland, Czechoslovakia, Romania.

Dulles is a realist.

He is convinced that a makeshift meeting of the foreign ministers, with insufficient time and no authority to determine possible areas for agreement, would achieve no useful purpose.

He foresees that a Summit conference, under conditions laid down by the Russians, would serve merely as a forum for Soviet propaganda.

He is, of course, right. The fact doesn't make his position, or that of the United States, any more convincing in the eyes of a world fearful of war, hungry for peace, dazzled in part by the Russian show of military-scientific might and clever use of opportunistic techniques.

By constantly assuming the initiative, the Kremlin has forced the United States into a corner that may become indefensible, logic and truth notwithstanding.

Hasn't the time come to accent the positive, even if it hurts?

NO DEAL WITH RUSSIANS

To the editor:

I hope space will permit you to print an opposite view of which Mr. Gans has taken toward Mr. Dulles and our foreign policy.

I have just read Mr. Gans' article concerning Mr. Dulles' reply to the Soviet proposal for a summit conference. My first thought is how naive of you, but you are not alone. Mr. Gans is to be complemented on his noble thoughts. It is just too bad that the world isn't run by noble thoughts and logic. The Soviet is run by men who have publicly vowed to rule the world through communism.

The world would be in much better shape today if our government leaders had taken a more realistic, rather than idealistic, view toward the Soviets. What else but a hoax can any thinking man call the soviet proposals for a summit talk. The Soviet actions after past summit talks have been nothing but a hoax and a farce by the very definition of the words. At last count the Soviets had broken over sixty-five major treaty and compact agreements.

It is almost safe to say that the Soviets have failed in deed or in faith to live up to every single agreement they have made with the West within the last fifteen years. It has taken a long time—fifteen years—for our leaders to face the cold, harsh light of reality and stand up to the Soviets and demand concrete proof of a change in their past attitude.

We are not endangering the world to hydrogen bomb warfare by calling the Soviet proposals a hoax. Indeed Mr. Dulles' action may have a sobering effect on the leaders of the Soviet Union. When these leaders realize that we are not idealist, but strong realist, they may get the idea that the time has really come for them to change their ways.

The future of democracy is at stake and I think the best way to insure its continuance is to keep the present realistic view toward the Soviets. It is a common maxim that we do business only with people whom we trust and until the Soviets show us in some salient way that we can trust them we should refrain from entering into any agreements with them.

MURRAY RIGHT?

Perhaps Mr. Murray was right about Coach McGuire creating a monster. Coach McGuire has proven that his uncalled for (I think) remarks to the spectators can't produce sportsmanlike conduct. The DTH attendts tht the situation has deteriorated since McGuire began his campaign. He speaks from no position of power and thus aggravates people.

Higher university officials could, perhaps, speak from a position of power. But imagine the outcries of "mettling" you'ld get from the student body the moment they did. McGuire is not per se a university official. The fans like him and don't think he's mettling; they're just aggravated. Desirable as it might be the fans are not likely to listen to his advice on behavior. Maybe Coach McGuire should do what many Tar Heel fans have advised Mr. Murray to do: worry about his team. POLITICAL PERSPECTIVE

Defeat Of Council Revision Urged

By PRINGLE PIPKIN

(The following article was written before Thursday evening; however I believe its arguments are not less true.)

It should now be evident that the only issue which the Student Body will determine when it votes on the amendments to the Student Constitution that will change the jurisdiction of the councils is whether there will be a single or dual Honor Councils.

These amendments, if passed, will only create a single council which will have jurisidiction over men and women who violate the Honor Code and who are not in the Dental, Medical or Law Schools.

Everything else connected with the Honor Council Revision bill is determined by the Student Legislature without the vote of the Student Body.

Therefore, in light of the fact that you will be voting only on the number of Honor Councils, I will discuss the issue.

Why does one make a change? A change is made in order to correct some deficiency in an existing situation. A change is usually intended to eradicate some evil which is inherent in the status quo. (The value system used to determine "evil" is, indeed, open to great discussion, but all I am attempting to set forth is the rationale of change.)

The logical person would not change what he regards to be the best possible he can attain (that which satisfies the goals he wishes to reach).

We change to gain something which we believe to be lacking.

Now, take the present Honor Councils, one for women and one for men, and view them with regard to my statements concerning change.

Wherein have they failed? I have never heard a single specific reference during the recent discussions to a time when an Honor Council failed to give justice because its composition was all of one sex.

I do not recall hearing anyone saying that "when this poor student was tried, he (or she) could have received justice if there had just been a council made up of both men and women."

I do not believe that the present dual councils have been accused of incompetency. No one has presented a list giving the number of times that the present councils have failed to be just.

Then, if the present dual councils have not failed in practice, where have they failed?

They have failed because they do not fit into any nice theory about how a government should be ideally run.

Their critics have ably demonstrated this fact, but to me this is all they have demonstrated. (I will be glad to change my opinions if the proponents of this bill can show me specific cases where the dual system has failed.)

So now the argument becomes simply my speculations against those who are against dual Honor Councils. Theory will confute theory. My only advantage in this argument is that the dual system has not been shown to have failed in the past.

The proponents of the revision say that the single council would provide a unified idea of justice at least more unified than the present dual system.

But how great has the difference been between the idea of justice held by the Men's Honor Council and that of the Women's Honor Council? I do not believe that I have heard any charge that a dangerous disparity exists.

What then can be said for the dual system? It is generally believed that a person will talk more freely before members of his (her) own sex about matters related to personal life.

I believe both sides in this controversy accept the fact that this information concerning the personal life of an individual is important in most cases when it comes time to determine a just sentence for the offender.

It seems to me that members of my own sex would be able to understand the problems which I might face. I believe that the coeds feel the same way.

Exchange Student Tells Of First Days In Europe

(Dan Southerland, Goettingen exchange student for 1956-57, traveled in Poland for two weeks last summer on invitation of the Polish Students Association. This is the first in a series of several articles on Poland.

Although arrangements had been made a month before, I spent two days at the Polish Military Mission in Berlin getting my visa. Several Poles living in West Germany had been waiting much longer than I, as long as seven months to a year for a chance to visit close relatives in Poland.

The regular night train to Warsaw left the Ostbahnhof in East Berlin at 9:30 p.m. Almost all the passengers were students on their way to the so-called "World Youth Festival" in Moscow. I was in a car overcrowded with delegates to the festival from France and Luxembourg. Several high school age girls and boys from the Luxembourg delegation made a place for me in their compartment.

Not unlike most Americans, fearing Communists as much as bacteria, I was reassured to find that my "fellow travelers" were not Communists, but were taking the trip, because of the Soviet offer to pay delegates all expenses in Moscow as well as most of the travel expense. One student feared, however, that he would never be allowed to enter the USA if our government knew that he had taken such a trip. We talked and they shared with me wurst, eggs, and cake, which had been provided in overabundance to festival delegates.

During a short stop at Frankfurt an Oder just before crossing from East Germany into Poland, women of the East German Red Cross handed cups of hot tea into the train windows for festival delegates.

After sleeping several hours in the luggage rack of our compartment, I awoke to view the flat farmland between Posen and Warsaw. Soon the Palance of Culture of Warsaw stood out on the horizon. I said goodby to the friendly Moscow-bound Luxembourg delegation.

At the station, I was met by a Polish student, dressed in a frayed suit, who took me to the International Student Hotel on the Madalinskiego. From the first, his frankness revealed the startling freedom of speech which the Poles have enjoyed since the October, 1956 Revolution.

Due to my delay in Berlin, the group I was supposed to tour with had already left Warsaw when I arrived. So I decided to plan my own tour and travel alone. I was given complete freedom to travel when and where I wanted to Stanislaw, an electrical engineering student at the Warsaw Polytechnic School, offered to show me around Warsaw. (Students from this school took part in Warsaw uprisings in the fall of 1957).

For the most part Warsaw is rebuilt in Russian style architecture. The "Constitution Place" reminded me very much of the strong Russian influence seen in the showcase street of East Berlin, the "Stalinallee."

The Palace of Science and Culture built in the same style as Moscow University, towers over all other buildings in Warsaw. This gift of the Soviet Union is despised by the people. According to the Poles, the best place to live in Warsaw would be in the Culture Palace, because there would be the only place in the city where you can't see the "monstrosity." Most of the jokes about the Palace are malicious enough not to be printed. Not only is this Soviet "gift" built in bad taste, but the Poles feel that they have more than paid for it in Polish coal, through exploitation by the Russians in trade.

The Culture Palace contains movie theatres, a fine swimming pool, a night club, and a huge conference hall, all available to the public. What I saw of the cold cheerless interior were marble-faced walls and chandeliers, with no paintings, carpets, or other decoration.

The Russian attempt to build something monumental had been overdone. The result was what Germans call Zueckerbaecker (Confectionary) architecture: bombastic and superficial.

In Warsaw, along with statues of Copernicus and the author, Adam Michiewicz, one sees modern statuary dedicated to the glorification of the working class. Huge statues of mechanics and laborers stand before the Culture Palace and at Constitution Square.

I saw no monuments to Stalin, however; in fact, not in all of Poland. The Stalin era brings back unpleasant memories to most Poles. However, an old street marker, evidently overlooked during the de-Stalinfication, bore witness that one of Warsaw's main streets had been the "ulica Stalin" before being renamed.

In contrast to the Russian influence, the "Old City" in Warsaw has been painstakingly rebuilt just as it was in the 15th century, with narrow streets and colorfully frescoed houses.

Transportation in Warsaw, as in other Polish cities, is inadequate. Every hour of the day seems to be rush hour on the busses and street cars. At first, I was embarrassed by accidently bumping someone in an overcrowded streetcar. But elderly women among others just smiled understandingly as though they were used to being punched about every day.

The people have developed some peculiar talents due to this problem. They think nothing of sprinting after a streetcar for half a block, leaping on, and riding with one foot on the step and one hand on a rail. A bus driver explained, "If I don't drive off before everyone is on, they would just keep piling in the doors."

Warsaw traffic consists of a peculiar hodgepodge of busses and streetcars, many taxis, and a number of cars as well as a few other foreign makes horse drawn wagons.

Very few Poles have automobiles. Therefore, much of Warsaw's traffic are taxis, mostly of the standard "Warszawa" make; some are state-owned and some privately owned.

I saw several American cars, probably brought in legally or illegally from the tax-free port of Antwerp. Ironically enough, I saw a number of American cars in the parking lot of the Communist Party Building in Warsaw.

An evident sign of backwardness, numerous horse drawn wagons travel the streets of Warsaw and other Polish cities. I was awakened usually at 5 a.m. by the clatter of hoofs on the cobble stone street by my window, as produce came into the city from the outlying farms.

Kappa Psis Party & Picnic

The Kappa Psis interrupted a week of studying to honor their new initiates with a party Wednesday night at the house given by past Regent Hugh Hinton. Several alumni were on hand to participate in the evening's fun with the collegiate chapter.

Last weekend a number of the Kappa Psis and their dates welcomed the Spring weather with a picnic out at Eastwood Lake. Following the picnic the group retreated to the house to end the day with an evening of dancing.

Kappas Elect Pledge Officers

Jan Cobbs of Webster Groves, Mo., was elected president of the Kappa Kappa Gamma Pledge Class Wednesday night. Other officers elected include Sue Voigt of Manhasset, N. Y., vice president; Charlotte Pope of Albemarle, secretary; Carol Freeman of Richmond, Va., treasurer and Cam Whittemore of Bronxville, N. Y. social chairman.

On Thursday evening the Kappas were guests at a dinner party given by the Chi Psis at the Chi Psi Lodge.

Jim Carse Speaks To Sig Eps

Recently Jim Carse, member of the faculty committee on fraternities and sororities and a staff member of the YMCA, challenged brothers and pledges of Sigma Phi Epsilon to "seek truth as the pinnacle of success."

Carse spoke at the first annual Pledge dinner for the brotherhood, saying that the chief fault of the University is the "restlessness" of its students.

Carse stated that UNC is not on an intellectual par with other universities in the nation while its students are capable, and then named "restlessness" as the chief element of fault. He then recognized the opportunities that fraternities have to encourage pursuit of truth instead of aimless wandering.

Moral Awakening

WASHINGTON, March 6 (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham called on President Eisenhower today and said he told him a tremendous moral awakening has taken place while Eisenhower has been in office.

Graham said it has been an unparalleled awakening to which he thinks the President has contributed by his church going and things he has said.

Graham also said he told Eisenhower that "the moral spiritual quality is our greatest defense as well as our greatest offense." He said the President did not disagree with that.

The evangelist told newsmen his 25 minute talk with the President dealt mostly about spiritual things.

Contents Secret

DURHAM, N. C., March 6—(AP) The rumor-laden contents of alleged liquor baron Percy Flower's safe were not disclosed when federal and state tax authorities opened the safe today.

At least nine persons were present when the safe was opened, including two of Flowers' attorneys, but no one would make any comment on the safe's contents.

Clem B. Holding of Raleigh, Flower's attorney, and L. L. Levinson of Smithfield, Flowers' attorney, said they couldn't comment on the contents without permission from Flowers.

PITTSBURGH SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
To Play Here Tuesday Night, March 11

Pittsburgh Orchestra To Play Here March 11

The Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra under the direction of William Steinberg will play here Tuesday, March 11, in Memorial Hall at 8 p.m.

The concert is being sponsored by the Student Entertainment Committee. Students will be admitted free upon presentation of I.D. cards.

Members of the orchestra and its backers are all under "technical arrest" for violating antiquated Pennsylvania "Blue Laws". These laws prohibited Sunday concerts for which admission was charged. If these laws were carried out to the last letter, everyone living in the Keystone State would be prohibited from doing anything but breathing on Sundays, according to orchestra officials.

In the '20's to circumvent the Sunday concert law, the Pittsburgh Symphony Society awarded coupons to its supporters. With this system the majority of the people could not hear the Sunday concerts, because they were not members of the Society.

Something had to be done and the Society did it.

In 1927, the Society started selling tickets. They had found a way to do it and stay within the law. They would have a minister say a prayer before the concert. A local sheriff promptly served a summons after the first concert of this kind. The fat was in the fire.

The instigators of this anti-blue law were each fined, but the damage to the controversial law had been done.

November 19, 1933 the Society was given permission to sell tickets to its Sunday concerts.

The first ticket was sold by the late George Gershwin who performed one of his works that memorable Sunday. As a result, Pittsburgh now has regular Sunday performances of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra.

Inexpensive Foreign Trips Available To Students

Trips to foreign countries this summer at considerably less expense than ordinary are available under a program sponsored by the Experiment in International Living, a non-profit corporation founded in 1932.

Under the Experiment's program, interested persons over 19 years of age may apply for a trip to some foreign country. During the time abroad, the person lives for one month with a family in the country.

A representative from the Experiment will be here Friday from 8 to 9 p.m. in Roland Parker I to discuss the program with any interested person.

Other information may be obtained from Rick Grausman, student representative for the Experiment.

Delta Sigma Pi Names New Pledges

The Alpha Lambda Chapter of Delta Sigma Pi, international professional fraternity in the field of business administration recently held pledging ceremonies for this semester.

The new pledges are: Albert D. Brooks III, Chapel Hill; George D. Carter, Mayodan; James A. Saunders, Nasheville; Kenneth R. Harris, Statesville; William P. ytle, Marion; George Lee Phillips, Marion; Joseph Temple, Chapel Hill; Joel H. Dimmette, Lenoir and George C. Brackette, Gastonia.

Fraternity Fined

A social fraternity has been fined $100 for violation of rules concerning hazing.

Jerry Oppenheimer acting chairman of IFC said the fraternity was to be fined and placed on social probation for 7 months. It was recommended that the $100 fine be contributed to a charitable cause.

The IFC does not release the names of fraternal organizations involved in such cases.

Carolina Quite Different From Germany Goettingen Exchange Student Finds

By MARY MOORE MASON

"You have so many clubs and organizations on this campus! At home we don't have as many types of organizations, and consequently the students are more interested in politics and their studies than they are here," said the blue-eyed blond German boy, throwing up this hands in amazement.

This was Eberhard Boecker, exchange student here on the Goettingen scholarship which is awarded each year to an outstanding student of the University of Goettingen.

The scholarship is also awarded to an outstanding UNC student who would like to study in Goettingen for a year; and a special committee in South building is now choosing our representative for next year.

Eberhard has already observed quite a difference in the student government here at Carolina and the one in his university.

Parliamentary System

"We have a student parliamentary system," he said. "Our student parliament is elected with one representative for every 100 students according to the departments of the college they are in. There is an executive committee, and the president of this executive committee, who is the same thing as the president of your student government, is chosen by the parliament either from one of their members or from somebody outside the parliament."

Two other differences in the set-up of the two universities are that the German university does not have dormitories and that they do not have quizzes and exams. Instead they have one big comprehensive exam at the end of theri college career.

Better Informed

When asked if he thought the students here were as well informed as at his university, Elberhard said, "No, I'm afraid not. Our students are more interested in politics. Of course, we are more in the middle of things."

Eberhard has also been interested in the Negro problem since he has come to the United States. His sister is writing a paper on the subject, and he is attempting to gather information for her while he is here.

"I was interested in seeing all the little Negro shacks with the big cars in the front of them and the TV aerials," he said," so I took a picture of one of these shacks. However, I also took a picture of one of these new, modern homes in another Negro section. I want to show the people at home the contrast and let them see that the problem isn't as bad as some people think it is."

Want To See U.S.

Eberhard would like to see more of the United States; however at present there is nt a fund which provides the Goettingen students travel through the United States after they get here. Consequently, Eberhard is planning on working part of this summer and paying for his own travel around the country.

Dave Davis, UNC student who is now studying in the German university as the Goettingen scholar from here, is also doing quite a lot of traveling through Germany. He lives out in the town of Goettingen and is currently the star of the Goettingen basketball team, according to a friend here at Carolina.

Other students at Carolina who have been on this exchange are John Raper and Dan Southerland.

Reuther

He has studied at both the University of West Virginia and Wayne University in Detroit. Between 1932 and 1935 he and his brother traveled through Europe and Asia and were able to witness the beginnings of the Nazi regime in Germany and the continued rise of Communism in Russia.

Upon his return from this trip he gained national attention as a leader of strikes in the automobile factories in Michigan.

From 1946 until 1951, he held the post of director of the UAW's extensive education program throughout the United States and Canada. Upon the completion of this duty, he became the UAW's European representative. From this vantage point, he was able to play a leading part in displacing Communists from positions of leadership in his union.

Reuther is currently serving in the key position of administrative assistant to the president of the United Auto Workers. He is a well known lecturer, having appeared from coast to coast.

He has been actively supporting the Democratic Party for a number of years and was prominent in the campaigns of Roosevelt, Truman and Stevenson. On May 24, 1949, he was shot by an unknown assailant while reading the evening paper in his living room.

As a result he has suffered the loss of his right eye. He is the father of three children and is now making his home in Washington, D. C.

Burlington Industries is the leading fabricator of textiles in the world. It operates 112 plants in 13 states and five foreign countries, employing some 55,000 people. The companies products include women's woven and knit outerwear, men's fabrics, yarns, plastic fabrics and many other products.

Love is currently a member of the Business Advisory Council and World Trade Advisory Committee of the U. S. Department of Commerce and a trustee of the Committee on Economic Development. He is now serving as vice chairman of the Development Council of the University of North Carolina.

Callendar In New Role In Playmaker Offering

By DAVE PATTERSON

Ken Callendar, familiar to campus audiences for his efforts in the field of comedy, will take an entirely different role in the Playmakers forthcoming "A View From The Bridge." The show will be seen in The Playmakers Theatre, Wednesday through Sunday, March 12-16, at 8:30 p. m.

Callendar enacts the character of Eddie Carbone, a middle-aged Brooklyn longshoreman, who brings about his own tragic death through his trying to keep his family together.

Most Challenging Role

According to Callendar this is his most challenging role to date. His previous work has included Col. Purdy in "Teahouse of the August Moon" and Beaudricourt in this season's opener, "The Lark."

The annual "Sound and Fury" has also been one of his pet projects. Last year he not only assisted in the writing, but took one of the leading parts in the show.

Former Football Player

Callendar's interest in acting is a development of recent years. While in high school in Greensboro he was an ardent sports enthusiast, participating actively in both football and basketball. He came to UNC on a football scholarship, but upon his return after three years of Coast Guard service, gave in to his theatrical bent.

"A View From The Bridge" is the fourth Playmaker production of the year. Tickets are now available in 214 Abernethy Hall and Ledbetter Pickard.

New GM Poll Goes Out; Results Next Week

Questions pertaining to the Carolina Honor System are contained in a poll sent out this week to 300 UNC students by the Graham Memorial Activities Board Polls Committee.

The results of the poll are expected to be tabulated by Tuesday and released by the committee, headed by Jan Cobbs.

The eight questions in the poll include:

"Do you feel the present orientation system for incoming students is adequate to meet freshman needs?

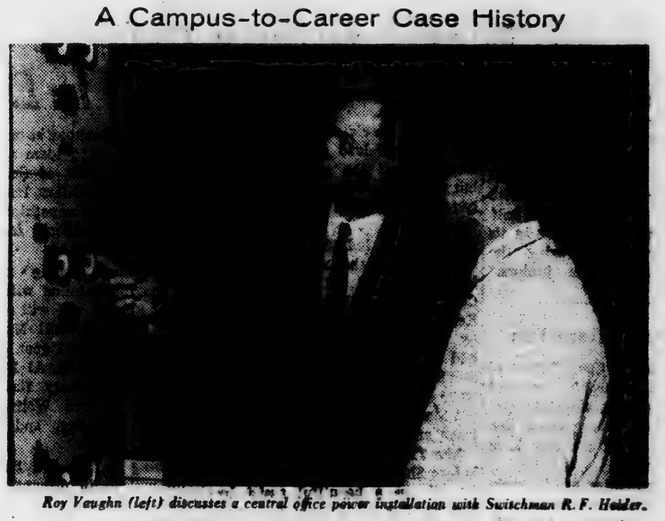
"Do you feel the needs for a new system of requesting books at the cidculation desk in the library?

"Are the prices charged by Chapel Hill merchants fair to students?

"Are you satisfied with the content of the second page of The Daily Tar Heel?

"How much of your college education are you paying for yourself?

"Should sophomores be restricted to parking their cars on campus in the Bell Tower parking lot to help remedy the parking problem?



"At present, all profits of the campus book store are given to a scholarship fund. Do you approve of this? Would you approve of eliminating profits for scholarships and thus reducing prices of books?

"Do you believe in the Carolina Honor System? Do you uphold its principles?"

The Polls Committee has requested that students receiving forms fill out and return the cards as soon as possible.

The 300 students used in the poll were a random sample, statistically determined.

A Campus-to-Career Case History

"I like (and get) 'start-to-finish' engineering assignments"

"When it comes to making a job interesting, I think the assignments a man gets are more important than the size of the project he's working on," says Roy Vaughn of Illinois Bell Telephone Company. "I found that out soon after I graduated. My first job was with an organization where the projects were big, but the individual engineering assignments lacked variety and scope.

"After this experience I looked over power engineering opportunities in a number of companies. I joined Illinois Bell because it promised the most interesting and challenging work. That was three years ago. My work with IBT has everything that I was looking for.

"My job is to engineer the power requirements for telephone central offices. The work never gets routine. One job may be for a new building, the next for expanding existing plant. And power needs vary tremendously from little rural dial offices serving a few hundred telephones, to big metropolitan telephone plants serving hundreds of thousands.

"But what I like best is that I generally handle the job from start to finish. I determine the operational and emergency power requirements of the facilities to be served, and order the equipment needed. And I'm usually on hand during installation to see the job through.

"Not only does this kind of engineering assignment keep work interesting, but I find it is helping me become a better manager. And that improves my chances for advancement."

Roy L. Vaughn, Jr., graduated from Illinois Institute of Technology in 1954 with a B.S. in E.E. degree. He is one of many young men who are finding interesting and rewarding careers in the Bell Telephone Companies. Find out about career opportunities for you. Stanley Given Praise By McGuire After Game

By BILL KING

Reynolds Coliseum, Raleigh—The mob of reporters outside the Carolina dressing room had already decided that Carolina soph Ray Stanley was the man most responsible for the Tar Heel's 62-51 win over Clemson: Frank McGuire reiterated it when he came out to talk to members of the typing lodge.

"Ray played a fine game, "McGuire said in his richest Brooklyn accent. "He's been coming along real well in the past few games and he hit his stride out there today.

Stanley, who had been used only sparingly until yesterday, impressed everyone of the 11,500 fans who saw him enter the game midway the first half and stay rest of the way, scoring 16 points and capturing 10 rebounds.

"Ray hadn't scored much this season," McGuire continued." It's hard to score from the bench and that's where he has been because he hasn't looked good in practice. Ray is a good jumper and a good shooter and this might just be the start of a great career for him," spoke McGuire. "It certainly looked encouraging for next year."

The Tar Heel coach praised the Tigers in general and the sophomore center Walt Gibbons in particular. "Clemson didn't make any mistakes in the first half." he said," and we couldn't do anything right. I thought Gibbons played a very fine ball game."

McGuire was of the opinion that his boys were too tight in the first half. "Every game we lost this season was a lot like that one today. The boys looked tired and tight but they came out it in the second half. That may be just the lift we have been needing for a long time."

McGuire readily admits that he likes the man to man defense. "We had used the man to man and the zone against Clemson this season and the man to man seems to be the most effective."

"Our subs looked good, also," McGuire said as an after thought. John Crotty, Stanley, and Danny Lotz all entered the game about the same time.

State Edges By South Carolina

RALEIGH, (AP) — Second-seeded State squeezed by South Carolina, 66-61, last night in the first round of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament to gain a semi-finals meeting tomorrow night against Carolina. Third-seeded Carolina, defending ACC and national champion, rallied from a ragged start to whip Clemson, 62-51, in the opener of the afternoon doubleheader.

Top-seeded Duke meets Wake Forest and Maryland plays Virginia tonight for the other semi-finals berth.

Little Lou Pucillo, a fancy dan sharpshooting playmaker was the big difference as North Carolina State pulled out a hard-earned victory over a South Carolina team it had beaten by 31 points on the same court a month ago.

He accounted for half the State's total with his 33 points, giving the matinee crowd of 11,500 an eye-filling show of shooting artistry and slick ball handling. Pucillo hit 13 of State's first 19 points and wound up with 19 in the first half which ended with State, the nation's No. 14 team in front, 32-27.

After South Carolina had tied the score four times but never managed to forge ahead in the second half, State took an apparently safe 58-50 lead with less than five minutes left. But South Carolina hit seven points in a row and trailed by one with three minutes to go.

State killed about 90 seconds with a freeze before big John Richter tapped in a basket for a three-point lead at 1:39. Pucillo added six points in the remaining time to wrap it up. He hit on 14 of 18 shots and added five of six from the foul line to spark the Wolfpack to the 300th-coaching victory for Everett Case in his 12 years at State.

Sophomore Mike Callahan was high man for South Carolina with 21, snaring 18 in the last half. Neither team had a senior in its starting lineup, each using the sophomores and three juniors.

Fans Have More Fun

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Hodges of North Carolina, today compared basketball 40 years ago with todays' brand and said the players had more fun then and the fans have more fun now.

Hodges, commenting at his weekly news conference on recent publicity over the conduct of crowds in this area, said he thinks the partianship is "overdone but understandable."

The governor, who played basketball for Carolina in 1917, remarked, "We have the toughest conference in the country and it's quite natural to have this partianship."

ing crew and his hot hand spurred the Tigs into several big leads during the first half.

When Lee Shaffer hit the first Carolina field goal with 13:20 left, and Clemson held a 16-8 advantage, it was then that McGuire made his lineup shifts and switched to a man to man which he played the rest of the way.

The new lineup consisted of Brennan, Stanley, John Crotty, Danny Lotz and Harvey Salz. This combination seemed to give Carolina a lift and it came back with a moderate rally to cut the point margin to five at halftime, although McGuire did insert part of his original five in the final minutes.

Stanley's performance in the first half won him a starting job in the second and his fine shooting and rebounding, plus Brennan's contributions and Salz's second half spurt was enough to give Carolina the win.

The Tar Heels chipped away at the Clemson lead from the very beginning of the second period, but the rugged Tigers hung grimly to a slim margin for almost half the stanza.

The Tigers led 28-21 with 17:55 remaining and that was the biggest lead they could get in that half. Consecutive baskets by Tommy Kearns and Salz and a free throw by Brennan cut it to 28-26. Salz and Brennan got free throws and Stanley hit a jumper to make it 32-30 Clemson got a free throw but Stanley countered with another jump and it was 34-33.

The Tigs got another free throw before Shaffer hit a layup to tie it 34 all on a beautiful assist by Kearns. For all intents and purposes that was the ballgame. Gibbons had been previously taken out because of four fouls and the Tigs were without their spark. The Tar Heel's tough man to man defense kept Clemson rattled and their great shooting and superior rebounding was too much for the game Tigers.

For the game, Carolina hit 24 of 59 field goal attempts for 40.7 percentage. Clemson was 17 for 53 and 32.1. From the line, Carolina hit 14 of 16 and Clemson 17 of 19. Clemson outrebounded 35-33.

Gibbons was high man for Clemson with 17. George Krajack's 10 was second. Salz followed Brennan and Stanley with 13 for Carolina.

Duke Wins

RALEIGH, N. C., (AP) — Top-seeded Duke sped from behind in the last seven minutes tonight to squelch Wake Forest's upset hopes, 51-44, in the opening round of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament. Duke's semifinals opponent tonight will be Maryland.

Second seeded North Carolina State put down surprisingly stubborn South Carolina, 66-61, and defending conference and national champion Carolina came from behind in the last half to oust Clemson, 62-51, in earlier games.

In Conference Meet Tonight

The smiling faces above belong to Carolina's wrestling squad which is at the University of Maryland preparing for the ACC championships which will begin tonight. The Tar Heels compiled a 6-4 overall record, and 3-2 in the conference for the season.

EN GARDE — Shown above during a recent practice session are two members of the Carolina fencing team who will meet the Virginia Military Institute at 1 p.m. Saturday. The meet will take place at Woollen Gym and the public is invited.

Fencing Squad Faces VMI In Dual Meet Sat.

Saturday afternoon at one o'clock the UNC fencing team will hold their second meet of this season with Virginia Military Institute of Lexington, Va. Competition will be in all three weapons, foil, sabre and duelling sword.

Outstanding among returning veterans for Carolina will be Bob Clay of Raleigh who will fence No. 1 spot in epee, Bill Mudd who handles sabre No. 1 spot and Neal Kelly, Mike Collins, Al Deal, Jim Proctor, Bryan Conry, Hal Knight, Paul Clark, Fred Wolfer, Dave Mathews, Bill Orr, and Charles Koonce.

Fencing on the foil and sabre strips will begin promptly at one o'clock on the main floor of Woollen Gym.

Spectators will be welcomed — the public is cordially invited to watch the bouts.

Dual meets such as this are fenced on the basis of nine bouts in each of the three weapons. Each fencer in a given weapon fences all three of the fencers on the opposing team in his weapon which makes up the nine bouts in that weapon since there are three men on a team in each weapon. The total number of bouts for all three weapons is therefore twenty-seven (nine in each) and the team which wins the greater number of the twenty-seven bouts in the dual meet is determined the winner. In the individual bouts between any two fencers the winner is the fencer who first scores five touches on his opponent during the course of the bout as determined by the judges.

Arrangements are now being completed for other meets with Vanderbilt and Augusta Military Academy thus far on the schedule. Dates and times of these will appear in The Daily Tar Heel when arrangements are completed.

The Intramurals Dept. annually sponsors an individual competition open to anyone in school with trophies going to the first three places in each weapon.

Coach Barrow issued an invitation for anyone interested in fencing with the team or on an individual basis to come down to the team practices which are held on Wednesday and Friday afternoons from 3:30 to 5 at the Gym.

Pro-Am Golf

PARRIS ISLAND, S. C., (AP) —Joe Zarhardt of Greensboro, N. C., fired a steady one-under-par 71 in driving rain today to win the third annual Parris Island pro-am golf tournament and take top money of $125.

The Tar Heel pro was out with a two-under 34 but went one over par on the back nine for a 37.

Chuck Alexander of High Point, N. C., and Jim McNair of Charlotte, last year's co-champion, both had 35-37-72 to tie for second place.

Lt. Hillman Robbins of Shaw Air Force Base, 1957 inter-service champion, easily topped the amateurs with 37-36-73.

Don McDougal of Aiken teamed with Lt. W. J. Wilkins of Parris Island to tie Mac Briggs of Rock Hill, S. C., and Capt. George Young of Parris Island for best low ball total in the pro-am competition. They had 63s.

Redbirds Lineup

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., (AP) — Manager Fred Hutchinson didn't ponder over his St. Louis Cardinal lineup for the first game of the spring training season.

He rattled it off as a boy recites a memorized lesson. Here is the lineup the Redbirds will use against the New York Yankees Saturday:

Don Blasingame, Alvin Dark, Stan Musial, Del Ennis, Ken Boyer, Wally Moon, Hal Smith, Eddie Kasko and the pitcher.

It was the same lineup he had handed the umpires many times last season. The only change in cast from the last part of 1957 will be Dark switching to third from shortstop, with Kasko taking over at short.

Mat Squad Goes After Title Tonite

Carolina has never won the ACC wrestling championship, but the Tar Heels have been faithful as the only school to have a full entry each year since the conference's formation.

The fourth annual conference show of strength is slated for University of Maryland at College Park tonight and Saturday, and once again the Tar Heels will enter a grappler in each of the ten weight divsions.

Maryland, the terror of the loop, is favored to repeat as tourney champ, but, if there's any strength in numbers and the second best ACC record, 3 wins, 2 losses, the Tar Heels can't be counted out of the running.

Although Carolina ace Perrin Henderson is out of the meet because of a shoulder injury, Coach Sam Barnes has three top entries who have proved themselves individually and paced the team to a 6-4 overall record.

Heading the threesome is Dave Atkinson, backed up by J. W. Welborn and Bill Suttle.

Atkinson, who will enter the 157 pound class, has wrestled in four weights this season and won at least once in each of the divisions. The Asheville Junior sports a 7-3 bout record.

Welborn, a sophomore from Boone, has surprised Barnes in winning six out of nine matches on the campaign. He will enter the 137 pound class. Suttle, a Charlotte sophomore, is the only unbeaten man an the Tar Heels squad, however, he had made only three appearences this season.

Carolina topped off an up and down regular season slate with a 15-11 upset win over Duke and a 24-8 victory over Wake Forest.

UNC's lineup for the tourney is: 115 pounds—David Wall; 123— Curt Champlin; 130—Bill Suttle; 137—J. W. Welborn; 147—Ronald Purdy; 157—Dave Atkinson; 167— Ray Russell; 177—Ken Hoke; 191—Rob Boyette; Heavy—Larry Hayes.

Scurlock To Run In New York Sat.

By DAVE WIBLE

With the ACC indoor 880 and 600 titles safely tucked under his belt, Carolina's brilliant middle-distance runner Dave Scurlock will resume big-meet competition Saturday night when he will run the 1,000 at the Knights of Columbus meet in Madison Square Garden.

This will be the lanky junior's fourth such meet not counting the ACC Championships. To date, he has won the Boston BAA 1,000 and the Millrose 880. He was defeated by Manhattan's Tom Murphy at the New York AC Games three weeks ago.

Carolina coach Dale Ranson said yesterday that he did not know who Scurlock will be running against Saturday, Murphy is a probable starter, but the rest of the field is unknown. Scurlock will get a crack at the indoor 1,000 record holder Arnie Sowell of Army a week from Saturday at the Daily News meet in Chicago. It will be Sowells first appearance this year.

Because of the extended running required at the ACC Championships last Saturday, Scurlock has been working out moderately this week Saturday afternoon he ran trials in the 880, and the 600 and then came back that night to win both events plus anchor the Carolina mile-relay team. His 600 time was a new conference record.

"Dave's legs were mighty tired after that workout," said Ranson, so we are just going to take it easy this week. We'll wait and put the clock on him Saturday." In a practice meet two weeks Scurlock ran a 1:51.5 880—1.3 seconds off the world's record.

Ranson said that had he originally planned to run distance man Wayne Bishop this Saturday, but Bishop's knee went bad last week and Ranson was forced to scratch him. Bishop ran a beautifull two-mile against Maryland's Burr Grim Saturday, and Ranson tried to re-enter him for this week's meet, but the field was closed out. It has not been decided whether Bishop will run in any more of the big meets before outdoor season.

With Scurlock as an exception, the rest of the track team has moved outside, and is making preparations for their outdoor debut which will be with State March 25.

Swim Team Honored

By MAC MAHAFFY

The undefeated Carolina swimmers were feted at the annual swimming banquet Wednesday night at Brady's Restaurant. Guests of the team were Jake Wade, George L. Coxhead, and former Carolina swim coach Dick Jamerson.

Captains elected for next year were Brent Nash and Tony Schiffman. The freshmen elected as their captain for this year Harry Bloom.

The graduating seniors Bill Zickgraf, Walt Rose, Bill Roth, Mac Mahaffy, and Kelly Manees, and Ned Meekins—four of which are All-Americans—were called on for departing speeches. Coaches Pat Earey, freshman coach Buddy Barcke, and Coach Dick Jamerson gave short addresses with special regard to the coming season, and the team's present 22 meet winning streak.

George Coxhead made the presentation of the Dick Jamerson Outstanding Senior Swimmer Trophey to Telfair Mahaffy of Jacksonville, Florida. This trophey is presented annually to the outstanding senior swimmer. Co-captain Walt Rose made the presentation of the Dick Jamerson Outstanding Freshman Swimmer to Harry Bloom of Baltimore, Maryland.

Coach Jamerson presented the William M. Thompson Memorial to Tony Schiffman for winning the 440 ACC title. Ned Meekins received the John A. Feutchtenberger trophey for the high board ACC Diving title.

The banquet closed with a reminder of the Eastern Collegiates Championship to be held March 13, 14, and 15, and the NCAA Championships the first weekend in April.

Carolina To Defend ACC Title Tonight After 64-58 Victory Over N. C. State

UNC STUDENT TEACHERS—Miss Sue Atchison and William R. Henshaw, seniors in the School of Education, have been chosen Miss and Mr. Representative Future Teacher at Carolina for 1957-58. They will attend the North Carolina Education Association's annual convention in Asheville, March 20-22, representing the Frank Porter Graham Chapter of the Student National Education Association and the Department of Future Teachers of the NCEA. Miss Atchison, Alpha Gam from Washington, D. C. is corresponding secretary for the state future teachers and program chairman of the local chapter, of which Henshaw is president. He is from Erwin.

Local Legislature Shocked By Evans

By PRINGLE PIPKIN

Student Body President Sonny Evans' veto of the Honor Council bill calling for a single council for both men and women came as a surprise move at the Student Legislature Thursday evening.

At the beginning of the meeting Evans rose to tell the body that he had killed this bill. He said he was for the jury system but did not feel that it could be instituted with the proposed single council.

"I cannot turn the campus into warring elements," he explained.

On behalf of the Student Government Attorney-General, Sonny Hallford, and George Ragsdale, Chairman of the Men's Honor Council, Roger Foushee (SP) introduced a bill to incorporate juries into the present Honor Councils.

The bill was the same as the one vetoed by Evans except Foushee's bill calls for two different councils instead of a single one.

Foushee tried to get his bill passed Thursday by special orders, but this move failed when Jerry Oppenheimer (SP) suggested that the Legislators should be able to see what they are voting on.

No Constitutional Changes

The new Honor Council bill will not necessitate any changes in the Student Constitution; therefore, the action the Student Legislature takes will be final and will require no student vote.

When the Legislature was debating whether to repeal the bill calling for a vote on the amendments to the Student Constitution, Ragsdale requested that the vote be held on these amendments to make a single council.

The Student Body President cannot veto amendments to the Constitution and the amendments could have been passed without the bill.

If the amendments were passed, then the Legislature would have to draw up a bill which would be acceptable to Evans.

Ragsdale argued that the single council would "come up again and again." He said that he wanted the students to defeat this bill and claimed that the students wanted a resolution on the matter.

The Legislature cancelled the election by a vote of 41-0.

Bill Delaying Rush

Gary Greer (SP) explained that his bill to delay formal rush for a semester would give the freshman more time to adjust to the new academic life.

He stated, during the course of a battery of questions, that other schools had solved the problems resulting from early rush and he thought that Carolina could do the same.

He said that he had not talked to the Inter-Fraternity Council here, but that he had written to fraternity men at University of Virgina, Tulane and Purdue schools where delayed rushing has been instituted.

These men, he said, are to send

ALLENE KEITH
Rush Manual Editor

Allene Keith To Edit Panhel Rush Manual

Allene Keith from Wilmington has been selected as editor of the 1958 Panhellenic rush manual, according to an announcement yesterday by Panhellenic Council.

Miss Keith was selected at a meeting of the executive committee of the council Thursday night from eight candidates. As editor of the rush manual, she will superivse publication of information about rushing dates, individual sororities and the routine of rushing.

A junior English education major, Miss Keith is a member of Chi Omega sorority. She is currently a member of the University Party and works with the YWCA Scout program. During her first two years of college she attended St. Mary's College.

Editor of the 1957 rush manual was Barbara Doar.

Greek Week Starts Monday

More than 400 pledges of 24 social fraternities here will be brought together in a general project, Greek Week, beginning Monday.

The significance of Greek Week is that as a substitute for the abolished "hell week," it unites fraternity pledges in an effort to better relations between community and fraternity through projects.

On Monday, the first day of Greek Week, the pledges will engage in a project of helping Chapel Hill Jaycees to clear an area for housing purposes.

On other days, the pledges will hold an intra-mural field day, carnival day and banquet.

A trophy will be awarded to the cutstanding pledge class at the banquet. The bases for the award will be: scholarship, field day activities, participation in work day and the carnival booth of the pledge class.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity won the trophy last year for the most outstanding pledge class.

Chairman of Greek Week is Ashe Exum of Sigma Nu fraternity.

UNC Faces Terps For Championship

By BILL KING

REYNOLDS COLISEUM, Raleigh—The Carolina Tar Heels moved one step closer to defending their ACC cage title last night by handing tough N. C. State College a 64-58 defeat before a capacity crowd here. The victory pits the Tar Heels against Maryland for the championship at eight tonight.

The Carolina-State fray took a backseat to the opener between Maryland and Duke which the Terps won in an overtime, but it was gloriously thrilling to the surprisingly large delegation of Carolina fans.

Use Charity Line

The Tar Heels borrowed a little trick used so effectively by Duke this season—using the free throw line in the final minutes to put the icing on the cake. Carolina converted six free throws in the final 56 seconds and that was enough to win the series with State for the year, 3-1.

Frank McGuire called on his favorite, the man to man defense, to stop the rugged Wolfpack. McGuire went the distance with the man to man and this perhaps more than anything else brought Carolina the victory.

The Tar Heels were led once again by their great All-American Pete Brennan who tossed in 23 points, one more than he had against Clemson in the opener. Brennan got a king size assist from his able senior sidekick Tommy Kearns and another from sophomore Ray Stanley. Both hit 13 points and both played great ball. Stanley started and played the entire game.

Police Charge Med Student For Exposure

A first-year medical student was arrested on charge of indecent exposure here yesterday after two Negro girls said he jumped nude from his car in Carrboro last weekend.

The girls, both of high school age, told officers the 22-year-old student also tried to force them into the vehicle from which he jumped about 11:15 p.m. last Friday.

Police said the student had not admitted the incident late Friday afternoon, although the girls identified him following an investigation by local authorities.

According to officers, the student denied having been in the Carrboro neighborhood last Friday. However, police said, he admitted he "had had some trouble" with a Negro girl in the neighborhood where he allegedly was seen.

He also said he "had a few words" with one of the girls, police reported.

The unidentified student was released on bond following his arrest Friday. The case was expected to be heard in Recorder's Court Tuesday.

Dr. Flowers Honored

The North Carolina Chapter of the American Cancer Society has presented Dr. Charles E. Dr. Flowers is associate professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the School of Medicine.

Tryouts For 'Antigone' To Be Held Wednesday

The Petites Dramatiques have announced their latest production, "Antigone," by Jean Anouilh. This offering will be directed by Peter O' Sullivan, a graduate student in English.

Tryouts will be held on Wednesday, March 12, from 3 to 5 p.m. in Gerrard Hall. Anyone interested is invited to attend.

Sound & Fury Scripts May Be Checked Out

Scripts for the forthcoming Sound and Fury production, "No Squares Allowed," have been completed and may be checked out at the Graham Memorial Information Office.

Anyone interested in trying out for a part in the show may read over the script in advance.

Those desiring to work in the backstage or production areas are urged to contact Cecil Hartsoe or Eleanor Brawley.

The show will be presented on the nights of May 2 and 3.

NAACP Slipping

GREENSBORO, March 7, (AP)—The Southeastern Regional secretary of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People said here today that the NAACP suffered membership losses in several Southern states last year.

While attributing the losses to investigations by legislative committees and anti-NAACP legislation, Mrs. Ruby Hurley of Atlanta said only North Carolina suffered no appreciable loss in membership. She said NAACP chapters in Greensboro and Charlotte almost tripled their memberships.

Baby On Way

MONTE CARLO, March 7 (AP)—Workmen are brushing up the castle—sure signs in Monaco that the second baby of Princes Grace and Prince Rainier may arrive at any time.

The palace says the birth is expected between March 10 and 15. The first born, Princess Caroline, arrived on Jan. 23 last year.

The 20,000 inhabitants of the principality make no secret of the fact they want a boy. A young prince, under the Monacan line of succession, would eventually become ruler. The line passes to girls only when there are no boys.

Three Checks

DAMASCUS, SYRIA, March 7 (AP)—A former Syrian member of Parliament declared today King Saud of Saudi Arabia "personally handed me three checks" as an advance installment for a coup d'etat in Syria.

He said the checks totaled 1,900,000 pounds ($5, 320,000) and that Lt. Col. Abdul Hamid Serraj, was to carry out the coup.

In an interview with the Arab East News Agency Aziz Abbad said King Saud told him the United States "approves the move," to prevent the formation of the United Arab Republic of Syria and Egypt.

UNC Geologist Describes Quakes Recorded By Seismograph In N. C.

By PARKER MADDREY

Earth tremors felt in the Wilmington area Wednesday have been described as "an earthquake of mild intensity" by Dr. Gerald McCarthy, UNC geology professor and operator of the seismograph here.

Dr. McCarthy said the tremor recorded Feb. 14 "may possibly have been a small quake." However, the one recorded Wednesday was definitely a small quake "according to the textbook definition of an earthquake," he added.

He said the other tremors reported recently by residents in the Wilmington area were probably made by jet planes or other man-made causes. "Since the tremor Feb. 14, the people in that area have become extremely conscious of all noises and shakes," he added. He has received many inquiries from Wilmington residents in the last few days.

Exact Location

Exact location of Wednesday's mild quake cannot be determined without recordings from three seismograph stations. The UNC and the Columbia, S. C., stations as yet are the only ones reporting the quake.

Dr. McCarthy explained that the quake was computed about a 175 mile radius from the UNC seismograph and the Columbia station registered about 180 miles radius.

The location is determined where the radius lines intersect. With only two stations reporting, this leaves a wide arc in which the quake could have occured.

If a third station, say Bristol, Tenn., reports the distance from it, then the location can be pinpointed.

The UNC seismograph is located in the basement of New East. It is placed in a block of cement in the earth, but separated from the floor to prevent recording of building vibrations.

It records on photo paper for a 24 hour period. Each morning the paper is developed and the graph is read. The graph contains a line for each hour of the day and each line is broken in minute intervals to determine the time.

Distance and intensity of a tremor is determined by the size and shape of the line recorded. Far away quakes are shown on a line with extended waves. Nearby tremors are shown by a line containing zig zags close together, Dr. McCarthy said.

Grad Student Featured In Musicales Series

Thomas N. Rice, graduate student in the Music Department, will be featured in a program of his compositions of the Petites Musciales series, sponsored by Graham Memoral Activities Board.

The program is scheduled for Sunday, March 16 at eight p.m., in the auditoium of Hill Hall.

The recital is free to the public.

Rice has many compositions to his credit, two of which were performed on a recital of original compositions by students of the Music Department last spring. They were a sonatina for piccolo and string bass and a suite for violoncello and piano.

One of his more recent compositions was the music for the Playmakers' production, in their studio workshop series, of Berthold Brecht's "The Exception and the Rule." The music, which was scored for the amazing combination of two Jew's harps and percussion, was instrumental in lending excitement to the very fine production directed by Kai Jurgensen, professor of dramatic art.

Sunday evening's program will consist of a suite for piano which will be played by the composer; two elegies for violoncello and piano, performed by Efrim Fruchtman and Rice and a prelude on a theme by Edward Grieg, for duo-piano, performed by Margaret Bussell and Michael Cordovana, faculty members of Stratford College, Danville, Va.

Donna Patton Kelly, soprano of Chapel Hill, accompanied by Mr. Cordovana, will present the Psalm Cycle, Psalmodic Lamentations, as the final piece on the program.

Angel Flight Tours Air Base

Five members of the Angel Flight of the 590th AFROTC Group toured Pope Air Force Base Thusday.

The Angels who made the trip were: Sue Voigt, Bea Hunger, Patty Sue Wall, Carolyn Wisler and Edna Faye Pugh.

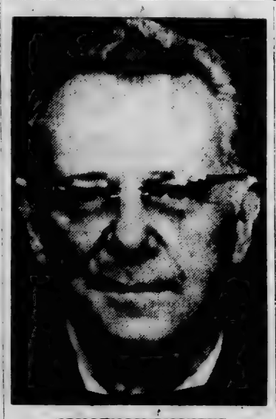
While on the field trip, the girls witnessed a drop of heavy equipment and jumps by paratroopers from a C-130. The tour continued by visitation through the crash and rescue department, base operations, parachute shop and personal equipment storeroom.

The coeds, then climbed into the cockpit of a flying boxcar or C-119 as well as a C-123.

Accompanying the Angels were Captain Charles J. Hall, Cadet Major Jordan E. Adams and Cadet Charles Adams.

The tour was a special project of the Arnold Air Society for the benefit of their sponsors.

Latin Students Arrive



Some 1,200 young Latin students from throughout North Carolina will be on the campus today for the seventh annual Junior Classical League Convention.

Dr. B. L. Ullman, chairman ofthe Classical Dept. will welcome the visitors and Robert Sonkowsky, a graduate student, will discuss study in Europe.

Legislature Acted Wisely In Calling Off The Election

The legislature acted wisely Thursday night in cancelling the election to establish a joint council for Honor Code violations on the campus. It was the only action which could untangle the confusion surrounding the measure.

Although basically good, the bill for a joint council to try both men and women violators of the Honor Code had become so enveloped by amendments that no student could have voted intelligently had the election scheduled for next week been carried out.

Student Body President Sonny Evans realized the dilemma which surrounded the proposal. Much of the fault, he says, was that of the executive branch of student government—and a lot of it, his. So to avert further confusion he requested the cancellation which the legislature unanimously granted.

Probably the main reason for the current failure of the one-council bill lies in the fact that its revision of the present system would have been an all-sweeping one. It would have left no semblance of the traditional court system on campus.

First, it would have placed the jury system in courts which do not now have juries. Second, it would have made the Men's Honor Council and the Women's Honor Council into a single body which did not distinguish between men and women in cases which came before it.

Taken singularly, either one of these revisions—addition of juries or a single council—was sufficient to produce bitterness between opponents and supporters of the measure. Together, they made agreement virtually impossible.

The consequent result was so much confusion over special elections, amendments and disharmony in the legislature, as well as between the judiciary and the executive, that agreement on any bill was inconceivable at this time. So vague would proposals have been that no student could have voted intelligently in an election.

What the executive should have done—and what it might yet do—is first to implement the practice of juries within the present court structure, and forget about a joint council, or implement the one-council idea and forget about the jury system.

This way, there at least would remain in the judiciary certain practices which would continue the tradition of the court. But because both revisions were proposed—that of the jury and of the single council—the measure was so all-inclusive and overhauling that some feared the total collapse of the judicial system. Nothing would have remained of the courts as we now know them.

Because the single council idea is a good one, student leaders still should work toward realization of that system, either starting with the addition of a jury to the current system or a change to the one-court proposal which was the purpose of the cancelled amendment election.

Before any such major revisions are placed before the student body, however, the appropriate bills should be drawn with clarity sufficient to be understood by the campus in order to escape the calamity which has befallen the recent attempts.

IFC Bill Would Broaden Administrative Influence

If Sam Magill looks objectively at the proposal, he will reject a bill submitted to him by the IFC which would refuse diplomas to graduating seniors who have not paid their entire fraternity bills.

At times, there are economic circumstances which would prevent payment of accounts on fraternity ledgers. These should not disallow the awarding of a diploma to a graduating senior who has not satisfied his account.

Undoubtedly it is true that some seniors, owing money to their chapters at UNC, retire their debts after leaving school and earning money with which to make the payments. Fortunately, this is so seldom that fraternities can afford to operate on income they receive throughout the year.

What many fail to realize is the fact that some fraternity men do put themselves through school. All are not financed by a family-fed bank account from home; some, in fact, do not even have a bank account of their own.

Furthermore, such a bill by the IFC assumes that fraternity men do not possess the moral judgment that expenses accrued at a fraternity house are like any other bills: they must be paid. A man who does not have this feeling should not be in a Greek society.

Yet there is still another fact which should keep Magill's signature off the IFC proposal: the administration should not become the collecting agency for fraternities or any other private organizations at the University.

If we give the Administration this power, then we have no right to complain of social regulations and discriminatory provisions which the Administration would place upon fraternities and their charters. Either fraternities are private, subject only to needed restrictions in some areas of their activities, or they are not private and should be totally controlled by South Building.

We believe that in giving the Administration this power to hold diplomas, we are granting it a privilege which extends its influence over fraternity activities—in an area which in no way should concern the Administration.

The time comes when one must distinguish between an investment [illegible] and a debt [illegible] fraternity house. The latter, though a problem, should not supercede the realization of the former.

Fraternity men, even the less endowed ones, are generally honest. It is doubtful that those who have the means to satisfy a current account will fail to do so. And it is probable that the man who is paying his own way will take care of his account as soon as finances permit.

For that reason, the IFC should not penalize the student who, for economic reasons, is curently unable to meet his debts. And Sam Magill should not endorse such a practice.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

What Should Trustees Do?

Education has become big business. There can be no better example of this than the trustee tribulations of two of North Carolina's oldest institutions.

Wake Forest is not the only school whose Board of Trustees is fighting for the right to do its job without outside interference. While the Baptist State Convention's feud with our trustees has dwindled, another battle of words has arisen between University of North Carolina trustees and the State Board of Higher Education.

The University Board, which has been largerly under control of the state board, began to rebel last week when several truestees complained that the state governing body is assuming too much authority. Their gripes were widely quoted and discussed over the state.

Probably the most interesting aspect of the Wake Forest and University problems is that nobody seemed to care until recently. Trustees once were simple loyal alumni who met periodically to chat over a few problems of the old school and renew friendships. But the job has come to be one of far more significance.

Today's trustee is called upon to take an active and vigorous role in the affairs of the school he represents. This is true because education has become important enough to the public that old grads are no longer the only ones who care.

The appointment of University trustees, we are told, has become little more than an instrument for political backscratching. Rather than select the best men, the legislature has repeatedly passed out appointments as political favors. This has been going on for a long time. But until recently everyone seemed content to let University affairs drift along as usual.

Recognizing the growing needs of the schools, and the increasingly difficult demands made of them, loyal and devoted trustees realize they must take positions of active leadership.

A well-choosen board of trustees, composed of men with genuine interest in service, can do more than any other group to build a srtong college or university. But it must not be subservient to another organization and yet be expected to do its work well. If it cannot make its own decisions a board has nothing to justify its existence.

North Carolina's schools are growing, both in enrollment and in the amount of influence they wield. They have many problems. Their work can be managed well only when certain factions learn to take trustees seriously. — The Gold & Black

Judicial Bill Fails; Right Loses

There was a battle. The battle was short, and right lost.

Yet, right deserved to lose, for right disguised its intentions, muddled its interpretation, and confused its supporters.

A week ago the right forces were unified, five days later they were torn asunder, and some notable warriors deserted the cause. What was left was a shambles, and the salvage job was not enough to save face.

George Ragsdale and Co. won a great victory, and although his view on the honor bill was not in agreement with democracy and the idea that honor is an individual matter, he deserved do win.

Last week with very little dissent, the Student Legislature passed a bill calling for a modified jury trial system and a single council for men and women.

Yet a week later Sonny Evans was forced to veto the bill, which he strongly supported, because confusion had set in, and the bill was dead as far as any hope of gaining the support of the elec-

The bill was dead a day earlier really. Ragsdale announced at that time that he wished certain people in student government would make up their minds, and at that time leading members of the side that was supporting the joint council were defecting.

As one person, who still believes in joint councils put it, "It's election time." That was probebly the most apt commentary on the whole situation.

Evans was forced to veto the bill, because its backers hesitated, because the opposition was united, and because the bill could not pass. It was largely not his fault, but he did not completely save face.

There comes a time when one has to assess what is left, and one finds that the bill proposing a modified jury system within the two councils that exists now is not a significant change over the present judicial system.

When one finds a jury containing two permanent jurors, one ends up with an eight man council, and non-permanent jurors who can easily be influenced.

The present bill would still be an improvement if the permanent jurors were struck out.

One of the chief protections of a court system without permanent jurors is in their inexperience and lack of precedent. For without precedent, they can call a fact a fact, and not make allusions to the case that happened last week.

They stand no chance of being influenced by the more "experienced". Moreover, the responsibility of the entire citizeary for its judicial system is clearly indicated.

Furthermore, to have permanent jurors indicates a distrust of the student body, and certainly a slam at their intelligence level by saying that all students do not know what lying, stealing, and cheating are.

If the permanent jurors are stricken from the bill, and if the jury must vote unanimously for conviction, as a primary safeguard of the rights of the innocent, it is hoped that this bill will pass. If these changes are not made, what will result is a time consuming, cumbersome model of the present judicial set-up, and the bill should not pass.

The guess from this observer is that these changes will not be made, for after all, "It's election time."

Text Of Evans' Address Explains Veto Reasons

I have sought to be this year the President of all the students. I have been vitally concerned with the current controversy which is raging all over the campus. I have fought for six months with all my energy for a jury system and one Honor council to try violators of the Honor Code regardless of sex.

Now, the people involved are confused, bitter, and there is disunity of grave dimension throughout Student Government. I have become convinced that the jury system if installed in this sort of an atmosphere would be doomed to failure. In view of the confusion, lack of clarity, and cumbersomeness of the amendments, the issues have become obscured and therefore, I am requesting the Legislature to cancel the election and not to submit the amendments to the campus. I plan to veto the jury bill written for joint councils, and feel that the concept of juries is a sound one which ought to be installed into the present system.

The tremendous amount of work done by Sonny Hallford and the Attorney General's staff deserves great thanks as does the sincere efforts of the Honor Council Commission, and I sincerely hope that it will not have been done in vain. However, I cannot turn the campus into warring elements.

We've discovered and I've come to the conclusion that revisions of the judiciary system cannot be done piecemeal with constitutional amendments here and others there. The number of amendments to the judicial system in the past ten years is ample evidence of dissatisfaction, especially when you contrast this with the other two branches, unchanged and quite satisfactory. There must be a basic underlying problem not present in the other two branches, and in the broad picture, there are several problems we must be frank enough to admit.

Just to mention one, perhaps the system has lost contact with the large majority of the students. Reportings are accomplished virtually all by the faculty.

Let it be understood, that our desire has been to democratize the system. Our efforts for a combined council and a jury have been to reestablish contact with the student body.

Why is the contact now missing? Is it possible to prove it? I cannot prove it but the current situation strongly suggests that, despite our efforts to achieve a competent and representative court through the use of selection boards, the fact is undeniably that the judicial power has gravitated toward a narrow segment of the student body which is under attack from all over the state and nation. I refer to the fact that at the present time, the Men's Council out of a membership of fifteen has fourteen fraternity men, ten of whom are from three houses. The same situation exists in the Women's Council and I for one, though I am in a fraternity, deplore the fact that our justice is administered by representatives of one-sixth of the student body to the other five-sixths. This is not to imply collusion or incompetence, for anyone who has seen the work of the Men's and Women's Councils this year will testify to the hard work, sense of fairness and justice, but the situation is very unhealthy for the proper administration of campus justice. Perhaps this is the reason for the loss of contact.

We began with the judicial problem and suddenly we find ourselves in the middle of the fraternity problem, and I did not come here tonight to discuss the fraternity problem. But we must admit that in many areas, fraternities are a problem and through their irresponsible indulgences, they have brought and threatened to bring undesirable and embarrassing publicity to the University.

Student Government cannot long exercise its many freedoms without at the same time meeting its equally numerous responsibilities. The time for this is now and the heart of responsible student freedom lies in a vigorous Honor System administered by democratic courts and supported through the respect of all the Student Body

—Sonny Evans, President Student Body

THE NEW YORK TIMES

Justice Under Law

As it has done so many times in the last three or four years, the Supreme Court has again handed down a major decision on the side of civil liberties and in defense of the individual against the overwhelming power of the state. This tribunal has become the single most effective protector of the rights of the citizen under the Constitution. Being human, the court makes its mistakes; but being the bulwark of freedom that it is, the American public ought to thank God for it, and the Congress ought to reject with the contempt they deserve the current proposals to hamstring the court's powers and to curtail its usefulness.

Overruling both the Army and the lower courts, the court held that the kind of discharge a draftee received should be based on his record in service, and should not be affected by his pre-induction activities. It also held that it had the power to determine whether or not the discharge was in conformity with the law—a point that the Army and the lower courts had maintained was beyond reach of the judiciary.

To argue that a man's discharge—whether honorable, or something less than that—ought to be determined wholly by his record while in uniform and not on his political activities before he was inducted seems obvious. But for several years after the war such was not the Army's policy. Under stimulus of Senator Henning's subcommittee on Constitutional Rights, the Army did move to liberalize that policy late in 1955. It decided to exclude alleged former security risks from induction, thereby forestalling discharge complications arising from this cause. It also adopted a more common-sense approach to current security questions. Furthermore, it undertook on its own volition a review of previous security discharges and eventually it upgraded many of them.

All this is to the Army's credit, but it still refused to acknowledge the right of court review. And in the cases that have just been decided by the Supreme Court, the Justice Department itself admitted that, on the merits, the Army was in the wrong.

The court's decision is once again a reaffirmation of the motto above its portals: "Equal Justice Under Law."

Pikas Entertain Coeds

Thursday night the Pikas livened up the week by playing host to the Chi Os at a chicken dinner at the house. Following the meal the Circle Nine, a Chi O vocal group, entertained the boys with several of their specially arranged melodies.

The group then retired to the basement for an evening of dancing to the music of Doug Clark's combo, "The Tops," from Chapel Hill.

Last night the Pikas began a weekend of festivities by entertaining the Duke ADPi Pledge Class at a dinner party and informal dance at the house.

Phi Kaps Party

Last weekend the Phi Kaps welcomed spring with a formal dinner and dance at the Hope Valley Country Club in Durham. An enjoyable evening was had by all in an atmosphere of tuxedoes and formal gowns. Jim Crisp's orchestra from Durham was on hand to lend the proper music for the formal setting.

On Saturday night the Phi Kaps and their dates traveled to the Sigma Nu cabin for a bermuda party. Doug Clark's combo, "The Tops," provided the latest hit tunes for the event.

Sunday morning found the Phi Kaps and their dates attending a brunch at the house.

New Student Radio Group Here Discloses Plan For 'Ham' Station

By BILL CHEDSEY

Students will have their own "ham" radio station soon if things go according to plan.

The plans for such a station are now being drawn up by Henry Gould, Ph.D. candidate in the Department of Mathematics, and Jim Scott, UNC student from Chatham.

A meeting of all students interested in establishing such a "ham" station—as well as a local branch of the American Radio Relay League—will be held Friday, March 14 at 7:30 p. m. in 250 Phillips Hall.

Gould said the proposed station would cooperate with the nation's Civil Defense organization, help in the early stages of satellite tracking and perform other functions for the students, such as sending messages for them to distant places.

Cost Of Transmitter

He said the total cost of the proposed transmitter is estimated at about $2,380. If sufficient students are interested, the student legislature will be approached for the necessary funds, he added.

Gould estimated that about 50 UNC students already hold "ham" licenses. But he pointed out that the services of the proposed station and membership in the local amateur radio club would be available to all students.

One of the functions of the club, Gould said, would be to instruct interested students in radio code and other aspects of radio communication. "Radio is also an excellent introduction to other phases of science," he added.

But Gould is not the only faculty member at UNC who has been badly bitten by the radio bug. The first radio "ham" he met when he came to UNC was Dr Burton Colvin, now on leave from the mathematics department.

Gould said he walked into one of the offices in Phillips Hall looking for Dr. Jones, who he knew was a radio enthusiast.

"As soon as I stepped through the doorway I saw two very busy men. One was twirling the dials of a radio transmitter; the other was furiously hammering away on a telegraph key.

"Sorry," said Gould, "I must be in the radio shack. I'm looking for Dr. Jones."

The man on the telegraph key looked up and replied, "I'm W4BOJ, sometimes known as Dr. Jones." W4BOJ are Dr. Jones' FCC assigned radio call letters.

round of private East-West talks.

Western diplomats said today that is the purpose of the proposed meetings of the 25-nation U.N. Disarmament Commission and the Security Council later this month.

Authoritative sources said that the two meetings, if held, would be purely procedural and that the intention is to avoid any issues which might touch off a new East-West fight.

Strikes Teacher

NEW YORK, March 7 (AP)—A hot-tempered mother today was sentenced to 10 days in jail for storming into a Manhattan public school and striking a teacher.

"We're not going to stand for anyone barging into our schools and assaluting teachers," said Judge Matthew J. Troy. "There is a lack of parental example which is one of the main causes of what is happening in our schools."

Mrs. Suggs, whose 6-year-old daughter attends Public School 87, claimed that she went there to complain about her daughter being hit by a teacher, and was told to "calm down."

Unemployment Worsens

WASHINGTON, March 7 (AP)—The government will announce next week that unemployment rose more than 600,000 last month to a 16-year peak of more than 5,100,000, informed officials said today.

The count has sharpened the Administration's concern over the economic outlook and is expected to intensify pressure in Congress for business-boosting measures, including tax reduction and public works.

President Eisenhower and his advisers were reported to be still counting on a drop in joblessness this month. Consideration of any major emergency moves should wait, they hold, until the March employment figures are issued a month from now.

Symphony Orchestra Concert Program Listed

The program for Tuesday night's Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra concert has been released by the Student Entertainment Committee, sponsor of the concert.

The orchestra will perform at 8 o'clock in Memorial Hall. Admission for students is free upon presentation of ID cards.

Student wives may purchase tickets for one dollar. Tickets for other persons may be obtained at the door for two dollars.

Program

Selections on the program include: "Overture to 'The Creatures of Prometheus'" by Beethoven, "Symphony No. 4" by Brahms, six orchestra pieces by Anton Webern and "La Mer" by Debussy.

The Pittsburgh Symphony, which in the past few years has grown into one of the leading orchestras in the United States, was established in 1896 when Victor Herbert was its conductor.

The present conductor, William Steinberg, joined the Symphony in 1952 after being associated with several outstanding orchestras in this and other countries, including the NBC Symphony and the Buffalo Philharmonic.

The Student Entertainment Committee has presented in the current series Iva Kitchell, dance-satirist and comedienne and Jan Peerce, Metropolitan Opera star.

FOR BETTER OR FOR WORSE

The first thought that comes into our minds upon entering college is, of course, marriage. But how many of us go about dating mates, as I like to call them, in a truly scientific manner? Not many, you may be sure.

So let us today make a scientific survey of the two principal causes of marriage—personality need and propinquity.

Personality need means that we choose mates because they possess certain qualities that complete and fulfill our own personalities. Take, for example, the case of Alanson Duck.

As a freshman Alanson made a fine scholastic record, played varsity scrabble, and was president of his class. One would think that Alanson was a totally fulfilled man. But he was not. There was something lacking in his life, something vague and indefinable that was needed to make his personality complete.

Then one day Alanson discovered what it was. As he was walking out of his class in Flemish pottery, a fetching coed named Grace Ek offered him a handsome red and white pack and said, "Marlboro?"

"Yes!" he cried, for all at once he knew what he had been needing to round out his personality—the hearty fulfillment of Marlboro Cigarettes, the soul-repairing mildness of their fine tobacco, the easy draw of their unparalleled filter, the ease and convenience of their crushproof flip-top box. "Yes, I will take a Marlboro!" cried Alanson. "And I will also take you to wife if you will have me!"

"La!" she exclaimed, throwing her apron over her face. But after a while she removed it and they were married. Today they live happily in Baffin Land where Alanson is with an ore-glazing firm and Grace is a bookie.

Propinquity, the second principal cause of marriage, simply means closeness. Put a boy and a girl close together for a sustained period of time and their proximity will certainly ripen into love and their love into marriage. A perfect example is the case of Fafnir Signfoos.

While a freshman at Louisiana State University, Fafnir was required to crawl through the Big Inch pipeline as part of his fraternity initiation. He entered the pipe at Baton Rouge and, alone and joyless, he proceeded to crawl north.

As he passed Lafayette, Indiana, he was agreeably surprised to be joined by a comely girl named Mary Alice Isington, a Purdue freshman, who, oddly enough, had to crawl through the Big Inch as part of her sorority initiation.

Chatting amiably as they crawled through Ohio, Pennsylvania, and New York State, Fafnir and Mary Alice discovered they had much in common—like a mutual affection for karate, bobsledding, and the generous views of Arnold Toynbee. When they reached the Vermont border they were going really well, and when they emerged from the pipe at Boothbay Harbor, Maine, they were engaged.

After a good hot bath they were married and today they live in Klamath Falls, Oregon, where Fafnir is in the weights and measures department and Mary Alice is in the roofing game. They have three children, all named Norman.

Propinquity is sure to mean love when you put yourself close to a pack of Marlboros, made for your pleasure by the sponsors of this column.

TOURNEY NOTEBOOK

Rosy's 45 In 1957 Stands As Record

REYNOLDS COLISEUM, RALEIGH—This is only the fifth time that the Atlantic Coast Conference Tourney has been staged since the "big eight" broke away from the Southern Conference back in 1953, but already many records have been established in tourney competition which are destined to withstand numerous assaults in the next few years.

Take the individual scoring record held by Carolina's Lennie Rosenbluth for instance. Lennie's 45 points against Clemson in 1957 was a superhuman effort, one that probably won't be equalled for quite a long while. And how long will it be before somebody takes 44 shots from the floor again, as Buzz Wilkinson of Virginia did against Duke in the 1954 tourney?

Rosenbluth's 106 points in '57 for three games should also give the boys something to shoot at for awhile. It doesn't seem logical that anyone will match the 54 rebounds in three games by Ron Shavlik of State in 1955 either. Twenty-one of them came against Duke and that stands as a record right now.

LENNIE ROSENBLUTH

Carolina had the dubious distinction of making only 14 field goals against State in 1954 and that mark might stand for a few years. State scored the most points (101) against Clemson in the 1955 tourney. Duke's phenominal 102 field goal attempts against State in '55 seems pretty stable as a record and at the other extreme, Carolina shot but 25 times against the Wolfpack in '54.

As a team, Duke set a rebound record when it grabbed 73 against South Carolina in 1955. Wake Forest's 21 against Carolina last year is the all time low. State, winner of three of the first four championships, holds the record for the most points scored in one tourney with 273 back in 1955.

Teams which now comprise the ACC have been playing in NCAA competition since 1939 but only the Big Four schools have been able to get as far as the NCAA tournaments. N. C. State has been the representative the most times—five. Carolina has been in the NCAA three times, Wake Forest twice and Duke once.

State did it in 1950, '51, '52, '54 and '56. Carolina made it in 1941, '46, and '57. Wake was in it in '39 and '53 and Duke made it in 1955.

Carolina is the only team to have won the Nationals and that, of course, was last year. The Tar Heels had previously been runner-ups in 1946. State was third in the Nationals in 1950 and that's the only time the schools have gotten that far.

Carolina has had only three men to place on the All-Tournament first team in the four years of the tourney. Skippy Winstead made it in 1954, Rosenbluth in '56 and '56 and Pete Brennan in 1957. On the second team, Tommy Kearns, Bobby Cunningham and Joe Quigg all made it in 1957.

The outstandng coach of the year awards have gone to Everett Case of N. C. State in 1954 and '55, Murray Greason of Wake Forest in 1956 and Frank McGuire of Carolina in 957. The player of the year honors have been received by Dickie Hemric of Wake Forest in '54 and '55, Ron Shavlik of State in '56 and Rosenbluth in '57.

Tar Heels-State

prove his defensive skills convincingly. He guarded State's high scoring little guard Lou Pucillo and held the Wolfpack to 17 points, almost half what he got against South Carolina.

Carolina seemed to have the upperhand all the way but the Wolfpack battled gamely. State was hurt by the loss of its fine center John Richter who fouled out with 10:37 left to play, but not even Richter could have brought the 'Pack victory in this one.

Carolina left the floor at intermission with a 24-20 lead and State could never even it up, although it challenged throughout the contest.

When Richter fouled out, the Tar Heels held a 38-31 lead. State quickly came back to make it 39-35 and at the 8:28 mark it was 43-41, Brennan then got the hot hand and moments later it was 49-43, advantage Carolina.

Close Gap

The Wolfpack kept plugging away but the Tar Heels countered effectively. With 2:43 left, Carolina led 58-50 but State pulled up to 62-58 with 19 seconds remaining. Brennan dropped in a couple of charity tosses with ten seconds to go and it was all over but the shouting.

State stayed in a zone all the way, sliding it speedily in the final five minutes when Carolina went into a semi-freeze. The possession brought about the inevitable intental fouling and the Tar Heels were able to apply the clamps from the free throw line.

34.5 Percentage

The Tar Heels had another terriffic night from the floor, hitting for a 43.5 accuracy. State was 35.5. From the line, the Tar Heels 24 of 34 while State had 24 of 31. State held the rebound edge, 35-34. Brennan's 11 rebounds was tops for both clubs. Stanley had eight.

The victory brought the Tar Heel's season record to 19-6 and it was their third win over the Wolfpack. Against tonight's opponent for the title, the Tar Heels have broken even, losing in Maryland and winning in Chapel Hill.

First Half

Carolina played it cautiously in the first half, waiting for a break in the State zone. The Tar Heels were able to carry a 24-20 lead off at intermission, although the Wolfpack held the lead most of the way for the first 13 minutes.

With 6:22 left, Kearn's jump from behind the circle put the Heels' ahead, 13-14 and they held that lead the rest of the way. Biggest margin was 20-13 with 4:04 remaining but a jumper by Pucillo made it 20-17 and from there out the clubs traded baskets.

Scurlock Gets Revenge Shot

Dave Scurlock, UNC's Olympic-hopeful middle distance ace, will get a chance to avenge his only defeat of the season on the big time indoor boards tonight when he faces Tom Murphy of Manhattan in the New York Knights' of Columbus Games 1,000 yard run at Madison Square Garden.

It was Murphy who snapped Scurlock's two meet win streak in the 880 at the New York A. C. Games three weeks ago. Now Scurlock will get a revenge shot on the same boards where he suffered his first setback.

This is Dave's first big time start since the date. Last weekend, he ran in the ACC Indoor Games here, and captured both the 600 and 880 yard runs in easy fashion. The field was weak, however.

University Officials Form Volleyball Teams

By RUSTY HAMMOND

Sitting behind a desk and pushing a pencil or pounding a typewriter day in and day out can get very monotonous and tiring to an individual. The same dull routine, never broken, tends to hamper one in any effort. So many university officials, along with prominent townspeople, decided to do something about it.

League Formed

To provide some entertaining recreation in the afternoon, as well as to take off that excess poundage and to harden muscles long inactive, the men decided to form a University Volleyball League with help from the Intramurals Department. The league consists of four teams, including many big names around campus.

Doctors, lawyers, dentists, and newspapermen are some of the townspeople participating. These include William Prouty, Editor of the Chapel Hill Weekly.

University Official

Among the University officials are Fred Weaver, Dean Of Students; William Friday, President of the University; Emmet Cheek, Assistant football Coach; Bud Carson, Freshman football coach; Sam Magill, Associate Dean; and Bo Shepard, a General College Advisor and professor.

Some of the managers include baseball coach Walt Rabb, soccer coach Marvin Allen, and phys. ed. instructors Mullins, Strayhorn, and House.

22 Games Slate

All of the games will be played in the Tin Can and all are scheduled for 5:00 in the afternoon. The league started January 6 and closes March 19. By the end of the season 22 games wil lhave been played by each team, and the team with the best record will be declared league champions.

Monogram Club Awards Scholarships

Three Carolina monogram winners were elected to receive scholarship aid from the Monogram Club Grant-In-Aid Fund by vote of the members March 6.

David Wall, Everett Whatley, and Bill Lyons are the first students to benefit by the fund recently set up by the UNC lettermen's club.

Awards are made on the basis of scholarship, need, and participation in both varsity athletics and Monogram Club activities.

Dave Wall was a standout member of the wrestling team for two years. He was recently reelected as secretary of the Monogram Club.

Everett Whatley has earned five Carolina monograms while participating in cross country and track for four years. He works at three different part-time jobs totaling eight hours each day and intends to undertake seminary studies following graduation.

Bill Lyons won his letter last year as a member of the track team. A self-help student, he is married and has two children.

Three Tar Heels In Wrestling Finals

COLLEGE PARK, Md.—Three Tar Heel wrestlers won their first-round bouts in the Altantic Coast Conference Wrestling Tournament yesterday and advanced to the finals which will be held tonight. Henry Rhyne in the 130 class, Kenny Hoke at 177, and Bob Boyette at 191 were the Carolina winners.

Maryland, conference champion this year and favorite in the post season event, lived up to its pretourney rating by advancing nine men into the final round. Virginia followed the Terps by advancing five team members. Duke placed two men into the championship bouts, and Wake Forest one.

Tar Heels In Finals

All of the Tar Heels in the finals will find themselves pitted against Maryland oppenents. Henry Rhyne will meet Dick Van Auken in the 130 pound final. Tar Heel captain Kenny Hoke, wrestling twenty pounds above his normal weight, meets defending champion Dick Dean for the 177 championship. In the 191 final Bob Boyette goes against Art Marinelli.

Coach Sam Barnes stated that he was pleased over the third place position that his team now holds. Barnes added that with some luck in the consolation matches Carolina might be able to end up in second place.

Terps Seek Fifth Win

The Terps go into tonight's final round seeking their fifth straight championship; they have won the event ever since the formation of the ACC. Consolation matches will proceed the 8 p. m. finals at 2 o'clock this afternoon and 7 o'clock tonight.

Frost To Visit UNC

Robert Frost will make his 12th annual visit to Chapel Hill this week, and will lecture Friday, March 14th at 8 p.m. in Hill Hall. The public is invited.

A "Visiting Poet in English," Frost also will speak to graduates and upperclassmen in English at at Bingham Hall Saturday morning, March 15.

His appearance in here is sponsored by the Department of English of which Professor Hugh Holman is chairman.

While in the village, Frost will be the house guest of Pro. and Mrs. Clifford P. Lyons of the English Department.

The famous poet is coming to Chapel Hill from Washington, D. C. where he was a guest at the White House. This has been an unusually busy year for Frost. He has been in England and received honorary degrees from the Universities of Oxford, Cambridge and Edinburg. He also holds an honorary degree from th University of North Carolina.

In his early visits to Chapel Hill he always attracts large crowds at his public appearances, and in classroom discussions and other informal gatherings his pungent wit and philosophical observations have become a tradition h. e.

ability to find the universal in t'e particular, and the timeless in the timely. Frost has produced volumes of poetry, hundreds of poems being well-known favorites. These he will read and talk about this weekend.

SP Plans To Nominate Executives

The Student Party will continue its nominations in Roland Parker Lounges in Graham Memorial Monday at 7 p.m., one half hour earlier than usual.

The major business of the meeting will be the election of the SP's candidates for the four executive positions in Student Government, president, vice president (the speaker of the Student Legislature), secretary and treasurer.

The party will select senior class officers and will consider endorsing candidates for head cheerleader and for National Student Association coordinator.

SP Chairman Pat Adams said that the party planned to take no action concerning the endorsement of a candidate for the editor of The Daily Tar Heel until it has heard the candidates.

No candidates have yet publicly announced their intentions to run for editor.

"We are looking forward to a spirited fight Monday night because we have a number of good candidates running for the big four and other offices," Adams said.

Alumni Fund To Sponsor Three Speakers

The Carolina Symposium on Public Affairs annuonced yesterday that Dr. Katherine McBride president of Bryn Mawr College Dr. Julian Hart of Yale University and Malcolm Cowley noted writer and lecturer will appear during Symposium Week under the auspices of the Alumni Lecture Fund.

This Fund is a sub-division of the Alumni Annual Giving. According to sources at the Alumni Building, money is appropriated to this Annual Giving Organization and then is distributed by the Alumni Annual Giving Council.

Money distributed by this Council is used for a variety of purposes beside this Lecture Fund.

news in brief

'Urge To Kill'

SANFORD, March 8 (AP)-Testimony that Frank Edward Wetzel developed "an urge to kill" during a six-year prison hitch was heard in Lee Country Superior Court today.

Henry Lostaunau, a Bakersfield, Calif., detective, quoted Wetzel as saying he bolted on a wild cross-country flight rather than return to New York's Attica prison.

"He said there were two or three fellows there he would have to 'do in' if he were sent back to prison," the detective testified. Wetzel's life is at stake in his trial here on a charge of murdering Highway Patrolman J. T. Brown. The handsome defendant, his expression impassive, fidgeted slightly as he heard Lostaunau on the witness sand.

Judge George Fountain adjourned the week-old trial until Monday morning.

Mack's Pay

WASHINGTON, March 8 (AP)-Rep. Harris (D-Ark's) said today Richard A. Mack may have had an income of up to $75,000 in two years when his official pay as a Federal Communications commissioner was only around half that amount.

At the same time Harris announced the scheduling of Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower's brother-in-law, Col. George Gordon Moore, for under-oath testimony March 17 before Harris' House subcommittee investigating regulatory agencies.

Terps Dethrone Tar Heels In 2nd Half Comeback 86-74

By BILL KING

REYNOLDS COLISEUM, RALEIGH—Maryland's mighty Terps used the free throw line to dethrone the Carolina Tar Heels as Atlantic Coast Conference basketball champs, 86-74 here last night before a packed house of 12,500.

The Terps converted an amazing total of 28 foul shots in the last four minutes and 24 second an Carolina's defense of its National title went further down the drain with every Maryland charity toss.

It was a tremendous reversal of form by the inspired Terps who became the first team outside the Big Four to ever win the ACC title. Maryland trailed the Tar Heels at intermission, 34-27 but Bud Millikan's crew came back an entirely different club in the second stanza and the College Park team completely overwhelmed the Tar Heels who defeated South Carolina for the championship here last year.

Pete Brennan and Tommy Kearns, who along with Bobby Cunningham and Roy Searcy closed out their college career, hit 29 and 20 points respectively but even their gallant effort was no match for the Terp's unbelievable performance from the free throw line.

Maryland showed it would not lay down and play dead from the very beginning of the second half. The Terps began chopping away at the Tar Heel's lead and at the 15:57 mark, their sophomore sensation Charlie McNeil hit a jump from the coner to make it 39-35.

McNeil led the assault from there out and the Terps continued to move closer. McNeil hit a free throw moments later to make it 39-37 with 14:44 left.

Kearns hit on a beautiful drive and Harvey Salz got a foul shot to send Carolina back out front by 42-37 but McNeil's jump from the corner, a field goal by John Nacincik and a bucket by Davis shot the Terps ahead, 43-42 with 12:18 to play.

With Brennan leading the way for the Tar Heels and McNeil for the Terps, the lead changed hands nine times and was tied twice before the Terps went ahead to stay, 58-56 on McNeil's hook with exactly five minutes remaining.

It was then that the Terps took to the charity line to comply wreck any Tar Heel hopes of repeating as National champs. There were but five field goals by both clubs in the final five minutes. The Tar Heels also hit well from the free throw line but Maryland got the most opportunities and took full advantage of the fact.

Kearns tried desperately to keep the Tar Heels in the game during the Maryland hot streak but the Terps were just too deadly.

The Tar Heels got in trouble early with fouls and several Tar Heel's were in precarious shape throughout almost the entire second half. Seven Carolinians wound up with a total of four fouls.

For the entire game, Maryland hit a total of 40 free throws in 52 attempts for a new record and there in lay the story of this exciting contest. Carolina converted 28 of 37 charity tosses.

Maryland's shooting percentage was 41.8 and the Tar Heel's was 39.0. The Terps grabbed 36 rebounds, one less than the Tar Heels.

The Tar Heels could do no wrong

Ralph Marterie Concert Set Tomorrow Evening

Popular Band leader Ralph Marterie will present his orchestra in Memorial Hall Monday night at 8 o'clock in a concert sponsored by the Panhellenic and Interfraternity Councils.

Proceeds from the concert will go to the Chapel Hill Negro Recreation Center. Tickets for $1.25 may be purchased in Y Court, Ledbetter's, Town and Campus and at the door Monday night.

The two Greek organizations sponsor a joint project each year for benefit of usually a local charity.

After checking with the local Welfare Department, the two groups decided upon giving proceeds from the Marterie concert to the Negro Recreation Center.

Because of a lack of response to the Chapel Hill Community Chest this year, insufficient funds would have affected the recreation center, closing it June 1.

Although the facilities of the center are limited, it serves to accommodate around 400 children who come there daily while their parents work. The number of children who attend the center is always greater in the summer season, which this year will see the closing down of the recreation center if funds remain inadequate.

Although the program for the Marterie concert has not been released, it is expected that he will perform some of his hit records and selections from several albums.

In his youth, his flaming trumpet helped Ralph Marterie become popular in Chicago radio studios and he regularly took part in such famous orchestras as Paul Whiteman, Frank Black, Roy Shields and Percy Faith.

Reservation Deadline Set For UNC Rooms

Men and women students have been reminded of impending deadlines for room reservations.

Men students now living in dormitories have the option or reserving space for the summer and fall sessions, the UNC Housing Office announced Saturday.

A room reserved for the summer session only does not entitle students to that space in the fall, housing officials said.

The Housing Office emphasized room reservation deposits for the summer and fall must be made with the University cashier in South Building not later than April 22.

For summer housing, double rooms will be available in Joyner first session only), Old West, Grimes and Manley dormitories. Connor will be open to graduate men.

The rent in these dormitories will be $20 for each session; the deposit also will be $20.

Single rooms will be open in Steele, Ruffin and Mangum. Rent for these rooms will be $30 and the deposit will be $30 for each session.

Housing for married couples will be available in Alexander Dormitory. The rent for these rooms will be $40 and the deposit $40 per session.

Frat Pledges Begin Work This Afternoon

Fraternity pledges will don work clothes Monday afternoon in work day activities of the annual Greek Week.

More than 300 pledges will clear bushes, rake the grounds and clear up the Chapel Hill Community Center to prepare the way for building to be done this spring. Local Jaycees will provide the tools and supervise the work of the pledges there.

One pledge class will do clean-up work at the Lutheran church, and another will work on fixing up the Hillel House parking lot. The Victory Village Day Center will be cleaned up by a fraternity pledge class, and spring cleaning will be done by still another pledge class at the Episcopal Church.

These activities on Monday between 2 and 5 p.m. are the first in a series which are being held to bring nearly 400 pledges of 24 social fraternities together in a general project and to better relations between community and fraternity through projects.

Other Greek Week activities will include: an intramural field day, a carnival and a banquet. At the banquet a trophy will be awarded the most outstanding pledge class on the basis of scholarship, field day activities, participation in work day and carnival booths.

Greek Week was substituted several years ago for "hell week."

Queen Turns Thumbs Down On Reconciliation

COLOGNE, Germany, March 8 (AP)—Iranian Sen. Sardar Asked Bakhtiari left for Tehran tonight amid reports he failed to persuade Queen Soraya to accept reconciliation with the Shah of Iran.

Informed sources said the childless Queen ruled out any suggestions that the Shah, who wants a male heir, take a second wife.

IN Y PLAY CAST—Miss Doris Berry, Dan Linney, Bob Ketler and Larry Anderson, (left to right) are included in the cast of Carolina Y members who will present Alan Paton's "Cry, The Beloved Country" during the Y spring conference at Bricks, N. C., March 14-16. This drama will be the fourth stop on "The Tour of the Wilds of Creation," the theme of the conference. Other cast members are Miss Hope Sparger, narrator; and Al Sugar, Butch Board, Church Tomlison, Pete Flahive, Parker Hodges and Misses Gail Rice and Paddy Wall. Directing the production is Dan Linney, and stage manager is Miss Betty Kaye Johnson. Anyone wishing to attend the conference should register at the Y. Costs for the weekend have been estimated at $9.50. (Buddy Spoon Phoot)

Symposium Panel Will Discuss Higher Education For Women Today

Four noted educators will participate in a panel discussion on the higher education of women, as part ofthe Symposium Week's activities. The panel discussion is scheduled for 4 to 6 p.m. March 17 in Carroll Hall.

Dr. Katherine McBride, president of Bryn Mawr College, will present the view of a woman's college to the problem of college education for women. Dr. McBride will also participate in an evening convocation in Memorial Hall as another part of the Syposium program.

The point of view of a college which educates the sexes separately will be presented by Dr. Chalmers G. Davidson, director of the library and professor of history at Davidson College.

Coed College

Associate professor and dean of romance languages, Dr. William C. Archie will point out the philosophy behind a coeducational college.

The coordinated college viewpoint will be given by Dr. Marguerite Roberts, dean and profesor of English at Westhampton College, University of Richmond.

Moderating the discussion will be Chancellor Gordon Blackwell of Woman's College in Greensboro.

D. Hiden Ramsey, member of the state board of higher education and an executive of the Asheville Citizen-Times, will be presiding officer at the forum.

Coeds Here 60 Years

The idea for the forum stemmed from Dean of Women Katherine Kennedy Carmichael, who felt that since this year marks the 60th anniversary of the first coed on the UNC campus, the topic of higher education for women would be a fitting one for this year's Symposium.

Some of the questions that probably will be discussed include: college organization with respect to women; difference in college's policy with respect to the type college it is, public, church supported, or private; what ideally should be the education of a woman, how does it differ from that of a man and what does the public think of the various types of education.

Each participant will give a short talk, and at the end of a discussion period, the forum will be open for questions from the audience.

Students, faculty, and townspeople have been invited.

Press Club To Hear Editor Monday Night

Thomas J. Lasciter, editor of the Smithfield Herald, will be guest speaker at the UNC Press Club meeting Monday night at 7:30 at the home of Kenneth Byerly, 418 Whitehead Circle.

Lassiter, who formerly taught journalism here, will speak informally on problems of non-daily newspaper production. A discussion period will be held after his talk.

All Press Club members and guests plus all persons interested in journalism have been invited to attendt he meeting.

The Byerlys live in the Walter Spearman home on Whitehead Circle ,which is off Mason Farm Road beyond Victory Village. A map showing the way is posted on the Bynum Hall bulletin Board.

Those without rides or needing directions have been asked to meet at Bynum at 7:15 p.m. Monday.

What Goes On Here

Executive Officers

Open nominations for next year's YWCA executive officers will be held Monday at 4:30 p.m. in Gerrard Hall.

A slate of officers will be submitted by the present Y executive committee. Other nominations will be accepted from the floor.

The following people have been nominated for offices by the Y executive committee: president, Dede DeVere and Martha Turner; vice-president, Nancy Grubb; secretary, Ann Selph and Suzanne Mosteller; treasurer, Bea Newman; program chairman, Louise Crumbley and Betty Kaye Johnson; and membership chairman, Jane Walker and Sophie Martin.

Y Human Relations Seminar

Students from UNC will attend a seminar sponsored by the YM-YWCA Human Relations committee at Shaw University in Raleigh tonight.

The program will consist of a talk by Sittaam Palam Ponnampalam of Ceylon, graduate student at Carolina in Public Health. His topic will be "Roads to Understanding."

The Y is providing transportation to the seminar in Raleigh, and rides will leave the Y building at 5 p.m. The cost for the seminar and trip is estimated at one dollar, which includes supper and transportation.

Correction

Tau Epsilon Phi Mike Falk of Woodmere, L. I., N. Y., is not engaged as it was previously reported in the March 1 issue of The Daily Heel. The information was incorrectly submitted to The Daily Tar Heel office and is no fault of any staff member.

Musicale Concert

The Petites Musicales concert by Martha Fouse, soprano, which was originally planned for today, has been re-scheduled for Thursday, March 20.

The program will be held in the main lounge of Graham Memorial at 8 p.m.

Parking Committee

Students interested in becoming members of a committee "to administer and organize the rules for the Bell Tower Parking Lot" are requested to see Student Body President Sonny Evans.

Evans said he would be in his office in Graham Memorial from 2 to 5 p.m. beginning Monday to interview candidates for this committee.

Evans said he hoped to have to the committee appointed in time to present it to the Student Legislature Thursday evening for approval.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Jean McCauley, Magda Gonzales, Mary Ann Hofler and Sue Ann Muirhead and Richard Molten, George Schroeder, William Morgan and Lee Weinstein.

GM SLATE

The following activities are scheduled for today at Graham Memorial:

Presbyterians, 9:45 a.m., Williams-Wolfe Lounge; CPU, 8-11 p.m., Grail Room; Friends, 11 a.m., Williams-Wolfe Lounge; Presbyterians, 9: 45 a.m., Rendezvous Room.

Attorney General Rogers Conducting Probes Well

Sleepless nights are in order for a host of federal commissioners if the current FCC probe is any yardstick of what Attorney General William P. Rogers will do in the future.

He announced Friday a sweeping grand jury investigation into reports of bribery and influence-peddling in the Federal Communications Commission and other federal agencies.

The grand jury, weighing evidence produced by attorneys of Rogers' staff, will determine whether there is "probable cause" to subpoena commissioners and other witnesses to hearings on alleged charges against them.

A special House subcommittee already has exposed influence peddling in the FCC, which resulted in the resignation of commissioner Richard Mack. Hearings are continuing and a "new facet" of the FCC case is expected to be uncovered soon.

Attorney General Rogers should continue in his search for bribes and gifts involving federal commissioners. If nothing else, there's a lesson to be learned by those who will one day compose the federal regulatory agencies.

And besides that, there's a lot the public would like to know about the so-called public-interest agencies which, apparently, are not always concerned with the public interest.

Fighting Officials Should Not Continue In Positions

Down at Hope Mills, Police Chief Jim Osborne and Mayor Ralph Deaver shook hands and agreed to do no more fighting after a feud two weeks ago that left the Mayor with severe cuts and bruises.

It all started when the two men lost their tempers at a town commissioners meeting February 25, stepped outside and exchanged blows. The Mayor needed 33 stitches and a new pair of glasses.

Chief Osborne, cited to court and fined $25 for assault, promptly lodged charges of speeding, driving a car without lights and disorderly conduct against the mayor. He then was removed from his job.

Finally, agreeing to shake hands and end their feud, the mayor reinstated the Police Chief and the Chief dropped charges against the mayor.

What we want to know is this: since when do mayors fire police chiefs, and what authority does a police chief have to drop state charges against mayors if those mayors have violated laws? Neither, it seems to us, is right.

And if the rather severe feud is typical of Hope Mills' mayor and police chief, then the town would do well to put more responsible people in such important posts.

FROM THE WASHINGTON POST

The Lady Delegate Wept

There seems to be some misunderstanding about Del. Kathryn Stone's tears during the session of the Virginia House of Delegates the other day. She did not weep because her feelings were hurt, her pride was wounded or her vanity was offended. To think she did is to misunderstand her, and her tears.

She wept, as any thoughtful person must weep who contemplates the pass into which one of the proudest states in the Union has been brought by meanness of spirit, disregard of tradition, narrowness of view and racial arrogance.

She wept for the Virginia that was and is no more.

She wept for the Virginia that was first among the 13 colonies in its concern about, provision for and exploration of the means of educating its future citizens, and for the Virginia that is now among the states making the smallest per pupil expenditures for education.

She wept for the Virginia carved out of the wilderness and made into a replica of European culture by the great Cavaliers who would have lost a continent before they would have insulted a lady, in public or in private.

She wept for the Virginia in which, for generation after generation, every male was taught to regard every woman, whatever her lot or position or rank, as a lady, a Virginia in which the word gentleman was a title worn as an accolade is worn and cherished as a mark of culture, refinement and gentility.

She wept for the Virginia that among all the colonies, first raised the standard of resistance against the transportation of accused persons to remote places for secret trial of their alleged crimes, a Virginia that no longer seems to view with alarm plans to question men on anonymous accusation, in secret chambers.

She wept for the great tidewater culture, that magnificent eighteenth century society out of which emerged Jefferson, Madison, Wythe, Randolph, Mason, Marshall, and the other students and scholars and gentlemen who brought to the tasks of government the liberal learning of Locke and Montesquieu, who fashioned in a primitive state, a civilized society in which human liberty and dignity never have been held higher.

She wept for the grand state that has been the author of American liberties, the architect of American Government and the mother of American Presidents and that now has sunk to such low estate in the counsels of the Nation.

She wept for what Virginia was, in the presence of men whose silence while a lady was insulted attest to what Virginia is. How could she keep from weeping? The scornful voice of Del. Frank P. Moncure, heaping upon her reproach and rebuke for defending the principles of liberty in a hall where once there echoed the voices of Madison, Henry and Jefferson in advocacy of freedom—would it not bring tears from anyone who ever loved Virginia and the tradition that flowered in its borders?

No wonder the lady went. The wonder is that the whole House did not weep. The wonder is that the whole state does not weep.

Stan Kenton's Varied Career Nearing Peak

In the spring of 1941 a new band suddenly became nationally famous. It was led by a vigorous young man who looked a little underfed but acted the part of a man obsessed with a dream. The man was Stan Kenton, and the dream began to come true; it never came completely true, because dreams don't operate that way, but it did a wonderful job of trying. Now, in 1958, Stan Kenton looks anything but undernourished, and that band of his is right at the top of the heap. The course to the top was a strange one for this man—it took him through pinnacles of happiness down to depths of personal despair, a despair provoked by a personal dissatisfaction for the way the dream was coming out.

Stan Kenton has always believed in jazz. His belief is a great one, but at times it is clouded by a too-personal view of what jazz is and what it should be. He is a tremperamental man, a stormy man, and if people don't always agree with the Kenton method he may fly into a tantrum. When Stan blows his top, everybody in the world of jazz hears about it, because he doesn't believe in silence. He is possessed by the fetish that the whole world wants to listen to Stan Kenton.

The band that broke into headlines in 1941 via the Balboa Bandroom was almost just another swing band, except—well, except for the fact that young Stan Kenton wasn't planning to be just another swing band. For a while it seemed as though that would be his fate. Then one day an arrangement came by mail from a young army officer who was about to receive his release and was in search of work. His name was Pete Rugolo, and in his many years with Stan he produced an amazing group of charts. Pete's charts built the foundation for Stan's band.

Stan and Pete had not gone without criticism, however. Critics, wading in the sometimes overdone mires of good taste, objected to the screaming effect they often utilized with the trumpets. But Stan, not being one who gives in easily, kept right on screaming. Pete left then, and Stan was in a quandary. He got out of it by hiring a young man named Bob Graetinger to write some way out stuff for a way out band. Way out I said, and way out I meant—strings and horns and everything. Stan called it "Innovations In Modern Music." Innovations, yes; music, not always. Little Bob used to get carried away by extra-musical effects and his "City of Glass" was pretty weird. So Stan dissolved.

Space doesn't allow the conclusion of the tale of Stan. Until next week we will leave Stan, very much dissolved and confused, waiting in the pages of an old book to be shown light again.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

House Should Block 5-Cent Mail

With a Senate majority voting for a 5-cent out-of-town first-class mail rate, it is at least momentarily encouraging to note gathering opposition in the House of Representatives to this measure.

The House has previously approved an increase from 3 cents to 4, which is tough enough. It should now buck the Senate's determined effort to jam through 5-cent postage. As the Inquirer has repeatedly pointed out, first-class mail at the existing 3-cent rate pays for itself.

The Senate has not justified its attitude by tacking the postal rate increases of about $700 million to a pay rise for 1,500,000 postal employees that would cost more than the rate boost. That move has raised possibilities of a presidential veto of the whole bill and drew from Senator Styles Bridges the comment that the measure had become a mixed up mess.

Postal employees are entitled to increased pay, but there are more equitable ways to give it to them than through 5-cent first-class postage.

The Senate showed its hand when efforts to increase second-class mail rates by 30 percent a year for the next 3 years were swept aside on Thursday. This kind of mail includes newspapers and magazines. It is a big drain on the postal budget. According to Pennsylvania's Senator Clark, the favorable second-class rates create a subsidy to magazines of about $32 million a year, a very juicy sop to publishers.

There are, in pending bills, moderate provisions for gradual second-class increases. But they don't approach the need to make second-class mail pay a reasonable share of the cost of the postal service.

Meanwhile, first-class mail — letters, Christmas cards, and similar communication — are to carry the load, if the Senate proposal is sustained.

That's where the House, which has uniformly opposed the 5-cent intercommunity charge, should take a stand and stick to it. Congressmen should not be deluded by a solemn Senate provision limiting the 5-cent rate to 3 years. Hard-pressed Americans can look forward to a permanent 5-cent intercity mail cost if this boost goes through. And the time to stop it is now — in the House.

AMERICAN FLAG

To the editor:

It seems to me that sometime in my short life of 19 years I was taught that the American Flag was a great symbol of our country and should be given the greatest of respect. For some time now, I have noticed that the Flag which flys in Polk Place (that's in front of South Building) certainly does not indicate anything but disrespect for the American Flag. It is so tattered and worn that I can hardly see how it remains "on duty." I think that flying such a flag is a genuine disgrace to our campus and country, and that something should be done to correct this deplorable neglect of American Tradition.

MEMORIAL HALL

Auditorium Acoustics

The word auditorium comes from the Latin word meaning to hear. You would hardly suspect this, though, from the trouble you have in hearing in the University's auditorium, Memorial Hall.

George Bernard Shaw's "Back to Methuselah" was presented there last weekend. I didn't attend it but I heard it reported upon by many persons who did. Nearly all of them said they thought the play was interesting and well acted but that their enjoyment of it was marred because there was so much of what the actors said that they couldn't hear. The few exceptions were persons who had seats very close to the stage and in the center section.

Just before I sat down to write this piece a friend of mine in the University's communications department told me that the men and women there, who are keenly interested in everything about sound, were commenting on the fact that a large part of "Back to Methuselah" was lost to most of the audience.

I heard this same complaint, about people's not being able to hear, after Adlai Stevenson's speech last fall. Then the fault was not only with the acoustics of the building; an amplifying system had been installed and when Mr. Stevenson was about midway of his speech it collapsed.

The Stevenson speech and "Back to Methuselah" are only two examples. For years I have been observing, myself, and other people have been talking to me about the difficulty of hearing in Memorial Hall.

Of course, with four times as many students in the University as this building will seat, a new auditorium is urgently needed. The University authorities have been well aware of this and have asked for an appropriation to cover the cost. With the funds available for State departments and institutions always insufficient to meet all requests for appropriations, inevitably some will be refused. Which these will be depends upon how much importance is attached to them by the men who make the requests and the men who decide upon them.

In view of the part played in an institution of learning by addresses, lectures, concerts and plays, and various assemblies and ceremonies, there can be no doubt of the commanding importance of an adequate and well designed auditorium. I wonder if the trustees and officers of the University who have been responsible for presenting requests to the State, and then with supporting them at hearings of the Budget Commission and committees of the Legislature, have failed to give an auditorium the degree of priority it deserves?

Even if the next Legislature should grant an appropriation for an auditorium, it would be three or four years from now before the building could be completed. Meanwhile, the University authorities ought to move with the least possible delay, first, to have changes made in Memorial Hall, specially in the provision of new seats and new floor coverings, thaat will improve the acoustics, and second, to have installed the best type of amplifying system and to have it inspected and supervised so carefully that it will not be out of order at critical times as has occurred in the past.

Surely this enterprise is not beyond the energy and talent at the command of a great University.

To use a phrase that has become popular in Washington of late, this is a problem that needs attention at the summit. I feel sure that, if President Friday, Vice-President Carmichael, and Chancellor Aycock will join in a really determined attack on it, people who go to gatherings in Memorial Hall will soon be hearing what is said on stage.

Merit Summit Meeting

March is a misunderstood month. People always say, "Mad as a March hare," although the expression was originally, "hairy as a mad marcher," or "married as a had star," which is a different thing, indeed. And does March ever come in like a lion and go out like a lamb? It always comes in like a wet dog and goes out like a wet goat, but people don't stop to consider the thrilling history of this maladjusted month.

You (being bright and college-trained) have noticed that practically everything we buy is marked with the name of that wealthy Polish manufacturer, Regus Patoff, Often you see the name of another rich industrialist—his Spanish associate, Marcus Registrada. The first Marquis di Registrada was so rich he bought the whole month of March (10,000,000 B.C.) and named it after himself. Since his name was Juan Garcia Hidalgo Jiminez Castallao y Salcedo, Marquis di Registrada, this caused complications.

In 44 B.C., an economy-minded Roman Senate shortened this unwieldy name to the simple form, March, and instituted the Ides of March, as proposed by the soothsayer Artemidorus. This Senate trimmed Caesar's budget to the bone, by going directly to the source and pruning Caesar. The anniversary of this bloody affair is celebrated each year by the Internal Revenue Service, except that now it is Caesar that renders, and the taxpayers who gets stabbed.

The ancients used to celebrate the beginning of the year in March, because then occurs the Primavernal equinox, or first day of Spring, which is the natural day to begin the year. An amendment to the Smoot-Hawley Tariff changed New Year's Day to January 1, which is an ordinary midwinter day and not a natural dividing point of any sort.

It has been alleged that this move was masterminded by the notorious secret society, Professional University Professors' Union (PUPU). The alleged purpose was to eliminate the two weeks of March New Year students' holidays, and lump them in with the regular Christmas holidays.

And March isn't a windy month, either. The famous March winds are really optical illusions. Altogether, March is a mixed-up month with Freudian connotations. —The Daily Reveille.

No Spitting On Floors, No Stoning Of Professors!

History Of Di, Phi Traces Development Of UNC Student Gov't.

By MARY MOORE MASON

Standing in the middle of the deserted Philanthropic Society Hall, it wouldn't be hard to imagine a ghostly voice saying, "Hear, Hear!" to a suggested bill or to see the phantom figure of such a past member as William R. King ,vice president of the United States under Franklin Pierce.

There on the walls hang the portraits of dignified and distinguished members who long ago left the University, and history seems to fill the room.

This room itself represents history, of the University of North Carolina, as does the hall of the Dialectic Senate, for these two societies represent the oldest student organizations on the campus.

8 p.m. Curfew

When UNC was first begun the trustees drew up and printed a body of laws regulating the life and conduct of student in every way. There were morning prayers, 8 p.m. curfew, and students were never allowed to go out of sight of the buildings or out of the hearing of the college bell.

After the students became so disgusted with this form of government that 45 of them staged a walk-out, the Debating Society was formed in 1795 to develop ". . . lasting friendship and promotion of useful knowledge."

July of that same year the Debating Society split in two to form the Concord Society (later the Philanthropic Society) and the Dialectic Senate.

The first motion passed was one which approved the purchase of books. Now thousands of books in our library contain a small card in the front stating that they were given to the library by the Di or the Phi.

Professors Stoned

Soon the literary societies became the student government for the University, and there was certainly a need for a student government because, according to early reports, the students had an unfortunate habit of stoning their professors.

One hundred years later in 1875 the faculty let the societies entirely regulate the conduct of the students after a member of the Phi was suspended for drunkenness and the members of the society petitioned the faculty to let him back in school, promising to be responsible for his conduct and to be active in suppressing drinking.

In 1884 the faculty adopted a motion making membership in one or the other of the organizations compulsory for all under-graduates and law students who lived in the college. Although the Di and Phi did not have authority to expel students from the college, the ostracism that went with expulsion from one of the societies usually caused the student to quit school.

Besides their stated purpose of advancing the ideals of citizenship, developing the art of debating, promoting the welfare of UNC, and encouraging the literary arts and the interchange of ideas, both societies also passed important bills compelling the members to wear shoes to meetings, not to wear hats to meetings, and not to spit on the floor.

According to Archibald Henderson's history, fines were levied on those students who insisted on playing shinny, a rather bloodthirsty game played with wooden clubs and balls, in the campus flower beds.

These fines were used to pay important business debts such as the following note listed in the Dialectic records: "pay the servant engaged during Jim's elopement the sum of one dollars for his services."

Conducted Funeral Rites

One of the most unusual functions of the societies was their holding of the funeral rites of students who died on the campus. This was a rather extensive job as quite a few students seemed to die on the campus at this time due to epidemics and the lack of adequate health facilities. Even now the tomb stones of Di and Phi senators may be found in the Chapel Hill cemetery.

Rivalry sprang up early between the two societies. As Zebulon Baird Vance, a pro-Dialectic man panned when asked to join the Philanthropic Society, "Fie, Fie! I'd rather Die."

With the Civil War came a period of hardship for UNC, but it was one of the two colleges in the South to stay open during the war. Reconstruction, however, brought a period of horror and destruction. The libraries of the Di and the Phi, consisting at this time of 20,000 volumes, were wrecked.

When the campus began to outgrow the Di-Phi system of student government in 1904, these organizations helped to set up the new form of government. Then when the Second World War came, the Phi was even forced to fold up for several years. However, the membership had been helped when coeds were invited to join the Phi in 1930 and the Di a few years later.

The annual Di-Phi debate, the Faculty Award, and the Phi-Di Award given to some alumnus who had contributed to the state or the nation had already become a tradition of the campus.

Outstanding Members

And the organizations listed as members scores of such outstanding men as Gen. James J. Pettigrew, one of the leaders of Pickett's charge at Gettysburg; John Branch, secretary ofthe Navy; Walter Clark, chief justice of the U. S. supreme court; and Luther Hodges, present governor of North Carolina.

FRIDAY, SATURDAY SOLD OUT

Playmaker Ticket Sales Reportedly Doing Well

The Carolina Playmakers have announced that tickets for the Friday and Saturday performances of "A View From The Bridge" seats are still available for the Wednesday, Thursday and Sunday showings of the play which will be seen in The Playmakers Theatre March 12-16 at 8:30 p.m.

"A View From the Bridge" is the story of a man consumed by too much love. Eddie Carbone, a Brooklyn longhoreman, is caught in the "tragic machine" by his refusal to see his own desire for his niece, Catherine. The play offers adult entertainment seldom encountered on a campus stage.

Fetured in the play are Ken Callender as Beatrice, John Sneden as Alfieri, Albert Gordon as Marco, and Harvey Knox as Rudolpho.

Also in the cast are are George Manasse, Jim Potter, Bill Pfefferkorn, Anne Brooke, Bill White, Dan Linney, Ed Madden, Carl Hinrichs and Ross Baumstone.

Wednesday, Thursday and Sunday night seats are available in The Playmakers Business Office, 214 Abernethy Hall, and Ledbetter-Pickard. All seats are reserved at $1.50.

Power Well-Distributed In ACC

The evenly distributed power between teams of the Atlantic Coast Conference is amazing. Never was it more evident than during the tourney in Raleigh this weekend. There was not one sorry game in the entire tourney and all were of the "right down to the wire" caliber.

Regardless of won-lost records over the season, every club looked liked a seasoned tourney veteran. It was certainly a good show for the fans, well worth the two and a half bucks they paid to see the three-day dribble extravaganza.

There is first hand proof that the Big Four teams no longer dominate the ACC. Last year Carolina had South Carolina as its championship opponent and this year it was Maryland. In another year or so look for teams outside the state to take over the tourney, because that's just how tough the ACC is. The conference is healthy now and its quickly becoming recognized as one of the toughest in the country.

Sportsmanship Okay During Tourney

Sportsmanship was, for the most part, very good. You will seldom find very poor sportsmanship at a tournament because the fans are so divided that there can be no organized jeering and booing. Also, there are not as many students at these garnes and the crowd is a little less enthusiastic than at games during the regular season.

Next year we believe that some rules will be enacted in order to curb poor sportsmanship. Administrative action of some sort is sorely needed. Another year like this one, and the ACC will be in trouble because of its fans.

Sophomores Make Future Bright

This very definitely was the best season the ACC has had in its five-year existence. But next year the conference should be as strong if not stronger. Probably never have there been as many sophomore standouts as there were this year and this is very encouraging for the future.

Duke suffers the heaviest losses, losing its first seven men by graduation. It might take a year for Hal Bradley to rebuild at Methodist flats. But look at the rest of the conference.

Carolina will lose Pete Brennan, Tommy Kearns, Bobby Cunningham and Roy Searcy. This is a tremendous blow but McGuire has plenty of talent with which to compensate. Harvey Salz, Lee Shaffer, Dick Kepley and the latast Carolina soph star Ray Stanley have seen lots of action this season and will be greatly improved next year. In addition, McGuire might have Joe Quigg back, plus York Larese, Johnny Crotty and several more stars in their own rights.

Up at Wake Forest Bones McKinney is shouting "wait 'til next year and he has good reason to do so. Bones loses four men in June but he has five sophomores which promise great things for the future. The Deacs will be tough come basketball season in1958-59.

State has only three seniors this year and Everett Case is sure to have another fine team next year. Lou Pucillo leads an outstanding list of returnees and the Wolfpack will be right in their scrambling again despite the fact it will still be on probation.

Maryland loses only four men and it too has some great sophomore and junior talent. Clemson will be better. The Tigers lose four men but have seven sophs returning. South Carolina will lose but two men and Virginia but three.

Thus, when the ACC gets underway again next year, hold onto your seats because "you ain't seen nothing yet."

Tar Heels-Terps

in the first half and seemed to make it two titles in a row. Carolina mark in the first stanza and led the rest of the way. At a couple of points the Tar Heels built up leads of 11 and 13 points but Maryland kept fighting.

Sophomore center Dick Kepley helped Brennan spur the Tar Heel attack in the first half but both had three fouls at intermission and had to slack off in the second period.

Top man for Maryland was McNeil with 21. He was followed by Bill Murphy with 19 and Nick Davis with 16. The victory sends the Terps against Boston College in the District playoffs of the NCAA Tuesday night in New York.

UNC Fencers Defeat VMI

Winning in two out of three divisions the Carolina fencers swept sabre 7-2, duelling sword 6-3 and lost only in foil by 3-6 for a total of sixteen bouts won as compared with the visitor's eleven.

Outstanding for UNC in sabre were Bill Mudd and Al Deal both of whom won all three of their bouts. In foil Charles Koonce defeated two out of three of his opponents.

Duplicating the feat of Mudd and Deal in sabre, Bob Clay and Carroll Raver also won all three of their bouts in epee (duelling sword). Carolina's other two victories were by Neal Kelly in sabre and Dave Matthews in foil.

The slashing sabreurs were no match for the visitors from VMI as they were only able to take two victories at UNC's expense. Outstanding for the visitors was Schaaf who won two of two in foil and doubling in epee was able to win one of three. Mahoney of VMI also showed his finesse by scoring victories in two out of three of his foil bouts.

The remaining six victories by VMI were won by Fox and Smith who each won a bout in epee, by Garrison and Caldwell who each took a sabre bout, and by Schall and Hill who won a foil bout apiece.

NOT LONG NOW: Just a reminder that baseball season is just around the corner as are the other spring sports. Baseball, Carolina style, will begin March 20 when the Tar Heels make their annual Florida trip to play in the Rollins Tournament at Winter Park

Athletics Ready For Outdoors; Spring Sports Schedule Set

By RUSTY HAMMOND

Sports fans here at Carolina can look forward to a full and interesting spring season this year in the four spring sports—Baseball, Golf, Tennis, and Track.

Of the twenty-eight games played by the varsity baseball team, twelve will be played in Emerson Stadium against a wide variety of foes from all over the area. The usual conference teams, will visit Carolina, in addition to such out-of-state squads as VPI, Canisius, and Princeton.

The golf team has seven matches in all ,and five of them will be played on Finley Golf Course in Chapel Hill. The only non-conference foe to face the golfers is Indiana of the Big Ten.

The tennis team has 18 matches, most of them against outside competition. Eight of the matches will be played in Chapel Hill, and the schedule features such outstanding outside teams as Williams, Harvard, Amherst, Yale, George Washington, Rollins, and Illinois.

Of the nine track meets on tap for the thin-clads, only two will be held at Carolina, against Maryland and Virginia. With the exception of the Penn relays and Florida relays all track action is against conference competition.

Not to be overlooked is the big Blue-White varsity football game coming up March 22 in Kenan Stadium, giving the Carolina fans a preview of Jim Tatum football, '58 style.

W. Va. Wins Fourth Title

By ED YOUNG

RICHMOND, Va., March (AP)-Second - ranked West Virginia solved William and Mary's ball-control game midway the first half here tonight and stormed past the Indians 74-58 for its fourth consecutive Southern Conference basketball championship.

It was the 36th straight conference victory for the powerful Mountaineers over a three-season span and sent them into a first-round NCAA playoff meeting with Manhattan in New York next Tuesday.

William and Mary, which ha sprung two upsets to reach the title finals, stayed with West Virginia for only the first 10 minutes in the showdown game tonight. The beginning of the end came for the scrappy but outclassed Indians with 4:45 of action left before the intermission. With West Virginia ahead 20-18, William and Mary went the rest of the half with but one field goal and West Virginia, getting quick scoring by Lloyd Sharar, Joedy Gardner, Jerry West and Willie Akers, spurted to a 32-22 lead.

In the second half the Indians never got closer than eight points, at 39-31, despite some heroic work by All - Southern forward Roay Lange. West Virginia gradually pulled away and once stretched its advantage to 21 points, 67-46.

Lange, with 19 points, was the game's high scorer. Joedy Gardner led West Virginia with 16 but Bob Smith added 14 for the Mounties and Sharrar had 12.

Jerry West, the sophomore phenomenon, wasn't in top shooting form and collected only nine points for West Virginia but was his usual proficient self under the boards.

Sharrar, showing his best form of the tournament, was the principal architect of West Virginia's 10-point halftime edge. The second-team All-America ace got 11 of his points before intermission. Smith, who hadn't scored at all in the first half, led the Mountaineer assault in the last 20 minutes which soon left the Indians far behind.

Soprano, Close Defeat Scurlock At K Of C Meet In New York

NEW YORK, (AP)-Rony Delany, won his 22nd straight mile race in 4:08.4 in the Knights of Columbus games last night—but this one was different in that he had to survive ab umping session with Burr Grim of Maryland.

All told, Delany, the Olympic 1,500-meter champion from Villanova, now has won 27 straight indoor races. He started his streak at the same K of C meet when he won the 1,000 as a freshman in 1955. Since then, no one has beaten him and few have come close.

With a lap and a half to go and Delany, Grim and Phil Coleman of Chicago loping along. Grim suddenly veered toward Delany and bounced into Ron. Coleman had just moved into the lead and Grim and Delany were a couple of feet behind.

Delany merely glowered at Grim and went about his business. A little later, Grim tripped on the turn and almost fell. As it turned out, Delany was in front at the end by some eight yards. Coleman was second, Grim third. Jim Beatty of the Army fourth and George King of the New York Athletic Club last in the five-man field.

Joe Soprano of Manhattan won a nip-and-tuck duel with Peter Close of St. John's NY in the 1,000, hitting the tape in 2:10.3. It was the fastest of the season for the distance.

Soprano never was worse than second, took the lead at the start of the third lap. Close, however, was last most of the way and didn't make his bid until the final lap. Soprano just did manage to lunge across the finish in front of him.

Dave Scurlock, the Atlantic Coast Conference champion from North Carolina, was third and Harry Bright of the New York Pioneer Club fourth. Scurlock tried to shoot ahead on the final turn, but was boxed by Soprano and Close.

Off like a flash, George Sydnor of Villanova won the 60—yard dash in 6.2.

He was away with the gun and by the time he reached the 10-yard mark, he had a four-foot lead. He had enough left at the end to fight off Mel Barnwell of Pitt, who was second.

Ira Davis of LaSalle was third National AAU dash champion from Villanova, finished last. Colly more got off to a bad start and never was in it.

In the 60—yard high hurdles, Hayes Jones of Eastern Michigan lunged into the tape inches ahead of Elias Kilbert of Winston-Salem N. C. Teachers.

Jones, who appears to have Kilbert's number having whipped the Olympian in the AAU championships, too, was clocked in 7.1, a meet record and just a tenth of a second off Milt Campbell's world indoor mark.

Don Furtado Nominated Candidate For President Of Student Body

GREEK WEEK PROGRESSES—A group of fraternity pledges are shown cleaning up the premises of the Lutheran Church, one of several projects in yesterday's work day program of Greek Week activities. Greek Week, the replacement for the now-abolished "hell week," consists of activities geared to bring some 400 pledges of 24 social fraternities together in an effort to better relations between the community and fraternity. An intramural field day is planned for the pledges today. Later this week they will take part in a carnival day and a final banquet, with trophy presentation for the best pledge class. Asho Exum of Sigma Nu fraternity is serving as Greek Week chairman. The Sigma Alpha Epsilon pledge class won last year's Greek Week trophy. (Norm Kantor Photo)

UNC Planner's Club Elect New Officers

New officers of the Planners Forum, an organization of graduate students, faculty members and professional people in the field of city and Regional planning, have been elected at UNC.

Newly elected president is James Stevens of Little Rock, Ark., a first year graduate student in the UNC Department of City and Regional Planning. He succeeds George Stevens of Asheville as Forum president.

Both young men are working on their master's degrees in the field of city planning; the past president, George Stevens, will graduate this June while the new president, James Stevens, will complete his study in June, 1959.

Other officers of the executive committee of the Planners Forum are Alfred Huyck of Ridgewood, N. J., program chairman; Marilyn Nelson, Belvedere, Ill., secretary-treasurer; John Anderson, Kansas City, Mo., publicity chairman; and Alvin J. Karetski, Kenosha, Wis., social chairman.

UNC Starts Planning New Frosh Camp

Plans are underway for next fall's Freshman Camp.

Sponsored by the YMCA, the Camp servs as a recreation-orientation session for a limited number of freshmen. Campers are selected on a first come-first serve basis.

Director of the camp this year is Mike Givins, a junior from Charlotte. Givins and prospective counselors have had two meetings and will continue to get together once a week for the rest of the semester to plan next year's camp and to recieve training in counseling.

All students interested in working as camp counselors have been asked to attend a meeting tonight at 6:30 in Room 200 Carroll Hall.

Givins said he hoped a number of rising sophomores would turn out for the meeting.

Dr. V. I. Mann Receives Aid In Research

Dr. Vrigil I. Mann associate professor of geology at UNC, has been notified that he is the recipient of a $9,200 grant from the National Science Foundation for a gravity survey in North Carolina.

Dr. Mann, in explaining the nature of his research project, stressed the importance of the study of the earth's gravitational field throughout the world. He stated that the headquarters for gravity study in the United States are located at the University of Wisconsin under the direction of George Woollard.

"In as much as the area in this state is gravitationally unknown, the University of Wisconsin agreed to furnish a gravity meter for the study, provided that the money for transporting the meter be obtained from other sources. The money is now available for this purpose from the National Science Foundation," Dr. Mann commented.

Brooks, Wall, James Other SP Nominees

Don Furtado, John Brooks, Paddy Wall, and Everette James were nominated by the Student Body to candidacy for the four major campus offices at stake in the spring elections.

Furtado won the contest for president of the student body by the count of 23-22 over present study body Treasurer Bob Carter. Furtado, currently is vice-president of the student body.

Furtado, in accepting the nomination, stated: "It is undoubetedly the greatest honor which has been bestowed upon me to have been selected as a candidate for the Presidency of the Student Body.

DON FURTADO
SP Nominee

COMMENDS LEADER

"In the past three years at Carolina, In have been very fortunate in having the opportunity to work with past President Bob Young and President Sonny Evans. The outstanding leadership which they have shown has illustrated to all of us the tremendous obligation and responsibility that accompanies the position of President of the Student Body.

"In the coming weeks, I sincerely hope that I can illustrate to the members of the Student Party and to my fellow students that I an worthy of assuming that obligation."

Bob Carter, who lost to Furtado, said that he did not wish to comment on a report that he may run independently. He added that he would have to give the matter more careful consideration before reaching a decision.

BROOKS WINS

John Brooks the present parliamentarian won a three cornered race for the vice-president nomination from Ralph Cummings and Gary Greer. Brooks won by 220.

Brooks in seeking the nomination promised that the legislature would take it's rightful place as the body that enacts legislation, and that the committees and subcommittees of the legislature would be co-ordinated.

WALL ACCLAIMED

Paddy Sue Wall, a member of the women's honor council, was acclaimed the SP nominee for secretary of the student body.

Attorney General Sonny Hall ford moved unanimous acceptance, and Miss Hall received a standing ovation from the SP membership.

Everette James, who had won twice before in campus-wide elections, was nominated the SP candidate for treasurer of the student body over David Evans by a vote of 27-7.

LEVY WINS NOMINATION

Ed Levy won the nomination for National Student Association Coordinator over Roger Foushee by 17-13. Levy is a member of the University Party; however, the job

SYMPOSIUM SPEAKER

Governor's Life Reminiscent Of American Success Story

GOV. HODGES
Symposium Speaker

By DAVIS YOUNG

Luther Hartwell Hodges, 92nd governor of the State of North Carolina, will be here on campus Sunday, March 16 at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall to deliver the keynote address for the Carolina Symposium on Public Affairs.

Governor Hodges represents a person who has come from almost total obscurity in his early days to the highest office in the state. He was born in Virginia in the year 1898 on a tenant farm and has risen from these meager surroundings to the position that he now enjoys.

He is a graduate of UNC where he was both president of his class and president of the student body. He entered the University with savings of $62.50 and worked his way through as a waiter, furnacefirer and odd-job-man. UNC conferred an honorary degree upon him in 1946 as did North Carolina State College in 1955.

Hodges entered the business world in 1919 and remained in this field until 1944 when he was head of the Textile Division of the OPA. He was a consultant to the Secretary of Agriculture in 1945 and retired from business for good in 1950 to devote his energies to public service.

He was elected Lieutenant Governor in 1952 and assumed his present position in November of 1954 upon the untimely death of William Umstead. He was easily re-elected in 1957. Governor Hodges has sought to keep men and women of character and proven ability in state service of North Carolina without regard to political factionalism.

UNC Men To Debate Scots

CARL BARRINGTON
Will Meet Scots

JIM TOLBERT
On UNC Debate Team

UNC students Carl Barrington and Jim Tolbert will represent the University against two Scottish debators Thursday night in debating "Resolved: That the Sun has set on the British Empire."

The debate will take place in Carroll Hall at 8 p.m. Thursday and is being sponsored by the UNC Forensic Council and Carolina Forum.

The two Scottish debators, Leonard MacKenzie Turpie and Ronald Bernard Anderson, are being brought here under the auspices of the Speech Association of America and the Institute of Internation Education.

Barrington, senior English major from Fayetteville, is a member of the Forensic Council, Dialectic Senate and Kappa Alpha fraternity.

Tolbert is a pre-law major from Morganton. He is a past president of the Philanthropic Society, a member of the Forensic Council and a member of the Anphoterian.

Both Scottish debators were active in forensics during their undergraduate days at Glasgow University. They are currently associated with debating organizations.

DTH STAFF MEET

Daily Tar Heel staff members have been urged to attend an important meeting Wednesday at 4:30 p.m. in the newspaper office. At the meeting, two representatives to the Editorial Selections Board will be elected. One of these will come from the executive staff and one from the nonsalaried staff.

Taylor Appointed To Post Of Special Student Adviser

Dr. George V. Taylor of the History Department will serve as adviser to about 100 freshmen and sophomores participating in "the special student" program. He will assume these duties beginning with the fall semester.

An announcement of Dr. Taylor's appointment was made at this month's meeting of the Faculty Council by the Committee on Superior Students.

Dr. Taylor's appointment to the adviser staff of the General College was made possible through the recent $100,000 grant from the Carnegie Foundation. This grant, which is for a five-year experimental program in developing suitable courses in the curriculum for honor students, will repay the History Department for releaving Dr. Taylor of some of his teaching duties.

Dr. E. A. Cameron, chairman of the Committee on Superior Students, said yesterday that the addition of Dr. Taylor to the adviser staff is a "vital step in the program to have someone in the General College to guide the students in the special advanced curriculum program into suitable courses.

"Dr. Taylor is fervently interested in the program and will do a fine job," said Dr. Cameron.

Dr. Taylor has taught social science courses in the special student program for the past two years.

According to the Committee on Superior Students, Dr. Taylor's duties will include: serving as adviser to the freshmen and sophomores in the special program and working for improvement of the existing programs and the instigation of new programs and courses aimed at providing appropriate educational opportunities for better students.

Vote Changes Will Be Topic Of Phi Debate

The Phi Society will debate the abolition of the electoral college system and substitution of direct popular election for the presidency tonight at 8 p. m.

Dr. William Jenkins of the political science department will be the society's guest critic. The meeting will be on the fourth floor of New East.

The bill states that: "The electoral college system of electing the President of the U. S. is basically undemocratic and all citizens of a free state should have a voice in the selection of their chief executive."

An executive session will be held following the debate to initiate new members.

Republicans Discuss Slump

WASHINGTON, March 10 (AP) — Dr. Gabriel Hauge, President Eisenhower's economic assistant, said tonight it may take until July but "I think we'll lick the slump when private expenditures go up."

Hauge said the dips so far "are within the range of expectations we had."

But Sen. Bridges (R-NH) described the recession as "more prolonged than was expected." He said Eisenhower "may have to supplement some things" in his antirecession program if conditions get worse instead of better.

Hauge and Bridges spoke out in a separate radio shows transcribed in advance — Hauge for MBC "Reporters' Roundup" and Bridges for CBS "Capitol Cloakroom."

Each endorsed a tax cut if that becomes necessary to give business a shot of adrenalin.

Each took a swipe or two at Democrats who are calling for a tax slash now and a big public works program.

Surgeon General Indicates Need Of Trained Workers

Dr. L .E. Burney, surgeon General of the U. S. Public Health Service, said here Monday the greatest need in the field of public health is trained personnel.

The nation's number one public health official was speaking this afternoon at a student-faculty seminar sponsored by the School of Public Health. The topic of Dr. Burney's talk was "A Look Ahead in Public Health."

Dr. Burney said in the immediate future the recruitment of physicians, engineers and dentists with public health training would be difficult because of the demands of private industry.

"We are not daunted," he said. "There are several ways to help solve the most crucial problems and several compensating factors. One way is to improve the quality of present and future public health workers. This is being done through the increased opportunities for graduate training in public health. The U. S. Public Health Service is sharing in this increase and is especially pleased with the results, even though it represents but a small share.'

Dr. Burney said that a second way to solve the problem was for employers, employees, faculties and student to work out better methods for using highly qualified workers more effectively. He explained that while this is a prmiary task for employers, the influence of faculties, sutdents and employees would go far to improve the utilization of personnel.

"A third way, and is one in which public health trained physicians could play the most important part, is to stimulate the application of preventive principles and techniques among practicing physicians. As our public health problems focus increasingly upon the health status of the individual, it becomes more and more essential that the preventive methods be applied by the practicing physician. Many public health trained physicians today have not had this essential fact brought home to them."

Dr. Burney explained that a fourth way to solve the public health recruitment problems is for each graduate student in schools of public health to work toward bringing young people into the field.

Dr. Burney became the eighth surgeon general of the U. S. Public Health Service when he took office in 1956. He succeeded Dr. Leonard A. Scheele.

Public health personnel from the N .C. State Board in Raleigh and from numerous local health departments attended today's seminar.

Election Time: Tar Heel Is Two-Party Newspaper

Today, the political wheels start turning with full speed at the University of North Carolina.

The time between now and election on Tuesday, April 1, will be marked by partisan politics, handshaking and pats on the back for the numerous candidates seeking office for the coming school year.

These developments — so intertwined with presentation of candidates to the public and platform statements which they make — demand some explanation of policy which The Daily Tar Heel will observe throughout the campaign.

We are a bi-partisan publication, because The Tar Heel is financed by student fees and by advertisements sold by staff members with varying political ideas. Consequently, we will not support either one of the two political parties.

Insofar as possible, equal space will be allowed the University Party and the Student Party, as well as candidates who are running on independent tickets. Reports throughout the next three weeks will be unbiased and objective.

However, the Tar Heel reserves announcements, what platforms, what any of the numerous political developments deserve in the way of display in the campus newspaper. We do that now, and we feel we should continue to do it during the campaign.

Numerous letters to the editor probably will be sent to the Tar Heel commenting on the various political affairs. These should be typewritten, double-spaced and signed, and of a length which will leave room for other students to comment on the editorial page.

That page, itself, will not be used for partisan purposes by the editor of The Daily Tar Heel or by the staff. It is the students' newspaper, and no one group or individual will get the endorsement of it.

Rental Costs Spiraling, But Where Is The Legislature?

Room reservation deadlines announced by the administration Sunday bring up a question which soon should be answered by the responsible authorities:

How much will room rent at the University be next year, and, if there is an increase over present rates, how long will these rates continue to spiral?

Housing projects now in the making surely will demand an increase next year in rental fees, since every $1 million of self-liquidating bonds used to finance these these projects under the current rate of interest now is reflected in a $15 per person room rent increase.

With negotiations currently underway for a $2 million loan to the University from the federal government, it is possible that room rentals will be increased $30 to retire this loan, beginning next year.

This possibility points to a startling fact. If coed rentals are increased here next year by as little as $15, this amount still would be above the fee paid by coeds at Duke University — an institution privately endowed, operating free of state participation.

In fact, that minimal increase would bring room rent to the high of $207, or $77 above what it now costs a girl for a room at Woman's College — a sizeable difference between the two branches of the Consolidated University.

After its annual visit to Chapel Hill earlier this year, the Visiting Committee of the Board of Trustees reported to the full board that "the present policy of (dormitory) construction on a self-liquidating basis be thoroughly re-examined."

This recommendation, of course, was based on the committee's recognition that rental costs at the University — determined by bonded indebtedness financing dormitory construction—is already at levels too high for a state institution.

The need for future construction to facilitate a heavy influx of students only adds weight to this need for "re-examination," since, unless current policies are changed, still further increases will have to be made in room rentals to retire the bonds.

We talked briefly about this impending problem with Governor Luther Hodges during a recent visit to Chapel Hill. He said at that time that should the day come when the burden became too heavy on the student in form of rental fees, the legislature then would take appropriate action to provide money for dormitory projects.

Well, we feel that that day has arrived. When rental rates at a state institution become greater than those at a private college, when dormitory fees continue to rise commensurate with the dormitories themselves, then something must be done to relax the burden on the student and his parents.

We pointed out earlier that the entire state should be taxed for the support of its University, and not just those who happen to send children to it. Yet today, parents of UNC students are paying more than their share for projects which should be shared equally by the entire state.

With these various factors in mind, the legislature should vote at its next session funds sufficient to relax the burden on the struggling student and once again provide the capital which an alert University must have to retain its reputation as a progressive institution.

Our administration recognizes this fact. It knows that the spiraling pattern cannot long continue in the future. The legislature should likewise open its eyes to this major problem of the University.

'Vaudeville Days' Are Canned

Anita Ekberg (39½), watching a night club act at Miami Beach which starred Evelyn (Treasure Chest) West, walked out on the performance "because I was tired."

Next night, when Anita was on the stage with Bob Hope, Miss West (45½) hurled tomatoes at the buxom blonde, scoring a hit on Miss Ekberg's hip. She did so, she said, because Anita had walked out on her performance.

Said Bob, who just missed being hit by the flying fruit: "First time that's happened to me since Vaudeville days. Usually they didn't take tomatoes out of the can back then."

„Well, Bob, they didn't used to take out a lot of things on the stage 30 years ago. And if they didn't do it now, probably the trouble never would have developed between Misses Ekberg and West.

WISE & OTHERWISE

A Depression? Or Recession? Ike To Blame?

By WHIT WHITFIELD

The President says we are not experiencing a depression, merely a slight recession, and the President is an honorable man; the most noble Hagerty says he is an honorable man, and so do the remainder of the Republicans. So what have we to fear?

The last major depression came during the Hoover administration so far as we know. The Republicans said that it was caused by the Democrats, but the Democrats had been out of the White House since Wilson's day so this didn't hold much water.

Should history repeat itself so early we would conjecture that the GOP will use the same banner as before, but again, how much water can it hold? Can they really pin it on Truman?

To return to the subject of the president's honor and integrity, it may be that the President himself is quite honorable. Only last week in a press conference he plainly stated that the current economic situation was a "depression," but Smiling Jim was there to correct by saying that he thought the President meant "recession." For a press secretary to correct the President of the United States on such an important subject as this is indicative of the type administration the GOP has. Who is the chief executive? Hagerty or Eisenhower?

The Saturday papers carried headlines such as "U. S. Unemployment Up" and "Unemployment Highest in 16 Years." This is a recession? If it is just a question of semantics, who is to be the final arbiter? Hagerty? That's all we need.

This Republican recession has 5,100,000 unemployed at the present. This figure doesn't sound large per se, but when you consider that the unemployment figure in January was approximately 4,400,000 it looks considerably larger. Even more alarming than this is the fact that there is no evidence of a reversal in this trend.

But, there's the brighter side too. All these workers who have no jobs to go to in the mornings can plan vacations (extended varieties), and have plenty of leisure to plant their victory gardens. Children will be able to spend more time with their parents, and therefore promote a healthier family atmosphere.

Maybe the present high command aren't such bad guys after all. Vote Republican.

"Mind If We Play Through?"

VIEW FROM THE HILL

Repeal Sucession Amendment

By CURTIS GANS

President Eisenhower is not a good president, and it is not because he is a stupid or inept man.

The paradox is that the general cannot lead in civilian life. The president is lead, the president is indecisive, and the president is weak.

However, those who wish to excuse the president for his lack of leadership have at least one valid excuse—the 22nd Amendment.

This eliminates any president from being elected to office more than twice. Hence, the current president is in the position of a "lame duck," with respect to Congress, for no one now wants to grab his coattails, since he isn't going any place in 1960.

Hence, the president loses some of the effectiveness that he weilds as a potential candidate. This was the primary reason that the "lame duck" session of Congress, the time from elections of new members to the time when the new members take office, was reduced by constitutional amendment.

Moreover, right now Congressional leaders will look elsewhere for guidance, for they too realize that their future bread is buttered from places different than the office of president.

There is a question of whether this amendment is not contrary to the sprit of democracy as well.

One of the fundamental ideas in democracy is the fact that on every person in the state which espouses its doctrine, the responsibility for the success or failure of that state lies. Hence, it is the privilege of every citizen to attempt to guide that democracy by attaining office. Hence, each citizen, being of equal status under the law, should be able to be president under a democracy.

Yet the 22nd Amendment says that America has a very special person under its domain. This person belongs in the class of "presidents who have served two terms," and hence is declared unfit to run.

In the desire to protect America from tyranny, they have perpetrated something contrary to the spirit of democracy. In effect it has created a second class citizenship, something that should be anathema to democracy.

It is a shame that when the United States decides to amend its constitution, it does something basically undemocratic in spirit. Moreover, repeal of two amendments in a constitution tends to weaken the constitution in the eyes of its constituents.

However, in order to preserve the leadership in the office of president, and in order to preserve democracy within democracy, the 22nd Amendemnt ought to be stricken.

There is nothing basically wrong with having a president serve four terms. One needs only to look at Franklin D. Roosevelt to be assured of the safety of democracy.

Eisenhower is not the man Roosevelt was, but he could at least do without the hindrance.

GRADUATE VIEWS II

The Price Of Pundit

One of the more supposedly entertaining columns of this paper is presented with the good wishes, best compliments and financial interests of some cigarette company. The strategy employed by the writer of this particular column is well-known as the "soft-sell" (details in Advertising 251, Spring Semester).

Roughly speaking the difference between a hard sell and a soft sell is the same as the difference between a kick in the stomach and a stab in the back. (Again, Advertising 251 employs more refined metaphors, but it all boils down to the same thing. Except that all courses numbered over 200 never boil down anything into more digestible form).

Where was I? Oh, the dividing of advertising into "hard" and "soft" is only a preliminary division. By the time you get into Advertising 352, you find the classification gets broken down into "impenetrable," "hard," "chewy," "medium-rare," "soft," and "muddy and rainsoaked." This process of breaking down goes on and on, both in the classification and in the student. Finally the completely broken down student is prepared to move straight into a desk on Madison Avenue with a one-pint pewter water pitcher at his elbow, four buttons and a buzzer at his left hand and a secretary on his .....

But I disgress, even as our weed-fed New York pundit. Advertisers are, despite all evidence to the contrary, human. In some respects, anyway. That is, they make mistakes. That is, they make mistakes which their public relations experts cannot conceal. Now are you convinced?

One cigarette company, which shall remain nameless, on advice of our legal counsel, has indelibly alienated every grammatician in the country by confusing "like a cigarette, etc." with "as a cigarette, etc." It is James Thurber in his recent book, who has said the last word on this little matter by proposing as a catch-phrase for a brewing company something like the following:" We brews real good, like we used to could."

And since this is to be the last word, I shall have to change the subject. One other cigarette company, likewise nameless, plays up the masculinity theme. There is this Cro-Magnon primitive hunk of man comes in, see, all covered with sweat and grime so you can hardly make out the tattoes on his chest and wrists. He is the out-doors type farmer, see, who has just slaughtered his herd of buffaloes for market with his bare hands. And what does he want now? A Wellington cigarette naturally—the only cigarette whose smoke will corrode a watch crystal—try it.

At the opposite extreme is the feminine smoke. Here the pitch is that of the "girls" playing bridge. All four are smoking away so the joint looks like a Florida rocket site after a misfire. But one of the four—the prettiest one—isn't showing the effects at all. She never overbids, her finesses work, the trumps always fall like, or as, they should. Finally, after she cleans out her opponents of two bits apiece she confesses — "I smoke Furnaces — the light smoke that leaves little cigarette ash. Why don't you girls do like me — make a little ash of yourself?"

On this note—albeit a sour one, I shall close. If any manufacturer asks how he can get his hands on me for his advertising campaigns, please don't tell where I live.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

About The Carolinian

To The Editor:

"Better Nothing than Wrong." I whole-heartedly agree! You have taken it upon yourself to write about a controversy of which you evidently have only superficial knowledge. You offered advice to the "screaming" students to realize the nature of their publication. An understanding of our publication is exactly what has caused us to "scream."

It is quite simple to point out the fallacies in your two points.

In your first point you contend that the students should join the staff and see that news of importance gets into the paper. From this one statement, the editor's lack of knowledge of the entire set-up of the Carolinian is exemplified. One does not simply join the staff of a newspaper.

I include myself in a group of students who do not possess the capacity to express themselves in literary form but, nevertheless, have basic ideas that should not go unexpressed. It is my opinion that a newspaper should represent the ideas of all students and not only the chosen representatives of these students. One of the main points of controversy on this campus is the fact that the opinions of so-called radicals are ignored or, even worse, ridiculed by our newspaper.

As for your second point concerning the invention of controversies, the editor appears to be in complete ignorance of the issue at stake. The invention of controversies has evolved not from the readers of the Carolinian but from the staff. One of the controversies has been the 'issue' 'of whether 'to wear black stocking or whether not to wear black stockings. This was brought up by the staff of our newspaper. If this, Mr. Eisele, is not an invented controversy, then I challenge you to define one.

If the students of Woman's College desire to invent a controversy, then perhaps they could rid themselves of their editor and follow in the footsteps of certain members of the Consolidated University.

Radical? Yes, I am considered radical. A student at Woman's College can be nothing else if she has ideas or can make one decision for herself. My idea of college is to gain an understanding of life and a means to cope with the world. The life of the 20th century is one of controversies, many invented. I could follow the precedent of the sheltered, spoon-fed life of a little girl in a supposed woman's college, but I dare to be radical.

In closing, I don't care to give advice to the editor concerning the manner in which he should run his own newspaper. The Daily Tar Heel is your business, Mr. Eisele, so why not let the Carolinian be ours. As you said yourself, "Better Nothing than Wrong."

"We look forward to an interesting campaign where all issues shall be brought forth and discussed by the candidates, and I hope that the campaign may be maintained at the high plain in which the SP nominations were conducted."

BODIES FOUND

WARSAW, March 10 (AP)—Twenty thousand bodies have been discovered in a World War II prison camp near Zagan, a small town in the former German area of Western Poland, the Polish press agency reported today.

news in brief

Thurman A. Whiteside, alleged "fixer" in a Miami TV case, broke a date to testify before House investigators today — to the high indignation of the investigators.

Chairman Harris (D-Ark) of the House Subcommittee on Legislative Oversight angrily gavelled an open hearing to a close before it started when Whiteside did not appear, and the group couldn't decide immediately whether to try to force his appearance.

Whiteside is under investigation by the FBI and a Federal grand jury over his relations with Richard A. Mack, who has resigned from the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) under fire after acknowledging he accepted financial favors from Whiteside.

President Eisenhower today nominated John S. Cross, 53, now assistant chief of the state department's telecommunications division, to succeed Mack. Cross, like Mack, is a Democrat.

Rebels Shelled

BUKITTENGGI, CENTRAL SUMATRA, March 10 (AP) — Indonesian warships and planes lightly shelled and bombed Padang today after landing troops on the west coast of Sumatra in a showdown with the rebel rebime based in this mountain capital.

The American Oil Company Caltex, caught in the middle of what seemed to be the outbreak of civil war, closed down operations at its 125 million dollar installations and sent some employes' families to Singapore.

The revolutionary regime said 300 government troops swarmed ashore Friday on the east coast island of Bengkalis, plugging one of Caltex' coastal oil terminals.

A rebel platoon on the island, an old-time Chinese smugglers' base, clashed with the troops and then withdrew to the jungle.

Union Strike End Seen

NEW YORK, March 10 (AP)—Peace talks resumed today in the nine-state strike of 105,000 dressmakers. Both sides expressed confidence a settlement in the five-day walkout would be reached within hours.

Strike leader Julius Hochman of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union predicted flatly that a peace pact would be agreed on tonight with a return to work tomorrow.

Navy Sets Satellite

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla., March 9 (AP) —The best information is that Vanguard's satellite rocket will be fired sometime in the midweek — but just when the Air Force and the Navy won't say.

The Navy tried last week — Friday and Saturday — to fire this fourth test vehicle in its Vanguard series. Saturday it came within 35 seconds of firing and the countdown hovered most of the day just half and hour from launching.

Free Dance Will Feature Live Music

The "Three Duces," a combo from Raleigh, will furnish music for listening and dancing in the Pine Room, Friday, from 8 to 12 p. m. Coffee and refreshments will be furnished free of charge by Lenoir Hall.

Any student on campus may go to the Pine Room Friday. Chairs and tables will be moved back so that anyone who wishes to dance may do so.

This function is co-sponsored by the Recreation and Dance committees of GMAB and the Pine Room through George W. Prillaman, director of student dining halls.

The Recreation Committee is headed by Mary Moore Mason. The Dance Committee's chairman is Gaylord Cowan.

GMAB President Benny Thomas said yesterday he hoped the event will be successful and, if so, the combo may be brought back.

Easter Is Theme Of Presentation

"Easter, the Awakening," commemorating the triumph of life over death, opened at the Morehead Planetarium Tuesday night at 8:30. It will be given daily through April 14.

As in the world's churches at this season, the beautiful Biblical story of Easter and the Resurrection will be told in the Planetarium, and will be complemented by an inspring pageant of lights and music.

Additional passages from the Scriptures have been added this year to conform with the visual pageant of the betrayal, Crucifixion and Resurrection of Christ. The narration will be done by Eary Wynn, chairman of the Department of Radio, Television and Motion Pictures.

The new music which accompanies the religious portion of the program includes the "Pilgrim's Chorus" from "Tannhauser," rendered by the chorus and orchestra of Bavarian Radio; "Prelude Liebostod" from "Tristan and Isolde," played by the Pittsburgh Symphony; and "Cavalleria Rusticana." by the orchestra and chorus of La Scala Opera House in Milan, Italy.

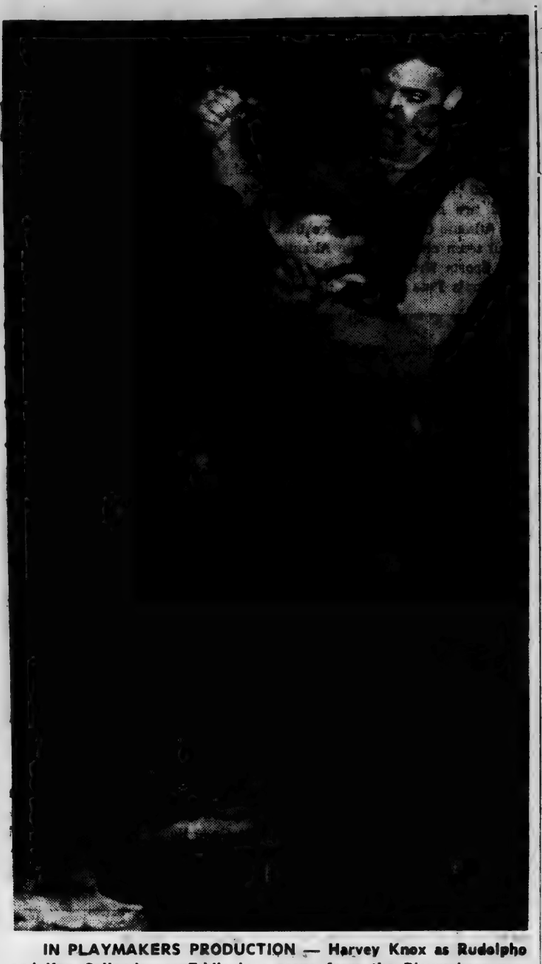
Although the religious portion does not deviate from the Scriptures, the first part of the 1958 program differs completely from prior years in order to point up the richness of the Easter season in its implication for mankind. Instead of being concerned with the date of Easter, the first part heralds the coming of Spring and the natural events that occur which echo the triumph of life over death.

These events are both celestial and terrestial and will be explained and profusely illustrated in both black and white and natural color.

The highlight will be two authentic panorama of Chapel Hill, prepared by Robert L. Blake, professor of art at Duke University. The village and University campus will be seen first as it appears in the dead of winter. Then, before the eyes of the audience, it will gradually reawaken with life and be transformed into glorious spring with all its floral color.

In addition to the nightly performances at 8:30, "Easter the Awakening" will be presented at matinees on Saturdays at 11 a.m., 1, 3, and 4 p.m. and on Sundays at 2, 3, and 4 p.m.

Shows for school children will be given daily at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m., to which the public will be admitted after all children with reservations have been seated.



Special performances for 100 or more persons will be given at any hour on request.

Debate Team Returns Here After Meet

The UNC debate team returned here Sunday ater a weekend of debating in New York. The team participated in the Brooklyn College Eleventh Annual Invitational Debate Tournament.

Carolina debators won six out of ten debates, three affirmative and three negative out of five each. The best record, achieved by two participating schools, was nine wins out of ten debates. There were 63 schools present at the debate.

The affirmative team for Carolina consisted of John Brooks and Tom Long, and on the negative team were Taylor McMillan and Bill Willis.

IN PLAYMAKERS PRODUCTION — Harvey Knox as Rudolpho and Ken Callender as Eddie in a scene from the Playmakers presentation of "A View From The Bridge" which opens Wednesday in the Playmakers Theatre at 8:30 p.m. for a five-performance run. Tickets for the Wednesday, Thursday and Sunday showings are available in 214 Abernethy Hall and Ledbetter-Pickard. All seats are reserved at $1.50. Friday and Saturday performances are sold out.

UNC Offers Radioactivity Course

A new course in the field of radiation is now being offered by the School of Public Health.

The name of the course is "Radioactivity in Water, Food and Air."

This new course has been instituted as the result of a new radiation laboratory that has recently been completed in the school's Department of Sanitary Engineering. The laboratory came into being as a result of a grant of $8,061 from the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission.

The laboratory is to be used for research and for teaching graduate students enrolled in programs of study in sanitary engineering, sanitary science, and sanitary chemistry and biology.

Choice Of Nominees For UP Set Tonight

The University Party will confirm with its nominating convention tonight at 7:15 in Gerrard Hall.

The party will complete its nominations for the Student Legislature and select candidates for the senior class offices and the National Student Association co-ordinator.

Wednesday evening the main order of business will be the election of the four Student Government executive officers.

UP Chairman Syd Shuford urged all sororities and fraternities to arrange their chapter meetings Wednesday as best as possible in order to have an adequate representation at the convention session.

A meeting had been scheduled for last night, but it was postponed when it was found that IFC - Panhellenic concert conflicted with it.

The nominations are being held earlier this year in order to avoid conflicting with the Carolina Symposium.

Fraternity Holds Annual Celebration

Alumni and friends of N. C. Delta of Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity met Sunday for the 10th annual Founder's Day held by the local chapter.

The alumni board of directors approved plans for remodeling the house at 207 West Cameron Avenue and congratulated the brothers for their work and continued improvement.

Alumni Jim Mastenburg of Raleigh, one of the men who began the fraternity on the UNC campus in 1923, attended and noted that the house, notwithstanding its limitations, looked remarkably well.

Thurman R. Carriker of Durham kept his attendance slate clean by being present at all ten programs. Also present were District Governor Woody Clinard of Winston-Salem and past Acting Grand Secretary Bedford W. Black of Kannapolis.

The Rev. Harvey Carnes, pastor of the United Congregational Christian Church, spoke to the group about the experience of having a church next door to a fraternity house. He praised Sig Ep members for "their understanding and cooperation" in helping the members of his congregation on projects.

The Rev. Mr. Carnes emphasized to the alumni that young men need what he called "growing room", room to expand and be active.

Free Throws Killed National Champs

The Carolina Tar Heels had to stand back and watch their chances of repeating as National cage champs go right out the window in Reynolds Coliseum Saturday night. All they could do was watch because there's no way you can defend against foul shots.

Maryland set a new tourney record with its 40 free throws in 52 attempts but the most demoralizing thing about it was that 28 of those free throws came in the final four and a half minutes. The Terps were infallable at the line. They must have spent many hours practicing charity tosses and it payed off handsomely.

Bud Millikan's club could not have done it had it not been for sophomore star Charlie McNeil. It was McNeil who hit 18 of his 21 points in the second half and it was his effort plus the outside shooting of Bill Murphy which pulled the Terps from seven points behind at halftime to two points ahead with five minutes to go. It was then that Carolina began its desperation fouling and the Terps failed to wilt as they had done temporarily against Duke and Virginia.

Maryland proved it was the best team in the tournament. True, the Terps faltered against the Cavaliers and Blue Devils, but when the chips were down, they came through like real champs. The ACC has an outstanding representative in the NCAA. The national crown is up for grabs, let's hope the Terps can keep it in the conference.

Good Season For Carolina Anyway

It was a long, hard grind for Carolina this season. The Tar Heels showed only spasmodic flashes of the club that went undefeated in 1956-57. But Frank McGuire and company have absolutely nothing to be ashamed of. The Tar Heels won 19 and lost 7 and that's a mighty good record for a team which encountered the difficulties Carolina did.

They were rated higher than they finished in pre-season polls. But who could forecast the untimely loss of Joe Quigg and York Larese? Who would have predicted that by the end of the season McGuire would be starting three sophomores in some games? Yes, all things considered, it was a good season for Carolina.

The outlook for next year is very good. McGuire has plenty of sophomore strength and the Tar Heels could very easily climb back to the top of the basketball ladder in the conference and perhaps in the nation.

Anti-Climax For Four Nice Guys

The saddest thing about the 86-74 loss to Maryland in the finals was that three of Carolina's greatest stars and another real scrapper closed their college career on an anti-climatic note.

Brennan, Kearns, Cunningham and Searcy are names that Carolina fans won't soon forget. Their height of their college careers was the national championship a year ago and they must feel a little disappointed that this season had to come to such an early termination. But they have accepted the loss as the graceful athletes they are.

Nice guys all are Brennan, Kearns, Cunningham and Searcy. The first three were products of McGuire's expansive recruiting into the metropolitian areas, the last a North Carolina boy who never saw a lot of action but who kept scrapping for three years and won the respect ofhis teammates for his loyalty and desire.

They've been kidded a great deal in the last four years. "The flatbush Tar Heels" label stuck, but what at first was a real dig at McGuire's outside recruiting soon became a term spoken fondly by Carolina followers. The boys from the North won the hearts of the fans in Dixie. They're not "Northerners" anymore, they're real Tar Heels.

This Was Real Good Tournament

Our votes for the All-Tournament first team went to Brennan, Kearns, Charlie McNeil, Nick Davis and Lou Pucillo . . . . Ray Stanley was first choice on our second team . . . . Bud Millikan says his club's regular season losses at Carolina, Duke and State gave the Terps the incentive they needed to win the title . . . . Durham Sun sports editor Hugo Germino was elected new president of the Atlantic Coast Sportwriters Assn. . . . . and voting: for most exciting game —Duke vs. Maryland . . . . Maryland is the first outside team to win the tourney since George Washington did it in 1942 in the old Southern Conference . . . . Tournament officials in Raleigh did a wonderful job of providing for the press, radio and fans . . . . Many observers feel this was the best tourney held in recent years . . . . we agree.

Yankees Sing Lock

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Don Lock, Kingman, Kan., senior at the University of Wichita, signed a contract with the New York Yankees Monday. His bonus reportedly was in excess of $12,500.

The 6-foot-2 Lock, who wound up his basketball career for the Missouri Valley Conference school Saturday night at Stillwater, is to report to spring training at Partow, Fla., March 18. He signed to play outfield for Binghamton, N. Y. in the Class A Eastern League.

Lock said he plans to return to Wichita U. next fall to complete work for his degree.

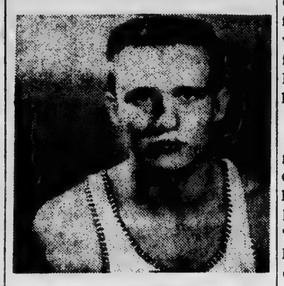
repeater, was the nuanimous first team choice of the 58 association members covering the ACC tournament here over the weekend.

Nick Davis, Maryland senior, and flashy Lou Pucillo, North Carolina State junior, each received 57 first team votes and one second team vote.

With five points awarded for a first team vote and three for a second team spot, Brennan gained the maximum 290 points against 288 each for Davis and Pucillo. Maryland sophomore Charlie McNeil, with 284 points, and Tommy Kearns, Carolina senior, with 215, completed the first team.



Second Team

Duke took three second team positions. The second team, with voting point totals:

Bucky Allen, Duke, 129; Bob Vernon, Duke, 125; Ray Stanley, Carolina, 116; Al Bunge, Maryland, 88; Bobby Joe Harris, Duke, 77.

The following received honorable mention:

Paul Schimdt and Jim Newcome, Duke; Ray Pericola and Mike Callahan, South Carolina; George Ritchie and Dave Budd, Wake Forest; Herb Busch and Paul Adkins, Virginia; Bill Murphy, Maryland, and Walt Gibbons, Clemon.

First Sacker Problem For Phils Is Better

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — It begins to look as if that first base problem of the Philadelphia Phillies is getting to be less of a problem every day.

First ,there are indications that if pyschiatric treatment goes well, regular first basemen Ed Bouchee will be back sooner than expected —perhaps even by mid-season. Second, Harry Anderson, an infielder turned first baseman turned outfielder, is geeting the "feel" of things again at first base. If the season were to open tomorrow, he'd be manager Mayo Simth's starter at first.

Third, rookie Frank Herrera is everything anybody ever said he was a fielding first baseman. The only question: Can he hit? No one in the Phillies' organization has come right out and said Bouchee, who pleaded guilty in a morals case and now is on probation pending treatment, will be back this season, or ever. That's up to Commissioner Ford Frick. Still, the insication is that Bouchee, one of the Phillies' several rookie successes, will return.

In the meantime, Anderson feels he'll be able to fill the job. He admits he'll be no fancy Dan at first, but Harry the Horse believes he "can do an adequate job." "I guess I was what you'd call an average first baseman in the minor," a kid from Rising Sun, Md., who stretches 195 pounds over a 6-3 frame.

"I played third and second at college West Chester State Teachers and in the semipro ball. Then I was put on first for my first two years in the minors Terre Haute and Schenectady in 1953-54."

With left-handed hitters at a premium and with Bouchee a lefty doing a good job at the plate .293 76 RBI, 17 home runs the Phillies used Anderson in the outfield last season .268, 61 RBI, 17 home runs.

Anderson, 26, took a look at the fielder's glove in his right hand and the first baseman's mitt he carried in his left and admitted he couldn't say that one position was easier than the other. "Actually, though," he added, "I'm getting a break, because if you can play more than one position you have a better chance to stick."

With Richie Ashburn the only other lefthanded hitter among the regulars now, Anderson is sure to be in the lineup in Herrera should take over the first.

Herrera, a righthanded hitter, batted .306 at Miami last season with 93 RBI and 17 home runs.

RALEIGH (AP) — Because Richard S. Leftwick, 25, is an ardent basketball fan he is being held in Wake County jail today awaiting return to Roanoke, Va., as a federal parole violator.

Because of his fondness for the sport, authorities in Roanoke had notified the local FBI office to be on the lookout for Leftwick during the recent Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tourney.

An FBI agent said agents checked the parking lot at Reynold's Coliseum and found his car. They paged Leftwick on the public address system. They said he answered the call and was nabbed.

"We figured it would be a lot easier for him to find us than for us to find him in 11,500 people," said the FBI man.

After the arrest, Raleigh police said Leftwick was wanted in connection with two worthless checks issued here Friday.

Matmen Took Third Place

Maryland continued its domination of ACC wrestling last weekend by picking up its fifth straight tournament title in the annual post-season classic held at College Park, Md. The Terps racked up nine individual titles and scored 109 points to crush all other competition into the ground.

Virginia placed second in the event by taking 63 points. Carolina followed the Cavaliers in third place with 39 points. Duke ended up fourth, 11 points behind the Tar Heels, and Wake Forest came in last with a total score of 11.

Three in Finals

Although three Carolina grapplers got into the finals Saturday night, each one fell victim to the Maryland onslaught. In the 130 final Tar Heel Henry Rhyne was pinned by Terp Dick Van Auken. Maryland's Dick Dean, last year's conference champion at 177, made it two in a row Saturday night by scoring a fall over Carolina captain Kenny Hoke. The Terps completed their sweep of the Tar Heels in the finals of the 191 division when Art Marinelli pinned Rob Boyette.

In the consolations matches Carolina took one third and four fourths. J. W. Welborn captured the only Carolina third of the meet in his 137 bout with Shepherd of Virginia. Curt Champlin, David Atkinson, Ray Russell, and Larry Hayes all placed fourth in the final standings of the tourney.

AAU Tourney Opens

ASHEBORO, N. C. (AP) — The Carolinas AAU basketball tournament opens here Tuesday night. Eight teams will play for the title, with the winner eligible to compete in the National AAU event at Denver later this month.

First round games will be played Tuesday and Thursday nights, Wednesday being left open. Semifinals are carded Friday night, with finals Saturday.

Players from High Point College have entered a team and will oppose a similar squad from Catawba in the 7 p. m. opener Tuesday. The host McCrary Eagles will meet an Elon College squad in the second game.

Concluding first round games on Thursday night send a Pfeiffer College group against one from Guilford at 7 p. m. They'll be followed by a Wake Forest contingent's meeting with the High Point YMCA.

The Asheboro Jaycees and the Fayetteville Street School PTA are joint sponsors of the meet.

Golfers Now Qualifying

After a long postponement of opening practice, the varsity golf team finally began action yesterday at Finley Golf Course here in Chapel Hill.

Coach Chuck Erickson has five returning lettermen to work with this season, left from the 1957 team which had a 12-1 record. The squad was runner-up to Wake Forest in the conference tournament last year, losing by only two strokes.

With qualifying going on all this week, the task remains of trimming down the contestants into a team. There are 20 varsity and 40 freshmen trying out for the golf team.

The team has eight matches scheduled for this season, and all but the Indiana match is against conference competition. All but one of the matches will be played on Finley Golf Course. The last match o fthe season is against champion Wake Forest at Winston- Salem. The team's first match is March 25 against State here in Chapel Hill.

'View,' Playmakers Tragedy, Sets Opening This Evening

IN PLAY TONIGHT—Margaret Starnes as the niece, Catherine, and Harvey Knox as the immigrant, Rudolpho, in "A View From The Bridge."

Arthur Miller's modern tragedy, "A View From The Bridge," opens this evening at 8:30 for a five performance run in the Playmakers Theatre.

Opening with the slow rhythms of a jazz band, the play represents a slice of Americana seldom seen in a college theatre.

The setting is Brooklyn in the late fall. In the first act exposition the character of Eddie Carbone is established. Eddie is a man who refuses to look at things in their true perspective. He cannot see that the niece he has reared has suddenly become a woman who seeks her own life. When he is confronted with the fact that she has fallen in love with a young immigrant, Eddie can only resort to violence.

The settings for the production have been designed by Tommy Rezzuto, the lights by Lewis Goldstein. Jim Armacost is stage manager.

Featured in the cast are Ken Callender, Margeret Starnes, Harvey Knox, Page Williams, Albert Gordon, John Sneden, George Manasse, Jim Potter, Bill Pfefferkorn, Anne Brooke, Bill White, Dan Linney, Ed Madden, Carl Hinrichs, and Ross Baumstone.

Tickets for the Wednesday, Thursday and Sunday night performances are available at 214 Abernethy Hall and Ledbetter-Pickard.

UP Executive Nominations Set Tonight

The University Party will nominate four Student Government executives tonight at 8 o'clock in Carroll Hall.

UP Chairman Syd Shuford has called a meeting of all UP candidates after the nominating convention has been adjourned.

This meeting will complete the UP nominations for the spring elections to be held April 1.

Jerry Jones is the only candidate to announce his intention to get UP backing for Student Body President, Shuford said yesterday.

Jack Lawing and Dave Biren have announced that they will vie for the UP nomination for Student Body Vice-President. Martha Wilkinson intends to seek UP endorsement as secretary of the student body.

Shuford said so far no party members have publicly stated their intention to run for treasurer, but he said that he knew of some who were interested.

DTH Staff Meet

Daily Tar Heel staff members have been urged to attend an important meeting Wednesday at 4:30 p.m. in the newspaper office. At the meeting, two representatives to the Editorial Selections Board will be elected. One of these will come from the executive staff and one from the non-salaried staff.

Potential Lotteries Nipped

By BILL CHESHIRE

Two potential lotteries on the campus have been nipped in the bud as the result of an investigation of state lottery laws, it was announced yesterday by Sonny Hallford, student body attorney general.

The investigation was conducted by University Attorney J. A. Williams at Hallford's request.

A third lottery, however, was actually held on the campus about six weeks ago, Hallford said. "As far as I know there has been only one."

He explained that in the past lotteries, if held, have been conducted because of "ignorance on everyone's part." No prosecution of past offenders is contemplated, he said.

According to Hallford, the recent legal search dug up three conditions that, under North Carolina law, must exist in order to constitute a lottery:

1) a consideration (purchase) by an individual.

2) an element of chance and

3) some item of value offered as a prize or reward.

Hallford cautioned campus groups that they must not employ any money raising projects that conform to this definition of a lottery.

"If you are in doubt about the legality of any project," he said, "check with us before initiating it."

SLOAN SEEKS DTH POST

The first candidate to announce in the race for editor of The Daily Tar Heel is Charlie Sloan, journalism major from Arlington, Va

Sloan's announcement came yesterday afternoon. Former managing editor under Daily Tar Heel Editor Fred Powledge two years ago, Sloan entered an unsuccessful race for editor against Neil Bass last spring.

Sloan, with any other candidates, must appear before the Editorial Selections Board, which will meet this week to endorse candidates.

When he announced his candidacy yesterday, Sloan released the following statement:

"I am seeking the office of Daily Tar Heel editor.

"Almost three years of close contact with the paper have taught me all facets of the newspaper's operation, and now I ask the opportunity to put my education to work for the student body.

"In the next three weeks I will outline several plans I have for the improvement of The Daily Tar Heel. Most of these plans involve the internal organization of the paper, for I believe that the best newspaper is the most efficiently run newspaper.

"As the various points of my program are released, you will be able to see how they will affect the quality of the newspaper which is delivered to you almost every morning.

"But I am not running on management ability alone. The editor is also responsible for the content of his paper, and I believe I can fulfill this responsibility.

"A newspaper can be scrappy, controversial, complete and honest without being obnoxious. This is the kind of a newspaper I think the readers deserve, and the kind I want to edit. I believe it is possible to have the qualities I listed above without sacrificing responsible and thoughtful writing. Being careful does not mean avoiding trouble, and an issue should not be left out of the paper simply because it will draw criticism.

"I will mention some of the more controversial issues the edi-

UP Nominates Hare For Senior President

By PRINGLE PIPKIN

Jeff Hare of Ann Arbor, Mich., last night defeated Squeaky Frazier of Goldsboro for the University Party's nomination for Senior Class president.

At the suggestion of Ed Levy the UP voted to contribute $50 to the Campus Chest. Speaking for the proposal, Dot Pressly said the Campus Chest had fallen short of its goal by $200.

Cameron Cook, UP treasurer, said the party had $273 and could only use $150 in the coming election. The motion was passed by a unanimous voice vote.

Ed Levy received by acclamation the endorsement of the party for National Student Association Coordinator. He is now endorsed by both campus parties.

Carter Jones was elected the UP nominee for head cheerleader. His opposition, John Whitty, received the SP nomination Monday.

By acclamation Bill King was selected to run on the UP ticket for the office of Senior Class vice-president.

In a close contest Betty Root won over Anne Harvey for the UP's nomination for Senior Class secretary. John Whitaker was nominated by acclamation for the position of Senior Class treasurer.

Sarah Arnold edged out Lucy Forsyth in the race for the party's nomination for social chairman of the Senior Class.

By acclamation the party chose Pete Longernicker to run for a one year seat on the Student Legislature from Dorm Men's I.

From Dorm Men's II Tony Branon and Phil Keeney were nominated by acclamation for a one year seat and a six months seat, respectively.

Two candidates for Student Legislature seats of Dorm Men's III will be chosen tonight. In Dorm Men's IV the party picked David Grig, Jack Mitchell and Louis Gump to run for one year seats.

Emily Wagner from Women's Dorm District was nominated for a one year Student Legislature seat. Arnold Garvin was acclaimed the party's candidate for a six months Student Legislature seat of the Town Women's District.

Syd Shuford, UP Chairman, commented, "I am very pleased with our slate of Senior Class officers. I feel they will represent the seniors next year in the manner which will reflect credit on their classmates and the university as a whole.

"They are all persons with great interest in student government and they feel the offices they aspire to can become a very important part of Student Government," he concluded.

Honor Group Holding Meet

Honor Groups The Honor System Commission will hold an important meeting this afternoon from 5 to 6 o'clock in Roland Parker I. Commission Chairman Charlie Huntington has urged all members to be present.

The business at hand will be to set up the manner in which interviews for prospective jurors will be conducted. (This is being done in advance of the expected passage of a bill in Student Legislature that will reorganize the two Honor councils by the institution of juries.)

The meeting today was rescheduled to be held from 5 to 6 p. m. from a previously announced time because of a conflict.

Despite Publicity, Greek Societies Have Two Sides

There are two sides to everything. But some of us are content to view only the one side, and to draw our criticism from there.

Take, for instance, fraternities at the University of North Carolina. They recently have been branded irresponsible; they need reform. All the papers have been telling us this.

But what about the other side to Greek life at UNC? What about the contributions they make to charity, what of their contributions to the community?

These, too, exist, but they have been overlooked, forgotten in the turmoil of bad publicity and editorial comment appearing throughout the state. These are the forest behind the trees.

Tuesday afternoon more than 900 fraternity pledges spent more than 1,000 man hours of labor in "Greek Week" projects which have replaced blazing by constructive tasks in various areas of Chapel Hill.

Will we read about these projects in the editorial columns of our state press? Will these same newspapers call our student body president to inquire about the good being served by fraternities at the University?

Or will we continue the target of an attack which links hazy facts with misinformation and paints a picture of "pajama parties" and early-morning orgies scarcely typical of fraternity life at the University?

We have made mistakes. We have been wrong. But, currently, our Greek leaders are pooling their efforts and ideas to correct the shortcomings which have led to adverse publicity and public criticism of our fraternity activities.

But still the criticism continues. It continues because the state press has become infatuated by a Puritanistic approach to the problems of organizations which receive unwarranted publicity when they err, and which are forgotten when notable contributions are made to their University and their community.

Mark Anthony, in his funeral oration before the Romans, made this observation: "The evil men do lives after them; the god is 'oft interred wtih their bones." And this is wholely applicable to fraternities at UNC.

We have forgotten about the Christmas parties for orphans and the Yuletide gifts for the indigent; we have overlooked the money contributions to worthy charities and the support of community centers where the boys of today are moulded into men of tomorrow.

And we have closed our eyes to clean-up programs at local churches and similar projects at a student nursery, public grounds and private meeting places. We have, in a word, forgotten the good of fraternities.

Perhaps these facts, too, would be of interest to others in North Carolina. Maybe they would show that fraternities are responsible organizations, and not the centers of irresponsibility which many would have than be.

But we doubt it. For in our time, few are those who would help the fallen back to their feet—particularly when their own pride would be hurt in doing so.

GUEST EDITORIAL

Pay TV Worth The Try

Proponents of pay television have charged that the anti-pay TV campaign is one of the most misleading drives ever launched in this country for the purpose of fooling the public and protecting a special interest.

As we understand the situation, pay television is simply an additional entertainment service. It is entirely separate from the present arrangement of programs and would not, as we understand it, have any effect on the present programs that viewers are accustomed to see.

In other words, pay TV would be a new innovation whereby people who want to could put in their quarters and see top rate movies, Broadway plays, and better quality entertainment than is now offered by the national networks.

It is clear that the quality of programs on TV today ranges from the most terrible to the very excellent. The average program is really not worth the time it takes to view it. There are, on the other hand, many good television programs—particularly the live sports, political, and musical activities.

At present, the Federal Communications Commission has voted to consider whether or not pay TV should be permitted to make a try at the new system. If subscription television is allowed to be tried, it seems fair to predict that two things will happen.

First, it would force the national networks to improve the quality of programs to regain the audience lost by the high quality pay TV programs. Secondly, it will give those people who are willing to pay the opportunity to see programs that they would not otherwise be able to see.

The only possible loser in the whole game would be those individuals and corporations who are willing to risk their money in promoting the new system. The public, it seems, has nothing to lose.

If pay TV is approved by the FCC, television viewers can take their choice. It is worth a try.—The Old Gold And Black

The 'Catfish' Gets Towed In

Seems like the folks in Kinston, N. C., have come up with the right name for Klansman James W. Cole of South Carolina.

Down there, they call him "Catfish."

And so he is. He just bit off more than he could chew at Maxton, and the law towed him in.

J.Y.'S JAZZ

The Career Of Stan Kenton—A Conclusion

Last Sunday we left Stan Kenton, confused and disillusioned, with a dissolved "Innovations In Modern Music" orchestra. The band didn't sell for a lot of reasons, but only one was really important — the music was too far out. It took Stan a good while to realize that people are not adventurous enough to be able to take the kind of stuff he was throwing at them. Some people now like his Innovations music, but that band was dissolved over four years ago.

Having dissolved his innovations orchestra, in 1954 Stan tried a band which he titled "Contemporary Concepts." This was a much better band, and to a great extent was the same band he now has. The difference between it and its predecessor lay in the fact that the newer Contemporary band remembered how to swing. Stan could take this band into a ball room and give the people something to dance to—if you've ever heard the way that band played ballads the point is easily made.

The new band did well—it made a big hit at the 1957 Newport Jazz Festival and was hailed by the critics as being one of Stan's best. The recording of Johnny Richards' "Cuban Fire" sold very well and was called "Kenton's best" by Metronome Magazine. Then, about two months ago, Stan made a big decision. He has stopped road work almost entirely and gone back to Balboa with a great dance band that seems ready to set a new pattern in American dance music. The trumpets don't scream any more—they swing—and the arranging is the most tasty, perhaps the best, that Stan has ever had. Stan's future lies in this new band, and the future of dance bands may also.

Stan Kenton has always stood for a rather elusive quality in jazz—the quality of saying and doing whatever he wishes and feels is best. At times this has led him to put his foot in his mouth, but more often it has given America great, exciting, bands; bands which can be listened to, and danced to.

The dance band has been an important thing in American musical history. There have been a few really great ones—Glenn Miller, Tommy Dorsey, Benny Goodman, Les Brown, and a few others—and a plethora of really poor ones, the names of which I will not mention. One rather poor one was in Chapel Hill on Monday night. I had a chance to have a long talk with its leader, and hope to be able to bring an extended portrait of a contemporary band leader, what he thinks, what he wants, what he likes and dislikes, to the readers of this paper in a couple of days.

Overheard At The Theatre—

By GAIL GODWIN

As we stood patiently in the long line that wound slowly up to the entrance of the theater, I became interested in a conversation between an important looking man—obviously the manager—and another man ,obviously a habitual movie-goer.

"I'm really sorry you didnt' get to see Peyton Place," growled the man who was obviously manager.

"Yes," our movie-goer friend agreed. "I hear they made a beautiful story out of that nasty book."

"You might not like this picture," continued the manager as he moved along beside the line which was worming its way to the ticket window. "Farewell to Arms is a little rough for the average man."

And so a movie manager walked up and down the line apologizing for the movie. One woman had fainted during the obstetric scene, he confided to the excited mass which was now squirming with excitement at the thought of a bloody evening ahead.

From the number of soggy handkerchiefs and red eyes and snorts of indignation from prissy spectators, the screen version of Hemingway's masterpiece must have come close to equalling the stark reality, the rugged scenes, and the hopelessness of the novel.

For once, movie fans had the opportunity to see a production which had not been distorted through the watering-down process. Selznick seems to have a talent for reproducing life on his screen, if Gone With the Wind and Farewell to Arms are any indications.

It is a shame that Hemingway doesn't go to see movies made from his books. I don't think he would be disappointed in Rock Hudson in the famous "But she can't die" scene, during which the anguished American soldier debates with himself as to whether the girl who has just given birth to their dead child will live. And Jennifer Jones gives strength to the role of Catherine, adding a touch of individuality which the novel's Catherine lacked.

The film was made in Italy and the producer did not ration the beauty of the Alps, as he did not smooth over the love scenes, the childbirth scenes, and the death scenes.

One gets the same feeling at the end of the movie as he gets as he finishes the book: that of utter hopelessness. Katherine and Henry go through all kinds of danger only to be caught in the end by nature herself. It rains and Catherine dies. One has the feeling that Hemingway is killing off his characters again.

CLEANING HOUSE

Governor Luther Hodges has asked another State official to resign. He is Hugh R. Mills, New Bern realtor, member of the North Carolina Real Estate Licensing Board.

Mr. Mills has been handling transactions involving land which has been acquired for the Tryon Palace restoration. He sold some property ,which he had owned for six months, to the Tryon Palace Commission. He acted as agent in a transaction by which property passed from one party to another and then acted as agent for the Commission when it bought the property.

As Mr. Mills believes, there may have been nothing improper about his dealings with the Tryon Palace Commission and the tSate. Governor Hodges, however, felt that there might be a possible conflict of interests.

His attitude is a bit on the novel side in politics. Many political figures are hesitant to discipline or remove their appointees, even under extreme provocation. Whether or not the Governor increases his political popularity, he seems bent on deserving the respect of the people.

WHERE IS IT?

Ike's Bipartisan Unity

One of the strongest arguments advanced for electing Dwight D. Eisenhower to the Presidency in each of his campaigns was that he and he alone could unite men of good will in both parties on a common program high above the vicious factionalism into which the country had been drawn by demagogues—most of them, it was widely admitted, members of the General's own chosen party. Few would deny that this kindly, decent man has indeed presided benignly over what might be called a second Era of Good Feeling—or at least one unruffled by strong feelings of any sort. But at no point in his brief career in politics has the President met with such sweeping success at promoting bipartisan agreement as he has in the past few months. Everyone—Left, Right, and Center—is united upon one basic and fearfully important proposition: Dwight D. Eisenhower is not carrying all or even most of the burdens his countrymen placed upon him.

Time magazine, surely one of Mr. Eisenhower's most enthusiastic journalistic supporters in his two campaigns, has spoken for all of us with its traditional self-assurance. Citing the "critical interests" of the United States "in a dozen swiftly moving areas," Time's February 24 issue concludes: "Conspicuously absent was a badly needed feeling of presence—specifically, the presence of the President of the U. S. at his desk, giving attention to the daily details that make long range plans and policies work." Farther to the Right, we encounter a no less eloquent summation in the January 18 issue of the National Review: "Nothing—not screams in Budapest nor bayonets in Little Rock, not a collapse in the stock market nor an increase in unemployment, not rockets high in the skies of Russia or deep in the sands of Florida—nothing disturbs the tranquil' world of Dwight Eisenhower."

It was of course Mr. Eisenhower's mild stroke last November that precipitated most of this anguished reappraisal. We can understand why Mr. Eisenhower's friends wish that he could do more, but we are at a loss to explain why his most outspoken critics urge him to stop trying at all, to resign. Publications that had never expected much of Mr. Eisenhower but had always dreaded the worst from Mr. Nixon have been advising the President to hand over his office to the Vice-President. The New York Post on November 29: "In the light of what has happened, we believe the decision confronting the President is clear. In fairness to the country, to himself and to those who love him, he should resign." The New Republic on December 9: "Should Eisenhower resign? Yes." The Progressive in its February issue: "The President should resign." John Fischer, editor of Harper's, wrote in his February issue: "There is now one last great service which President Eisenhower can perform for his country. He can resign."

We are impressed by the boldness with which these editorialists take it upon themselves to play God in promising that a vigorous Nixon would make a better President than a dawdling Eisenhower. But we cannot join them. The mild stroke of last November has not basically altered facts that were perfectly clear long before the election of 1956. It is the man's temperament even more than his health that determines his conduct of the high office to which his countrymen, knowing him well, elected him. And it is his temperament, or at least the best part of it, that makes us want him to continue in office, just as long as he can and will. For he has several times demonstrated a soldier's last-ditch determination to return from the amiable aloofness in which he rests most of the time to assert that he, not the men around him, still holds in his hand the executive power of our government.

To be sure, it is at best a negative and seldom practiced virtue. But the President has it. What can be said about Mr. Nixon? "About the Vice-President, as distinguished from the former member of Congress," we wrote charitably in this same space last December 12, "the best we can say is that we don't know anything."—The Reporter

THE CHARLOTTE OBSERVER

No Excuse For Cruelty

Court-martial charges have been filed against two U. S. Army officers and a sergeant who allegedly nailed a 14-year-old Korean boy in a box and flew him more than 25 miles in a helicopter to "teach him a lesson."

This kind of cruelty, regardless of the circumstance, is disgusting to decent people.

True, there exists in South Korea a deep problem of difficult relations between impoverished people and inexperienced, far-from-home soldiers that helps explain how it could have happened.

The boy in question was, we are told, a chronic thief. In the bleak economy of postwar South Korea, stealing American property has become something of a major profession. A U. S. Eighth Army spokesman reports that our losses from theft have amounted to more than $2 million during the past two years.

Our authorities have caught many thieves and turned them over to Korean police—only to see them freed to steal again.

In this unsatisfactory atmosphere, American guards have too often been trigger-happy. Forty Koreans were killed by our troops in 1956, and 17 last year.

We can sympathize with the military personnel who want to stop the theft of our property. But we can't tolerate killing and cruelty.

FOR MEN

A Tail To Wag?

What man needs, says a leading neurosurgeon, is a tail to wiggle. Somewhere in the course of evolution we lost our tails. But we still have the compulsion to relieve brain tension at the top of our spinal columns by wiggling the bottom end. Unfortunately we don't have the equipment to do it.

The doctor may be right, but if our tails were suddenly returned to us, how would we use them?

Would we lash them to show anger, like a cat?

Or wag them to show pleasure, like a dog?

Or switch flies with them, like a cow?

Or swing through the trees by them, like a monkey?

Making a decision like that could be more frustrating than not having a tail to wave at all.

Cultural Relations Expert Visits UNC

Dr. Bernard J. E. M. De Hoog, cultural relations director of the Netherlands Ministry of Education, Arts, and Sciences, on campus now in connection with the International Educational Exchange Service of the U. S. Department of State.

Dr. De Hoog, visiting the United States through April 30, is interested in gaining an insight into cultural affairs, the arts, and education in this country. His particular concern, however, is with American activities in those areas abroad.

Dr. De Hoog speaks four languages: English, Dutch, French, and German. He has traveled widely in Europe, the United States, Mexico, Japan, and New Delhi.

Dr. De Hoog was educated at the Roman Catholic Institute of Economics at Tilburg, Netherlands. He received his doctoral degree in economics and social sciences from that institution in 1948.

Music Event Set Saturday At University

Auditions for the Edgar Stillman Kelley music scholarship award will be held Saturday here. The event is sponsored each year by the National Federation of Music Clubs.

Dr. Wilton Mason of the UNC Music Department, chairman of the judges' committee, announced that the auditions will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday in the auditorium of Hill Music Hall.

Any person of pre-college age who is a member of a Junior Music Club in North Carolina may try out for one of the scholarships.

At the auditions eligible students in any instrumental or vocal field will present a 20 minute program, played or sung from memory.

On the basis of the performances the judges will choose a state winner who will then compete in a regional contest. The 1958 scholarships will be given in the Southeastern Region made up of Alabama, Delaware, the District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, Tennessee, West Virginia and Virginia.

Musicales Will Feature Local Graduate Student

Thomas N. Rice, graduate student in the UNC Music Department, will be featured in a program of his own compositions in the Petites Musicales Series, sponsored by Graham Memorial Activities Board.

The program is scheduled for Sunday night at 8 o'clock in the auditorium of Hill Hall. The recital is free and open to the public.

Rice has written several works, two of which were performed in a recital of original compositions by students of the Music Department last spring. These were the Sonatina for Piccolo and String Bass and the Suite for Violoncello and Piano.

One of his more recent contributions was the music for the Carolina Playmakers' production on their studio workshop series of Bertolt Brecht's "The Exception and the Rule." The music, which was scored for the combination of two Jew's Harps and percussion, was instrumental in lending excitement to the production directed by Kai Jurgensen, UNC professor of dramatic art.

Sunday evening's program will consist of a Suite for Piano which will be played by the composer; Two Elegies for Violoncello and Piano to be performed with Efrim Fruchtman; a Prelude and Fugue on a Theme by Edward Grieg for duo-piano, performed by Margaret Bussell and Michael Cordovana, faculty members of Stratford College, Danville, Va.

Donna Patton Kelly, soprano of Chapel Hill, accompanied by Cordovana, will present the Psalm Cycle, Psalmadic Lamentations, as the final part of the program.

A second concert sponsored by the Petites Musicales will be given next week. Martha Fouse, Chapel Hill soprano, will give a recital at 8 p.m. Thursday, March 20, in the lounge of Graham Memorial.

World In Brief

Strike Ends

NEW YORK, March 11 (AP) — The International Ladies Garment Workers Union today voted an end to a strike of early 100,000 dressmakers, their first in 25 years.

Approval of peace terms by nearly 1,500 dress contractors covering eight states would signal a return to work tomorrow, one week from the beginning of the strike.

The agreement reached early this morning did not cover some 8,000 dressmakers in 200 Pennsylvania shops. They continued on strike.

Rebels Hold U. S. Fields

PADANG, CENTRAL SUMATRA, March, 11 (AP) — A rebel spokesman said today that invading Jakarta forces seeking to crush the rebel regime now apparently control the transport of oil from U. S.-operated fields deep in Central Sumatra.

He said the invaders occupy Bengkalis and other islands at the mouth of the Siak River, main artery for the movement of oil out of the U. S.-owned Caltex fields around Pakanbaru 50 airline miles inland.

The spokesman added, however, rebels forces entrenched in steaming swamplands would fight to keep the Jakarta from moving inland to the oil fields.

Caltex officials suspended operations at the fields after the Central Government launched its offensive against the rebels Friday.

Praises Agreement

WARSAW, March 11 (AP) — Nikita Khruschev tonight praised the recent Soviet-American cultural agreement as a big step forward in easing world tension.

The Soviet Communist party boss expressed his approval in an interview with the Polish Communist party organ Trybuna Ludu.

Local Groups Plan Spring Art Exhibit

The Recreation Committee of GAMB and the Art League are in the process of planning a student sidewalk are exhibit to be held on the campus in the early spring.

According to Mary Moore Mason and Chuck Hoskins, co-chairmen of the joint committee, any student who is interested in exhibiting his work may do so by contacting Hoskins and by paying a one dollar entrance fee. This fee will also pay for membership in the Art League which sponsors lectures and exhibits all during the year.

Any painting, lithographs, engravings or student designed greeting cards may be entered in the exhibit. However, sculpture and ceramics are not going to be exhibited unless facilities can be found for safely displaying them in a sidewalk show.

Chuck Hoskins may be contacted through the Person Art Gallery or by telephoning 9-1691.

'Columns Not For Sale,' Editor Tells Press Club

By WYNDHAM HEWITT

"My editorial page and news columns are not for sale," Tom Lassiter, editor of the Smithfield Herald said Monday. He explained his editorial policies to members of the Press Club and told some of his views on current events and how they affect his paper.

Lassiter, a former UNC journalism professor, is the editor of one of the country's best known semi-weekly newspapers, the Smithfield Herald. The paper is a family paper and is owned and operated by his mother, brother and himself. The paper was originally owned by his father and a partner. When his father died Lassiter bought the paper out and brought it under family control.

Local news is the main coverage by his paper. He believes his readers should be well informed on happenings of the town board, county board and board of education. He maintains a full time coverage of these meetings. He also has coverage of other local meetings.

Lassiter's editorial column is wide open. In this column he does not hesitate to discuss anything that seems to be of current interest. This ranges from state to national to international news.

Local news coverage and a wide open editorial column keep with his policy of running a democratic paper. He believes that democracy can survive on a well informed public opinion. It is the paper's job to stimulate thought on subjects of public interest. He said the paper should also try to take a stand on important public events, even though this stand might run against public opinion. These stands and opinions should not be expressed until enough study has been done on the subject to give a valid opinion, he commented.

He does not think of his newspaper as a strict business. The primary concern should not be to sell advertising and keep circulation up, although this is important, he said. The paper should take some sort of stand according to its policies and stand by them through thick or thin. Lassiter said, "My paper has a spirit of more than a business."

Many times in the history of his paper he has had to take the stand of the so-called "under dog." This has helped them in the long run and his paper has been admired for it. This is one of the things that has made the Smithfield Herald one of the nation's leading semi-weekly papers.

Announcement was made at Monday night's meeting of the Press Club that the Awards Banquet will be held May 12. Scholarships will be awarded at the banquet.

The award is presented annually to the member nominated by the Junior Chamber of Commerce who ". . . has made the greatest contribution during the past year to the improvement of business ethics and practices in North Carolina," according to Max Williams, UNC senior chairman of the selection committee.

"In addition to his moral and other attributes," said Williams, "The judges also consider such factors as the nominee's participation in community activities, offices held in civic organizations, church activities, and direct or indirect activities concerned with developing or bringing industry to North Carolina.

BERMAN'S Dept. Store

To Parents, Big Brothers And Grandmas

Have you ever noticed how, most mornings in the Intimate Bookshop, the floor has a tendency to be decorated with small people busily sampling our delectable wares?

'Taint an accident, McGee!

We sincerely believe that a great many people of our generation were permanently deprived of the lasting joy of good reading by misguided teachers and old fashioned librarians, who threw an aura of mystery and taboo over the easy natural world of books.

We want children in our shop to feel among friends and equals. We want them to laugh out loud, or cry if they feel like it. Most of all we want them to know that the doors to wonderland are open, and you don't have to whisper or tiptoe or keep your hair parted down the middle to enjoy it.

So we fill our children's corner with the gayest, most colorful books we can find, and we try to keep the price down to the place where the child has a chance to get a book of his very own every so often.

Bring a child into the shop next time you come by, and don't worry about it. You'll both have a good time in Chapel Hills' famous old cultural emporium!

Tar Heel Swimmers To Compete Against Best In East Tomorrow

The undefeated Carolina swimmers leave today for the Eastern Intercollegiate Championships to be held Thursday through Saturday at the Naval Academy in Annapolis, Maryland.

Yale is defending champion of the meet, winning 10 of the 18 events last year. The Tar Heels look to be the "dark-horse" of the meet.

Senior co-captain and All-American Bill Roth is expected to place high in the 50-yard freestyle event this year. Roth's times are as good as anyone's on the East coast this season, and the 50 yard dash was left wide open this year, with the defending champion graduating.

Although Yale's world record holder butterfly ace will be defending his title, the race for second, third, and forth positions should be close, and Carolina's Mac Mahaffy's time is comparable with the best.

Tony Schiffman has turned in some outstanding times this week in the 440 freestyle, and should be in the running for top honors when the gun sounds.

The Carolina relays are what will be counted on to place the team high in the meet. The medley relay of Brent Nash, Mahaffy, Bill Zickgraf, and Walt Rose have only been surpassed by the Yale and Army teams, while the freestyle relay of Bill Roth, Bill Zickgraf, Rose, and Schiffman should be even better. A good place in these events will rank the team second or third in the meet.

Bill Zickgraf and Walt Rose figure to place well in the 100 yard freestyle event. Kit Mercer will represent Carolina in the breaststroke events, and Brent Nash will swim the 200 and 100 backstroke against defending champ Jim Dolby of Yale.

If senior diver Ned Meekins has a good day he could win the diving title and a first place for Carolina. Pete Reynolds will also dive for Carolina.

Thursday will be the 1500 freestyle and the individual medley. Friday's events include the 200 butterfly, 50 freestyle, 100 breaststroke, low board diving, freestyle relay, 220 freestyle, and 200 backstroke. Saturday will be the 100 butterfly, 100 freestyle, 440 freestyle, high diving, medley relay, and the 100 backstroke and 200 breaststroke.

ACC Basketballers Close College Careers

By RUSTY HAMMOND

The curtain has come down on another fine ACC season, perhaps the best ever. The conference has established itself among the very best in the nation, and its athletes are recognized all over the country for their fine individual and team performances.

As always, the end of the season also closes the college careers of many fine basketball players from all the schools around the conference.

Clemson College loses the services of Vince Yockel, who was among the top five scorers in the ACC and a pick for second team all-ACC. Starting center Ed Brinkley and forward Tom Cameron also depart in June.

Conference champion Maryland loses Captain Nick Davis, who was chosen for the all-Tournament team, along with subs Perry Moore and Tom Young.

State College will have to do without sub Tom Hopper and Captain Whitey Bell. Bell has already been declared ineligible because of a scholastic incident, and was unable to participate in the Tournament.

South Carolina is the single exception in the entire conference, for they don't lose a single man.

Virginia retains much of her stars, losing only substitute Wister Nelligan.

Wake Forest, the doormat of the conference this year, has a bright future next year. The Deacs lose only two players-Captain Wendell Carr and Henry Bowers. Bowers, a hot and cold ballplayer, gave Carolina plenty of trouble when the two teams met in Winston-Salem.

Duke, the regular season champion, is perhaps the heaviest hit team in the conference by graduates. The entire "Iron Five" is leaving, and the Devils will have a rough time indeed trying to fill so many empty shoes. The "Iron Five" were named by the sportwriters when they started and played practically every game after the Dixie Classic. This combination swept through eleven straight victories before being derailed by the Virginia Cavaliers. The Iron Five consists of Jim Newcome, Paul Schmit, Bucky Allen (Honorable Mention all-America), Bob Vernon, and Bobby Joe Harris. In addition to these, subs Bob Lakata and Hayes Clement will be lost.

Carolinan will lose all-Americans Pete Brennan and Tommy Kearns, plus clutch performer Bobby Cunningham and scrapper Roy Searcy. With the single exception of Danny Lotz, the last remnants of the National Championship team will be gone at the beginning of next season.

Brennan was on the second team of the AP all-American and Kearns made third team. Cunningham is famous for his ability to come through when the pressure is on.

But a host of returning veterans and a promising freshman crew point to another fine showing next season of Frank McGuire and Company.

Co-Rec Teams To Meet In VB Tournament

The annual Co-Rec volleyball tournament is coming up this Thursday night with 16 teams slated to compete in the fun-filled affair.

Co-recreation, which has proven as successful as co-education, means that the teams are comprised of girls and boys, even stephen. All interested dorms, sororities, and fraternities have entered their names and pairings were drawn from a hat.

The tournament will be on a single elimination basis and will be carried over to Tuesday night when the finals will be played. The only thing involved will be a trophy for the winer ,and a good time. No points will be given for the intramual participation score for the year.

The Pairings.

Theta Chi-Pi Phi; Phi Delt-Alderman-2; Beta-KD-1; Mangum-Tri Delt-1; DKE-Carr-2; Chi Phi-McIver; Cobb-Alpha Gam-1; St. A-Chi O; Zeta Psi-Alderman-1; Pi-KA-Spencer Pi Lamb-KD-2; Stacy-Carr-1; Sig Nu-Alpha Gam-3; Ruffin-Tri Delt-2; Winston-Alpha Gam-2; Lewis-TriDelt-3.

State Football

RALEIGH (AP)—State's defending ACC football champions will wind up off-season practice here Saturday with a game against a team of former Wolfpack stars.

The game is set for 2 o'clock on the practice field behind Reynolds Coliseum.

The varsity backfield will have Ernie Driscoll at quarterback, Ken Trowbridge and Ron Podwika at halfbacks and Arnold Nelson at fullback. Don Hafer, number one fullback last year, is on the baseball team and will not be available.

Bomb Dropped

FLORENCE, S. C. (AP)—A bomb from an Air Force plane dropped in a small community near Florence Tuesday, damaging six homes and a church.

Five persons were injured, none seriously.

The bomb struck the home of Walter (Bill) Gregg in the Morris Bluff community 10 miles east of Florence. Only the chimney of the six-room frame residence was left standing.

Only Mrs. Gregg was in the house at the time. She escaped serious injury Gregg, his three children and a neighbor's child were in the yard when the explosion occurred.

"I was sitting in the house sewing and the next thing I knew I was crawling out from under boards and plaster," Mrs. Gregg said.

She and her husband were treated for lacerations at McLeod Infirmary in Florence. Attendants said neither would be kept in the infirmary.

Batter Must Wear Helmet

TAMPA, Fla., (AP) — American League President will Harridge stepped into the Ted Williams-no helmet controversy Tuesday by notifying the league's umpires that the wearing of protective headgear by all players is mandatory.

This may force a showdown soon over whether the great Boston slugger will don a protective helmet or what exactly constitutes a "protective device" for a batter.

Williams adamantly has refused to wear a helmet, asserting that it interferes with his timing. However, the veteran slugger, who led the majors in batting last year with a .388 average, has advised other players to wear helmets.

"If a player appears at bat without a protective device or helmet, you are not to order him off the field," said Harridge in a bulletin to his league's umpires. "Instead, you are to inform the manager of the team that the player is 'improperly attired' and also report the matter to the league president."

What happens then was not made clear.

The league passed a headgear rule, by a 7-1 vote at the meetings in Colorado Springs last December. The Red Sox dissented because General Manager Joe Cronin knew Williams wouldn't go for it. The rule already is on the National League books.

Williams has said repeatedly "I'm not going to wear one of those space helmets. It bothers my hitting."

Before Harridge issued his bulletin, Cronin declared there wouldn't be any trouble over the rule.

COFFEE BREAK—Two Carolina swimmers, Brent Nash and Charles Reyner take a breather from practice as their squad makes final preparations before going to Annapoplis to swim in the Eastern Inter-Collegiate Championships which start tomorrow.

Golfers Hit Links For Last Qualifying Rounds

After being held up for several days because of bad weather, the varsity golf team has finally started qualifying. this week. Coach Chuck Erickson has a nucleus of four experienced lettermen around which to build his team this year. Last year's squad had a fine 12-1 record and finished runner-up to Wake Forest in the ACC championships.

The returning lettermen who will be heavily counted on are Billy Thornaton, Tommy Langley ,Gene Lookabill, and Bob Ruffin. In the qualifying this week, Thornton shot a 5 under par 67 while Lookabill turned in a 71 card. These scores are expcetional considering the condition of the course this early in the season.

The remaining qualifiers in the early rounds are as follows: Joe Callicott, John McKee, Johnny Johnston, Richard Taylor, Charlie Erdman, Charlie Gray, Harry Braxton, and Bob Kochenoni.

The complete golf schedule shows a total of 13 regular season meets in addition to the ACC and NCAA Tourneys. The season opens March 22 against Davidson here, and the final regular season match is May 5 at Wake Forest. Out-of-conference opponents include Davidson of the Southern Conference (2), Indiana, Michigan State, and Michigan of the Big Ten, and Princeton of the Ivy League. 11 of the 13 matches will be held on Finley Golf Course here in Chapel Hill.

ATO s Win Field Day

The Alpha Tau Omega pledge class made a perfect score in yesterday's field day events of the Greek Week program. The ATO's won four first place awards in four events.

Ashe Exum, chairman of Greek Week, estimated that 300 pledges representing all social fraternities here, participated in field day. In addition, exchange dinners among the pledge classes were held after the field day activities.

These activities were part of four days of activities in which the social fraternities at UNC strive to improve relations between the community and fraternal groups.

Some 400 pledges from 24 fraternities are participating in the series of events.

Tar Heels Rated 13th In Final Poll; Maryland 6th, Duke 10th, State 20th

By WILL GRIMSLEY
The Associated Press

The West Virginia Mountaineers are the nation's No. 1 college basketball team in the final Associated Press poll, and they think they can prove it in the big championship tournament.

"We are all very pleased over the honor,' Coach Fred Schaus said Tuesday. "We are not worrying about the added pressure this puts on us.

"These boys are not cocky but confident. They don't believe any team in the country can beat them, even though we have lost one of our best men."

The team's second high scorer and so-called "balance wheel," Don Vincent broke a leg last week in the Southern Conference tournament which the Mountaineers won for the fourth straight time.

West Virginia took top honors in the poll, receiving 89 first place votes and a total of 1400 points from the 167 sports writers and broadcasters who participate in the balloting. Cincinnati was runner up with 37 first place votes and 1214 points.

Points are awarded on the basis of 10 for a first place vote, nine for second and on down the line. Completing the top ten were Kansas State, which dropped from first to third after two losses last week, San Francisco Temple, Maryland, Kansas, Notre Dame, Kentucky and Duke.

All but Kansas and Duke qualified for the NCAA National Collegiate tournament which opened sectionally Tuesday night and moves into regional eliminations Friday.

Since the AP basketball poll was started in 1949, six of the teams which won top ranking for season's performance went on to capture the tournament title. These included Kentucky, 1949 and 1951; Indiana, 1953; San Francisco in 1955 and 1956 and North Carolina in 1957.

Bradley topped the poll in 1950 when City College of New York's Cinderella Kids swept to the tournament title. Kentucky was poll leader in 1952 and 1954 but the tournament was won by Kansas and LaSalle, respectively.

West Virginia this year rolled up a 26-1 record, sandwiching 14 and 12-game winning streaks around a single loss to Duke in mid-season. As a team, the sharp-shooting Mountaineers are averaging 87 points a game and are high in the list of expert rebounders.

FOR WHOM THE GLOCKEN SPIELS
by Enrique Hematoma

Spain, 1939. A war has broken out. The rebels are fighting for some cause or other as usual, and are hidden in the mountains. Enter Old Man and American capitalist, hero of moovy.

Hero: There's the bridge, Old Man.

Old Man: (Intrigued) Yeah. (Takes a swig of tequila).

Scene changes to mountain cave hideout. Enter Pablo, the Gypsy, divers other rebels, and Maria. Hero appears.

Pablo: I'm the chief. I give commands here. (Hiccups).

Pablo's woman: (Entering from cave) You are coward. Inglesz is chief.

Maria: (To American) What your name, Inglesz?

American: Inglesz.

Plot progresses. American appears to want to blow up bridge. Battle ensues.

Gypsy: (with idiotic smile, kissing thumb) Ole! (Tosses grenade into tank).

Hero: (To screaming Maria). All is lost. But I am you and you are me, and we're both each other so you go and I'll stay and we'll be together, and . . .

Pablo: (in background) I don't provoke.

Enter George, with bell.

George: Bell tolls for thee. Pool is good game. Fine. True.

Smiles, and exits.

Legislature Plans Mixed Slate Tonite

Student Lawmakers will consider varied legislation tonight at 7.30 o'clock on the top floor of New West.

Roger Foushee's (SP) bill to incorporate a jury system and councils of five into the present Men's and Women's Honor Councils will be acted upon by the Legegislature.

The body will decide if The Daly Tar Heel will be able to keep its surplus as provided for in Pat Adams' (SP) bill.

Resolutions introduced by Foushee to ratify the "US National Student Association's basic policy declaration on student bill of responsibilities and rights" and the US NSA "basic policy on academic freedom" will be considered.

After this session there remain only two more regular meetings of this assembly of the Legislature.

Di Defeats Presidency Succession Proposal

The Dialectic Senate defeated a bill which advocated a constitutional amendment to allow the Vice President to assume the presidency when the President is considered incapable.

The Tuesday meeting was nearly evenly divided over the resolution which would have allowed the President to declare himself incapable, or the Vice President to do so, with the cabinet's consent to declare him incapable.

Affirmative speakers stood upon the premises that the President on several occasions, through illness, has been unable to carry out his duties, and that as a result various affairs of government had been neglected.

They further Stated that in this day of increasing importance of executive leadership that a weak presidency could not be tolerated; and there should be, therefore, some legal method keeping the office strong and able to function unimpaired.

Negative speakers felt the bill was neither specific enough, nor were the Vice President and the cabinet qualified to decide upon the President's capability.

It was suggested that the House of Representatives, upon submission of a direct medical statement of the President's condition, would, as popular representatives, be more qualified to decide.

The meeting of March 18th was cancelled because of the Carolina Symposium.

The bill for the next regular meeting will consist of a resolution to increase foreign aid.

Lawing UP Candidate For Vice-Presidency

The University Party Convention nominated Al Goldsmith of Lincolnton to run for President of Student Body this spring.

His opposition last night was Jerry Jones of Raleigh. Goldsmith received a substantial margin of votes when the delegations were polled.

,By acclamation Jack Lawing of Marion was nominated Vice-President of the Student Body: Martha Wilkinson of Beckly, W. Va., Student Body Secretary; and Charlie Gray of Gastonia, Student Body Treasurer.

In his nomination speech Goldsmith asserted, "it is time for a change." and said that he realizes "there is a great job to be done.

AL GOLDSMITH
Nominee For President

"Fraternities are vital part of this campus, and the Inter-Fraternity Council should be too," he stated when speaking of the problems which are facing student Government.

He explained that reform in the fraternities should come from the IFC and not from the student Legislature.

He went on to say that the Honor System had raised other problems and he would work, if elected, to institute the jury system.

However, if the system fails, he said he would go before the Student Legislature to ask them to change it.

The third problem he cited was that of student parking and cars for freshmen. He said he would try to work it out with the University Administration so that freshmen could have cars again. ,

He pledged himself to strengthening the position of the National Student Association on this campus. Goldsmith said he would work to get a new Student Union.

The new cut system has brought about much confusion he claimed. He said he thought there should be a guaranteed number of cuts for those on the Dean's list.

"I guarantee that I won't sit back and watch the world go by," he promised.

Jones said "without reservation" that he did not plan to run independently.

Frost Makes Annual Visit

Robert Frost, fresh from a White House visit in Washington, will make his 12th annual visit to Chapel Hill Friday and will lecture and read to an open-invitation audience in Hill Hall at 8 p.m. Frost will speak to graduates and upperclassmen of the English department in Bingham Hall Saturday morning.

When in Chapel Hill previously, Frost has always attracted large crowds at his public appearances. His pungent wit and philosophical observations have become a tradition here and have appealed to his audiences everywhere.

During the past year, which has been extremely busy for him, he has been presented honorary degrees from the Universities of Oxford, Cambridge, and Edinburg while in England. He also holds an honorary degree from the University of North Carolina.

Famous for his ability to find the universal in the particular, and the timeless in the timely, Frost has produced volumes of poetry, hundreds of poems being well-known favorites. These he will read and discuss this weekend.

Coed Enters Blue-White Queen Race

Miss Ruth Hoffman has been chosen as a candidate for queen of the 1958 Carolina Blue-White Football Game. She will represent Alpha Delta Pi sorority.

Each sorority and girl's dormitory has been asked to select a candidate to participate in the contest. Voting for the queen will begin Wednesday, March 19, and continue through game time, Saturday, March 22.

Voting will be conducted as it has been in the past. A picture of each candidate will be placed on a poster in Y Court. For each penny deposited in a container beneath her picture, a girl will receive one vote. Proceeds will go to the Monogram Club Grant-In-Aid Fund.

All candidates will be presented at halftime of the Blue-White Game and the winner will be announced at that time. She will receive a loving cup and one dozen red roses.

SENT TO BOARD

Daily Tar Heel staff members. Mary Alys Voorhees and Pringle Pipkin, were elected Wednesday to serve on the Editorial Selections Board, which will interview all prospective candidates for editor of the newspaper Friady.

Electoral College Proposal Meets Defeat In Phi Hands

By HENRY HOWARD

A bill proposing abolition of the present electoral college system of national presidental election and introduction of a popular vote procedure was defeated Tuesday night at the regular debate session of the Phi Society.

The issue stated "Resolved: That the constitution of the United States be amended to abolish the electoral college for the election of president and substitute, therefore, direct popular vote." After presentation of the bill ,five speakers debated the pros and cons of its values and defects.

Four main subjects dominated the criticism of the proposed electoral change: 1. protection of the traditional two-party political system, 2. the placing of electoral power as closely to the people as is deemed practical, 3. reflection by the electoral college of the sentiments of more people than would a popular election, and 4. prevention of Congressional election of the President in case of "no-majority" popular vote elections.

Unfair representation was the main argument in favor of the bill. It was pointed out that a President could be elected by a majority of electorial votes without having a majority of national popular vote. This was cited as a clear case of unfair and unbalanced representation of the American voting public.

After membership and assembly votes were taken, showing 7-5 and 11-8 against the bill respectively, Dr. William Jenkins of the University Political Science Department, who served as guest critic for the evening ,evaluated the proceedings. He pointed out the fact that the basic argument against the electoral college is that the procedure is not entirely democratic.

Tar Heels Face Scots In Verbal Duel Tonight

A highlight of UNC debating this year will be the visit of two Scottish debators here tonight.

UNC students, Carl Barrington and Jim Tolbert, will debate the question, "Resolved: That the Sun Has Set on the British Empire." The debate will be held at 8 o'clock in Carroll Hall.

Each year, the Forensic Council, which is co-sponsoring the debate with the Carolina Forum, attempts to bring debators from foreign countries here.

The UNC students, who are both active in debating socities here, will face two men who are graduates of Glasgow University. Barrington is an English major and is a member of the Forensic Council and Di Senate. Tolbert, pre-law major, is a past president of the Phi Society and isalso a member of the Forensic Council.

Carolina Playmakers Celebrate 40 Years Of Growth

The influence of the work of the Carolina Playmmakers and the Department of Dramatic Art has in 40 years extended beyond the campus of Carolina and the immediate community to the state and throughout the nation.

The Department of Dramatic Art and the Carolina Playmakers are at present jointly celebrating 40 years of activity. A booklet describing the growth of drama on the campus has been prepared and is being distributed to friends of the dramatic arts program.

Chancellor William B. Aycock writes in the foreword, "Drama on the campus of the University of North Carolina, now in its 40th year of life, is a glistening monument to the talented and hard- working men and women who have given and are giving their lives to the cultural growth of this state."

The booklet traces the progress of the dramatic arts programs from 1918 when Frederick H. Koch, a teacher dedicated to a belief in the creative powers of young men and women, initiated courses in playwriting and founded the Carolina Playmakers. Samuel Selden, who had been associated with Prof. Koch since 1927, became director of the Playmakers after Prof. Koch's death in 1944.

Parker Heads

Simultaneous with the beginning of the Carolina Playmakers 40 years ago was the organization of the Bureau of Community Drama as a unit of the Extension Division. Professor John W. Parker now heads this service which handles hundreds of requests for assistance in all phases of theatre arts which come from organizations and individuals throughout the state, from all parts of the United States and from foreign countries.

Dramatic art was in 1918 a part of the English curriculum, but in 1936 dramatic art became a separate division of the College of Arts and Science and of the Graduate School.

Today the department offers a wide choice of courses in ancient and modern dramatic literature, history and technique. The work in practical theatre includes playwriting, acting, directing, scenery construction and painting, stage lighting, consuming, designing, theatre administration and, is in collaboration with the Department of Radio, Television and Motion Pictures, courses in the communication arts.

From Every State

The department draws students for its major program, both undergraduate and graduate, from every state in the Union. Students have come for training from many foreign countries including Canada, Chile, China, Denmark, Egypt, England, Korea, Mexico, Norway, the Philippines, Thailand, Turkey, Uruguay and Venezuela.

The quality of the department's graduate work is attested by the fact that the report of the Committee on Research and Creative Activity of the University Conference, Proceedings for 1950, which represented 49 Southern colleges and universities, rated the Department of Dramatic Art as one of the 10 departments at UNC which stood in scholarship and creative work "among the best in the country," and as one of the four departments without equal in the South.

In the five-year period of 1952-57, the annual enrollment of majors averaged 37 graduates and 23 undergraduate students. The total yearly rsgistrations in all dramatic art course average 417. Approximately 200 students from all branches of the University, other than majors, participated in the productions of the Carolina Playmakers.

For 40 years the Carolina Playmakers have served the purposes of both a dramatic laboratory and a community theatre. Membership has not been limited to students in the Department of Dramatic Arts, but has been open to graduates and undergraduates from all classes and divisions of the University, and to citizens of Chapel Hill and neighboring communities. Roles in the plays and positions on the production staff are assigned through open competition.

Took Lead

Under the leadership of Professor Koch, the Carolina Playmakers early took the lead in creating and developing regional American drama. In the beginning years students wrote and produced principally "tolf plays" concerning people in the small towns of North Carolina. As students were attracted to the University from other areas, the writing and producing became more cosmopolitan.

Early Playmakers--Thomas Wolfe, Paul Green, Jonathan Daniels, Bernice Kelly Harris and Sheppard Strudwick, for example—brought distinction to the University. The Playmakers Theatre was remodeled from the old university library to become the first state-owned theatre in America devoted to its own native drama.

Selections of the best original plays have been published in 12 anthologies, the first of which, "Carolina Folk Plays," was in 1922.

Four major productions of old and modern dramas, classical and popular, and four productions of new scripts, both one-act and full-length, are done each June between September and June by the Carolina Playmakers. Nearly every year the group also produces in collaboration with the Music Department a musical play, and in the spring the Playmakers move outdoors to the Koch Memorial Forest Theatre to do one of the classics. This year "The Comedy of Errors" will be presented on May 9, 10 and 11 to climax the Playmakers' 40th season.

Current Season

During the current season the Carolina Playmakers have already presented "The Lark," Lillian Hellman's version of Joan of Arc; "Teahouse of the August Moon;" and "What Every Woman Pnows," a revival of James M. Barrie's play.

Two other productions are scheduled this year. "A View From the Bridge," the full-length version of Arthur Miller's play, currently playing; and "Out of the South," a group of one-act plays by Paul Green on March 28 and 29.

In addition to their regular productions, their training program and services, the Playmakers bring outstanding profesional companies an distinguished lecturers to enrich the cultural life of the Universaty community.

"The Rivalry" starring Raymond Massey, Agnes Moorehead and Martin Gabel was sponsored by the Playmakers in December; and "No Time for Sergeants" was given in January by a Maurice Evans company. "Back To Methuselah" with Tyrone Power and Faye Emerson is scheduled for Feb. 28 and March 1.

Among the contributions of the Carolina Playmakers has been the development of outdoor historical dramas. The group has provided scripts through its alumni, direction and much of the staff and acting personnel for five of these plays: Paul Green's "The Lost Colony" and "Wilderness Road;" Kermit Hunter's "Unto These Hills," "Forever This Land" and "Horn in the West."

Given each summer in July and August, these plays have provided employment and experience to about 1,500 selected actors, singers, dancers, and technicians and have drawn audiences totaling more than 3,000,000 people.

The Playmakers and the Extension Division co-sponsor the Carolina Dramatic Association, a statewide association of dramatic organizations composed of community, university, college, high school and children's theatre groups. This year marks the 335th anniversary of this associations.

For 11 summers, 50 selected high school students have been brought to the campus from across the nation to participate in a six-week program of instruction in dramatic art.

A scholarship is provided each student, and what these Junior Playmakers learn is applied in public performances.

Cowley, Golden And Segal Added To List In Symposium

By DAVIS YOUNG

Word came from the Carolina Symposium on Public Affairs today that three other top names have accepted invitations to participate during Symposium Week. They include Malcolm Cowley, Harry Golden and Ben Segal.

Cowley is a noted lecturer and writer. He is a graduate of Harvard University and also studied at the University of Montpellier in France. He served as associate editor of "The New Republic" from 1929 until 1944 and has written several outstanding selections including: "Exile's Return," "Blue Juniata," "The Dry Season" and "The Sacred Hill."

Golden is presently the editor of "The Carolina Israelite." He is a product of the public school system of New York and graduated from City College of New York in 1927. After teaching school for a short time he joined the staff of the "New York Post" and later worked for the "Daily Mirror."

In 1937 he started his own paper in Red Bank, N. J., but came south two years later to promote special daily editions which have since been done away with. He worked for a time on the staff of the "Hendersonville Time News" and went from there to Charlotte to found the paper that he is now editing. In 1955, Golden was named "Leading American Jewish Editor" by B'rith Abraham. He is the father of four sons, one of whom is a reporter for the "Detroit Free Press."

Ben Segal is the Director of the Trade Union Program on Civil Liberties and Rights and Director of the International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of the AFL-CIO.

From 1946 until 1951, he worked in the South with the Textile Worker's Union of America as their education director. He is on the Executive Board for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and is a past recipient of a Fulbright Fellowship.

Tax Cuts Not Justified To Bolster The Economy

There is something paradoxical about proposals in the air to curb the recession in which the United States finds itself today.

With each report of mounting unemployment there comes another program to revive the economy, another means envisioned by another senator (or the President) to give our economy the transfusion which it so desperately needs.

We have all heard the proposals: increase postage rates, then build more post offices; broaden employment through "pork barrell" spending; pay idle workers through construction of public schools.

But the one proposal which, above all the others, has stunned us the most is the recent suggestion by the Vice President to curb taxes on personal income and business to increase private spending.

This proposal comes at a time when federal spending is at its summit. It comes when Congressmen are doubtful that revenue will meet up to government expenditures, even at the current tax levels on personal income and corporation profits.

In good times our Congressmen justify exhorbitant assessments against the individual by climbing operational costs of the government. In fact, it's not that we're being taxed too much, but that unless taxes are raised the federal budget will end up in the red.

The maxim, then, seems to be this: so long as private enterprise is reaping profits from its production at a handsome level, any increased expenditures by the federal government can ride on the shoulders of taxes placed against that production.

May be that is as it should be. But what we can't understand is how, at a time when federal spending continues to climb and no government agency seems satisfied with its appropriation, taxes could be decreased without earth-shaking effects throughout our nation.

It's bad enough to build showers for Arabian camel drivers, send horn players to South Africa and pour money into dictatorial governments when federal revenue can foot the bills. But there is real ground for complaint when similar expenditures continue with little indication that federal monies will be sufficient to pay for them.

Consequently, we can't justify how at a time when revenue will be at a minimum, and expenditures at a minimum, the federal government could further cut taxes to bolster the economy.

One North Carolina farmer has proposed that federal funds be loaned to county governments, at no interest rate, for construction of school facilities to put a halt to the recession. It sounds like such a good idea that probably it would never be approved.

Just what other measures could be undertaken to give work to the unemployed we will leave to our leaders in Washington. But unless they act soon, they're liable to be purchasing for bread lines and mapping out projects for the WPA.

The storm already is brewing. It's just that some people have been unable thus far to see the warning flag.

Jurors Should Be Selected Free Of Judicial Interest

The Honor System Commission was scheduled to meet Wednesday afternoon to outline a plan for selection of jurors who would be used under a revised council system here.

Of course, the commission's work will be for naught if the legislature refuses to reorganize the two Honor Councils along lines which would add juries to these councils.

But if the legislature approves the necessary revisions, then the court system at UNC will get an overhaul in the form of addition of juries, and the democratic process will spread still further through our student government.

While we support the institution of the jury, we oppose the methods by which its members would be selected and urge the legislature to keep that selection divorced of control by the student judiciary.

When the jury system first was mentioned this year, we held that jurors for a college court, like jurors in state courts, should be selected at random from the electorate and not hand picked from among a list composed by persons who have expressed an interest in and capability to serve on a jury.

This contention is not a reflection on those who now comprise our judiciary, and particularly it isn't a reflection on the good intentions of the Attorney General. But it is held with the projected thought of what could happen at sometime in the future if a handful of individuals controlled the judicial system.

The democratic system, because of the freedoms which it guarantees, must be and is designed to prohibit "conceivable" actions which could be taken by persons less honest than those we want to control our government.

For that reason, it assumes that a dictator possibly could gain control of a particular area of government and procedes from their to design al areas to prohibit such action before that action can ever begin.

This same practice should be exercised in the judicial system of student government at the University of North Carolina.

We propose that if the jury System is instituted, members thereof should be picked from student rolls with no pre-determination of their interest in the judicial system and with no other requirements which would eliminate so much as one student from jury duty.

A juror's duty is to determine the guilt or innocence of the defendant on trial. We feel the purpose can be served without first putting the juror on trial to determine his interest in the judicial system.

To select jurors in any other fashion than the democratic way is to cheat our courts of an element which guarantees equality for all, and insures the administration of justice to the lowest mortal who comes to trial before a court.

The Picture –In Poetry

The jobless passed five million. And market prices fell. Ike said, "Wait 'til March, And then all will be well."

March came, and more declines. As employed numbers fell. Ike said, "Wait 'til April. And then all will be well."

Hooray For Book About A Parasite

By GAIL GODWIN

Hooray, hooray. There is another book out which says something. It is not a fiction book, it is a very-much non-fiction expose of a type of character who is wandering around in our society. A character who is very much alive. This is the parasite, of which there are too many. The title of the book which describes him and sends out a warrant for his immediate apprehension is: THE MAN ON YOUR BACK, by Wyatt Marrs, professor of sociology at the University of Oklahoma.

This is quite a change. Most books I have read written by sociologists deal with the plight of the poor unemployed welfare cases, the unfortunates who don't have anything because they don't work, and what society can do to provide these unfortunates with the things they need.

This sociologist does not spare his terms as he discusses all types of parasites—from the professional beggar to the family parasites to those who live by fraud. The subtitle of this little enlightened piece of sociology is: FREELOADERS, SPONGERS, AND OTHER PARASITES IN MODERN SOCIETY.

Marrs categorizes people into three relationships to society: There are the socially useful, the social parasites and the normally dependent. The first two categories pretty well explain themselves. The normally dependent, says Marrs, are those who, "on account of immaturity or some misfortune in adult life, are unable by their present efforts to maintain themselves."

The normally dependent person might be a child who is too young to work, the college student who is preparing to work, or the man or woman who is temporarily sick of injured, but who will return to work. All of these people have one thing in common—the element of PROMISE as to their usefulness.

The effects of parasitism are a degeneration of the personality of the parasite and an undermining of the posittive work done by the socially productive.

"Once he (the parasite) accepts his something-for-nothing status, his attitudes and behavior patterns are built up around and conditioned by the central fact of his social uselessness."

This in turn leads him to take a contemptuous attitude towards his more useful brother. "Even the beggars on the city streets despise those who help them," says Marrs.

Such a thought-provoking book makes one recognize more parasites in his immediate circles and puts him on guard against becoming one himself.

Liberty Is At Stake In Indonesia

By CURTIS GANS

Indonesia has been in the news spotlight lately due to a division between the communist and anti-communist factions in that island republic.

This island is resource rich, and for a change the anti-communist faction is the one doing the struggling for control. Recently, this erupted into armed conflict, which could on the supplying of arms by either of the two major powers, precipitate a major conflict.

The communists have been after the island republic for a long time. They have attacked the problem of securing the country under the communist control as they have done in many countries, by putting men in key but subordinate positions in government.

The difference in the present case is that somebody has decided to do something about the situation. As it stands now, however, it is doomed to be a fatal attempt.

Yet, if the cold war is ever to crease, and if war is to be avoided, then other countries will have to follow the lead of those in Sumatra who rebelled.

In doing so, they run the risk, as indeed they have done now, of kindling the cold war into a limited hot war, and the concept of a limited war is indeed a frightening one.

A limited war can erupt anyplace. It is the tinder keg which can explode into all-out war, and hence every country must be wary and on edge all the time.

Morever, a major conflict that this type of limited war could precipitate coud very well annihilate the entirely of the human race.

Yet, the slow gains that the communists are making throughout the world must be counteracted, for if they are not, individual freedom will be a by-word of the past.

Individual freedom is something that people who have it to a limited or large extent take often for granted, but without it, life is not worth living. However, many countries have taken it so much for granted that they do have for economic betterment and subjugation.

The people of the world must be shown that individualism and freedom is a religion of its own, just as strong as communism without the distraction of intolerance and forced servitude.

They must realize that this doctrine of freedom is intolerant to only one thing—non-freedom. Hence, within the free world there needs to be a little housecleaning before it can spread before all the people the clean banner of liberty.

Once it does it is in a position to stand up for what it believes. It should not provoke but it should make very clear that any advances toward the abridgement of human freedom will not be tolerated.

This may bring limited war, it may try men's nerves, it may result in total war, or it may after a period of time bring an end to the hostilities that currently beset the world.

Democracy must show backbone as well as the willingness to negotiate.

The fight for human survival has been on for a long time; it is time that the forces of freedom showed to the world that survival means more than bear existence.

The U. S. should lure countries through the promise of economic and military aid, and there should be no strings attatched.

However, what should be behind any gift is not the alliance that may be formed, not the nationalistic cause of keeping U. S. supremacy, not the gain it could bring the U. S., but the more altruistic goal of freedom for all in the world under either a united world representative government or under several self determining governments under no major power.

These victims of aggression must show the necessary backbone for freedom to survive.

MUSICIAN INTERVIEWED

Mr. Marterie: Portrait Of Leading Bandleader

By JONATHAN YARDLEY

Monday evening at a few minutes after seven a friend and I snuck in the back door of Memorial Hall, found a wandering saxophone player, and inquired about the possibilities of interviewing Ralph Marterie, whose band was due to play a two hour Pan Hellenic Concert that evening. The musician vanished into a dressing room for a moment and reappeared giving us the high sign. We hesitantly approached the door, from which we saw a rather short man doodling on a shiny trumpet.

"Mr. Marterie?" I said. He answered affirmatively, and the interview was on.

Finding no novel starting point, I decided to give him a quiz on the merits of rock and roll. His answer was brief and to the point—"It stinks."

Being one who shares this viewpoint, I was elated to find a co-believer. Mr. Marterie qualified his statement, however.

"I think of rock and roll as this rhythm and blues with the hillbilly kick. Rhythm and blues as such is great stuff—why? because it brought the beat back, it made the kids beat-conscious. Why, that's just what the bands wanted. Kids who used to sit out the fast stuff are on the floor now, and they want to hear the beat in concerts. When we get out there tonight, you're going to hear it."

This excited me, because I had noticed a trend among modern teen-age dancers to perform a step which can only be described as a walk. I made this observation, and wondered what he thought about it.

"Simple," he said. "These kids were never taught to dance. Can you dance?"

"No."

"I guess you've answered your own question. These kids can't dance, and they want to learn. They found this beat in rock and roll, and it's this beat that intrigues them. It doesn't make a difference what kind of music you play, as long as it's got the beat. The beat—that's what counts."

I wondered what he thought of progressive jazz.

"Great stuff. I like these guys, Dizzy Gillespie, all that stuff. But it's no good—the people can't dance to it, and that's what counts."

"But how about the musical content, doesn't that mean anything?"

"Sure—to a select group. But it's the people that count. They're the ones who make you or break you. You've got to play what the people want, or you won't make it. That's why you're going to hear the big beat tonight."

From the stage were coming some very swinging sounds, and I couldn't help but wonder what the guys in the band liked to play.

"Yeah, listen to that stuff. That's lousy, if you want to know what I think. I'll tell you why—the people don't want it. In my book, what the people don't want, doesn't make it."

I was pretty confused by now, but my friend came to my rescue with a question about his fondness for classical music.

"Classical music? I like it. Why, I played trumpet with the N.B.C. Symphony for five years. I think classical music is great stuff."

We were still too intrigued, however, by his views on progressive jazz and music in general, and my friend wanted to know whether the rise of progressive jazz had influenced the band's style, and if so, to what degree.

"Not at all," he said.

We were both a little astounded to find that this band could have been unseathed by one of the most important musical innovations of the past 50 years, and wondered why.

"Now you know perfectly well," he said a little dogmatically. "Progressive jazz doesn't sell. Like I told you, I think this jazz is great stuff. Why, if I had my own choice, I'd have my own combo and play progressive jazz in all those exclusive places where the prices are higher and the service is quicker but the whiskey is the same. But that's not what I'm out for. I want to make money in this business, and I want to stay on top, so I'm playing what the people want. It's the beat that counts, and I was quoted in Life and Time as saying that, so it must be pretty level. It's the beat that counts."

At this point we discovered that it was already quarter of eight, and that the musicians were beginning to get set for the evening's work. We hastily thanked Ralph Marterie for his consideration, and left him to prepare for his concert. We also left knowing a little more of what makes a band leader click, and what he wants from music.

The concert itself was interesting, particularly in the light of the above interview. Marterie insisted on playing a tasteless number called "I'm a College Man" twice in the first half alone, a number which could only be called rock and roll. And a lot of the arrangements had a little Kentonish flavor to them, and a tenor sax soloist owed a lot to Lennie Niehaus. Which way Ralph?

Office Cat

The loquacious lady met the great lecturer the next morning, and at once rushed right into the subject.

Lady—So sorry not to have heard your lecture last night. I know I missed a treat; everybody says it was splendid.

Lecturer—I wonder how they found out. The lecture, you know, was postponed.

Freddy, with a determined look on his small countenance, marched into the front room and up to the ardent suitor of his pretty sister.

Freddy—What's them? (thrusting out a grimy hand full of small white objects).

Young man—What are those? (smiling) Those are beans.

Freddy—He does know 'em, maw. (triumphantly running into the adjoining room) You said he didn't know beans.—The Durham Sun.

ALICE RILEY—Internationally known soprano Alice Riley will appear at Chapel Hill.

Alice Riley, Soprano Will Give Recital Here

Alice Riley, dramatic soprano,, will present a recital in Hill Music Hall, Tuesday, March 18, at 8 p.m. Sponsored by the Department of Music, the program will be open to the general public at no charge.

Miss Riley first rose to national prominence when selected as "Woman Singer of the Year" at the Chicagoland Music Festival in 1954. Two years later she received even greater recognition as "Singer of the Year" in the annual contest of the National Association of Teachers of Singing.

She has sung the Beethoven Ninth Symphony and Verdi's Requiem in the Grant Park Summer Series in Chicago and has performed Handel's Messiah and Mendelssohn's Elijah with both the Swedish Choral Society and the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. She is currently being auditioned by the San Francisco and Metropolitan Opera Companies.

Miss Riley will open her Chapel Hill recital with three Purcell arias: "When I am Laid in Earth," "If Music be the Food of Love," and "There's not a Swain of the Plain." Other selections on the program will be "Separazione" by Sgambati, Sibella's "Non ho parole," Three Strauss lieder, "Traum durch die Dammerung," "Cacilie," and "Morgen," Hugo Wolf's "Ich hab in Penna," "Air di Lia" from Debussy's "L'enfante Prodigue," Grieg's "With a Waterlily," Duke's "Central Park at Dusk," Menotti's "O Black Swan," Shaw's "Heffle Cuckoo Fair" and McArthur's "Night."

Accompanying Miss Riley will be Lionel Lile, her accompanist for six years.

School Of Medicine Slates Annual Alumni Celebration

The annual Alumni Day of the UNC School of Medicine will be held Friday, March 21.

Class reunions have been scheduled for the classes of 1908, 1918, 1928, 1938 and 1948.

Physicians who can have been urged to come to Chapel Hill Thursday, March 20, in order that they may attend the Phi Chi Medical fraternity annual lecture in the Clinic Auditorium at 4 p.m. This year the lecture will be given by Dr. Michael Balint of London. His subject will be "Opening Moves in Psychotherapy."

The regular alumni program gets underway with registration at 9:30 a. m. Friday in the Clinic Auditorium. The remainder of the morning will be devoted to clinical conferences and discussions by the various departments of the School of Medicine.

The annual luncheon and business meeting of the Medical Alumni Association will be held at the Carolina Inn at 12:30 p. m. Dr. Milton Clark of Goldsboro, president of the association, will preside.

A scientific program will be held during the afternoon up to 4:30 p. m. At that time a presentation of a group portrait will be made to the School of Medicine by Dr. Francis M Clark , class of '20 who now lives in New Jersey. The portrait is of Dr. I. H. Maning, Dr. C. S. Mangum, Dr. William MacNider and Dr. J. B. Bullitt. The portrait was painted by Francis V. Kughler, who will be present for the presentation.

A social hour will be held at the Carolina Inn at 6 p. m. followed by the annual dinner at 7 p. m. The main address of the evening will be presented by UNC Chancellor William B. Aycock. Also speaking will be Dr. Paul F. Whitaker of Kinston, president of the Medical Foundation of North Carolina.

As in past years a number of distinguished service awards will be made. The receivers of these awards are not made public prior to the night of the banquet.

A special program has been arranged for the wives of the returning physicians. They will take part in the luncheon, social hour and dinner. During the afternoon the wives of the doctors will hear a lecture on flower arrangements and a demonstration by Mrs. Cobett Howard of Goldsboro.

BOARD TO MEET

The Bipartisan Selections Board will meet Wednesday, March 18, from 3 to 7 p.m. in Woodhouse Conference room to interview those girls who are interested in running for a seat on the Women's Honor Council. There will be three positions filled in the spring elections. Those interested should sign up at Woodhouse Conference room at Graham Memorial.

FRESHMAN GRIDDER—Sonny Folkomer, star halfback for the Tar Babies last fall has been looking good in spring practice. He will play in the annual Blue White Game on March 22.

Frosh Please Tatum; Press Veterans For Jobs

By ELLIOTT COOPER

With spring football practice drawing to an end, head coach Jim Tatum expressed his pleasure at the performances of the freshmen trying out for the varsity squad. Tatum commented that the practice is moving along in high gear, but due to the delay in starting he is having to push things a little to complete the session so that the boys who want to go out for baseball and track can start as soon as possible.

Frosh Set Pace

Tatum singled out several of the frosh for special praise. Linemen Rip Hawkins, Fred Muler, Robbie Smith, Jim Crabtree, and John Schroeder have all turned in good performances in the afternoon sessions on the Navy Field. Frank Riggs and Jim Rice, fullbacks in Bud Carson's Tar Baby lineup last fall, have been switched to end during the spring workout.

In the backfield, other members of the freshman class are showing up the veterans. Quarterback Russ Hollers, and halfbacks Sonny Folckomer and Max Sloop are setting a stiff pace for the rest of the backs to follow.

Blue-White Game

Next Monday Tatum plans to split the squad into Blue and White teams for the upcoming game to be held in Kenan Stadium a week from this coming Saturday. Tatum stated that there will be six quarters in the Blue-White contest, but only the first four will determine the final score. With the addition of two extra quarters, Tatum will be able to get a better look at all of the boys out for the team.

Aside from the usual sprains and bruises there are three players who will miss the rest of the spring practice. Veteran end Takey Crist has been sidelined with a torn ligament in his knee. Tom Hunnicut was knocked out of the practice sessions by a fractured clavicle. Jim Davis is recovering from a calcium deposit in his right leg.

Way Signs

Milwaukee (AP) - Catcher-outfielder Buddy Lee Way, 20, a sophomore at Elon College, was signed Wednesday by the Milwaukee Braves to a 1958 contract with the Yakima, Wash., club of the Club B Northwest League.

The 6-2, 185-pound Way comes from Liberty, N. C., bats and throws right handed. He will report to the Braves' minor league training camp at Waycross, Ga., next week.

Sophomores Brighten Future ACC Basketball

By RUSTY HAMMOND

The 1957-58 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball season has produced a number of promising young sophomore stars in many of the schools around the league. Many of these comparatively young players meant a great deal to their respective teams this season, and any number of them could blossom forth in future years into the elite class of "best in the nation."

Clemson's Tigers built their entire attack around three outstanding sophs this season, and it paid off many times. The Bengals upset mighty Maryland in a regular season game. The trio consists of George Krajack, Dutch Shample, and Walt Gibbons. Gibbons was a one-man wrecking crew for Clemson when the Tigers forced Carolina to the limit in the opening game of the ACC Tourney.

Duke, who played its' "Iron Five" all the way in most of its games, has only Larry Bateman and Jack Boyd to look forward to. Bateman performed well in the Dixie Classic.

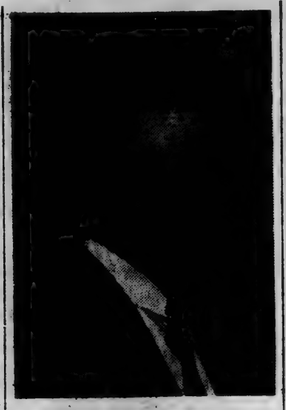
Sophs Pace Terps

Champion Maryland came up with three terrific sophs in Jerry Bechtle, Al Bunge, and Charlie McNeil. McNeil was hot as a pistol all during the conference tourney, especially against Carolina. 6'8" Bunge provided Coach Bud Millikan with the coveted "big man" he has always wanted. Millikan remarked that with the presence of such a man, the Terps could go all the way. They did.

State sophs who shone included Don Gallagher and Dan Englehardt. Gallagher started most of the season, and Englehardt came on strong in the latter stages of the year.

South Carolina produced three fine sophomore performers—Mike Calahan, Walt Hudson, and Fred Luigs. Calahan was especially helpful to the ailing Gamecocks in a building year.

Virginia Has Adkins



The Virginia Cavaliers have right to be proud of soph Paul Adkins, who became the team quarterback in his initial year and was instrumental in the Cavaliers' great upset of Duke. Paul Haner is also a man to watch, as he almost beat Maryland single-handed in the opening round of the ACC Tourney.

Wake Forest had a bad year but Coach Bones McKinney's cry of "wait till next year" has a true ring about it. Four sophs performed brilliantly for the Deacs—Twig Wiggins, Dave Budd, George Ritchie and Charlie Forte. Budd did especially well, and was mentioned prominently on the all-ACC selections.

Tar Heel Sophomores

At Carolina, four sophomores shared the load all season, and all look like real comers for next season. Harvey Salz, the great 'stone face," stamped himself as one of the slickest guards in the league. Dick Kepley developed rapidly and improved with every game from the onset of the year. Lee Shaffer proved a great asset as another big man to help out Pete Brennan under the boards. Ray Stanley was the surprise of the conference tournament with his great performances in the Tar Heels' three games. Stanley was named to the second team of the all-Tourney selections.

With these four excellent prospects, the return of York Larese, and a promising freshman team coming up, the Tar Heel outlook for next season is indeed bright.

Trackmen Move To Open Air

By DAVE WIBLE

With the conference indoor championships over, and the temperature rising, Carolina track men have moved outside to a new medium, cinders, to begin preparations for the fast approaching outdoor season.

The season will open March 25 when the varsity and freshmen meet State in Raleigh. Bad weather has held up workouts so far and the team, according to Coach Dale Ransom, is just getting its feet off of the ground.

The immediate job ahead for Ranson and his staff is to add to the power of the team especially in the field events. In the conference indoor championships, Carolina placed second to Maryland which is very strong in that catagory.

"We are looking for boys who can stand up to my '3-6' item," said Ranson, "Boys who have confidence and courage, and are willing to get into condition. A sport like track offers to an athlete a grand opportunity and a tremendous challenge to ambitious and determined athletes."

Ranson went on to point out that fact that experience is not necessary for track like other sports." We expect a boy to accept his shade of responsibility, but we do not require a lot of experience. Many of the boys who come to us could not quite make it in other sports but turn out to be fine trackmen."

"One of the main advantages of track," Ranson said, "Is the fact that a boy can see his progress by simply looking at a watch or measurement, and there is no limit for his ability. All it takes is regular and conscientious participation in the daily practice sessions for steady improvements."

The team practices on Fetzer Field from three o'clock on and anyone interested would be welcomed with open arms.

Maryland To Meet Temple In Eastern Regionals

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Maryland, Manhattan and Dartmouth, winners of opening NCAA basketball tournament play at New York Tuesday night, move into Eastern Regional competition at the Charlotte Coliseum Friday night, along with Temple.

Maryland plays Temple in the 7:30 p. m. opener, Manhattan following against Dartmouth.

The starting time has been advanced to 7 p. m. Saturday for the consolation game between the Friday losers. The championship game follows, with the winner going on to join three other regional winners in the national finals at Lexington, Ky., a week later.

The Temple Owls, riding a 23-game winning streak, ranked fifth in this week's final Associated Press poll, one notch above Maryland.

Manhattan and Dartmouth were unranked, but Manhattan upset the nation's No. 1 team, West Virginia, 89-84, at New York Tuesday night.

Dartmouth, the Ivy League champion, trimmed Connecticut, 75-64, and Maryland's Atlantic Coast Conference champs blasted Boston College, 86-63, to win regional berths. The games are 11,300 sellouts each night, the tickets having been disposed of last September.

Kiwanis Classic

basketball seniors from North Carolina and South Carolina began two-a-day drills yesterday in Charlotte for their Kiwanis Classic game at the Coliseum Saturday afternoon.

The teams got down to work after most of Tuesday was taken up by uniform fittings, physical checks and a trip to the Coliseum to see the Charlotte Clippers win their hockey playoff game over New Haven.

Blackboard sessions and morning and afternoon drills occupied the cakers Wednesday. They also visited children at the Spastics Hospital, the beneficiary profiting from the game.

To Parents, Big Brothers And Grandmas

Have you ever noticed how, most mornings in the Intimate Bookshop, the floor has a tendency to be decorated with small people busily sampling our delectable wares?

'Taint an accident, McGee!

We sincerely believe that a great many people of our generation were permanently deprived of the lasting joy of good reading by misguided teachers and old fashioned librarians, who threw an aura of mystery and taboo over the easy natural world of books.

We want children in our shop to feel among friends and equals. We want them to laugh out loud, or cry if they feel like it. Most of all we want them to know that the doors to wonderland are open, and you don't have to whisper or tiptoe or keep your hair parted down the middle to enjoy it.

So we fill our children's corner with the gayest, most colorful books we can find, and we try to keep the price down to the place where the child has a chance to get a book of his very own every so often.

Bring a child into the shop next time you come by, and don't worry about it. You'll both have a good time in Chapel Hills' famous old cultural emporium!

Co-Rec Volleyball Tournament To Get Underway Tonite At 7

The annual co rec volleyball tournament will begin tonight with a total to 16 teams competing in the fun filled affair.

Teams are comprised of three boys and three girls and will play signle elimination. The event will cover two nights, the finals coming next Tuesday. The play will start at 7:00 and the intramural department has asked that all participants be at the gym at 6:50.

Fraternities, sororities, dorms and other groups have entered the tournament. Pairings were drawn by lot. A trophy will be awarded to the winning team.

The play will follow regular volleyball rules with two exceptions. The games will be played on a 20 minute time basis, and the ball must be hit alternately by a boy then a girl or vise versa.

Basketball Roundup

By MURRAY ROSE

Manhattan College's resounding upset of West Virginia's No. 1 ranked Mountaineers still was the talk of the basketball world as the National Invitation Tournament joined the post-season jamboree with the opening of its 21st meet Thursday night.

Coaches of underdog teams in the NIT and elsewhere gleefully pointed to unranked Manhattan's 89-84 conquest of West Virginia Tuesday night in the NCAA's Eastern Regional eliminations and told their players "you can do it too."

NIT history is spiced with championships won by Cinderella teams and it wouldn't be too surprising if defending champion Bradley and topseeded Dayton, the co-favorites in the 12-team Madison Square Garden tourney in New York were knocked off.

That can't happen—if it does—until next Tuesday at the earliest, however. Dayton (23-3), Bradley (20-6), St. Bonaventure (19-4), and Utah (20-6) were all seeded and drew first round byes. Dayton and Bradley don't play until Tuesday night.

The NIT's opening doubleheader Thursday matches St. John's of Brooklyn (16-6) and Butler (16-9), and St. Joseph's of Philadelphia (17-8) and St. Peter's of Jersey City (20-3).

Doubleheaders Saturday afternoon and night and Tuesday night will cut the field down to semi-final size. The semifinals are slated for Thursday night, March 20, and the finals for Saturday afternoon, March 22.

Here's how the schedule of first rounders and quarter-finals goes after tonight's openers:

Saturday afternoon, March 15—Niagara (18-6) vs. Xavier of Cincinnati (15-11), and Utah vs. Butler-St. John's winner.

Easterns Today

Carolina's undefeated swimming team competes today in the Eastern Regional Championships at Annapolis, Maryland. The best teams in the east, including Army, Carolina, and defending champion Yale, will all be on hand to compete.

The Tar Heel mermen swept through 12 straight victories this season, and extended their winning streak to 21 over the past two seasons.

The big guns for Carolina should be Brent Nash, Tony Schiffman, Mac Mahaffey, Bill Zickgraf, Walt Rose, Bill Roth, and diver Ned Meekins.

Shoemaker OK

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Jockey Willie Shoemaker suffered nothing more than torn ligaments in his left leg in his fall Tuesday at Santa Anita race track, a hospital checkup disclosed Wednesday.

He flies tonight to Gulfstream Park in Florida. He won't ride for a few days, but will be accepting mounts by the weekend, his agent, Harry Silbert, said.

Shoemaker, three times national riding champion, was thrown in the fourth race and run over by two horses. An X-ray examination at a nearby hospital disclosed that no bones were broken.

"I was awful lucky from what they tell me," Shoemaker said.

"It sure could have been a lot worse.

"I feel fine," he added, " just a little stiff, that's all."

World In Brief

Vanguard Sits

Cape Canaveral, Fla., March 12. (AP)—Danger of freezing the inner works of its intricate Vanguard satellite rocket stymied the Navy's launching plans today. It was also learned that the pyramiding mechanical woes may stall any early launching.

Those familiar with the workings of the 72-foot rocket said the prolonged attempts to fire Vanguard have led to more complications—electrical troubles and metal corrosion.

The highly strung Vanguard is affected easily by relatively minor difficulties because of its closely-drawn design.

The low temperature of one propellant, liquid oxygen, stopped today's launching because of the danger that it would freeze interior valves and fittings.

Anxious as it is to fire Vanguard, the Navy dared not stretch the amount of time it kept the dangerously unstable liquid oxygen in the Vanguard's tanks. Sometimes called "lox," liquid oxygen boils at 290 degrees below zero.

Big Three Agrees

Manila, March 12. (AP)—The Western Big Three foreign ministers today agreed on the diplomatic spadework they insist must precede a summit conference with the Russians.

Secretary of State Dulles, British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd and French Foreign Minister Christian Pineau got together on a series of procedures which they will recommend to other nations of the North Atlantic Alliance.

If the other allies go along, the plan for diplomatic preparations will be proposed soon to the Soviet Union.

A U. S. spokesman said Dulles, Lloyd and Pineau reaffirmed in a 90-minute conference that they will continue to insist on an East-West foreign ministers meeting as part of the preliminaries. Other diplomatic negotiations also would be held before the summit conference of heads of government.

Soviet Fear

London, March 12 (AP)-Moscow radio said tonight an accidental atom bomb explosion in the United States might make some jumpy American official order a nuclear attack on the Soviet Union.

The idea was raised in a Greek language broadcast commenting on the U. S. plane that accidentally dropped an atom bomb at Florence, S. C.

The commentator warned that one of these days such an incident could touch off a nuclear blast, despite Washington's reassurance that it couldn't happen.

"This will be terrible, not only because it will destroy many houses and kill a large number of people," the commentator said.

"Before the identity of the aircraft is discovered some irresponsible senior official in the Department of Defense can give orders for an atomic counter blow."

Irish Cops

Philadelphia, March 12 (AP)-A Philadelphia radio station (WPEN) had a real brain wave for a St. Patrick's Day feature—get 15 to 20 policemen with true Irish brogues to record the hourly announcements.

But the station had to give up the idea, a spokesman said today. For contrary to a popular belief that big cities are loaded with Irish cops talking in thick begorra accents, the station said it couldn't find even a dozen policemen who would fill the bill.

Nuclear Bomb Does No Harm

By AL LANIER

FLORENCE, S. C. (AP)—The first community ever known to survive an atomic bomb drop unscathed got the red carpet treatment Wednesday from the Air Force.

The bomb did not set off a nuclear explosion when it drilled into the earth in a sparsely inhabited section five miles east of here Tuesday afternoon. But the TNT charge which triggers the nuclear device damaged six homes and a church and injured six persons, none seriously.

High ranking officers sloshed through ankle-deep mud of the Mars Bluff community in surveying damage done by the errant A-bomb that dropped accidentally from a B47 jet bomber.

Maj. Gen. Charles B. Dougher, commander of the 38th Air Division at Hunter AFB, Ga., where the jet bomber was stationed, apologized at a news conference to the more than 30,000 Florence area residents. The apology, issued in behalf of the Air Force, was accepted by Mayor David McLeod at City Hall.

Jury System Incorporated Into Dual Honor Council

By PRINGLE PIPKIN

The jury system and councils of five were incorporated into the present dual Honor Councils by the Student Legislature, which voted 26-3 for this measure last night.

The bill was considered and accepted article by article. Before the bill as a whole was passed Denton Lotz SP urged that the bill be defeated and that a special committee from the Legislature be set up to consider the bill.

He claimed that the Legislature should investigate other systems before adopting any one and said he was "amazed with the quickness with which we have dealt with this problem."

Pat Adams (SP) withdrew his bill to let The Daily Tar Heel retain its profits rather than return them to the General Surplus Fund.

He explained that the Student Body Attorney-General had said the bill would not be consitutional. Adams revealed that at the present time procedures are now being drawn up to allow all student organizations to keep their profits.

By special orders the Legislature passed Lucy Forsyth's (UP) resolution "urging all students on campus to participate in all events of the Carolina Symposium."

The second article of the resolution urges "members of the faculty to excuse and transfer classes whenever possbile at times of Symposium speeches so that students will have the opportunity to attend morning sessions."

Roger Foushee's (SP) resolutions to ratify two declarations of the US National Student Association were returned to committee at his request because he could not be present at the meeting last night.

The procedure committee, which has determined the procedure to be used by the juries and councils, presented its report to the Student Legislature.

The Legislature will take action on the report at the next meeting.

The Honor Council revision bill which passed last night provides for a jury of nine with two permanent jurors and seven rotating jurors.

The rotating jurors will be chosen by the Honor System Commission and the permanent jurors by the Student Body President.

The jury will render verdicts, and a council of five will determine the sentence .The council will be elected by the students.

"A two-thirds vote, taken of the jury by secret ballot, shall be required for conviction."

"Violations of the Campus Code and Social rules not properly under the jurisdiction of the House Councils and Dance Committee shall be tried by the five members of the Women's Council and three other women selected from a five—member group drawn from the Women's Residence Council.

"This eight member council shall hear appeals from House Council decisions," the bill states.

Local History Dept. Receives Large Grant

Fletcher M. Green, Kenan Professor and chairman of the UNC Department of History, has announced a grant of $40,000 made by The Richardson Foundation of Greensboro to be used in the study and research into the role of personal liberty and individual initiative in American society.

The Department will set up an "Institute for Studies in American Enterprise" that will supervise research centering around the role of individual initiative and private enterprise in the development of American society, and of how the Americans used their freedom and opportunity. The grant will provide for a two-year period of study and research.

If additional funds from other sources become available, the study would increasingly hold out significant and exciting possibilities in the understanding of American liberty.

Body Moves Meet Time To Monday

The Selections Board which will screen candidates for editor of The Daily Tar Heel will meet Monday at 2 p. m. in the Grail Room of Graham Memorial according to Student Body President Sonny Evans.

Refreshments Will Be Free At Pine Room

UNC students and their dates will be served free coffee and cookies in the Pine Room, tonight from 8-12. In addition, the "Three Deuces," a combo from Raleigh, will provide music for dancing.

The refreshments will be supplied by George W. Prillaman, director of student dining halls. GMAB's Recreation Committee, headed by Mary Moore Mason, and Dance Committee, headed by Gaylord Cowan, are sponsoring the entertainment Friday night.

Benny Thomas, GMAB president, said yesterday that the event scheduled for tonight is an attempt to provide a gathering place for UNC students. It has been suggested, he said, that an arrangement of this sort be included in the plans for a new student union building.

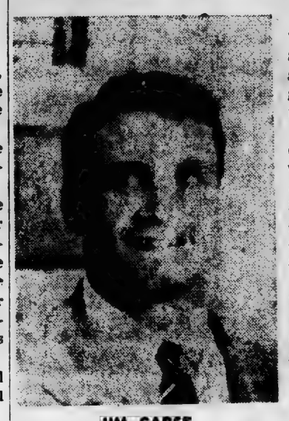
SP Opens Its Headquarters At Di Office

The Student Party campaign headquarters is now open in the Di office on third floor, New West. Office hours are 1 to 3 p. m. daily except Tuesday when the office will be open from 4 to 6 p. m.

Student Party campaign coordinator David Mathews has urged all SP candidates for class offices and student legislature seats to place their printing orders for campaign literature as soon as possible.

Due to the fact they must be ordered out-of-town, all photographs for engravings or "cuts" must be in the office by Monday.

Auditions Of Musicians Set Saturday



The annual auditions for the Edgar Stillman Kelly scholarship award designed to provide assistance for talented young people who would not be able to continue their musical education without financial aid will be held Saturday at UNC.

Dr. Wilton Mason of the UNC Music Department faculty is chairman of the judges' committee for this event which is sponsored each year by the National Federation of Music Clubs. He announced that the auditions will be held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the auditorium of Hill Music Hall in Chapel Hill.

Any person of pre-college age who is a member of a Junior Music Club in North Carolina may try out for one of the scholarships. At the auditions eligible students in any instrumental or vocal field will present a 20 minute program, played or sung from memory.

On the basis of the performances the judges will choose a state winner who will then compete in a regional contest. The 1958 scholarships will be given in the Southeastern Region including Alabama, Delaware, the District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, Tennessee, West Virginia and Viriginia.

Last Minute Changes Made In Y Conference

JIM CARSE
Conference Leader

Plans for the Y Conference "Tours through the Wilds of Creation" at Camp Bricks have been slightly changed, according to Margaret Daughtridge, co-chairman of the Y Conference Committee.

Instead of beginning today as originally planned, the conference will begin tomorrow at 2:30 p.m., and the cost will now be only $7.50 for meals, room and transportation, and $6.50 if the student does not eat Saturday lunch at the conference.

The day was changed because of the many scheduled tests for Saturday morning which would keep students from going Friday. All students who are planning to go have been urged to register at the Y office by 4 p.m. today.

"The Conference Committee feels that this will be a most exciting conference and will provide a very meaningful experience to all participants," said Margaret Daughtridge.

Jim Carse, a director of the YMCA, will be the leading speaker. He will begin the first session of the conference speaking on "Artistic Creation in the Wilderness of Doubt." This session will be a critical examination of the world through sculpture and contemporary paintings, studied through the showing of slides.

Carse will also be in charge of the concluding session of the conference, "To Find a Home in Ceaseless Creation."

The worship service led by Eve McClatchey after this last session will be the climax of the conference.

Other attractions of the conference will be the reading presentation of "Darkness at Noon" by Koester and the dramatic presentation of "Cry the Beloved Country" by Paton.

Davidson Suggests

A tax deduction write-off on equipment purchases by business firms was suggested as one aid to counteracting the current drop in U. S. economic activity in a talk here this week by Prof. Sidney Davidson.

Davidson, who is professor of accounting at Johns Hopkins University, told a UNC Seminar in Economics and Business how the United States compares with other nations who have made efforts to speed up capital investment.

In a recent study tour of Sweden, Denmark, Holland and England, Professor Davidson observed accelerated depreciation systems in operation. "The United States has less generous provisions in this area than any of these four countries," he commented.

A mild acceleration depreciation allowance which went into effect in 1954 may have contributed to the U. S. economic boom during the past four years," Davidson said. "This move encouraged purchase of capital goods during 1954-57, which means that the current demand for these goods is now lessened."

Discussing the cycles of economic growth and lag, Davidson said that another boom during the 1960's is "almost inevitable." But he also noted the inability of economists to predict such changes accurately "because the purchase of capital goods tends to be 'chunky,' with most companies tending toward one large expansion rather than repeated small purchases."

Davidson was director of research for the American Accounting Association during 1956, and has served as consultant on accounting for governmental agencies. He is the co-author of a basic accounting text, "Fundamentals of Accounting."

Curtis Gans Enters Race For Tar Heel Editorship

CURTIS GANS
Candidate

Curtis Gans, junior from Waynesville announced his candidacy yesterday for the office of editor of The Daily Tar Heel.

Gans has worked over two years on the paper in the capacities of reporter, columnist, night editor, and proof reader.

Gans said that he felt that the paper ought to be "interesting, educational, and perhaps most of all provocative."

He listed the following plans for the improvement of the student publication:

1) EDITORIAL ASPECT:

"The editor has a responsibility to facts, and hence the news and editorial ends of the paper must go hand in hand. The editor should sidestep no issues, and should provide a true forum of opinion on the edit page, where all sides of a problem can be presented.

"The editor should draw from the resources of the University, including the faculty, students, and library in order to present a more comprehensive view of any particular issue.

"The editor should undertake various studies and investigations into aspects of college life. With the editorship goes the responsibility to print all signed letters.

"There ought to be a more lively make-up on page two. As this is a campus paper, the editor has responsibility to devote at least 50 per cent of his editorial space over a year's period to campus events. He also is charged with the responsibility to put the campus in focus with the rest of the world. Page Two should be a marketplace of ideas and interest.

2) NEWS ASPECT:

"Implementation of a stringer system coupled with a news tip system will enable the Tar Heel to more fully cover the campus.

"The Tar Heel ought to have more and varied features on campus life, on student and faculty leaders, on things of historical interest, and on things going on in the university which may not make news stories, but should be contained within the paper. The Tar Heel should cover more fully happenings of smaller groups.

3) SPORTS ASPECT:

"The past coverage of sports has been adequate, but intra-murals and minor sports should in the future get more play than they are currently getting.

4) BUSINESS ASPECT:

"Circulation of newspapers on campus must be improved so that all people who are currently not getting papers regularly do so. An attempt to get revenue by subscription to the 40,000 living almuni and 7,000 parents, who are currently not even asked whether they want the paper should be undertaken.

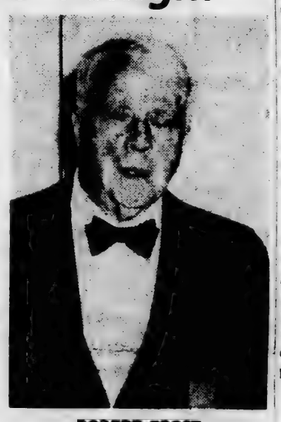
Robert Frost Appears In Talk Here Tonight



Robert Frost, famous American poet makes his 12th annual appearance at the University of North Carolina tonight. He will read and discuss some of his work for an open-invitation audience at 8 p. m. in Hill Hall.

Frost plans, in addition, to meet informally with English majors students and interested persons Saturday at noon in 103 Bingham Hall.

While Frost was visiting the British Isles this past year, he was presented honorary degrees from the Universities of Oxford, Cambridge, and Edinburg. Frost also holds an honorary degree from the University of North Carolina.

A pungent wit and philosophical observances have made Frost a tradition on this campus and a favorite with audiences everywhere. His appearances here in the past have attracted large crowds.

The volumes of Frost's work contain hundreds of poems which are well-known favorities. Frost, who finds the universal in the particular and the timeless in the timely, will read and discuss these poems tonight.

FRANK WETZEL CONVICTED

SANFORD, March 13 (AP) — Convicted cop killer Frank Edward Wetzel, already sentenced to life for gunning down one North Carolina highway patrolman, was convicted in Lee Superior Court Thursday night of murdering another state trooper.

The jury of 11 men and one woman, which began hearing testimony early last week, returned its verdict after an hour and 43 minutes of deliberation. The jury recommended life imprisonment, which sentence was passed immediately by Judge George M. Fountain.

Rifle Team Continues Competition

The Naval ROTC Rifle Team here continues its current competition with student service rifle groups. In its latest competition, the group placed third among eight teams entered in the North Carolina ROTC Invitational Rifle Tournament.

A UNC team member, Faustin E. Wirkus of Baltimore, Md., placed second in individual scoring. Team captain is Edward W. Butchart of Greensboro.

Three other members are Michael L. Collins, High Point; William H. Pope, Macon, Ga.; and Allie A. Hutchison, Winston-Salem. M/Sgt. William Lanier, USMC, an instructor in the UNC Naval Science Department, serves as team coach.

Reservation Reminder Is Issued Here

Men students have been urged by the Housing Office to make their room reservations for summer and fall sessions.

Room reservation deposits must be made with the University Cashier in South Building not later than April 22. Men are reminded that a room reseved for the summer does not entitle them to the same space in the fall. Room rent for the fall semester must be paid by September 1. Deposits for the fall room will be $10.

For the summer session double rooms will be available in Joyner (first sesion only), Old West, Grimes and Manly. Connor will be open for graduate men only. Rent for these rooms will be $20 per session.

Single room will be available in Steele, Ruffin and Mangum. The rent for these rooms will be $30 per session.

DURING SYMPOSIUM

Administrators Urge Student Attendance

The Carolina Symposium on Public Affairs has announced the receipt of a letter signed by Chancellor William B. Aycock, Henry T. Clark, administrator of Health Affairs, and Dean of the Faculty James L. Godfrey. The letter is to encourage professors to stress attendance at Symposium affairs to their students.

It states: "The coming week of March 16-21 is Carolina Symposium Week. The University will have on its campus a large number of distinguished and highly qualified speakers. The Symposium Committee has arranged an impressive and attractive program which will be published in this week's Campus Calendar.

"This week should be a memorable one in the experience of students and faculty, would you be kind enough to encourage your students to attend the sessions and to take part in the program? You are, of course, most cordially invited and it is hoped that by our full participation the University can draw the maximum benefit from the several attractions of the week.

CHANCELLOR AYCOCK
Letter Writer

"Needless to say, this must not be construed as a plea for the dismissal of classes. It is an encouragement of participation during the free time of the individual."

The letter was signed by the three administrators and distributed to all faculty members. Students are advised to make their own arrangements with their individual instructors as far as attendance at Symposium affairs are concerned.

IDC Votes Election Change In Move To Aid Continuity

By ROY LUCAS

A change in the by-laws of the Inter-Dormitory Council calling for the election of IDC representatives in the spring instead of the fall was approved at a meeting Wednesday night.

Tom Walters, president of IDC, said the reason for the change was to lend continuity to the IDC program.

IDC representatives are nominiated by men living in the dormitories.

Dormitory elections for this year will be held on April 1 with campus elections.

Walters has urged the dormitory men to consider carefully whom they wish to have represent them on the IDC because of an important year foreseen.

President Walters and other IDC officers will go out of office on March 26 when their term of offices ends.

IDC elections proper will be held on that date. At that time there will be a complete change of administration in the IDC.

Between now and then, all nominations for IDC offices should be submitted to Jerry Barnes, 211 Joyner, or a member of his committee.

Speaking of the Grail Intramural Jamboree, which was held last week as an effort to get dormitory and fraternity men together in athletic events, the IDC president said he was pleased by the Jamboree effort.

"Coach Walter Rabb, head of the intramural department, was pleased with the work of Paul Woodard, intramurals chairman for IDC and IDC representative to the intramural department," Walters said.

Walters said the annual Awards Night has been tentatively set for April 9.

At this time, both outgoing and incoming administrations will be present and awards will be given to the outstanding dormitories, intramural winners and individuals.

Neil Bender, chairman of the Awards Committee, announced he would call for a meeting of his committee as soon as possible. He said he would let them know about the meeting through the mail.

The Circle 9, girls from Chi Omega sorority, sang after Wednesday's IDC meeting and were called back for a number of encores.

Charlie Sloan Lists Opinions On Operating Daily Tar Heel

Charlie Sloan stated yesterday some of his views and qualifications for editor of The Daily Tal Heel. Sloan recently announced he is a candidate for the position.

His policy of news gathering and relations with the staff were the things Sloan elaborated on in his statement. He wants an improved method of campus coverage and a training program for new staffers.

Sloan's statement said in part:

"The editor of The Daily Tar Heel is the head of a complex organization. The best editor should be impartial as to what he thinks the best feature in the paper is. He is not editing the paper to suit himself, but to please the entire student body.

"I am not enough of an idealist to think that the entire paper can be molded to fit everybody's tastes, but I do think everyone who reads the paper should be pleased with some part of what they read.

"The editor should consider two areas of the paper—the content and the internal organization.

I've thought of several plans for each of these areas. These plans have occurred to me during my own association with the paper, and are the result of my own observations.

"To carry out these rather ambitious programs I've worked out a few plans for the internal organization of the paper, including a dorm stringer system similar to one I suggested last year, daily meetings of the editorial and business staffs, and training of new staffers.

"Since my freshman year I have held, or substituted in, every capacity on the newspaper, with the exception of advertising. This over-all knowledge is important to an editor; it helps him understand the problems of the people working with him to put out a good newspaper."

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Beverly Heaton, Ann Morgan, Marianna Miller, Lois Webb, Edith Metcalf, Elizabeth Howell, and Elizabeth Sojourner, and Robert Wellons, Mayson Morris, Dabney Caddington, Robert Knott, Mart Dowd, Jerry Stokes, Wayne Venters, Philip Kenny, Bruce Miller, John Reeves, Ted Boden, Bill Derreh, Joe Hewitt, Barton Davidian, Dean Culbreth, James Bourroughs, Mike Widoff, Paul Fuller, Richard Melton, Ed Lively, Clark Jones, Ralph Carmodo, Malcolm Slifkin, Henry Hendy, Tom Fisher, Bill Hodges, Robert Walker, Seamon Gottlieb and Richard Weiner.

Accidental Bombing Could Have Been Tragic Incident

Despite its seriousness, there's a factor to be thankful for in the dropping of an unloaded atomic bomb near Florence, S.C., on Tuesday.

That factor is that the accident occurred on United States soil and not in the tinderbox of Western Europe.

Still, however, the Russians have capitalized on the incident for purposes of propaganda, and warned the world Wednesday night that World War II could be touched off by such an occurrence.

The pitch, of course, was for immediate East-West summit talks held along Russian lines—a meeting which the United States has refused to agree upon without indications that positive good would come out of the talks.

East-West agreement in such a conference, a broadcast asserted, "would result in getting these planes which carry atomic and nuclear weapons back on the ground."

Well, we doubt that. The Russians are known for their ability to walk out of important conferences, and noteworthy among these are disarmament conferences in London and the United Nations. It's doubtful that their attitude has changed.

Whatever would be agreed in a summit meeting, it is ridiculous to think that the United States, at the height of the cold war, would ground her atom-packed airplanes and submit to a bow and arrow armament to which the Kremlin certainly would not subscribe.

In our time, when the Communist doctrine advocates the overthrow of democratic nations, it would be drastic to disarm and thus open the door to an advancing dictatorial regime.

The real impact of the accidental bombing Tuesday probably was greater in London than in Moscow, for it is the Britist who recently were concerned by SAC airplanes flying overhead with hydrogen bombs aboard. It should at least confirm reports that activated warheads are not along for the ride.

Otherwise, the South Carolina incident was unfortunate—although it could have been much more severe. It should prompt, in the U.S., practices which will prohibit a reoccurrence here or anywhere else.

Non-Greeks Have Allowed Their Interest To Falter

When Student Body President Sonny Evans killed the judicial revision bill, he pointed to factors about the court system at UNC which are partly responsible for its lack of contact with the student body.

Let's listen to the President's words in which he described these factors:

"Let it be understood that our desire (in the proposed judicial bill) has been to democratize the (judicial) system. Our efforts for a combined council and a jury have been to reestablish contact with the student body.

"Why is the contact now missing? Is it possible to prove it? I cannot prove it but the current situation strongly suggests that, despite our efforts to achieve a competent and representative court through the use of selections boards, the fact is undeniably that the judicial power has gravitated toward a narrow segment of the student body which is under attack from all over the state and nation.

"I refer to the fact that at the present time, the Men's Council out of a membership of fifteen has fourteen fraternity men—each of whom are from three houses. The same situation exists in the Women's Council and I for one, though I am in a fraternity, deplore the fact that our justice is administered by representatives of one-sixth of the student body to the other five-fifths . . ."

As Evans put it, these facts do not imply "collusion or incompetence" on the part of those who now comprise the judiciary. Without exception, they have worked dillingently and with sincerity in administering the functions of their offices.

Nevertheless, it neither is democratic or fair for 20 per cent of the student body to control a branch of student government which vitally concerns the remaining 80 per cent. And this gravitation of authority soon should be broadened in terms of fairer representation for the non-Greek students.

That fraternities and sororities have gained control of student courts is an adverse reflection upon the overwhelming majority of non-Greek students who, it appears, are content to let their student government be operated by a select few of an astounding minority.

This unbalanced representation can only be corrected by a resurgent interest on the part of non-Greek members to guarantee their own rights and assure their continued participation in the affairs of student government.

We hold no contempt for Greek members who try to win places on our student courts. Indeed, they should strive earnestly for the posts and should be elected to them if they are the best qualified candidates. But we also believe that from among the remaining 80 per cent of the student body, more than one person could be found with qualifications necessary for the job.

Fraternity members have not miseled their ways into control over the judicial system. Rather, they have gained that position through the very apathy of non-Greek students who look with disinterest upon judicial candidates when election time rolls around.

Unless this unbalance of representation is to continue, non-Greek students owe it to themselves and to justice to rally behind candidates whom it feels will represent more than one-fifth of the students body at UNC.

Out On Hardship; Back To Florida

Don Buddin, shortshop for the Boston Red Sox, has been given a "hardship" discharge from the Army because "of the continued illness of a member of his family."

So where is Don going? To Florida, of course, to join the Sox at the training camp.

Next thing you know Elvis Pressly's mother will have a stroke, and the bee-bopper will remain in Hollywood because of "hardships" in the family.

Palmetto State Warned; Bomb Was Planned

By WHIT WHITFIELD

The furor which arose in South Carolina after Eisenhower ordered troops into Little Rock did not go unheeded by the administration.

Remember the machine guns which were purchased by the Union County, S. C. Sheriff's department? And the radical remarks made by one of the State's most respected politicians, who as much as said that Eisenhower wouldn't attempt another Little Rock in the Palmetto State? Well, Ike is late (by several months) but the reply came on Tuesday when an atomic bomb was dropped near Florence, S. C. This was a warning.

The morning papers said that the dropping was accidental. We submit that the only accident was the omission of the warhead. Doubtless, some bombardier was given his two-week's notice.

One uninformed source maintained that the plane was searching for Strom Thurmond, but this report was not verified at press time. (Incidental Intelligence Department: Press Time is a journalese phrase variously interpreted to mean whatever the writer decrees. Press time is actually that time when all the copy is at the shop, regardless of the hour.)

Our proverbial hats are off to the self-styled Grand Wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, none other than the Reverend (self-styled) James W. Cole of Marion, S. C.

Cole is reputed to have said that the reason for the recent KKK rally near Maxton was "to shake up about 30,000 half-breeds in Robeson County."

We submit that they were able to do just that. In point of fact, the Indians were so shook that they ran the KKK members all the way to the county line. They could hardly have shook those "half-breeds" any more than they did.

Sour Grapes Department:

We understand that the University of Maryland has a new library (Among other things such as the ACC Championship) which cost over 2½ millions. It is designed to hold over a million books. If our source is correct, and we have no reason to believe that it is, they have only 350,000 books at present. However, the Library Director Howard Rovelstad has said that if it ever acquires its volume capacity it will, "compare most favorably with most university libraries."

This, we acknowledge as the comment of the year.

Did Women Murder Chivalry?

When Syracuse professor Philip Ward Burton's article "Keep Women Out of College" was published in This Week, many many retorts were fired back by advocators of equal rights for women. These defenders of women's freedom claimed the nation's feminine population could do anything the men could do—and in some cases do it better.

Evelyn Hall, a Daily Kansan writer, brings out an interesting sidelight when she says this desire of women to move into their men's world is killing chivalry. She gives this account of the situation:

"It gives women a great deal of pleasure, we think, to fall back on the old belief that they are the weaker sex. A woman likes to feel that a man, just because he is a man, should open doors for her, carry books for her, kill the mouse that seems to terrify her, and so on.

"With the addition of the 19th amendment to the United States Constitution in 1920 which gave women the right to vote, and many gradual changes in policy toward women since then, the woman has nearly reached her goal in aspiring to compete with men.

"Today, women not only cook, sew, and change the baby, but they work in airplane factories, mills and ship yards. They hammer, saw, paint, drill, dig and capture criminals. There is even a women's Army. Women vie for men's positions in literally every occupation and are now sneaking into some of the top governmental jobs.

"It is true that our dainty, white - skinned, rosy - cheeked Sweet Sue of an earlier age is gone. The ideal American woman has turned into a much stronger, more intelligent business woman, quite capable of competing with men.

"However, when a man lets a woman stand on the bus while he leisurely sits to read the evening paper, she may be heard snarling to herself that "chivalry is certainly dead."

"If chivalry is dead, the women murdered it."

And maybe the ladies did kill it. But if they did they were making an all-out effort to revive it here during last week's Dames Daze. Those courtesies and favors weren't just for fun men. Now you're obligated. — Iowa State Daily.

The War Of Nerves: Must Russians Win?

Firing wordy broadsides faster than they can be answered, the Soviets continue to step up their campaign for a spectacular summit mass meeting under conditions which, in the words of Secretary Dulles, would perpetrate a "fraud or a hoax" on the world. The real meaning of this Soviet campaign is exposed in the American reply to the Soviet note of Feb. 28. The latest Bulganin letter, crossing this reply, does nothing to change the situation.

The United States and other Western democracies want a summit meeting. But a comparison of the American stand, fully endorsed by its allies, and the Soviet position demonstrates clearly why there is a deadlock and who is responsible for it. Consider these three points:

(1) The United States wants a small summit meeting of the powers involved which, building on the agreements of the last previous summit meeting at Geneva, can take further "meaningful decisions" to solve vital problems. For that purpose the United States wants careful preparation not only as to procedure but also as to substance in order to ascertain whether a summit meeting would really hold out hope for progress. On this question our Government refuses to commit itself to a summit meeting in advance, as demanded by the Soviets in their note to France.

The Soviets, on the other hand, want a mass meeting of some thirty heads of government to offer a toast to the "end of the cold war" on the basis of mere paper proclamations that would bury Geneva under the status quo, while they hold behind their backs the threat of international Communist aggression and subversion.

(2) The United States, in keeping with Geneva and in an effort to remove basic causes of international tensions, calls again for the reunification of Germany by means of free elections within the framework of European security, as well as for restoration of democratic self-government in Eastern Europe, guaranteed by the peace treaties. We reject the presumptuous Soviet veto of these topics. The Soviets not only bar any discussion of German reunification but also propose separate peace treaties with both West and East Germany to perpetuate Germany's partition, and bar discussion of East European conditions as being internal matters in which they alone have a right to interfere, as in Hungary.

(3) The United States, in keeping with Geneva, calls for genuine disarmament through the United Nations, to which we have submitted clear-cut and practical proposals. The Soviets announce a boycott of the United Nations Disarmament Commission and propose that the summit meeting substitute the following sham measures: Immediate end of nuclear tests before adequate inspection; renunciation of nuclear weapons before adequate controls and before effective reduction of conventional armaments, which would deprive the West of its most effective deterrent weapons and expose it to attack by Eurasian mass armies; a worthless nonaggression pact, which to the Soviets is merely a scrap of paper; finally, reduction of foreign troops in Germany and Europe, which means American withdrawal from Europe and the end of the North Atlantic alliance.

The Soviet purpose is obvious. It is the one-sided disarmament of the West, which makes all other Soviet proposals counterfeit. The Soviets are, of course, fully aware of this. They therefore direct their wordy missiles not so much to the governments as to the "masses" and in particular to such opposition elements as the British Labor party and the German Socialists whom they seek to mobilize against their governments. Their whole summit campaign is thus part of a war of nerves in which they think Russian nerves will win.

Education & Marriage: Laws Provide For Both

by Charles Schulz

by Al Capp

by Walt Kelly

The Supreme Court of Mississippi has handed down a sensible opinion—a ruling that students who have married cannot be barred from public schools.

There was a time not so long ago when, if she married, the public school teacher lost her job.

Then it was found that the happily married woman was just as good a teacher as the spinster and, if she had children, was more than likely to make a better teacher, especially in the lower grades.

With the growing number of weddings of classmates before they get their high school diplomas, the question arose as to whether the young married people should be permitted to remain in school.

In ruling on this, the Mississippi court was the first appellate tribunal to render a decision bearing directly on that point.

The argument that marriage brings views about life "which should not be known to unmarried children and should not be passed on to them," was declared fallacious by the Mississippi tribunal.

It noted marriage is an institution "highly favored by law."

It found it praiseworthy that married persons of school age should want to continue their studies and suggested that unmarried pupils would be "benefited" instead of harmed by association with them.

The court makes an interesting point, but the soundness of its opinion lies in the fact that the laws favor both education and marriage. The latter should not bar completion of the former. — The Asheville Citizen.

Khrushchev Favors Disarmament Idea

LONDON, March 13 (AP) —Nikita Khrushchev said tonight the Soviet Union favors a disarmament system which provides for "reasonable international control." But he did not define what he regarded as reasonable.

The Soviet Communist Party boss again rejected any separate consideration of President Eisenhower's proposal that outer space be used only for peaceful purposes.

In a letter published in the leftist British weekly New Statement, Khrushchev claimed the Eisenhower plan was designed to isolate the question of the Intercontinental Ballistic Missile (ICBM). He said the Soviet Union possesses the ICBM but the United States does not.

He said the outer space plan in the Soviet view "must be examined as part of the general disarmament problem, including the question of prohibiting nuclear weapons and liquidating the U. S. military bases surrounding the Soviet Union."

Khruhchev's letter was the latest in a high level three-sided correspondence in which he, British philosopher Bertrand Russell and Secretary of the State Dulles have participated. All have been published in the new statesman.

In his letter, dated March 5, Khruschev skipped over the question of cutting back conventional weapons in which the Soviet Union has a huge advantage.

He said:

"The Soviet Union is ready to settle the disarmement problem as quickly as is practically possible in the interests of peace and security of the peoples. We have supported and still do support a radical solution of disarmament problem. We have been and still are in favor of the complete and unconditional prohibition of atomic and hydrogen weapons, the ending of their production and testing, the destruction of all existing stockpiles, and a substantial reduction in armed forces, armaments and military expenditures—all with the establishment of reasonable international control . . .

"We say: Let us act, let us impose a strict prohibition on atomic and hydrogen weapons, immedately cease testing these weapons and establish reasonable control."

The Western powers insist on gradual nuclear disarmament with safeguards at all stages to prevent cheating. They believe this would require a foolproof international inspection system.

By refusing to define what he meant by reasonable controls, Khrushchev left up in the air the question of whether the Soviet Union's views on disarmament had undergone any substantive change.

Ultimatum Given By Tunisians

TUNIS, March 13 (AP)—President Habib Bourguiba today gave the United States seven days to decide whether to support Tunisia in its dispute with France or see this country turn its back on the West.

He told a nation-wide radio audience events between now and the second anniversary of Tunisian independence, March 20, will determine his attitude.

"We are at the crossroads. We must choose," he said, after reminding Tunisians of his sympathies with the West.

Bourguiba claimed the continued presence of French troops here means "we are not truly free." As a sign of protest, he cancelled celebrations planned for Independence Day.

He warned that the Tunisians might have to start their battle for independence from France all over again, but did not say whether he meant by military means.

Since the French bombed what they claimed was an Algerian village base in Tunisia on Feb. 8, Bourguiba has been demanding that French troops quit his country.

The fiery Tunisian earlier told U.S. Deputy Undersecretary of State Robert Murphy and British Diplomat Harold Beeley he would not make his regular weekly talk today in order not to hamper their "good offices" mission.

He changed his mind at the last minute, stung into action by what he called French comments on the British-American efforts to ease French-Tunisian quarrels.

Murphy and Beeley did not see any Tunisian officials today.

Bourguiba claimed "French intransigence" had "brought the good offices to a crisis," he added:

"Now is the time for a choice: America must choose a position . . . if in this situation, where the right path is not in doubt, we do not get enthusiastic support from the United States, exerting pressure on France to follow the path of righteousness, then people will be disillusioned with the oldest and greatest member of the free world.

"If America does not prove to me, to the Tunisian people and to all the other peoples of the world that they have left behind the world of imperialism, then the situation will be vastly changed . . .

"The 20th of March is the appointment we have given to the free world.

"I hope that on the 20th of March I will be able to say something in the constituent assembly which will drive away this gloom."

BRUNDAGE OUT

WASHINGTON, March 13 (AP)—Percival F. Brundage, who was alternately cussed as a spendthrift and a skinflint, resigned today as budget director.

President Eisenhower moved Deputy Director Maurice H. Stans up to succeed him in the fiscal hot seat.

A. F. JENZANO
Attends Opening

A. F. Jenzano Will Attend London Event

A. F. Jenzano, manager of the Morehead Planetarium here, will represent UNC at the opening of the 12th and newest planetarium in the world in London, England, Saturday.

Jenzano, who left Chapel Hill Wednesday by plane, will also visit planetaria in Paris and Rome and the world's largest radio telescope at Manchester, England, before returning home on March 26.

Jenzano is expected to be the only representative of a U. S. planetarium at the London opening. He will spend two days there for a complete examination of the installation. There are only six planetaria in the western hemisphere, and the one here is the first planetarium in the world located on a college campus.

Proposal Branded 'Nonsense'

GREENSBORO, March 13 (AP)—One agriculture proposal now before Congress was branded "economic nonsense" and others similarly attacked here Thursday by the executive committee of the State Farm Bureau meeting here.

The increase in commercial corn acreage with an accompanying provision that 15 per cent of the corn land must be placed in the Soil Bank drew the "economic nonsense" label from the committee, meeting here preliminary to a session of the full board of directors here Friday.

Other proposals which would freeze price supports and acreage quotas of wheat, cotton, rice and peanuts at 1957 levels: freeze corn supports and increase acreage from 38 to 54 million acres and freeze dairy supports also drew fire from the committee. (Legislation along this line was passed by the Senate today.)

Much of the blame for present farm commodity surpluses was placed by the committee on minimum acreage allotments which allow farmers to plant a given acreage regardless of market demand for the commodity, and also to receive price support guarantees. The group cited wheat as an example of this, saying that farmers may legally plant 55,000,000 acres of wheat regardless of supply and demand conditions.

Then the committee pointed out that Farm Bureau policies have long favored support at 90 per cent of parity on all commodities, when supplies are kept in line with demand. As an example of this, a committee statement said:

"We understand that the senate agriculture committee has exempted tobacco from a pending bill which calls for a freeze on price supports and quotas. We think this wise, and feel that it shows that our position regarding other crops is sound. Tobacco already is supported 90 per cent of parity when supplies are kept in line with demand.

"Tobacco farmers have made every attempt, and have been successful in the long run, to keep tobacco supplies in line with demand. To say tobacco growers that they must plant a given number of acres of leaf regardless of the market demand would destroy the very tools with which they have so successfully operated their program.

"As a farm organization we have a responsibility to farmers and to the public to develop farm programs which will provide adequate supplies at reasonable consumer prices yet still protect the farmer and insure him an adequate return for his labor and investment.

We are convinced that action to freeze price supports and acreage levels would be a disservice to both farmers and consumers of the nation.

"The traditional philosophy of North Carolina farmers," the statement continued, "has been to produce adequate supplies to meet the demands of the consuming public without price-depressing market gluts. We have long opposed minimum acreage on a farm, county, state or national basis, for under such arrangements no adjustments can be made to reduce supplies below certain points established by law but not tied to market demands."

Budget Man Got Start In Office

By KARL B. BAUMAN

WASHINGTON, March 13 (AP) — The new boss of the federal budget started out as office boy in an accounting firm and wound up owning the business.

And since entering government service in 1953 Maurice H. Stans has added lustre to the story of the poor boy who makes good.

His only hobby,friends say, is big game hunting. And he's had no time for that in recent years.

Associates describe Stan as soft spoken, and a hard worker.

"I've never heard him raise his voice," one of them said today after President Eisenhower named Stans to succeed budget director Percival F. Brundage, who resigned.

A carefully, conservatively groomed man, Stans is on the handsome side. His hair is graying at the temples. He stand 5 feet 11 inches and is physically trim.

He descends from Belgian stock. His father, J. Hubert Stans, was a member of a poor family that immigrated into this country in 1880. The father became a band director and house painter in southern Minnesota.

Stan's mother was the daughter of Hubert Nyssen, also a Belgian immigrant who settled in southern Minnesota in 1870. Later he owned a brewery.

The new budget director was born in Shakopee, Minn., March 22, 1905—50 years ago come Saturday a week. He went to Chicago after high school and attended Northwestern University at night while working in the daytime .Later he did the same thing at Columbia University, in New York City.

He began his career in accounting as an office boy with Alexander Grant & Co. in Chicago in 1928. Ten years later he owned the firm. When he joined, it had about a half dozen employes. When he left it in 1955 it had 250 employes and was the tenth largest accounting firm in the country.

Stans and his wife, the former Kathleen Carmody (they were married in 1933), went on safaris in East Africa in 1948 and 1950. On the first trip, Mrs. Stans did some shooting; on the second, which lasted three months, she was the photographer.

The animal trophies they collected were given to the children's nature museum at Rock Hill, S. C. The trophies included a rare marsh antelope, which Stans spent five days getting in the swamps near Lake Victoria.

He has received awards from professional societies, and in 1953 Illinois Western University gave Stans a Catholic, an honorary LL. D. degree.

The Stans have four children, all adopted. Theodore and a girl Terrell, called Terri, are 14-year-old twins. Stevens is 21 and Maureen is 8.

Stans got his first taste of government service in 1953 when he served on a task force which assisted the house appropriations committee in reviewing the federal budget for the fiscal year 1954. After this he worked on a study of postal fiscal systems and accounting practices for the postmaster general before becoming deputy director of the budget.

Writer Warns Of U.S. Losses To Communism

GREENVILLE, March 13 (AP)—A noted news analyst said Thursday that "if we lose Asia and Africa to communism, we will be stranded — economically stranded, politically contained, and surrounded in a military war."

Ernest K.E.T.A. ETA ETA ET and Washington director of Newsweek, made the statement in a talk at East Carolina College's fifth annual World Affairs Institute.

Retired Navy Adm. Charles B. Mosen, expert on submarines and submarine warfare, also addressed the audience of students, staff members and guests.

Lindley stressed the importance of providing Asia and Africa with capital and technical aid, since Russia is also making a bid for their friendship and support.

"We have repeatedly underestimated the ability of Soviet leaders, their ambitions, and their ruthlessness," Lindley stated. To improve relationship with Russia, he advocated testing some form of arms control with insistence of "free-wheeling" inspection and attempting exploration of space as cooperative enterprise between the two nations.

Mosen said that within the next 25 or 30 years the submarine will be larger, capable of staying under water for longer periods, capable of going deeper, and faster, with a possible speed of 60 knots.

Nuclear power, he said, has had a tremendous effect upon recent developments. Underwater transport for cargo, and even for passengers, is being developed, he pointed out. Cargo submarines will help protect military supplies from aircraft and surface vessels, Mosen said.

He told the audience under-ice travel by submarine is now being perfected and will open up an enormous shoreline in Russia and thus enable us to offer a tremendous threat to the Soviet Union.

Noted French Novelist Is Married

PARIS, March 13 (AP)—Francoise Sagan, precocious novelist and symbol of the mid-century's sophisticated youth, today married her dignified publisher, Guy Schoeller. She is 22, he 42.

The best-selling writer of sexy novels had plotted a secret wedding. But secrecy didn't last through the first chapter.

When she and the bridegroom arrived for the five-minute ceremony at a mayoralty office in a shabby section of Paris, bobbysoxers and press were waiting, despite her elaborate series of strategems. The affair turned out to be one of the best publicized in months.

The strategems had included telling reporters two days ago that the marriage would be next week, changing automobiles three times en route from her home, and entering the mayoralty through a back gallery.

Deputy - Mayor Jean Loubet, standing before a white bust of Marianne, traditional symbol of the French republic, declared Francoise and Guy man and wife. Only a few guests were in the room — including the bride's brother, Jacques, and a publisher friend, Gaston Gallimard.

The couple then drove to the country home of Pierre Lazareff, publisher of the newspaper France-Soir, for a luncheon, and later returned to an apartment they have rented on the left bank. The honeymoon has been postponed until June when they will go to Saint-Tropez, scene of Bonjour Tristesse, the novel that first won Francoise fame.

Her three sexy novels, her script for a ballet with a daring bathroom scene and her fast automobile driving—that nearly killed her last year—have made her a symbol among France's fast-living youth.

RADIO CLUB

Organizational plans for forming an amateur radio club and club station here will be discussed at a meeting today at 7:30 p.m. in Phillips Hall, Room 250.

An announcement from Henry Gould of the Mathematics Department about the meeting said that Carolina is the only state university without a club station.

FREE FLICKS

Tonight's free flick, "Death of a Salesman," will be shown at 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m. in Carroll Hall auditorium.

Saturday night at 7:30 and 10 o'clock "Pinky" with Jeanne Crain and Ethel Waters will be shown.

Miss Hazel Breland, personnel assistant in the Southeastern Area of the American National Red Cross, will be here today to interview candidates for Red Cross jobs. All interested students are invited to attend.

WUNC BROADCAST

The broadcast of Friday on WUNC 91.5 FM at 8 p.m. of "Let's Listen to Opera" with Norman Cordon as commentator, will be a performance on Angel Records of Charles Gounod's "Mireille."

The performance was recorded by the forces of the Aix-en-Provence Festival and won the Grand Prix du Disque in Paris.

The opera is of a pastoral nature based on Frederic Mistral's epic poem "Mireio." The leading parts are sung by Janette Vivalda, Nicolai Gedda, and Michel Dens. The conductor of this UNC extension Division presentation is Andre Cluytens.

BI-PARTISAN BOARD

The Bi-Partisan Selection Board will meet Wednesday, March 18, from 3 to 7 p.m. in the Woodhouse Conference Room to interview all prospective candidates for seats on Women's Honor Council.

All girls interested in running for a seat on the council have been requested to sign up for interviews on the list posted on Woodhouse Conference Room door. There will be three seats available in the spring elections.

EXPELLED? DON'T WORRY ABOUT A THING!

At last, all cotton drip-dry shirts are a reality! Van Heusen has achieved this triumph in the new Vantage shirt which is 100% cotton, drip-dries in a jiffy, and needs no ironing! At only $5, it's the all-around shirt for college men, and also has a few special uses which you might possibly overlook.

You're expelled from school. Since you have no money, you're forced to walk home (you live in Lovelyville, 1,357 miles away). The Van Heusen Vantage shirt is perfect for this situation. First, you can wash it in the many brooks you pass as you trudge along the open road . . . and, as you catch a quick wink in a hollow log, it will drip-dry and be neat and snappy for the next lap of your trek. Second, because Vantage is all cotton, it looks so smart that you begin to feel well-educated. People will say, "there goes a cultured chap."

You're water boy on the football team. Ideal spot for Van Heusen Vantage shirts. We ask you, what does a water boy have most of? Precisely . . . and after you hang dry them from the goal post . . . you can wear them heroically like a quarterback.

You owe the laundry $342.45. Let us say you owe the laundry $342.45 and are ashamed to show your face there, and even feel terror when you smell the disinfectant floating out of the Laundromat. A set-up for Vantage! Since it drip-dries, and needs no ironing, you need never enter the laundry again. And because it's all cotton, it's so elegant-looking, you can pass the laundry with equanimity. The owner, seeing you stroll by in your Vantage, will say to himself, "No sense dunning Morgan for that dough. He's so rich, he's bound to pay me soon."

In Vantage, you inspire confidence. In Vantage, you're set for every college occasion. At better stores everywhere, or write to Phillips-Van Heusen Corp., 417 Fifth Avenue, New York 16, New York.

having student ad salesman on a commission basis to give them incentive to get ads.

5) INTERNAL IMPROVEMENTS:

"The editor should institute a training program which should perpetuate good journalism on the paper. There ought to be some definition of the responsibilities of the various staff members and a page editor system should be instituted.

"The paper ought to try to attain a consistent style and tone, and perhaps The Daily Tar Heel should try to compile a style book similar to those at other universities. The editor should be responsible for seeing that there is a certain amount of staff rapport, so that the paper, relying mainly on non-paid help, can function efficiently.

6) SPECIAL FEATURES

"The Daily Tar Heel should try to attain a large Sunday paper, commensurate with the importance of Sunday papers on other dailies. There should be a "Topic of the Week" in both campus and international news, which should give the campus a picture of at least two problems of the campus and world.

"An addition of features on programs on campus, television, radio, movies, and in the Chapel Hill-Raleigh-Durham area would be helpful as a guide to what-to-do.

"These programs will be explained more fully in the future through The Daily Tar Heel and by talking to many students individually," Gans said.

"The editorship is a great responsibility and calls for leadership, experience, and courage. I feel that I can bring to the paper these qualities," Gans stated.

Gridder Booted

SALISBURY, N. C. (AP)—Lou Biacchi, star Catawba College quarterback for the last two seasons, will play no more football for the North State Conference school.

Coach Paul Biggers has dropped him from the team permanently. Biggers said Monday "insubordination and disregard for the instructions of an assistant coach" during the alumni-varsity game last Saturday brought about Biacchis' dismissal.

"It's an unfortunate situation, but I always back my coaches," said Biggers. Beyond that he did not wish to comment.

Biacchi, a former Marine, is from Berwick, Pa. He is a junior at Catawba.

Biggers said he believed Biacchi would finish the spring term at Catawba, but he did not know whether he planned to return to the school next fall.

Not Much Action On Carolina Sports Front

We are now in that somewhat depressing period when action on the Carolina sports front is at a virtual standstill. The terrific UNC swimming team is at Annapolis competing for National honors and the Carolina footballers are in the midst of spring drills. Other than that, sports action won't resume until the Carolina baseballers open the season in the Rollins Tournament on March 20.

The basketball season is history now. Last year this time the Tar Heels were in the thick of the national cage race and all interest was centered on this. But the 1957-58 hardwood season ended early for Carolina and it put the damper on sports enthusiasm here for a few weeks anyway.

About the only thing one can do now is sit back and review the '57 and '58 seasons for all but the Tar Heel spring sports.

Footballers Had Great Year

Jim Tatum's spring football practice recalls the gridder's exploits last season. It was a tremendous season for Tatum and Co. The Tar Heels were given little chance of even breaking even in pre-season speculation but the Tatummen came on in fine fashion and racked up a 6-4 record, including victories over some of the nation's best gridiron powers.

It started slowly with a 7-0 loss to N.C. State here on Sept. 22. Then the gridders began to roll. They mowed down Clemson, Navy and Miami in succession and the football world began to wonder if Tatum had come out of nowhere with a bowl team.

And a bowl team it might have been too except for one team—Maryland. The Tar Heels were partially knocked from the limelight at College Park on Oct. 19 and that was the defeat that put Duke in the Orange Bowl instead. Virginia made the Miami trip a definite one for Duke when it bumped off Carolina in the last game of the season. Previously the Tar Heels had beaten Wake Forest, South Carolina and Duke and had lost only to Tennessee.

Tatum was not disappointed that he didn't get the bid to Miami. He was looking toward the 1958 season with oranges in his eyes. Back in December, Carolina fans were disappointed that they didn't have a bowl team; now that's all forgotten. Many observers feel that come Jan. 1, 1959, Carolina will be in the Orange Bowl—the possibilities are very good. Bud Carson's Tar Babies had a 3-1-1 record.

Cagers Look To Future

The basketball season is still fresh in the memory of everyone. The Tar Heels lost Joe Quigg and York Larese and Lennie Rosenbluth was gone. Still, West Virginia was the first team to beat the McGuiremen and it ended a 38-game winning streak.

After that the Tar Heels came back into the hot ACC and the going was plenty tough. The cager's final 10-4 conference mark was good for a tie with State in the regular season standings. But Maryland took the measure of the champs in the ACC finals in Raleigh.

The season uncovered some bright new prospects in the Carolina camp but it also was the last for four members of the National Championship team. The pressure is off McGuire now. Carolina is just another basketball team. But there is strong feeling that it will take the smiling Irishman only another year or so to regain the top notch on the basketball ladder.

Ken Rosemond did a fine job with the freshman cagers. They got off to a great start but the loss of Doug Moe at midseason was an irreparable loss and the Tar Babies finished with a 10-9 record. There were only two scholarship boys other than Moe among the freshmen, since McGuire was loaded with sophomores this year. But you can look for a fine host of hardwood talent to hit the campus this fall.

Good Season For Other Sports

Other Carolina teams had good seasons also. Dale Ranson's cross-country team went through the season with a 5-0 record and copped the State and Conference championships. The runners also finished second to powerful Maryland in the Indoor Games here March 1. In addition, Dave Scurlock and Wayne Bishop gained national prestige. Things look very good for the cindermen as they prepare to begin another outdoor campaign this spring.

Marvin Allen's soccer team finished the year with a 2-3-2 record, a little subpar for Carolina soccer. The freshman booters had a 2-2 mark and prospects for next year look good.

In wrestling, Carolina finished the season last week with a 6-4 mark. It was the first time the matmen had had a winning season in eight years and there was no more deserving person than Sam Barnes. The frosh grapplers had a 2-5 mark.

The Carolina swimmers are in the middle of the Nationals at Annapolis now. They went undefeated during the regular season and copped the ACC title. Pat Farey, in his first year here turned out a great varsity team and Buddy Baarcke's frosh swimmers were also undefeated.

Blue-White Game On March 22

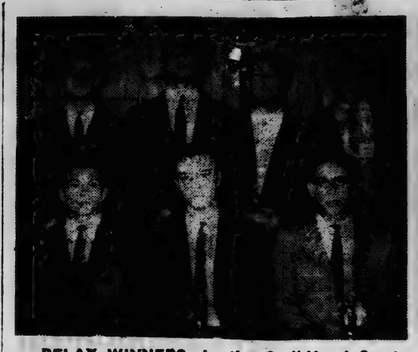
Following a twice-delayed start, the Carolina football squad rounds out it's third week of off-season football practice this week and will wind up the session Saturday of next week, March 22, with the annual Blue-White intra-squad game.

Impressed with the attitude and improvement in their charges during the workouts so far, Coach Jim Tatum and his staff look for an interesting contest which, along with the preceding drills, will go a long way in determining the players who will play the biggest part in next autumn's campaign.

Ticket Charge

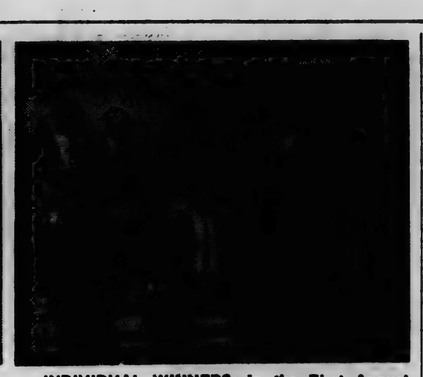
Kickoff for the Blue-White game in Kenan Staduim, which is sponsored by the Monogram Club, with an admission charge of $1, is 2 p.m.

Eighteen lettermen will be on hand, scattered on the opposing squads which are to be picked this weekend following Saturday's scrimmage. Ten of them played more or less regularly last season when the Tar Heels turned in a highly creditable 6-4 record with notable wins over Navy (the only loss the Middies sustained, Clemson, Duke, Miami, South Carolina and Wake Forest.



In addition, there will be some new faces, rising sophomores, nonlettermen reserves and ineligibles of last year, who figure prominently on the team's plans for the coming season.

Frosh Stars



Halfback Sonny Folckomer of York, Pa., guard-center Rip Hawkins of Cowan, Tenn., guard Fred Mueller of Iselin, N. J., and end John Schroeder of Alex, Va., the latter two ineligible in 1957, have been among the newcomers who have shown up well in practices and are hot competitors for 1958 starting berths.

Co-Captain Curtis Hathaway and guard Jack Lineburger have had to miss the spring work because of injuries sustained last year, but coaches are hopeful they will join the fold in the fall.

Two other absentees are end Mac Turlington and tackle Don Stallings who must make up scholastic deficiencies before the 1958 season.

Grail-Mural Winners Are Treated

By RUSTY HAMMOND

The winners of the first annual Grail-Mural Sports Jamboree, Chi Psi fraternity and the Law School, were treated to steak dinners at Watts March 10. Also on the agenda was the presentation of trophies by Coach Walter Rabb of the Intramurals Department.

24 fraternities participated in the event, along with 16 dormitories and 2 grad organizations. A total of 350 individuals competed, and $150.00 worth of trophies were presented to team and individual winners.

The winning Chi Psi team consisted of R. Mallins, F. Burgess, Dave Myers, Jerry Kilpatrick, Larry Craver, Don Coker, Allen Pultz, John Hunnicut, and Tommy Saintsing.

The Law School winning team was composed of Cooper Taylor, Bill Kirkman, Bill Short, Richie Smith, Harold Downing, Wiggins, Tucker, Cobb, and Clark.

Individual Winners

Individual winners included: Relay—Zeta Psi and Cobb; Badminton-Pete Steward (Kap Sig) and Bob Rollins (Ruffins); Foul Shooting-George Coggin (Law School) and Larry Craver (Chi Psi); Archery-Dave Myers (Chi Psi) and Harold Downing (Law School); Handball—Jerry Sher (Pi Lam) and George Stavnitski (Cobb); Table Tennis-Ritchie Smith (Law School) and Bob Mallins (Chi Psi);

Rabbmen Looking For Good Year Despite Heavy Losses

While graduation, academic problems and inroads of the pros have dealt a mighty blow to the Carolina baseball squad for 1958, Coach Walter Rabb nevertheless figures he will have a representative college team opening the season with a three-day stand in Florida next week.

The Tar Heels will face Rollins and Georgia in a round robin beginning Thursday, March 20, and winding up Saturday, March 22, before returning for their opening games here against Virginia Tech on March 27-28.

Only five lettermen are on the squad which was hampered by bad weather in its opening practice sessions, but which since has been able to make some good progress in conditioning.

New Blood

However, there is some talented new blood.

The lettermen are pitchers Charlie Aycock and Ben Harding, second baseman Carson Oldham, outfielder Alton Pons and shortstop Roger Honeycutt.

Righthander Wayne Young and left hander Ben Hammett look to be the most promising of the sophomore pitchers and should round out a creditable mound staff. Aycock, with his unique delivery and good speed, is believed to have the potential to become an outstanding college pitcher.

Harold Workman, Jerry Nester, Larry Craver, Al Baldwin and Vaughn Bryson are promising sophomores battling for infield spots.

New Outfield

The outfield will be brand new. Don Coker has missed early practice on account of football off-season drills but is expected to be a leading candidate along with Gerald Griffin and Joe Temple.

Burdette Signs Contract After Long Holdout

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — Lew Burdette signed his 1958 contract with the world champion Milwaukee Braves Thursday, ending a record 12-day holdout, and then took batting practice against his pal and roommate, Warren Spahn.

Burdette, who Preacher Roe once said "would make coffee nervous," received an estimated $35,000, a sizeable increase over his 1957 salary.

Asked if he got what he wanted, the lean, 6-2 righthanded pitcher replied:

"If I didn't wouldn't be here."

It was reported that he had been holding out for $40,000 on the basis of his 17 regular season victories and his 3 complete game World Series triumphs over the New York Yankees last season.

Football Pays The Way, Says Ernie Williamson

By ED ROWLAND

One afternoon last week athletes competing in five different sports worked out in the vicinity of Woollen Gym. In addition to these, 11 other sports played here all call for money, which one sport provides.

"Football pays the freight at Carolina," Ernie Williamson, executive secretary of the Educational Foundation, Inc., said.

Right now, basketball, track, swimming, wrestling, and baseball are being either played or practiced, and football pays the bills.

"Last season, even winning 32 games and the NCAA championship, the basketball team went into the red, "Ernie said.

Athletic Director C. P. Erickson commented: "Had we a proper building for basketball, the sport could have contributed more to the overall program. Facilities are limited, not even all the students can see home games. A combination auditorium-coliseum is needed in Chapel Hill to permit larger basketball attendance and provide adequate housing for student assemblies and commencement. One could also provide room for Naval and Air Force ROTC units."

Ernie leaned forward and continued, "All this money going out makes it necessary to provide big-time football, in order to have big-time athletics."

Playing these big games makes it necessary to have good players, and Ernie Williamson is in charge of this department. He is head of an organization set up in 1937 to channel alumni contributions into an athletic scholarship program and to persuade budding young Charlie Justices to come to Carolina. These players keep football turning the athletic wheels at Carolina.

The ex-Washington Redskin tackle disclosed a few figures. "The entire athletic program here costs $400,000 a year. The only income we are certain of is the $10 each student pays as part of his block fee, amounting to some $75,000. That other $325,000 comes from football gates each season.

(Erickson: "The block fee has remained the same for 40 years while costs have skyrocketed.")

"For example," Ernie continued, "in 1957 Oklahoma paid us $96,000 for our game at Norman. The last time we played Notre Dame (1956) we got $114,000 as our half of the gate at South Bend."

"Football could possibly pay its own way by playing a lighter schedule in our conference, with a drastic budget slash, but it takes bigger schools and better teams to draw the large crowd," Ernie related.

"Our job (recruiting) is rough," he said. "We compete with the Big Four, the schools in the Southeastern Conference, and northern independents for talent. They are looking for the same qualities we are, and the rivalry is keen."

Ernie described the scholarships Carolina gives according to NCAA regulations: room, board, tuition, fee and $15 a month for laundry. "It is our intention to abide by these rules," he added.

Maryland Meets Hot Temple

By KEN ALYTA

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Miraculous Manhattan continues its bid for post-season glory against Dartmouth here Friday night at 7:30 EST in the opening game of the NCAA Eastern Regional basketball tournament.

Maryland, which dethroned defending national champion Carolina to get this far, meets streaking Temple—23 in a row—in the second game at 9:30. The winners play at 9 Saturday night for the right to join three other regional tournament winners in the national finals at Louisville, Ky., March 21-22. First round losers will play for third place at 7 p.m. Saturday.

Coach Kenny Norton's Manhattan club, with a 16-8 record, knocked off West Virginia, the nation's No. 1 team, 89-84, Tuesday night in the opening round at New York.

West Virginia scored one more basket, but a 35-49 foul line job gave Manhattan the edge. The New Yorkers had four scorers in double figures. The high man was Capt. Jack Powers with 29 points.

Doggie Julian's Dartmouth Ivy League champions clipped Connecticut 75-64 in their New York test. The Hanover, N.H., Indians with a sophomore — junior dominated squad, got 24-point performances from 6-7 Rudy LaRusso and 6-foot Charlie Kaufman. Dartmouth has a 21-4 record.

Scurlock, Beatty Run In News Meet Tonight

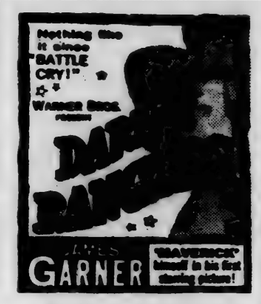
Making his usual weekly trek to indoor track meets, Carolina track star Dave Scurlock has traveled to Chicago where he will compete in the Chicago Daily News meet tonite.

It will be the comeback trail for Scurlock who has been defeated in his last two outings. Saturday, the big middle distance man was edged by Joe Soprano of Manhattan and Peter Close of St. John's in the Knights of Columbus meet at Madison Square Garden.

Tonight he will meet for the first time, 1,000-yard world record holder Arnie Sowell of Army. Sowell will be making his first appearance on the boards tonight.

Making the trip with Scurlock is former Tar Heel great Jim Beatty. Now in the army, Beatty, a former All-American, holds many mile, 2-mile and cross-country records in the conference. He has been working out here these past few days to prepare for tonight's mile. He will meet Ron Delaney, John Coleman and Maryland's Burr Grim.

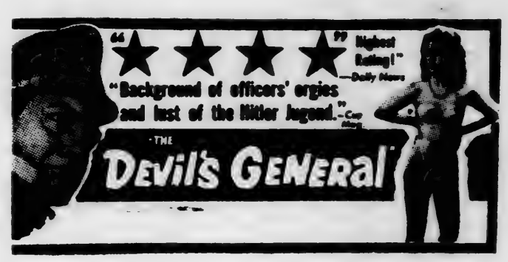
The Chicago meet is one of the best from the athletics standpoint. The field is select and small. At the K of C meet, Scurlock was boxed in at the finish and could not pass the two leaders.



Co-Rec Volleyball

The first round of the annual Co-Rec volleyball tournament was played last night with four teams advancing to the finals which will be played Tuesday night.

In the single elimination tournament these teams have made the finals: Theta Chi-Pi Phi; Cobb-Alpha Gam-1; Zeta Psi-Alderman-1; and Sigma Nu-Alpha Gam-3.



Each team is composed of three boys and three girls from the dorms, fraternities and sororities on campus.

Editor Doug Eisele Decides Not To Run

Editor Doug Eisele of The Daily Tar Heel announced Friday he would not seek re-election to the post which he won in a recall movement last November.

Eisele cited "personal reasons" for his decision not to compete in elections April 1 for the job which he has held since December 2 of last year.

"Despite my love for and interest in the Tar Heel, there are personal reasons why I feel I should not again seek the office of editor," he said. He would not elaborate on those reasons.

Eisele, a sophomore from Statesville, said he entered the recall race last November "with hopes that a new editor could return to the Tar Heel the traditional respect and good reputation that it once held in the newspaper world of North Carolina.

"I feel that purpose — a debt which I owed to the student body which elected me—has ben served in the past several month." Eisele said. "My obligations, therefore,

Interviews Slated For New Council

Candidates for election to the recently revamped Men's Honor Council will be interviewed next week by the Bi-Partisan Selections Board, according to an announcement released yesterday by George Ragsdale, chairman of the council.

Interviews will be held in the Men's Council Roof of Graham Memorial on Monday and Tuesday from 3 to 4:30 p.m., Ragsdale said.

Three seats elected at large, are open on the council, Ragsdale said members of the council will no longer be distinguished according to classes (that is freshman, sophomore, junior and senior).

He pointed out that under the new system the five-man council will determine the punishment of those defendents found guilty of honor offenses by the newly created honor council jury.

Three persons from those selected by the Bi-Partisan Selection Board will be elected by the student body in this spring's elections.

Gans Lists Attributes Needed For Editorship

Editorial candidate Curtis Gans outlined experience and leadership as being a necessary prerequisite for the editorship of The Daily Tar Heel.

"The editor of The Daily Tar Heel is responsible for the entire paper, and thus he must have a familiarity with all phases of the newspaper operation," Gans said.

"I feel that I can truly say that I have had the experience to qualify for the office of editor.

"I have worked for over two years in the capacities of proof reader, night editor, reporter, and columnist. I have had a chance to take part in all phases of the newspaper operation with the exception of advertising, circulations, and sports.

"My professional experience includes work as news and feature writer for the Sylva Herald, and participation in the advertising department of the Asheville Citizen-Times.

"I have done high school sports correspondence work for Zander Hollander of The New York World-Telegram and Sun. These reports were sent to The New York Times

BOB CARTER
Presidential Hopeful

Independent Candidate Makes 3-Way Contest

By LEO MULVANEY

Bob Carter, junior from Selma, announced yesterday that he will run as an independent candidate in the spring elections for the office of president of the student body.

Carter, present treasurer of the student body, said, "This was the most difficult decision I have ever had to make. It was only after consulting many people, getting much advice and then evaluating the entire situation that I finally decided to run."

In reference to the presidential office, Carter said, "Experience, knowledge, interest, service and leadership are the main criteria for the office and I feel that the nominees for the job should be judged fairly on this basis."

Lists Reasons

When asked about the necessity for an independent candidate, Carter listed these reasons:

1. The need for the students to vote on a candidate, his qualifications and his platform and not just for his political party.

2. Many people are unwilling to support either candidate now running and desire a third candidate.

3. A third candidate would bring student government closer to the students because he will really have to know the issues at stake and the personalities involved in order to vote wisely.

4. An independent can be a president of the whole campus and the whole student body and not just a president of some area or special interest.

Different Position

5. A position on many matters different from those of the other two candidates and a feeling that the campus should vote for a president after considering these various stands.

Among the issues that Carter will base his platform on are; honor system, student union, fra-

Sloan Would Institute Dormitory Reporters

Charlie Sloan, candidate for Editor of The Daily Tar Heel, has voiced several suggestions for an improved newspaper, including a stringer system consisting of a part-time reporter in each dormitory.

The Arlington, Va., junior, in a statement to The Daily Tar Heel, said:

"A college newspaper should cover the campus it serves. Getting news from all corners of the campus isn't always so easy, and no paper can hope to unearth everything that happens every day.

"The editor can come close to seeing that all the news is included in the paper by using several methods. One of these is a dormitory stringer system. The system I would like to see put in effect is almost identical to one I suggested last year.

"In every dormitory one student can be made a member of the news staff, with the sole responsibility of seeing that anything happening in

'Exciting Event' Says Symposium Executive

"This year's Carolina Symposium on Public Affairs should be one of the most exciting events in the college experience of this generation of students," according to William M. Geer, faculty adviser of the Symposium.

"The impact of so many distinguished speakers, with their variety of interests and differing opinions, all speaking of the general theme of Survival, should be intellectually invigorating to the entire University community," Geer said.

In a statement yesterday, Geer praised the work of student and faculty committees for bringing together such a "brilliant array of talent." He singled out Sonny Hallford, chairman of the Symposium for special commendation.

"Sonny Hallford has done a splendid job of organization and direction of a complex and difficult task. He and the student group have done more work on this than the Campus will ever be able to imagine," Geer commented.

He also singled out for special praise Mary Jane Fisher, secretary, and Al Goldsmith, treasurer of the organization.

"The interest of the students of this University in public issues is clearly shown by the work which they have done and the money which they have voluntarily contributed to the Symposium," Geer continued. "We have topped our goal of $5,000 by donations from student groups. In my opinion, this is generous and praiseworthy. As a result, we are going to have a splendid Symposium."

Census Favors Sophomore Parking

By WYNDHAM HEWITT

Sophomores should be allowed to park anywhere on campus, according to results of a recent poll conducted by the GMAB polls committee. In the survey 75.4 per cent of the undergraduates participating in the poll were against restricting sophomores to park in the new Bell Tower parking lot. There were 25.4 per cent for this and 1.4 per cent undecided.

Only undergraduates were polled on eight questions concerning the orientation system, library circulation, Chapel Hill merchant prices, content of the second page of The Daily Tar Heel, college education support, sophomore parking problems profits of the campus book store and the Carolina Honor System.

The committee which sent out 250 questionaries, based its report on 143 answers returned. The results were not as good as they expected, but were good enough to give a valid report of general student opinion, according to Jan Cobbs, chairman of the polls committee. She said the committee hopes to have a more successful poll next fall.

Anyone having questions pertinent to the campus has been asked to submit them to Benny Thomas, Jan Cobbs or any member of the Polls Committee.

Honor Council

Two questions were asked concerning the Honor Council: "Do you believe in the Honor System? Do you up hold its principles?" The answers to both questions were yes, 10.6 per cent no and 2 per cent undecided. These percentages are slightly misleading because several students answered no to the first question and yes to the second, Miss Cobb said.

At the present time all profits of the campus book store go to a scholarship fund. Results of the poll showed approval of this policy and disapproval of lowering the price of books which would eliminate the scholarship profits. The approval vote was 57 per cent yes, 38.7 per cent against and 4.3 per cent undecided. The elimination of profits vote was 53.5 per cent yes 44.5 against and 2 per cent undecided.

Students participating in the poll indicated that the prices charged by the Chapel Hill merchants are unfair. A total of 83.1 per cent said prices to high 14.8 per cent think prices are fair and 2.1 per cent are undecided.

Editorial Page

The second page of The Daily Tar Heel met with the general approval of the students. 63.4 per cent liked it, 35.9 per cent disliked it, and 0.7 per cent were undecided.

The system for requesting books at the circulation desk of the library was considered adequate, according to the poll. The vote for the need of a new system was 73.2 per cent against, 25.4 per cent for and 1.4 per cent undecided.

The large number of UNC students pay for none of their education themselves. It was found that 40.1 per cent pay for none of their education, 19.7 per cent pay for all of their education, 14.1 per cent pay for over 50 per cent and 26.8 per cent per cent pay for less than 50 per cent.

The orientation system for incoming students does meet the needs of the according to freshman, results of the poll which showed a vote of 77.5 per cent yes, 17.6 per cent no and 4.9 per cent undecided.

Phi Delta Theta Wins For Best Pledge Class At Banquet

Phi Delta Theta fraternity was awarded the Stanley Sturm trophy for the outstanding pledge class at a banquet Thursday night in Lenoir Hall. This banquet climaxed three days of Greek Week activities, participated in by more than 400 fraternity pledges.

Other trophies were awarded to winners of different events in the Greek Week program. The Field Day trophy was awarded to the Alpha Tau Omega pledge class, which took first place in all Field Day events Tuesday afternoon.

The Phi Delts won the trophy for Carnival Day, held on Wednesday. The Phi Delts also won the trophy for top scholarship.

The other Greek Week event was Work Day, held Monday, when pledges helped clean and clear in various locations in the Chapel Hill community.

Dr. James Godfrey, dean of the faculty, was guest speaker at the banquet Thursday.

The trophies at the banquet were presented by Ashe Exum, Sigma Nu who served as chairman of Greek Week. Tucker Yates, newly elected president of the Inter-Fraternity Council, presided at the banquet. Yates introduced members of the Faculty Committee on Fraternities and Sororities and new officers of the IFC.

Local Student Wives Plan To Eat Program

Members of the UNC Student Wives Club will eat their program Tuesday night, according to Jo Anne Young, president of the group.

The program for this meeting will feature Mrs. Thell Jernigan, owner of Thell's Bakery, who will give the girls a demonstration of professional cake decorating techniques. At the conclusion of Mrs. Jernigan's demonstration, she is donating the cakes for the refreshment of the group.

The Wives Club also announced the election of a new slate of officers: JoAnne Young, President; Lorraine Hollowell, Vice President; Shirley Taylor, Secretary; Clara Richardson Treasurer and Mary Grover, Program Chairman.

The Club meets on the first and third Tuesday of every month at the Victory Village Nursery. Meetings begin at 8 p. m.

DR. GODFREY SPEAKS—Dean of Faculty James Godfrey spoke to the pledge classes of twenty-four fraternities Thursday night at the annual IFC banquet. He told them of the responsibilities placed on their shoulders as not only fraternity men but Carolina gentlemen. (Norm Kantor Photo)

Is Compulsory Insurance Complaint Billowing In NC?

North Carolina's reaction to the compulsory automobile liability insurance program has been fairly quiet, so far as we can judge, but a big stimulant to complaint may be billowing on the horizon.

A report in The Wall Street Journal says the cost of automobile liability insurance is rising all around the country, and for at least one very good reason: The soaring cost of automobile repairs.

Consider these comparative figures:

The left tail light assembly for a popular make of car sold for $16.45 in 1953; the cost rose to $24.35 in 1957; and this year, because it contains a back-up light and other fancy doodads, the cost is $58.35.

Another 1958 automobile has a fancy decorated trunk, a series of ridges with points in them; any slight rear-end bump requires a jewelry metal worker to make repairs; consequently most repair shops simply order a new trunk at $60.

An owner paid $97.50 for a wrap-around windshield on a certain make of car last year; this year the price is $190.

Overall, one Middle Western insurance executive says repairing accident damages to automobiles was up 7 per cent in 1957 over 1956.

So Tar Heels may reasonably expect these new styling difficulties will bring with them higher repair costs and higher insurance rates. In a state just beginning an experiment with compulsory insurance that could be dangerous indeed.

Aside from the repair problems, many able insurance men anticipate that the compulsory insurance law in North Carolina will automatically lift insurance rates. Many previously uninsured owners will be involved in major wrecks on the highways. As the number of covered wrecks rise, the cost of insurance could rise with it.

As insurance companies become more selective in signing up poor risks, North Carolina may face the problem of what to do with a large group of motorists not considered insurable by private companies. In many states this problem is handled by the "assigned risk pool." Each insurance firm agrees to take a portion of the accepted poor risks but coverage is restricted in amount and rates are stiffer than other motorists pay.

A group of insurance companies suggested this plan to the North Carolina state insurance commissioner during the 1957 General Assembly, but the matter was not pushed.

A combination of circumstances —mainly higher insurance rates— may lead to extended debate about compulsory automobile insurance in the 1959 General Assembly. The answer appears to rest in how well the 1957-enacted law stands up under actual test. —Greensboro Daily News

Paper Says S. C. Mishap Should Lessen Fear Tension

Relatively slight physical damage resulted from the accidental dropping of an unarmed atomic bomb near Florence, S. C., this week, but the incident's non-nuclear fall-out quickly spanned the Atlantic Ocean.

In England, where there has been much to-do about American planes flying overhead with hydrogen bombs, the story rated big, black type and blown-up pictures. There was a similar reaction in West Germany and, to a lesser extent, elsewhere in Western Europe.

The Soviet Union, which never lets a good propaganda pitch go by, is now busy warning the world that a final, catastrophic war could be touched off by such an accidental bomb dropping.

In this country, several congressmen are demanding an investigation of the hazards in flying explosives about.

In short, everyone is excited about what happened — except, maybe, the people around Florence. They seem to be taking it all in their casual stride.

Any destructive accident is, of course, regrettable. Certainly this one, with its atomic bomb scare potential, is doubly so. But it does have its reassuring aspects, as Pentagon officials have nervously pointed out.

Over and over again, our defense leaders have declared that an unarmed nuclear device will not go off, even if it is dropped or a plane carrying it crashes. One specialist figured the odds against an accidental nuclear explosion at two billion-to-one.

Now, the point has been proved the hard way.

Even though the immediate reaction by the British—the chief fretters about the danger of a nuclear accident—was a shade on the hysterical side; sober reflection should rectify this.

Unfortunate as they are, a crater in a field, a wrecked frame house and six minor injuries hardly add up to the Hiroshima-like calamity some alarmists have feared.

There are some disturbing questions raised by the incident, to be sure. Within the bounds of security, we would like to know more about the mechanical failure, or combination of failures, that released the bomb, as well as about the circumstances under which nuclear devices are taken aloft.

Certainly, this mishap is good reason to redouble our safety precautions. If we can make those two billion-to-one odds even more favorable, fine.

Our net reaction, however, must be that this sort of thing is a hazard of the age in which we live. We can be grateful that no one was hurt, that damage was slight. —The Charlotte Observer.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Students Need To Have Look At Other Side

John Gates, ex-editor of the 'Daily Worker' and a Communist convicted of conspiracy under the Smith Act, spoke in the John H. Finley Student Center at City College in New York under the auspices of the student newspaper, according to a recent article in the 'New York Times'.

A year ago, Gates had been banned from the six municipal colleges of New York by the college presidents acting in the capacity as the administrative council of the Board of Higher Education. At that time the council took action to prevent persons convicted of conspiring to teach the violent overthrow of the Government under the Smith Act from speaking on the campuses of the municipal colleges. Recently, the president of City College and president of the council, Dr. Buell G. Gallagher, said that it is now up to the individual college presidents to decide whether or not Gates is allowed to speak on their campuses. However, this ruling does not apply to other persons convicted under the Smith Act.

The reason for lifting the ban on Gates, according to the administrative council, is that since the date of the ruling a year ago "it appears clear that John Gates has changed the position which had led to his conviction under the Smith Act" and that the ruling need no longer to apply to him. Gates announced his resignation from the Communist party and from the 'Daily Worker' on January 10.

About 250 students listened to Gates' speech (the enrollment of City College is about 9,000) in which he restated that for all practical purposes the Communist party had ceased to exist, for him. He also stated that he had no faith in capitalism and contended that a Socialist movement was needed in the United States. Gates said: "there is a base right now for a radical movement in this country."

The council, unanimous in its vote to let Gates speak, began to round out the obligation of a 'higher education.' The object of education is not to shield the student from both sides of the story, but to teach him both sides and provide him with an education that will allow him to make an intelligent choice on the facts that are presented before him on any problem.

Every student knows the basics of capitalism as it is 'preached' in nearly every institute of education in the nation, but very few get the socialist or other forms of government presented to them in the same detail.

Colleges and universities throughout the United States should begin to recognize that the students should have a 'good look' at the 'other side', even if it serves no other purpose than to educate him on the meaning of the words communism or socialism. — Connecticut Daily Campus.

"You Know, Lewis, I Think I Do Detect Some Blasts"

Lenoir, Student Aid Change Asked

By CURTIS GANS

A compromise last year seems to have made a dead isue this year. This should not be a dead issue.

Last year, G. W. Prillaman compromised with student help: by paying them in tickets rather than in a certain daily quantity of food during a day.

The point is that paying help in tickets isn't right either, although it may correspond to the letter of the law.

The students working in Lenoir Hall are trying to pay their way through school. They are supposedly working at self-help jobs.

The trouble is that they have no real chance to help themselves, since if they really wanted to save money from the non-negotiable tickets, they would have to attend summer school to get any benefit from what they save by eating the 40c special instead of a higher priced meal.

What the job amounts to is a 'help Lenoir Hall job" rather than a help the student project.

It may be argued that the student does not have to work at Lenoir Hall, and indeed if they can get out of it they do. Yet, jobs are scarce on this campus and students sometimes have no place else to go to get at least a little something towards defraying their expenses for college.

It is indeed a bad situation where the university cannot see fit to provide better payments for its students, who are filling a gap that it would cost the university much more to fill.

A step was made in the right direction last year, but it has not been followed up.

It is the responsibility of Mr. Prillaman, student government, and the administration to try to set the situation of paying Lenoir Hall workers right.

This pay can only be in the form of cash at the presetn rate of 75c an hour.

The entire problem of student aid might bear looking into.

At present if a man lives anyplace but a dormitory ,he is not considered in real need of money, and hence is often rfeused a loan.

This should not be. It is actually cheaper to live in some fraternity houses, and in some apartment buildings than it is to live in the dormitories. Yet, people are being refused because they cannot show the need.

The only one thing that is sure in this system is that the student who gets a loan will be turning a certain amount back of his investment to the university and thus the university can charge lower interest rates.

Yet, there should be a fund available for those students who have real need, and cannot currently get a loan. Even if the interest rates were higher, this would be a blessing to the students who currently are unable to help themselves enough to pay for four years of residence at the university. Now is the time to start looking into these problems, and now is the time for correction.

CUT TAXES, OR—

How Help The Economy – Today's Big Question

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP)—The economy may be saved or wrecked by the guessing game now going on: Is it better to start a huge federal spending program to fight the recession or wait in the hope it will go away?

The antirecession arguments focus on two main methods: A tax cut or big add new federal spending. This is a good time to ask:

"What's the difference—in principle—between big government spending or a big tax cut to overcome the depression? There's no basic difference. They'd both cost the government money. One might work faster than the other.

CAUTIOUS ON TAX CUT

Both the Eisenhower administration and the Democratic leadership in Congress are cautious about a tax cut now. Eisenhower full of optimism the economy will take a natural upturn, is full of caution in all directions.

He shows no eagerness for a big, antirecession spending program, although he has urged speeding up of projects already approved by Congress.

The Democrats in Congress talk of a 10-point program to stimulate business and employment. It includes the kind of thing Eisenhower talks about—a speedup in programs already authorized, but also new construction and, if necessary, a modern version of the old WPA of depression days.

Not all members of Congress are as hesitant about a tax cut as Eisenhower and the Democratic leaders. For instance, Sen. Douglas (D-Ill) wants a tax cut now of around $5,200,000,000.

The Eisenhower administration—despite the dim view the President previously took of it—is showing increasing signs of thinking of a tax cut. Vice President Nixon this week urged it—unless the economy improves soon.

NO IMMEDIATE DECISION

This week, Eisenhower put off any immediate decision on the tax cut idea, but he's going to start discussing it with top Republicans.

On March 8 Eisenhower made this statement: ". . . The proper relation of government to the growth and vigor of the American economy must necessarily be to stimulate private production and employment not to substitute public spending for private spending."

And he derided the Democrats' "pump-priming schemes." But most of the steps he's urged—in speedup of authorized programs or the spending of new money—are essentially pump-priming steps.

In one sense, at least, a tax cut also would amount to public spending.

Government spending programs hand out government dollars. But a tax cut would just as truly be handing out government money by letting people keep their dollars which otherwise would have gone to the government.

A five-billion-dollar spending program or a five-billion-dollar tax cut would cost the government exactly the same.

There is this difference in effect: A tax cut would put money faster into the hands of people to spend on things they want and thus create jobs for people to make the things they want. A big federal spending program wouldn't affect everybody and no doubt would take longer to boost the economy.

IT MUST STOP

Somewhere . . .

Somewhere, sometime, somehow, it's got to stop. . .

Today the average citizen is ruled more and more not by law, but by regulation. And they aren't the same thing at all.

Law is enacted by the citizens' duly elected representatives; and if it's good law, it simply puts into the statutes the thinking and convictions of the majority. That is, it comes up from the people. A regulation, on the other hand, is an edict imposed from above.

Furthermore, if the citizens don't like the law their representative helps enact, they can fire him at the ballot box. But they can't fire the fellows who promulgate the regulations. They are appointees; often appointees of appointees of appointees. And when they aren't that, they are under U. S. Civil Service or the State Merit System, and so are beyond the citizens' control—even a change of administrations leaves them untouched.

We are not saying that there aren't a few areas where regulation may be necessary, and where the public servant should be removed from political pressure. What we are saying is that (a) the thing has got out of hand; and (b) there is a widespread tendency on the part of these people to forget they are the servants, not the masters, of the people.

The latest in a long series of instances is the National Park Service's announcement that it will charge tolls on the Blue Ridge Parkway, effective June 1.

It didn't say the matter was under consideration, and wait to get public reaction. It didn't consult members of Congress. It simply announced that that's the way it's going to be.

And it could not have said more plainly in words what its attitude said: ". . . and what are you going to do about it?"—The Franklin Press.

FREE FLICKS

Tonight's free flick is "Pinky" starring Jeanne Crain and Ethel Waters. There will be two showings 7:30 and 10 o'clock.

BI-PARTISAN BOARD

The Bi-Partisan Selection Board will meet Wednesday, March 18, from 3 to 7 p. m. in the Woodhouse Conference Room to interview all prospective candidates for seats on the Women's Honor Council.

All girls interested in running for a seat on the council have been requested to sign for interviews on the list posted on Woodhouse Conference Room door. There will be three seats available in the spring elections.

WESLEY FOUNDATION

The Wesley Foundation will have its Sunday Morning Seminar at 9:30 a.m. in the church basement. The topic for discussion is "What is Unique About Methodist Beliefs?"

The Sunday Evening Forum will start with supper at 6:45 and the main program will begin at 6:45 in the main sanctuary. Sunday evening's program will be a reading and discussion of Samuel Beckett's existentialist tragicomedy, "Waiting For Godot."

CAROLINA QUARTERLY

Back copies of the Carolina Quarterly are needed to fill library orders. The copies needed are Vol. 9, No. 1 and 2. Copies of these should be left at the Quarterly office in Graham Memorial. Twenty cents will be paid for each copy.

Try-Outs Set Next Week For 'Sound'

Annual try-outs for Sound and Fury will be held Sunday and Monday from 2 to 6 p. m. in Memorial Hall, and call-backs have been set for Monday from 4 to 6 p. m.

For those pepole who have never worked with the production of a muscial, Sound and Fury provides the opportunity. Scripts are available at Graham Memorial to be checked out and looked over. The production is seeking singers, dancers, actors, people to make sets and do all kinds of back stage work.

The creators of this production are John Yardley and Michael Dunn. It will be directed by Cecil Hartsoe and produced by G. C. Pridgen. Sets will be designed by Ed Crow. Jack Mitchell is handling the business affairs.

Jurymen Will Be Selected Next Week

The first jurymen to serve on UNC's newly revised Men's Honor Council will be selected next week, according to a statement released yesterday by George Ragsdale, chairman of the council.

A jury of nine students will sit a five-man council in deciding cases involving alleged honor offenses. Seven of these jurors are to be chosen by the student body attorney general from a list of endorsed jurors provided by the Honor System Commission, which will screen applicants.

The remaining four jurors will be chosen by the student body president, subject to approval by the student legislautre. However, only two of these jurors will be allowed to sit on any one case. Thus, under the new jury trial system, a defendent would be tried before a jury consisting of nine students. This system was adopted last Thursday night by the Student Legislature.

Chairman Ragsdale urged all interested persons to appear before the Honor Commission to be screened for jury duty.

"I earnestly hope that the student body will accept both the privilege and the challenge that has been presented to them," he said.

The seven jury members chosen by the attorney general will serve for only one session of the honor council. A new seven-member group will be appointed for each following session.

In commenting on his decision, the current editor said he would have more time "for scholarstic work and other areas of the campus in which I am interested" if he did not fill the editor's chair next year.

"Those facts, I feel, are just as important as any service I could render as editor of The Daily Tar Heel," he added.

A member of Zeta Psi fraternity, Eisele began work on the campus newspaper last fall as managing editor. He subsequently won the recall election for editor-in-chief, a post whose term expires with coming spring elections.

Grail Awards Scholarships To Five Here

The Order of the Grail has awarded scholarships to James B. Clay, James Coode, Bruce B. Higginbothams, Vir N. Sharma, and Toby R. Whittle for the 1958 spring semester, according to Grail delegate John H. Kerr III.

Twice yearly the Order of the Grail gives a limited number of scholarships to deserving Carolina students. These scholarships are given in the hope of providing better opportunities for able students who are financially burdened, and who have proved themselves worthy of Grail recognition.

Quarterly Announces 8th Awards

The Carolina Quarterly has announced its eighth annual Fiction Awards to be given to writers of the two best stories submitted for its next issue.

Continuing its eight-year-old tradion of rewarding and encouraging literary excellence the Quarterly will present two cash awards to two duly selected winners.

The editors and the Fiction Board will be the judges and their decision will be final; however, the Quarterly reserves the right to withhold the awards in the event there are no stories of sufficient merit.

All entries should be accompanied by a stamped, selfaddressed envelope and will not be accepted if postmarked later then midnight, April 1.

All manuscripts should be mailed to: the Carolina Quarterly, Box 1117, Chapel Hill, N. C., or brought to the Quarterly office or Information desk in Graham Memorial.

Pre-Medical Society Slates Annual Meet

Alpha Epsilon Delta, the national pre-medical honor society, will hold its 13th national convention at the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, Ark., March 27-29, according to Frank Farrell, president of the Beta Chapter at UNC.

Five to ten members of the local chapter are expected to attend the weekend affair. Farrell had this comment on UNC's representation, "It is truly a wonderful opportunity for premed and pre-dental students to meet similarly interested students from other schsol throughout the country. I am hoping that our chapter will have from five to ten boys there, and maybe even win the attendance award given at each convention."

The Arkansas Alpha Chapter will serve as host for this gathering of pre-medical and pre-dental students and educators from 69 chapters throughout the country. Business sessions of the convention will be held Thursday and Friday. A banquet is scheduled for Friday evening when Dr. Walter S. Wiggins, associate secretary of the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals of the American Medical Association, will be guest speaker.

On Saturday, pre-medical and predental advisors and students from the Arkansas area will join with members of the convention for an all day conference on pre-medical and pre-dental education in cooperation with the University of Arkansas Medical Center.

The formal program will be devoted to a symposium on pre-professional education with several nationally known speakers from the medical, dental, and liberal arts colleges. These talks will be followed by panel discussions on the requirements, procedures and details of admission to medical and dental schools. An informal discussion among the students and advisers with the representatives of the admissions committees of professional schools.

Attendance for this year's convention, including advisers, is expected to be about 200.

his or her dormitory that may be worth putting in The Daily Tar Heel is given to the paper.

"The job is not difficult or time consuming. It does not even require the stringer's appearance in the office every day. Most of the material can be phoned in, and if it is a fast developing story, a riot or panty raid for instance, regular staffers can be sent to the scene to help the stringer get a full account.

"Campus organizations form another area where coverage can always be improved. Obviously it is not feasible to have a reporter cover the meeting of every club on campus. Since such organizations are usually glad to have recognition in the paper, it would not be hard to contact the president of each group and suggest the best way of telling the student about the club.

"This includes a short explanation of what such stories should include, who the stories should be submitted to, and should make clear The Daily Tar Heel's deadlines.

"These two suggestions alone could increase the paper's coverage of the campus to a point rarely reached by college newspapers on campuses the size of Carolina.

Bandmasters' Organization Selects Fred

Herbert W. Fred, director of bands at Carolina, has been elected to membership in the American Bandmasters Association, an organization for representatives of various band fields.

Selection of Fred was made at the recent annual meeting held at the University of Illinois. The Association was formally organized in 1929 by John Philip Sousa and Edwin Franko Goldman to recognize selected bandmasters who have achieved more than local prominence and who are known for their professional leadership.

The present membership consists of a balanced representation from the various band fields-professional, municipal and industrial, university, college, high school and armed forces bands.

Four other North Carolinans are active members of the association: Earl Slocum, Chapel Hill; James C. Harper, Lenoir; Herbert Hazelman, Greensboro and James Pfohl, Brevard.

Independents Must File By March 22

All independent candidates for spring election must file in the Student Government office by March 22, according to Elections Board Chairman Bob Furtado.

Any candidate for Student Council, Women's or Men's Honor Council or editor of the Daily Tar Heel must be screened by the Bi-Partisan Selections Board and must file for election by March 19.

The editorial selection board will meet Monday at 2 p. m. in the Grail Room. Women's Honor Council selections board will meet from 3 to 7 p.m. Wednesday in GM's Woodhouse Conference Room, and candidates for Men's Honor Council and Student Council will be interviewed Monday and Tuesday from 3 to 4:30 p. m. in the Council Room in GM.

"Being editor of my high school paper, also gave me added experience," Gans stated.

"An editorial candidate must have a broader perspective of the campus so that he is able to realize some of the many opportunities for news.

"At present, I am chairman of the Free Film Committee of GMAB, a member of the executive board of GMAB, a member of the Student-Faculty Forum Committee, a member of the Foreign Film Committee and Petite Dramatique Committee.

"I also am a member of The Carolina Quarterly, which gave me needed experience in other phases of publication work."

"Perhaps one of the most important committees that I have been a member of is the Newspaper Research, which gave me a chance to see what other college papers in the country were like. Many improvements for The Daily Tar Heel were fostered by membership in this committee."

"I feel that with the experience that I have had, and the awareness of what is going on the campus, that I will be able to put out the best newspaper of any college in the United States," Gans stated.

Planetarium Feature Using 73 Projectors

Seventy-three projectors — the greatest number ever to pull electric current in a Morehead Planetarium production—are being used in "Easter, the Awakening."

The projectors and ither lighting in the annual tribute to Easter would draw a total of almost 25,000 watts if all were used simultaneously.

That astounding electrical figure is exclusive of eight motors, the sound system, and lighting not used in the show. Nor does it include the 55watts Precipitron, which does run for a solid hour and a half during each performance.

The Precipitron is the machine which keeps the audience unaware that it is viewing prejections on the stainless steel dome.

It takes the dust out of the air by charging the particles plus and minus and sticking them to a plate —a process known technically as electronic precipitation.

Twenty-six of the projectors are used simultaneously in the Chapel Hill panorama. The others are employed at one time or another in the religious drama of readings and music aid lights in such scenes as the streets of Jerusalem, Jesus before Pilate, Gethsemane, Crown of Thorns, the Rising Figure, the Ghost and others.

AD MAN NEEDED

According to an announcement by the Carolina Quarterly, the position of advertising manager on the staff is now open.

The position is a paying job and any student interested should contact the Quarterly editor, Christian Lefebure, at the Graham Memorial offices of the magazine.

Office hours for the Quarterly are: 3 to 5 p. m. daily and the phone number: 9-3376.

The last independent candidate to win the office of president was Donald Fowler in 1955.

Carter, besides being student body treasurer, is a Morehead scholar, vice president of the IDC and a member of the Grail.

Earlier this week Don Furtado (Student Party) and Al Goldsmith (University Party) entered the contest for the top student position.

Local Mayor Proclaims Special Week

Oliver K. Cornwell, Mayor of Chapel Hill, has urged by proclamation that the people of Chapel Hill observe National Library Week March 16-22.

This week, the Mayor said, is being recognized nationally for the first time. All citizens are being asked to take part in a campaign to develop a 'better-read, better-informed America.'

"I believe it would be well for us as individuals to pause for a moment and recognize the importance of books in our modern world," Mayor Cornwell said. "Nothing not moving pictures, not radio, not television, can take the place of the printed word."

The Mayor called the freedom to read, and to read anything we choose, one of democracy's most cherished liberties. "Let us all exercise this freedom," he said.

Mayor Cornwell said he had issued the proclamation so that "the people of the Chapel Hill community may have some small share in this movement to revive and improve our nation's reading habits."

Grad Awards For Students Slated Here

The Institute of International Education has announced a new program of Fulbright awards for graduate study in Ireland.

It is expected that three awards, for which application must be made by April 15, will be given for the academic year 1958-59.

Application forms and additional information may be received from the campus Fulbright adviser, Frank M. Duffey, 211 Murphey Hall.

Bishop And Scurlock Will Have Busy Summer

Carolina track stars Wayne Bishop and Dave Scurlock have quite a summer lined up. There'll be plenty of running for these two juniors and in what warmer climates than Texas and California.

Bishop and Scurlock will go to Houston about the first of June to begin preparations for the Houston Meet of Champions on June 7th. From there they'll go to Berkeley, Calif. for the National Collegiates and on to Bakersfield for the National AAU on the 21st of June.

Both are eagerly awaiting this big trip. Bishop's main concern is his weak knee which has hampered him consistently since last year. The Greenville, N. C. native is hoping he'll be fully recovered by the summer. If he is at full strength, look for the names Bishop and Scurlock to appear quite often over the warm months as the two boys continue to add national prestige to themselves and their school.

Tennis Prospects Look Better

Valdimir Chernik, the Hungarian tennis star who took over as coach here last year, will be coming back to Chapel Hill for another season in the next few weeks. Cernik (pronounced Chernik) has been working at the Everglades Club In West Palm Beach over the last few months.

Things are looking much better for the tennis coach this season. Last year he inherited a team that had been hit hard by graduation and he and Ham Strayhorn had their hands full trying to rebuild Carolina tennis to its previous high standing.

This season, the team will be well stocked with fine potential and should be a much better club. Many of the outstanding high school netters of a couple of years back are now ready for varsity action here. Freshman prospects also look very good. It should not be long before Carolina tennis again reaches national prominence.

Major League Predictions

With the Grapefruit League in full swing now, the time has come for sportswriters around the country to begin speculating about major league baseball winners come World Series time this fall.

Last year about this time we picked the Yankees and the Braves to meet in the Series, but we predicted the Yanks to take it in six games. So, with determination to "do better" in 1958 we'll give our prognosticative instinct another twirl.

In the American League, it looks like another great year for the Yanks and we figure they'll win the AL without too much trouble. After that, it looks as though the White Sox will continue their role as "always a bridesmaid" and finish second.

Ted Williams should move the Boston RedSox at least into third place. Fourth place is a toss up between Detroit and Baltimore but figuring the Orioles are still a year away we'll say Detroit fourth and Baltimore fifth. It will take more than Frank Lane to help the Cleveland Indians and we can see no better than a sixth place finish for the Injuns. Kansas City and Washington should round out the cellar teams in that order.

The team that made Milwaukee famous should keep the suds bubbling for another year in the beer city, but it won't be easy. We look for St. Louis to run a mighty close second with the transplanted Los Angeles Dodgers third. If muscle bound Cincinnati can get some consistent pitching, the Reds will make fourth place at least.

We see a fifth place finish for the Philadelphia Phils, with the San Francisco Giants in sixth, the Pittsburgh Pirates seventh and the Chicago Cubs in the cellar.

In the series, we'll string along wih Yanks again in seven games. Touche?

Duke Blue-White Football Today

DURHAM, N. C. (AP)—Duke winds up a hard-hitting spring football practice this afternoon with the annual Blue-White intra-squad game at 2 p.m.

Sophomores may play prominent roles in the game. Injuries and illness have hampered many regular varsity performers in recent weeks.

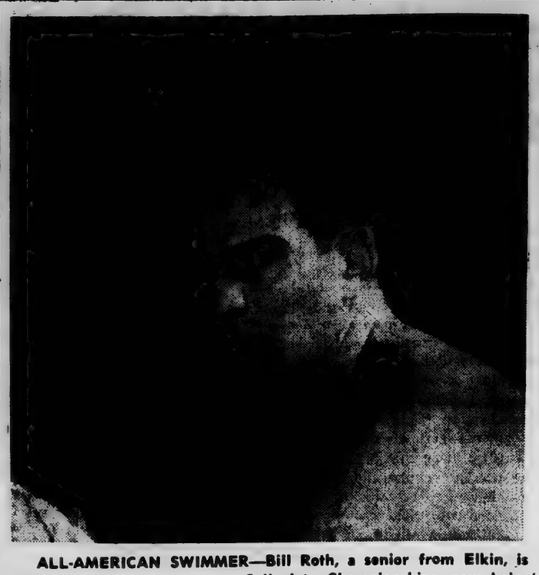
Rebuilding The Navy

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Eddie Erdelatz doesn't plan to teach his Navy football team any new defensive gimmicks "until the offense catches up."

Last year Navy ranked second in the nation on defense and whipped Rice, 20-7, in the Cotton Bowl. Erdelatz is working the 1958 Middie team harder on defense than ever before in spring training, but doesn't have any new strategy up his sleeve.

Faced with "the biggest rebuilding job since I've been here," he will not change or add to his successful formula unless he finds it necessary next fall.

Bob Brodhead, regular quarterback, and George Dutrow, a top halfback, have been excused from spring work and will not play.



George Harris will quarterback the Blue starters, with Pryor Millner directing the White squad.

A Durham station (WTVD) will televise the contest.

The game ushers in a busy week of football at Duke. A three-day football clinic opens Moday. Instructors will be head coaches of the North Carolina Big Four schools; Jim Tatum of Carolina, Earle Edwards of State, Paul Amen of Wake Forest and host Bill Murray of Duke.

Tennis Meeting

There will be a meeting of all varsity and freshman tennis candidates this afternoon at 2 o'clock on the varsity courts.

ALL-AMERICAN SWIMMER—Bill Roth, a senior from Elkin, is participating in the Eastern Collegiate Championships now being held at Annapolis, Maryland. Roth, a co-captain of the Tar Heels, is a member of the freestyle relay team which finished fourth last night.

Billy Martin Impresses Detroit Manager Tighe

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP)—Jack Tighe, manager of the Detroit Tigers, asked a question Friday . . "Where on earth did Billy Martin get the reputation as a bad boy"

"If Martin is a bad boy, I'd like to have a whole team of such bad boys," Tighe declared. "Billy's been here two weeks and already he has become a good influence on the club. He's the kind of guy this club has needed for a long time. All the guys are crazy about him. He's pepped them up. He's a born leader. He has a confidence that's contagious.

"Martin already has done things you don't look for from a player. He's even got Al Kaline singing in the bus now. Al hasn't sung for 20 years."

A question was asked of Tighe . . . Will Martin, a second baseman all his working years, make it as a shortstop?

"Well," replied the Little Skipper, "Chuck Dressen says he cannot. Casey Stengel says he can. I'll take Casey's word for it. From what Billy has shown so far, I'd say he can. He's quite a kid. He's certainly fooled me. To be perfectly frank, I had some doubts about him but so far he's done everything a good shortstop has to do. He has the right attitude and he certainly has the desire. He's no Phil Rizzuto but I'm sure now he'll do the job.

"Martin has accepted this as a personal challenge. He says he can do it and I believe him." Billy has been put in the charge of Johnny Pesky, former star shortstop of the Boston Red Sox, who currently is in Detroit's minor league chain as manager of the Lancaster Pa. club of the Eastern League. Pesky keeps a record of every play made by Martin in a little note book and after each game, discusses these plays with his pupil.

"So far he's done a fine job," Pesky observed. "If he continues to improve at this rate, he's a cinch to make a good shortstop. I've been working with him to throw with a three-quarters motion and to sort of circle the ball as he comes in so that he can get it away with more power.

"Billy learns fast and I haven't to play shortsop like I did—cheat a little. By that I mean, he' ll have to move in a step or two on certain hitters, and in certain situations.

"I'm confident Martin wll fool a lot of people and make the switch. He wants to beat you all the time and he's always trying something.. The others liste ! to him bencause he has tha baseball isinct and he knows what to do all the time.'

State Vs. Old Timers

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP)—State's defending Atlantic Coast Conference football champions wind up spring football practice today with a game matching the varsity against an "Old Timer" array.

Dick Christy, State's All America halfback, will play for the Old Timers, along with such former Wolfpack aces as Alex Webster of the pro New York Giants, Eddie West, Tom atich and Wally Prince, West, Tom Katich and Wally Prince and George Marinkov.

The contest will serve as a proving ground for several players up from the freshman team. One of the most promising is halfback Claude Gibson of Asheville. Al Michaels, assistant coach, says Gibson "has loads of natural ability and shows me more every time I see him in action." He was the leading frosh scorer during a 4-1 season last year.

Head Coach Earle Edwards says the 20-day practice has been "a big success." He is counting on sophomores to reach their potential and give him the depth he had a year ago.

FINAL STATISTICS

Brennan Is TopCager

By BILL KING

Final Carolina basketball facts and figures.

All-American Pete Brennan finished his collegiate career with a 21.307 scoring average in 26 games and amassed a total of 303 rebounds to lead the ACC in both departments this season. Brennan scored 554 points for the year and had an 11.7 rebound average.

Senior guard Tommy Kearns was second to Brennan in scoring with 388 points in 26 games for a 14.9 average. Sophomores Lee Shaffer (11.0) and Harvey Salz (10.2) rounded out the double figures scoring for Carolina. Other averages: Bob Cunningham (5.0), Dick Kepley (4.8), Ray Stanley (2.3), John Crotty (1.6), Roy Searcy (1.3) and Danny Lotz (1.0).

Salz was the top percentage free throw shooter with a .761 mark. He hit 64 of 84 charity tosses. Kepley was second with 37 of 50 free throws for a .740 mark, followed closely by Brennan with 214 of 291, for .735 and Shaffer with 80 of 106 for .731.

Field Goals

From the floor, Brennan was tops with 170 field goals in 388 attempts and a .436 percentage. Shaffer followed Brennan with a .430 field goal percentage on 1033 of 240 shots. Kearns was third among the higher scorers with a .412 mark on 135 goals in 328 attempts.

Individually, two 32 point efforts by Brennan and one by Kearns was the top individual scoring performance for the Tar Heels. Brennan hit his against Wake Forest and N. C. State and Kearns against Clemson. Shaffer's 133 field goals against Furman was the top individual performance in that department.

Team Highs

Brennan attempted 20 free throws against Maryland and again against N. C. State for the high in that department. His 18 conversions against State was the most any player made in a single game this season. Brennan also led the individual rebound performances with 23 against Clemson.

As a team, Carolina averaged 71.8 points per game while holding its opponents to 64.9. The Tar Heels averaged 40.8 rebounds with 1061 in 26 games. Their field goal percentage was .396 and from the line, .694.

Team highs were as follows: Total points, 115 against South Carolina; field goals, 44 vs. South Carolina; free throws, attempted, 46 against N. C. State; free throws made, 37 against State; total fouls, 33 against Maryland.

Tar Heel Swimmers Make Showing At Championships

ANNAPOLIS, Md.—The Tar Heel swimming team, finished the second night of competition in the Eastern Collegiate Championships being held at Annapolis, Maryland, with four individuals and the freestyle relay team making good showings.

Tony Schiffman, a junior from Greensboro, led the way for the Tar Heels by capturing a fourth in the 220-yard freestyle in 2:14.3. In Thursday's action, he finished second in the 1500-meter freestyle clocking 19:40.1. This is considered excellent time.

Mac Mahaffey copped a fourth in the 200-yard butterfly in 2:17.1. He, along with Kit Mercer, will swim in the 200-yard breaststroke tonight.

In the diving department, Tar Heel Ned Meekins finished fourth and Pete Reynolds eighth.

In the freestyle relay, the Tar Heels finished second with Jeff Zwicker, Bill Zickgraf, Bill Roth, and Walt Rose doing the honors. Their time was 3:30.4.

The times were the best for most of these men this season. Some of the officials at the meet believe that Schiffman's time in the 1500 may be enough for All-American.

Tonight, the Tar Heels will swim in four events. The team of Brent Nash, Mahaffey, Zickgraf, and Rose will swim the medley relay. Rose will swim in the 200-yard backstroke and Zickgraf will be in the 100-yard butterfly.

The meet will decide only individual championships, no team points awarded.

Dartmouth Wins

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (AP)—Dartmouth mauled Manhattan, 79-72, Friday night to gain the finals of the NCAA Eastern Regional basketball tournament. Temple defeated Maryland in the second game. Temple and Dartmouth play Saturday night for a berth in next week's four-team finals at Louisville, Ky.

"Spend a day with me at work"

"I'm an Equipment Engineer for Illinois Bell Telephone Company in Chicago. Speaking personally, I find Bell Telephone engineering darned interesting and very rewarding. But judge for yourself."

"8:30 a.m. We start at my desk. I'm studying recommendations for installing additional dial telephone facilities at the central office in suburban Glenview. This is the beginning of an interesting new engineering assignment."

"10:20 a.m. I discuss a proposed layout for the additional central office equipment with Supervising Engineer Sam P. Abate. I'll want to inspect the installation area this afternoon, so I telephone the garage and order a car."

"11:00 a.m. At an interdepartmental conference I help plan procedures for another job that I've been assigned. Working closely with other departments of the company broadens your experience and know-how tremendously."

"2:00 p.m. After lunch I drive out to the Glenview office. Here, in the frame room, I'm checking floor space required by the proposed equipment. Believe me, the way our business is growing, every square foot counts."

"3:10 p.m. Then I drive over to the office at nearby Skokie where a recent engineering assignment of mine is in its final stages. Here I'm suggesting a modification to the Western Electric installation foreman on the job."

"3:30 p.m. Before starting back to Chicago, I examine a piece of Out Sender equipment being removed from the Skokie central office. This unit might fit in just fine at one of our other offices. I'll look into it tomorrow."

"Well, that was today. Tomorrow will be different. As you can see, I take a job from the beginning and follow it through. Often I have a lot of jobs in various stages at the same time. I think most engineers would agree, that keeps work interesting."

Keith Lynn is one of many young engineers who are finding rewarding careers in the Bell Telephone Companies. Find out about opportunities for you. Talk with the Bell interviewer when he visits your campus. And read the Bell Telephone booklet on file in your Placement Office.

Large Group Attends First Local Amateur Radio Meet

More than 40 persons turned out for an organizational meeting Friday night with the purpose of establishing an amateur radio club and station on campus.

Dr. A. V. Masket, Physics Department professor who is to be the faculty adviser to the club and trustee of the club station, presided.

The committee investigating the possibilities of establishing such a club on campus gave a report on the needs for a "ham" club and station.

An amateur station in this locale was suggested as needed to operate in the state and national Civilian Defense radio network. These stations must be amateur because in case of a national emergency, all commercial stations will be required by national law to cease operations. The only stations which will be allowed to operate are those amateur stations which are in the Radio Amateur Civil Emergency Service (RACES).

Will Serve Campus

In addition to RACES, the club will be of service to the campus at times for other services. It will be available to handle messages (free of charge) to anywhere in the world, will be of service in case of any disaster (hurricanes, floods, etc) and will act as an ambassador of the University.

On the educational side, the club will undertake teaching Radio Theory and the Radiotelegraph Code. This method is one of the best means of spreading interest in science in general. The club will also be of aid in scientific projects such as satellite tracking, providing contact with the area (and the U. S.) with scientific and military expeditions to remote areas of the world.

The club will also be equipped to run "Phone Patches," which are telephone connections to the radio equipment so that telephone calls over great distances (even over seas), via radio, can be made at little or no cost. Such services will be free of cost (under Federal Law), and will be made available to the entire student body and the town of Chapel Hill and surrounding area.

Committees Set Up

Several committees were set up to work on the main problems standing in the way of the official sanction of the club by the Administration. A visit to the Chancellor's office last week assured the group that although the administration will not be able to help the group under the present situation, there will be no hinderance.

The subject of funds was brought up, and it was reported that a visit to student body treasurer, Bob Carter, revealed that it will probably be possible (and necessary from the viewpoint of the club) to obtain funds from a special appropriation from the student legislature if sufficent reason is given.

A committee is working to gather enough information to approach the student Legislature. More than 70 letters to other College and University Club stations have been sent out in an effort to get information on other clubs. UNC is practically the only state University without a station on campus.

Several other committees were appointed to lay the ground work for obtaining a federal license, writing a constitution and investigating equipment needs. The next meeting will be March 28 at 7:30 in 250 Phillips Hall.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Ann Morgan, Frances Winston, Linda Lou Chappell, Carol Yeager, Sara Martin, Elizabeth Howell, Elizabeth Sojourner, Charlotte Pope, Donna Snyder, Allene Keith, Margaret Simon and Nancy Meiggs and Charles Nooe, Harold Culbreth, Michael Widoff, Robert Wellons, Robert Knott, Henry Howell, Henry Handy, John Ward, Paul Fuller, Richard Molten, Edmond Lively, Phillip Keeney, William Tadros, Leon Adams, Gene Joonce, Tom Efird, Theodore Boden, Vartab Davidian, William Hendrick, Woodson Fearing, Austin Spangler, Alpheus Benthall, Clarence Crutchfield and James Hathaway.

Dignitaries To Appear At Public Conference

A special press conference, to which all students are invited, will be held by the Carolina Symposium for U. S. Senator John Sparkman of Alabama, Soviet Charge d'Affairs Sergei R. Striganov and author-critic Malcolm Cowley Monday afternoon in Gerrard Hall at 3 o'clock.

The meeting will be in the form of a press conference for all of the North Carolina press but it will include the opportunity for the general public to ask questions of these distinguished Symposium visitors.

Many prominent newspapermen have indicated their intention of being present.

Douglas Eisele, editor of The Daily Tar Heel, will preside at the meeting.

Sonny Hallford, Chairman of the Symposium, said today, "If Carolina students would like to have the opportunity to ask questions of an important Soviet official and get answers to their inquiries, this is their chance.

"Mr. Cowley has participated in every major literary movement in America in the last thirty years. Senator Sparkman is a man of strong convictions on every domestic and foreign political issue. I hope that the questions will be sharp and plentiful."

ROTC Fetes University Officials

The Air Force ROTC Detachment entertained University department heads and officials at an informal coffee hour held Thursday.

The Detachment officers received the guests and the Angel Flight served coffee and cookies.

Among those present were Chancellor William B. Aycock, Dean James L. Godfrey, Dean Cecil Johnson, Dean J. C. Sitterson, Brig. Gen. F. Carlyle Shepard, Sam Magill, Roy Armstrong, J. S. Bennett, J. A. Williams, Edwin S. Lanier, Charles M. Shaffer, H. L. Ferguson, Raymond E. Strong, Dr. Jerome Orne, James Wadsworth, Dr. William Whyburn, Crowell Little and Capt. Walter Holt, USN (Ret.)

Prof. Nash Speaking At Local Grad Club

"Intellectual Conformity in Graduate Education" will be discussed at a supper meeting of the UNC Graduate Club Monday night in Lenoir Hall.

PROFESSOR NASH
Grad Club Speaker

Prof. Arnold S. Nash, history of religion instructor, will be the guest speaker. The supper will begin around 6 p.m. in an upstairs dining room, and Nash will begin speaking at 6:30.

This will be the fifth in a series of nine supper meetings sponsored by the Graduate Club, but open to all interested faculty and students. Guest lecturers come from various departments within the University to lead discussion and exchange of ideas.

Professor Nash will be the second speaker in the general area of social science. Theme for the current portion of the series is "Man's Creative Reaction to the World He Lives In."

Medical History Club Honors Dr. J. Bullitt

The name of the History Club of the UNC School of Medicine has been changed to honor a veteran medical educator.

At a recent meeting of the club it was voted to adopt the name of the James B. Bullitt History Club. Dr. Bullitt is professor emeritus of pathology of the School of Medicine. He retired from active teaching in 1947.

The club was founded five years ago. Dr. Warner Wells and Dr. Charles W. Hooker are the faculty sponsors of the organization.

Although the club is one of the most active medical history clubs in the United States, it is unique in that it has no officers, charter, dues or regular time of meetings.

In an announcement of the change in the name of the club, Dr. Wells said the club had been named for Dr. Bullitt because of the veteran professor's great interest in medical history ,scholarship and books.

The club meets every two or three weeks in the home of some faculty member of the School of Medicine. During the past year some 250 different persons attended meetings of the club.

Dr. Bullitt was born in Louisville, Ky., in 1874, the son of Thomas Walker and Annie Priscilla Logan Bullitt. He received his A.B. degree in 1894 and his M.A. degree in 1895, both from Washington and Lee. His M.D. degree was awarded by the University of Virginia in 1897.

He taught anatomy at the University of Virginia from 1898 to 1903. He served as professor of anatomy at the University of Mississippi from 1903 to 1913. He joined the faculty of the UNC School of Medicine as professor of pathology in 1913 and held that position until he was made professor emeritus in 1947.

Dr. Bullitt served in France with the Army Medical Corps during 1918-19. He is a member of numerous honorary and professional societies.

Officials Announce Program Plans Of April Valkyrie Sing

Sororities will compete with women's dorms, fraternities with men's dorms in this year's annual Valkyrie Sing to be held April 14, in conjunction with the tapping of the Golden Fleece.

The major competitive groups will be men's, women's and special groups. Each of these will be further divided into a singing division and a musical skit division.

A cup will be awarded to the winner in each of the divisions of the various groups. A total of six cups will be awarded.

Any group on campus may enter either the singing or musical skit division of the appropriate group. There must be a minimum of eight people in each entry.

Judging in the singing division will be based on singing and originality. Main emphasis will be placed on singing with 70 points. Originality will receive 30 points.

The musical skit will be judged on the following point system: singing, 40 points; originality, 25 points; presentation, 25 points; costuming, 10 points.

According to Peggy Funk, chairman of the Sing, the reason for the change is "to encourage more groups to enter the sing. By having these two divisions, a group should not feel that it is necessary to stage an elaborate skit when it would prefer just to sing."

In previous years entries were divided into sororities, women's dorms, fraternities, men's dorms, and special groups.

Groups wishing to enter should notify Miss Funk before March 31. Miss Funk can be contacted after 5:30 p.m. at the Chi Omega house. Any further questions should be directed to her as chairman of the Sing.

Copies of the rules and regulations have been sent to the presidents of campus organizations. Any organization failing to receive a copy may obtain one by contacting Miss Funk.

Nobel Winner Will Lecture Here Twice

A Nobel Prize winner in medicine will lecture at the UNC School of Medicine Tuesday and Wednesday.

Dr. Dickinson W. Richards, who was awarded the Nobel Prize in medicine and physiology in 1956, will address the Durham-Orange County Heart Association on March 18 and will address the faculty and students of the UNC School of Medicine on the following day.

Both lectures will be given in the Clinic Auditorium of the UNC Medical School. Dr. Richards will speak at 8 p.m. on Tuesday before the heart group. His subject will be "Cor Pulmonale." On Wednesday at 4 p.m. his subject will be "Vullous Emphysema" before the faculty and students.

Dr. Richards is a member of the Department of Medicine, Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons. He received his B. A. degree from Yale University in 1917. In 1922 Columbia University awarded him an M. A. degree in physiology. His M. D. degree was awarded by Columbia the following year. He received an honorary degree from Yale last year. Also last year, he received the Citation of the American Heart Association.

He has served or either now serves as associate editor of "American Review of Tuberculosis," "Medicine" and "Circulation."

During World War II he served on the National Research Council and the Office of Scientific Research and Development.

Dr. Richards is a noted lecturer and has given endowed lectures before some of the nation's leading medical schools. He is a member of a number of learned societies, holding committee memberships in many of them.

TENNIS TEAM

A meeting of the varsity and freshman tennis teams has been set for 2 p.m. Monday at the varsity tennis courts. All candidates for the squads have been requested to attend the meeting.

Festival Award Gave Soprano Prominence

Alice Riley first rose to national prominence when selected as "Woman Singer of the Year" at the Chicagoland Music Festival in 1954. Two years later she received even greater recognition as "Singer of the Year" in the annual contest of the National Association of Teachers of Singing.

The dramatic soprano will present a recital in Hill Music Hall on Tuesday night at 8 o'clock, sponsored by the UNC Department of Music. The program will be open to the general public at no charge.

She has sung the Beethoven Ninth Symphony and Verdi's Requiem in the Grant Park Summer Series in Chicago and has performed Handel's Messiah and Mendelssohn's Elijah with both the Swedish Choral Society and the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. She is currently being auditioned by the San Francisco and Metropolitan Opera Companies.

Miss Riley will open her Chapel Hill recital with three Purcell arias: "When I am Laid in Earth," "If Music be the Food of Love" and "There's no a Swain of the Plain." The next number will be "Sogno e Zione" by the nineteenth century composer Sgambati. Sibella's "Non ho parole" will close the first group.

The first work after intermission will be the "Air di Lia" from Debussy's dramatic cantata, "L'enfante Prodigue." The final group will be predominantly American: Grieg's "With a Waterlily," Duke's "Central Park at Dusk," "Menotti's "O Black Swan," Shaw's "Heffle Cuckoo Fair," and McArthur's "Night."

Accompanying Miss Riley will be Lionel Lile, her accompanist for six years.

Government Heads Clarify New Honor Council Setup

By BILL CHESHIRE

Here is how the new honor councils work, according to members of the UNC student government.

First, the Men's Honor Council: Under the old system, alleged offenders of the honor system were tried before a council consisting of 14 students elected by the student body. These council members were chosen from the various classes (freshman, sophomore, etc.) and from the graduate school. The student constitution specified how many students would serve on the council from each class.

Under the new sysetm, the council is split up into two groups: a trial jury and a council. The trial jury is composed of 11 students. Seven of these are appointed by the student body attorney general from a list of approved jurors submitted by the Honor System Commission, which screens candidates.

Seven Jurors

These seven jurors serve for only one session of the honor council. Seven more are chosen for each following session.

The four remaining jurors are appointed by the president of the student body and are subject to the approval of the student legislature. However, only two of these four can sit on any one case before the council. Two of these jurors are appointed until the spring elections and the remaining two until the following fall elections.

In addition to the jurors, the new council also consists of five councilmen elected by the student body. Unlike the councilmen under the old system, these men are chosen at large instead of by class.

The duty of the councilmen will be to hand out punishment to those students convicted by the trial jury. A two-thirds vote of the jury is required for conviction of accused students.

Women's Council

Second, the Women's Council: Under the old system, the council consisted of nine women students. As was true of the Men's Council, these women were elected by the student body from the various classes. In addition, one member was chosen from the nurses school.

The Women's council, unlike its male counterpart, was not confined to cases concerning honor offenses. It also tried violations of the Campus Code, infractions of social rules and acted as an appellate court to House Council.

Under the new system, their jurisdiction will remain much the same. However, the makeup of the new Women's Honor Council will be determined as is that of the Men's Council.

In addition, violations of the Campus Code and social rules as well as appeals from the House Council will be tried by a special council. This council will be composed of five members of the Women's Council and three other women selected from a five-member group drawn from the Women's Residence Council.

FRAT MEN WORK—UNC fraternity pledges contributed time and labor this week to help clear land at the site of the Chapel Hill Recreation Center. More than 400 boys participated in the afternoon cleanup, held in cooperation with the Chapel Hill Jaycees, as one event in "Greek Week." Various competitive events were held during the week to determine the best pledge class among the campus social fraternities, an award taken by Phi Delta Theta. Three of the 400 are shown at work, L-R: Max Carpenter of Concord, Theta Chi pledge; Tucker Renfrow of Lucama, Sigma Phi Epsilon; and Davis Wilson of Greensboro, Alpha Tau Omega.

Official Agreement Comes On Judicial System Apathy

Several days ago we commented about non-Greek apathy toward student courts at UNC. Indications since that time have pointed to official agreement on this problem.

George Ragsdale, Chairman of the Men's Honor Council, was the first to reiterate the need for a broader participation in the judicial system on the part of non-Greek students. He wrote us this note:

"I am glad you wrote what you did this morning about the apathy of non-fraternity men toward the court. I agree with you and Sonny (Student Body President Sonny Evans) that a predominance of fraternity men is not a healthy sign.

"However, I assure you that I could not have asked for greater service from all who have served with me this year. They have done an outstanding job under great strain."

Well, that's about what we said in this column Friday. It's assuring to know that the council chairman not only recognizes the non-participation problem, but that he also sees in it an "unhealthy" sign for non-Greek members.

We know of no other person within student government whose sentiments about the court should be taken more seriously and with greater consideration than that of the Men's Honor Council chairman.

In approaching this problem, the fact must be realized that fourteen of fifteen members of the Men's Council are members of fraternities at UNC. Ten of these are from three houses, which houses traditionally have sent men to the council.

Why is this situation allowed to exist? What is responsible for the unbalanced representation which gives members of one-fifth of the university society judicial control over the other four-fifths?

This unbalanced representation is in effect now and has been in past years because non-Greek members have divorced themselves of interest in the courts and have allowed the control thereof to slip unnoticed from their hands.

It is this fact—the fact that non-Greeks often times express little concern with the affairs of student government — that contributes to the misconception that fraternity men are federalists who desire to place government in the hands of a select few for the control of the many.

If ever there were a time to rally for a cause, if ever non-Greek members of the student body should join hands to a sure expression of their own interests, it is now in the problem of unbalanced representation on the student courts.

It will be a difficult task; perhaps this year little could be done to place more members in the judiciary from non-Greek areas of the campus. And it will be difficult because the fraternity men now associated with the court are outstanding without exception, and have performed their duties commendably.

As Ragsdale said, "They have done an outstanding job under great strain."

Boys, you can't criticize that caliber of performance. It takes votes, a lot of votes from a unified interest, to gain the right to equal performance on our sudent courts. And it will take a good man to measure up to the tradition which those courts have produced in the past several years.

Is Suicide An Escape Of Dying?

The Southern opponents of desegregation continue to dig their own graves. Virginia's Prince Edward County, long a center of opposition, has been ordered by the Supreme Court (March 3) to make "a prompt and reasonable start" to end segregation. In anticipation of this decision, the local school authorities have voted to abandon public schools and have set up a private corporation, with pledges of $200,000, to operate "private" white schools. Eventually these private segregated schools will undoubtedly be struck down by the Supreme Court as a palpable evasion of its mandate. Prince Edward white parents will then have to tutor their children or let them run wild for the county will be without a school system public or private.

Already the segregationists are saying that this will be "the last session" of Virginia's public schools. But Arlington, which lies almost in the shadow of the nation's Capitol, also has been ordered to admit Negro students with the fall term. Here sentiment is less vehement than in Prince Edward County, which is in the so-called "southside" portion of Virginia. If it were not for state law, Arlington would probably elect to integrate its schools. But this town, which last year paid $9 million in taxes to the state, would have to forego $1.9 million in state aid if it elected to comply with the court's order. For as part of its "massive resistance" to racially mixed schools Virginia denies state aid to any county which integrates its school under court order. And to tighten this prohibition the state senate has just passed a bill which would permit the Governor to keep a school closed even if the governing body and local school board requested him to reopen it—in a word, a bill which would make closure mandatory. At this point however a new opposition is heard. In a remarkable dissenting speech, State Senator Armistead L. Boothe of Arlington asked his colleagues how long they thought his constituents would permit the public schools to remain closed. "Do you think" he asked, 'that its 25,000 children are going to go unschooled? Do you think the schools those people built and paid for are going to stay closed, even with all the might of the Commonwealth of Virginia thrown into the battle?"

Closing public schools, if only in a few communities, will transform the integration issue into a battle for the preservation of public schools and, on this issue, the segregationists will lose. Like the man who was so afraid of dying that he committed suicide, the grave-diggers of the South are driven by their fears to acts of self-destruction. — The Nation.

J.Y.'S JAZZ

Erroll Garner Shows Musical Individuality

For about twenty years a man named Erroll Garner has been entertaining jazz and popular music audiences with one of the most delightful brands of piano playing on the contemporary scene. The sheer happiness that this man is able to exude on a bright number, or the moody romanticism he shows on a ballad have captured the fancy of all who have heard him. At the moment he is easily the most popular jazz pianist, having captured every major instrument award in his field, and has succeeded in reaching the non-jazz market with two of his Columbia albums, Concert By the Sea and Other Voices.

The personality, musical and otherwise, of Erroll Garner has long been of interest to students of jazz. He is not the stock performer - he cannot read music and never speaks to the audience when playing. Despite these seemingly insurmountable obstacles, he is known not only as a first-rate musician but also as a wonderful person.

The most overwhelming aspect of Garner as a musician is his individuality. Jazz historians, attempting to fit him into some rigid stylistic era in the evolution of jazz, are faced with an unbeatable problem. He has not always been this individualistic - the early Garner was a swing pianist, styled to a great extent after Teddy Wilson, who employed the stock swing bass and a right that showed promise and ability if not great individuality.

During the early fifties Garner lapsed into a period of relative obscurity. He had never become renowned enough for this to make a great difference to the jazz public, but it must have made all the difference to him. Around 1954 he began to re-emerge; jazz fans began to notice the sound of a lagging bass and a bright, incredibly adroit right hand on the air waves and in record shops. He cut a record called simply "Erroll Garner" for the Columbia company which was to change his entire future. The disk never stopped selling. Record clubs, disk jockeys, jazz festivals, all contributed to the sale of this wonderful record. And then one day Erroll Garner woke up to find himself a famous man.

Garner's individuality can be easily illustrated by one brief question. Have you ever heard a piano player attempt to imitate him? Probably. The pianist may be able to work the imitation excellently, but it is always recognizable as Garner. And we all say "Oh, all that guy can do is imitate Garner." That we are so easily able to recognize the style is in itself a tribute to the individuality of this sprightly man who seems destined to stay at the top for a long, long time.

"We Got Another Room Ready?"

LETTERS TO EDITOR

Thoughts During Intermission

To the editor:

With reference to Tuesday night's Memorial Hall concert of the Pittsburg Symphony Orchestra, I shall try to reproduce here my thoughts during intermission. Most of the complaints I voice, however, are as applicable to any function held within those hallowed walls.

Now, there are many irritations which are almost an accepted part of concert-going, and Chapel Hill has always done its utmost to live up to this "tradition." We have those people who, in spite of three weeks' notice that the concert begins at 8:00 p.m., will stumble up the balcony stairs in search of a seat at 8:30 p.m. We can easily supply several ambulatory flu cases whose incessant coughs disturb the audience, annoy the musicians and worry nearby M.D.s. And we can furnish our share of enthusiasts who, never having seen Toscanini, compare (in distinctly audible voices) the present conductor to Toscanini. But, as I have said, these occurrences are to be expected and considered as part of the tradition.

However, Memorial Hall provides its own unique atmosphere which may make a concert a never-to-be-forgotten event. Here we have a stage too small for the orchestra, making it necessary for the conductor to look over his shoulder should he want to cue the first violins. We have a choice between uncomfortable benches, or straight-backed chairs whose creaking makes the noises of Grandma's old rocker seem quiet in comparison. We have a ventilation system (windows) which, if used at all, results in shivering among the orchestra audience and stifling in the balcony. The comfort of the performers is regulated by pulling the curtain behind them, giving the stage the appearance of a school-yard handball court. And in certain sections of the hall one may undergo a unique auditory experience, hearing a combination of sound reflections which lead to the suspicion that the performance of the Brahms symphony was arranged by Stan Kenton.

Now, it might have been worse. Had the weather been colder the radiators might have clanged; had there been a microphone used, the sound system might have alternately functioned too well or not at all. This has happened before, and perhaps we should consider the artists and the audience blessed that it did not occur this time.

The evening provided one benefit beyond that supplied by Mr. Steinberg and his musicians: it gave a measure of fame to G. GIORZ who, probably anticipating just such an event, had the foresight to paint his name in large lavendar letters just below the naked light bulb on the brick wall behind the tympanist.

Maybe after we get a new basketball arena someone will build an auditorium.

OFFICE CAT

Gerald and Harold were twins. As twins usually are they were inseparable. They shared and shared alike. Nothing was ever given to one without an exact duplicate being provided for the other.

As they grew older they adopted the same hobbies. It was one of these hobbies that finally broke up the duplication formula. For when they went fishing Gerald never seemed to be able to catch any fish while his brother had real "fisherman's luck."

One night, after an exasperating day at the stream, Gerald stole out of the house with his brother's rod and headed for the brook. He chose the very rock from which his brother that very afternoon had caught 12 fish. He fished and fished but didn't get even a nibble.

Just as he was packing up to go back home a trout leaped out of the water in a beautiful arc and called solicitously, "Your brother isn't ill, I hope?" —The Durham Sun.

VIEW FROM THE BRIDGE

Critic Finds Miller's Play Professionally Done

By ANTHONY WOLFF

"A View From The Bridge" is the most mature and the most powerful play the Carolina Playmakers have attempted in more than a year. For just this reason — that it is mature and powerful — it is an extremely difficult play to produce effectively. It is somewhat ironic, then, that the same Playmakers who often present merely competent productions of lesser plays should do such a convincingly sincere and skillful job with this one.

The play itself is Arthur Miller's latest attempt to illuminate the human predicament — the unsatisfactory relationship of man to himself, to his environment, and to Man to God.

In this latest exploration of these relationships, Miller has presented the downfall of one Eddie Carbone: Eddie is not a tragic figure in the strict sense of the word "tragic." Miller considers the limitations of classical tragic forms as meaningless for our time.

What he presents instead is what might be called "modern tragedy." The basic motivations, even the basic form of classical tragedy have remained; missing is the grandeur, the poetry and the self-knowledge of the hero which are the essence of the classical tragic hero.

This, then, is tragedy of some lesser degree than classical or Renaissance tragedy. Eddie Carbone is a modern man, and modern men are no longer kings or poets. If we cannot see in Eddie a tragic fault which brings inhuman misery and death to a man of otherwise superhuman perfection, we must remember that our society no longer includes such men.

Yet, in spite of the fact that progress has to some extent invalidated or emasculated the classical tragedy, the tragic vision is still pertinent to our time; perhaps it is even more pertinent now, when tragedy seems to become increasingly more imminent, though somewhat less sharply defined than in times past.

Whatever its stature as a tragedy, "A View From The Bridge" is a supremely effective play, and it is excellently performed by the Playmakers.

For the first time in recent productions there is something resembling a professional production of the Playmaker stage. To be sure, the quality of the performance is not always consistent, and there are a few serious lapses, but the overall impression is one of more-than-competent professionals at work.

Page Williams, playing Beatrice, sets a standard for mature acting that is seldom exceeded anywhere. Beatrice is the heroine of the play, and in a sense she is more of a tragic figure than Eddie, her husband. It is Beatrice, not Eddie, who recognizes Eddie's love for his neice and tries vainly to avert the disaster which must naturally proceed from such an unnatural affection. Miss Williams conveys all the love and fear and dispair involved in her character with moving sincerity.

By playing the hero, Ken Callendar has freed himself from the restrictions of comedy, with which he has until now concerned himself, and in the process he proves himself a dramatic actor of great strength and sensitivity. On several occasions his reactions are delayed and his timing is off; occasionally, too, he fails to convey the tension which pervades the action from the first moments of the play until his death; but his lapses only momentary, and throughout the performance he and his obsession dominate the stage as the author intended them to do.

Al Gordon, who plays the older brother, has for the past two years been one of the finest actors among the Playmakers. In the current production, given a role with more depth and character than any he has had recently, he turns in his finest performance.

The only major weakness in the production is in the two ingenue roles, Catherine and Rudolpho. Both players miss the essence of their characterizations. Rudolpho, the young immigrant in love with Catherine, must be effeminate enough to make Eddie's assumption that he is a homosexual plausible. Harvey Knox seems to miss this entirely, as he misses the Italian accent which is caught so well by Al Gordon. As a stranger, he does not seem as ill at ease as he might be; as Catherine's lover, he is not particularly convincing. All in all, he seems more like Joe College than Rudolpho.

As Catherine, Margaret Starnes is far too sophisticated. Catherine is a nice, sweet girl; but, as a product of the waterfront she is entirely without class. Miss Starnes is altogether too "cute" — she overacted, but never with any convincing sincerity. Catherine's role in the play never becomes strong or clear, largely because Miss Starnes is never too strong herself.

John Sneden is miscast as Alfieri, the lawyer. There are certain mature roles which are beyond the physical range of a young actor, and Alfieri is one of them. Aside from certain mistakes in characterization, Sneden's major fault is that he is simply too young in voice and appearance (despite the make-up) to be convincingly wise. In place of wisdom is substituted a sort of dogmatic, stiffnecked attitude which is out of keeping with the character.

The settings for the play, created by Tommy Rezzuto, are among the best that he has done recently. The Playmaker stage is a designer's nightmare: that anyone can design for it at all is a wonder, and that Mr. Rezzuto can create with such a fine sense of unity and proportion, and still leave a few square feet for the actors, is a major achievement.

The lighting is also very effective, particularly in respect to the illumination of separate areas of the stage for the narration without breaking the continuity of the play.

Needless to say, it is to be hoped that we will have more plays meeting this standard of writing, acting, and directing as this one. Once a year is not enough.

Members of the UNC Faculty Club will hear Victor Reuther, director of the Washington Office of the United Auto Workers, at their regular meeting Tuesday, at 11 p.m. in the Carolina Inn.

Mademoiselle Announces College Board

UNC will be represented this year on Mademoiselle's national College Board by Wanda Layne Hearne, Nancy Mays Milan and Lesly Lynn Moody, according to a recent announcement from Mademoiselle magazine.

They are among the 760 students who competed with applicants from colleges all over the country to win places on the Board, according to Mademoiselle.

As College Board members, they will represent their campuses and report to Mademoiselle on college life and the college scene. Each girl will complete two assignments that will help her explore her interests and abilities in writing, editing, fashion, advertising or art, in competition for the 20 Guest editorships to be awarded by the magazine at the end of May.

The guest editors will be brought to New York for four weeks next June to help write, edit and illustrate Mademoiselle's 1958 August college issue. Their transporation will be paid to and from New York and they will receive a regular salary for their work.

In addition to their work on the magazine, guest editors will interview outstanding men and women in their chosen fields to help clarify their career aims, will visit fashion showrooms, publishing houses and advertising agencies and will be Mademoiselle's guests in a round of party and theatre-going.

Musicale

A program of compositions by Thomas Rice, graduate music student, will be featured on tonight's Petite Musicale. The recital will be held in Hill Hall auditorium and will commence at 8 p.m. Petites Musicales are sponsored by GMAB and are free of charge.

TAR HEEL CO-CAPTAIN: Phil Blazer, co-captain for the Tar Heel gridders will be one of the big guns to watch for in the up coming Blue-White game which will end spring practice Saturday.

Blue-White Scrap Set For Next Saturday

The annual preview of football talent and prospects for the fall ahead is scheduled in Kenan Stadium here Saturday, March 22, when the University of North Carolina's Blue-White intrasquad game will be played.

Kickoff is 2 p.m., and a modest admission charge will be made to the public. Proceeds go the Carolina Monogram Club, which sponsors the annual game.

The regulation contest will wind up 20 days of spring practice, which was twice delayed by inclement weather but since finally opening has proved very satisfactory to Coach Jim Tatum and his staff. "We feel that we have made some progress," said Tatum, "with some of the boys showing great improvements."

Co-Captain Phil Blazer will head the veteran stars of last year's highly successful team which compiled a 6-4 record and numbered among its victims otherwise undefeated Navy, old rival Duke, Clemson, South Carolina, Miami and Wake Forest.

While such aces as end Buddy Payne, tackle Stuart Pell and fullback Giles Gaca will be missing, regulars of last year to be on hand include backs Jack Cummings, Emil DeCantis and Ed Lipski, and linemen Ronnie Koes, and Fred Swearingen.

Tommy Byrne Will Instruct In Gastonia

GASTONIA, March 15, (AP)—Tommy Bryne, New York Yankee pitcher who recently announced his retirement from baseball, will instruct at a baseball school here next Friday.

Byrne, from Wake Forest, will teach at the Gastonia Gazette school. So will two other former major leaguers, Buddy Lewis and Jake Early, who played with Washington. Russ Bergmann, American Legion coach and former minor league player, will also instruct.

ELECTED

SALISBURY, March 15, (AP)—Gene Flemming, hard-hitting first baseman from Catawissa, Pa., has been elected captain of Catawba College's 1958 baseball team.

Foreign Cars Make Debut

DANVILLE, Va., March 15 (AP)—The big, power-laden foreign cars will make their summer-season debut in national championship racing of Sports Car Club of America circles at Virginia International Raceway May 3-4 with the annual spring sprints.

Announcement of the 1958 inaugural was made today by Edward B. Kemm of Greensboro, president of VIR, which last year brought sports car road racing to the South for the first time.

Such names as Carroll Shelby of Dallas, Tex., in his 4.7 Maserati, and Walt Hansgen of Westfield, N. J., in the Jaguar, are expected to head the field which will compete in eight events of the Sunday competition which opens VIR's second season. However, new cars are expected to be entered in the national championships by that time, Kimm stated.

Hansgen won the year's first SCCA event, the Orange Bowl race at Miami, Fla. The SCCA schedule begins April 19-20 at Marlboro, Md., but some of the larger cars may not compete on the two-mile course there. The VIR spring sprints might thus be the first summer-season competition for the larger sports cars.

Williams Claims Luck Reason For Hitting

By JOE REICHLER

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP)—"I've been lucky," Ted Williams said. "I've been a lucky hitter — bad hops and all."

A fellow had just finished telling the Boston Red Sox slugger that Tris Speaker had called him the greatest hitter of all time.

"There is no telling what Williams would have accomplished had his career not been interrupted by nearly five years in the service and he had not fractured his elbow and collarbone," the Hall of Famer had said.

If Williams has any faults, conceit is not one of them. Neither is he unduly modest. He realizes better than anyone else how much his two hitches in the Marines and his two enforced layoffs due to injuries have cost him, but there is no bitterness in him.

"What have I got to complain about?" he asked. "I've been lucky to last as long as I have. How many guys were around at 39? They say when a fellow gets to be my age he begins to deteriorate. Well, my eyesight and my coordination are still good.

"My reflexes, as well as my mental and physical facilities are still fine. I know I've slowed up some but I feel no different than I've felt during the past few years.

"About three, four years ago I was ready to quit. If anybody had told me then I'd be playing in 1958, I'd have said he was crazy. But here I am getting ready for my 20th year including the years in military service with the Red Sox."

Breaks Record

LAWRENCE, KAN. (AP)—All-America Oscar Robertson broke the National Collegiate tournament scoring record for one game Saturday night, scoring 56 points as he led Cincinnati over Arkansas 97-62 for third place in the Midwest NCAA regional competition. Kansas State and Oklahoma State met in the second game for the championship.

Exhibits Major Part

Exhibits will be one of the main features of this year's Symposuim as they will be seen from one end of the campus to the other. One of the most intgresting features will be a continuous 16 mm film projection showing subjects on "survival" which will be seen in the Y-court.

Also seen will be displays being donated to the Symposium by the Civil Defense Authority and the Atomic Energy Commission. Posters advertising the program will be seen in most buildings and the library will feature an exhibit of books written by our guests.

In Memorial Hall there will be a large Symposium calendar with a list of speakers, topics and times of addresses. There will also be a poster on each individual speaker.

Lenoir Hall will feature a special Symposium menu and along with the many displays you will be able to see a short dealing with the Symposium theme appearing at the free flicks.

Hodges Keynotes First Forum

Governor Luther H. Hodges will kick off the Tenth Symposium Week at 8 p.m. tonight. Appearing on the same program with the Governor will be Charles L. Dunham, director of the Division of Biology and Medicine for the Atomic Energy Commission and Senator Henry Jackson, Democrat from the state of Washington.

Tonight's program initiates a six day slate of outstanding presentations which will conclude on Friday night with Dr. Benjamin Fine, Weil Lecturer on American Citizenship.

During the interim fourteen other main speakers will be here at Carolina along with numerous educators, military personnel and outstanding religious leaders who will present their views in the classroom and seminar section of this year's Symposium Week.

The theme of the entire week will be "survival-immediate as well as long range" and will delve into many of the problems confronting students and the country as a whole. Past Symposium programs have dealt with problems in the South, but due to the complexity of the present world situation. Symposium officials decided that a "survival" theme would be more appropriate.

The purpose of the Symposium presentations is "to bring together . . . Outstanding minds speaking in open forum on critical problems of our times."

Tremendous preparations have gone into the planning of this year's Symposium, as the Executive Committee has been working since the early part of the first semester to bring to Carolina these outstanding leaders in their various fields.

Sonny Hallford, student chairman of the Symposium stressed student cooperation and participation as the key to a good program on the eve of the festivities. He said, "We expect broad participation in these activities. "(S y m p o s i u m Week) by students, faculty and citizens in what we hope will be a most stimulating series of experiences."

Benjamin Fine Weil Lecturer

Benjamin Fine, currently serving as Dean of the Graduate School at Yeshiva University in New York and formerly education editor of the New York Times, will give the Weil Lectures in conjunction with the Carolina Symposium program. Fine will be heard at 8 p.m. on Thursday and Friday nights in Memorial Hall.

Thursday night he will address Carolina Students on "Major Problems Facing American Education" and, Friday night he will speak on "The Responsibilities of Citizens for Education."

The Weil Lecture is "an unendowed lectureship on American

Survival Is Possible

By DAVIS B. YOUNG

The dictionary defines survival as surviving or remaining after others of your kind have disappeared.

This is acceptable as a general definition, but there is more to survival than human survival. There is survival of ideas, survival of tradition and survival of past moments of greatness.

We in America are indeed fortunate to live in a country in which we have ample opportunity to own fine cars, buy new refrigerators and go on long vacations.

Isn't it wonderful that ours is the land of plenty? In only 182 years we have grown from thirteen struggling and unstable colonies scattered along the eastern seaboard to forty-eight great states.

In the same time span we have seen the Russians emerge from serfdom and slavery under the Czars to perhaps the strongest country in the world under Lenin, Stalin and Khrushchev.

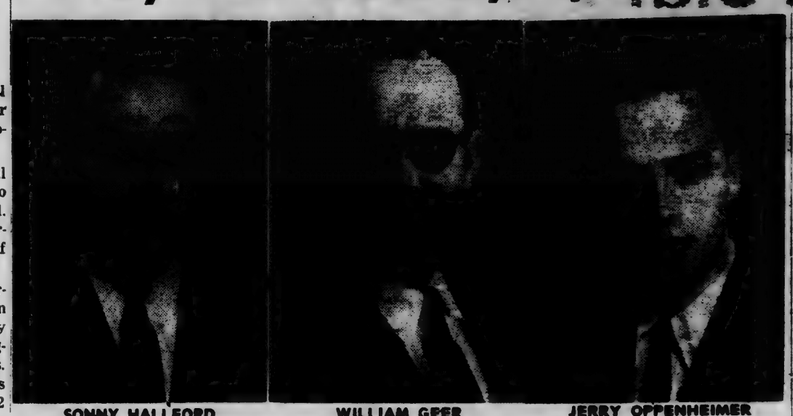
Overshadowed by this spectacular rise to power by two nations that were in total obscurity a little over a century ago has been a decline in ideas, tradition and moments of greatness. To argue against this trend would be useless as the world has moved too fast and progressed too far to worry about ideas, tradition and moments of greatness.

And yet, we have now reached the pinnacle of expansion. No longer can we go west to seek our fortune, for it has already been made long ago. The only outlet is for the ambitious scientist and I wonder how far a Sputnik can actually project itself into space.

Where then does this leave the people of the world? It faces us with the greatest challenge known to mankind. While maintaining our progressive accomplishments we must at the same time revert to the past to seek answers to our problems and to gain the inner resources that will make our complex civilization immortal.

We cannot create a Utopia, but we can strive to solve our problems from within. We cannot solve all of our difficulties overnight, but we can work through the United Nations to create harmony among the nations of the world. We cannot eliminate hate, but we can hope for understanding.

We must realize that there is room for both Russia and America and for the ideas evolving from each of these different societies. In this day and age, the elimination of one by war would, by definition, be the elimination of the other.



We cannot rely on the survival of the fittest doctrine, for we will have survival of all or survival of none. We must have ambition to learn and to create and to help and to work for what people on all sides of the Iron and Bamboo Curtains want from life.

To survive as an individual we must improve our own lots in life. We must be reverent, courageous and honest. To survive as a nation and honest. Each of us must strive to gain in knowledge about the problems confronting us today. With this knowledge will come an ability to think clearly and to take our part in governing the world. We can survive, the choice is ours.

Symposium Chairman Invites Participation

As Chairman of the Carolina Symposium, I would like to take this opportunity to encourage students, faculty members and townspeople to attend and participate in this the Tenth Carolina Symposium on Public Affairs. We have endeavored to bring to this Campus some of the outstanding minds in the country from various fields to speak in open forum on significant problems and ideas of the day.

This is to be a week of "intellectual stimulation."

This will indeed be a week which will long be remembered at the University of North Carolina. We feel this week will serve a vital contribution in the thinking of the Campus community. We encourage all to take full advantage of the entire week and to share their thinking and thoughts with some of the well-known men and women of the day.

SONNY HALLFORD
Chairman of the Carolina Symposium

Survival Issue Termed Most Critical By Geer

The critical question of the mid-twentieth century is whether mankind can survive on this planet. Contemporary science has released new forces which stagger the imagination, suggesting simultaneously the possibilities of constructive achievements or total destruction. The future course of our democratic society can be charted safely only after the full public discussion of these issues by thoughtful and informed people. The Carolina Symposium offers us on this campus in 1958 the opportunity for such an examination and evaluation of the dimensions of the survival problem as measured by our technology, political relationships, techniques of education and the heritage of our traditions.

Survival: Individuality's Fight

By CURTIS GANS

What is it to survive? Is it mere existence? Is it escape from annihilation? Or is it something more?

These questions will be discussed from various points of view during the Symposium Week. They should provoke some response.

This observer's view is clear. Survival is not mere existence, for without freedom of thought, survival is meaningless.

Survival is not escape from death, for death is not necessarily the end to life. The end can come before.

To survive means more. Real survival is very much allied with the concept of integrity, courage and freedom.

One does not survive under a totalitarian system, for thought control is not survival.

Individuality is the keynote of survival. The person who loses his individuality no longer exists. He is one of the mass and can be controlled in the same manner that animals are controlled.

A person without individuality is not surviving, he is existing.

A person, who has individuality and dies, survives.

Freedom is the key to individuality. Without freedom, individuality can be extinguished through annihilation.

Yet, within the countries which possess freedom, there is a growing conservativism, a growing complacency, a growing lack of individuality.

To those within countries possessing a measure of freedom individuality is often synonymous with "odd-ball" or "out of place." The drive toward conformity is wiping out that individuality that will make freedom work.

A country to be free and be successful depends on the interplay of ideas. It depends on the progress made toward achieving a greater measure of freedom in those areas where liberty is limited. This can only be done if there are independent thinkers within the group thinking these ideas up.

It is then of key importance to preserve the democratic way of life, so that individuality can exist. It is even more important for the individual to preserve his individuality in order that he may survive.

Survival is a large word. It encompasses many things and means different ideas to different people.

But survival is really but one concept, one question. Can man retain his integrity and individuality is the question.

That question is being answered now. It is in the process in Moscow, Geneva, and Washington. It, for a short time, will be in focus in Chapel Hill. It should not be forgotten, since it is each student, each individual, each group and each nation which will answer this question.

Survival in the physical sense may be uppermost in the minds of many, but it is survival in the larger sense—the survival of free men's minds which must be considered.

This is the most important battle that can be waged in the era of brainwashing and thought control, for life is not worth living without the freedom to think freely.

The battle of individuality is on, and has been on almost as long as mankind. It is a battle that is not near a decision.

Apathy Is Block To Ideas

By PETER B. YOUNG

(Mr. Young is a graduate student in History—Ed.)

It is an established fact that graduate students know everything there is to know about anything; graduate students know more than their professors, more than the nation's leaders, and certainly more than the tired and harrassed authors of the books that reside in the Wilson Library.

Graduate students have "the survival bit" down cold. They are ready to take a final examination in it any time; they only hope that it will not be too final.

Brilliant fellows that they are, graduate students know all about the laboratory in New York which analyzes the bones in corpses gathered from around the world. Graduate students know that the strontium 90 content of these bones is going up and up and up. And all the returns are not in; all the fallout has not yet drifted down; and still the Russians persist in holding nuclear tests, while the great American Democracy is scheduling further "shots" for late this Spring.

Graduate students (such clever boys and girls!) know that the U. S. Army has recently announced, with great pride, the perfection of a new radar system that will give fifteen whole minutes warning of approaching missiles. What insane, criminal nonsense is this! Fifteen minutes is not enough time to get drunk; fifteen minutes is not enough time (for some of us) to make love; fifteen minutes is not enough time to prepare our souls for death.

Graduate students know that no ideology, no economic system, no political arrangement, no social configuration, is worth the atomization of the world's peoples and civilizations. There are signs that the new military technology has seriously disturbed the Marxist orthodoxy: how much has it disturbed US?

Graduate students know that only bold, radical, subversive and heretical ideas—on BOTH sides of the Iron Curtain—will save mankind to live and drink and gamble and whore away another day. But where are the bold, radical, subversive heretics? They are not to be found in the ranks of the "beat" generation. Zen is no substitute for hard thinking about earthly problems.

Graduate students will not attend Symposium functions; we have heard all this jazz before. But we will watch the impact of the Symposium with our usual air of sardonic superiority.

IT TOOK $5,500

Close to $5,500 dollars is being consumed by the Carolina Symposium to complete financial arrangements for this year's program. This money has all come in the form of contributions from interested individuals and from leading social and service organizations both on and off campus.

Al Goldsmith, Symposium treasurer, initiated a vast program designed to collect funds early in the year which has proved successful, as the Symposium is now slightly over their anticipated budget.

Goldsmith and members of his committee contacted organizations on campus through representatives in those organizations or by individual solicitation. He reports that all of the sororities and good number of the dorms and fraternities all helped to swell the Symposium's pocket book. In addition interested groups such as the Alumni Lecture Fund and the Interfaith Council have also shown interest.

Many Great Leaders Have Spoken At Symposium Programs Since '27

By DAVIS YOUNG

Tonight the Carolina Symposium on Public Affairs will initiate its 1958 program to the University, state and nation. This is one of the foremost organizations of its type in the country and a closer analysis of the pertinent work that it is accomplishing now, what it has done and that which the future will reveal is important to a complete understanding of the Symposium's purpose.

Stephen Vincent Benet once stated: "There is a crisis in our national life and it is now. It is not tomorrow, but now. How long it will last, not one of us can say. But, while it lasts, it will touch the thoughts, the acts, and the day-to-day lives of us all."

The recognition of the critical situations we must constantly face as a nation has been one of the integral works of the Carolina Symposium and its parent organization, the Institute of Human Relations. These two organizations have seen, as Benet stated, the crises which touch our thoughts, acts and lives.

But the Institute and Symposium have done more than merely acknowledge the presence of our imperfections and problems. They have gone further than a mere dissection by offering concrete suggestions for our improvement through participation of outstanding leaders in various fields and through educating those who have come to listen and hear.

The reputation of the old Institute and the present Symposium is easily seen through the willingness of such outstanding men as Dr. Frank Graham, Ralph Bunche and General Carlos Romulo to participate. It is considered a high honor to be asked to partake in the activities of Symposium Week.

FIRST SYMPOSIUM

The first Quadrennial Institute on Human Relations was held in 1927 under the auspices of the YWCA. It started a strong tradition in Institute - Symposium affairs by presenting the now standard three-part program. It concentrated on relations and human elements in industry.

Although its speakers were not as renowned as those now invited, they represented a wide cross section of outstanding academic and clerical leaders. In retrospect it is easily seen that in an evaluation of this initial program its chief significance is that it was the first such venture at Carolina and would eventually evolve into the important and powerful Symposium of the 1950's.

SECOND PROGRAM

In May of 1931, the Institute held its second program with much broader participation and interest. There were 19 guest speakers, 22 public meetings, 94 classroom seminars and a general attendance of over 25,000.

A similar program was held in 1935 as the third Quadrennial Institute on Human Relations. However, the 1935 committee recommended that in the future the Institutes be held on a biennial basis due to the rapidity in which the world conditions are changing.

In 1935, speakers invited to the UNC campus featured Sen. Joseph Ball of Minnesota and John Flynn, noted New York journalist. Others included Clarence Dykstra, former chairman of the Selective Service Board and ex-Sen. Josh Lee.

ROOSEVELT STATES

President Franklin D. Roosevelt stated in 1945: "As we dedicate our total efforts to the task of winning this war we must never lose sight of the fact that victory is not only an end in itself, but in a large sense, victory offers us the means of achieving the goal of lasting peace and a better way of life."

The Institute of that year realistically recognized the problems we would face after the most terrible war known to man. Such specific topics as "The Stabilization of the World Economy" were discussed at length. Sen. J. W. Fullbright of Arkansas and Wendell Berge, assistant attorney general of the United States Justice Department were on hand for this program.

The termination of the 1945 Institute marked the end of an era at Carolina, for during the next 11 years nothing was to be heard from this organization. However, in 1956, after this prolonged absence, the Institute on Human Relations was revived as the Carolina Symposium on Public Affairs. The '56 Symposium program examined "Old Problems in the New South," "The Emerging World Community — Problems and Prospects," and "The United States in the World Today."

GRAHAM SPEAKS

Dr. Frank Graham, Ralph Bunche, General Carlos Romulo, Colbert McKnight, Benjamin Mays and Dr. Ralph E. Lapp all helped to make this one of the finest events of its type ever presented.

And now in 1958, we have prospects for a most pertinent, educational and provocative program. As outlined in the pre-Symposium brochure it will once again be presented in three parts: "Physical Survival," "Cultural Survival," and "American Values in Crisis."

Sonny Hallford, chairman of the 1958 Symposium, had this to say concerning the program: "The 1958 Symposium is attempting to focus the attention of the University community on the key issue of our times—survival.

In subject matter the speakers and contributors to the Symposium will consider: "The threats and promises of contemporary science, the political strategies of peace and war, the strengths and weaknesses of contemporary education techniques, the relations of American cultural patterns to others in the world, and the reasons why survival has value in human, democratic, religious and ethical terms.

VARIETY OF SPEAKERS

"In the course of Symposium week in March a great variety of distinguished speakers will come to the University campus for seminars, classroom discussions and formal addresses.

"They will offer a variety of view points. We expect broad participation in these activities by students, faculty and citizens in what we hope will be a most stimulating series of experiences."

The 1958 Symposium will be the tenth such program presented on the University campus in the past 31 years. Participation for this year's program has come from a wide variety of sources; from the office of Chancellor Aycock to the general student body.

Aid, both in a monetary and labor sense has been contributed by almost every social and service organization on campus. With such widespread interest and with an outstanding list of speakers, the 1958 Symposium Week cannot be anything but a success.

(The aid of William Powell and the staff of the library's Carolina Room and the Executive Committee of the 1958 Symposium is appreciated in helping to compose and compile the material necesary for this article.)

Handbooks

For your convenience, the Symposium is supplying handbooks to serve along with this special "Daily Tar Heel" edition as guides to the week's activities.

The handbook will list biographies of all main speakers along with their pictures as well as a schedule of the week's events.

Also appearing will be statements from Chancellor William B. Aycock, William Geer, faculty chairman of the Symposium, and Sonny Hallford, the student chairman. These should enlighten you and provide a clear insight into the theme and purpose of the programs.

In the last section of the handbook will be a list of all organizations who have lent their support to the successful completion of the Symposium program and the names of students and faculty members who have given of their time in the planning stages.

'Thanks' Goes To Chairmen

Symposium Chairman Sonny Hallford has complimented the various committee chairmen on their fine display of unselfish leadership and for their devotion to the tasks confronting them.

Hallford termed their actions as truly outstanding when queried as to the part they played. He also wished to pay his tribute to all people who worked on the committees.

Committee chairmen for the 1958 Carolina Symposium include: Program Committee—Jerry Oppenheimer, Finance Committee — Al Goldsmith, Publicity Committee—Charles Huntington, Dick Robinson and Davis Young. Handbook Committee — David Sloan and Laradel Lawrence.

Also: Physical Arrangements Committee—Pat Adams and Charlie Pittman, Seminar Committee —John Raper, Social and Hospitality Committee—Dave Biren and Lucie Crossland, Organization and Administration Committee — David Parker, and Office Committee—Mary Jane Fisher.

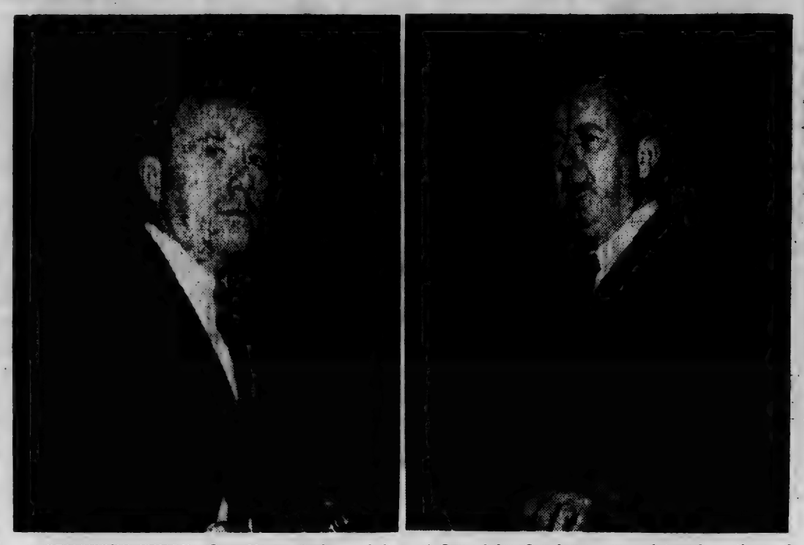
Speakers Discuss Survival

A four point program, headed by increased defense expenditures was outlined by Sen. Henry Jackson (D-Wash.), who spoke with Dr. Charles L. Dunham, and Gov. Luther H. Hodges in the first program of the week long tenth Carolina Symposium on Public Affairs, held Sunday night in Memorial Hall.

Dr. Dunham, director of the Division of Biology and Medicine of the Atomic Energy Commission, asserted that the radiation danger is not as serious as current fears might indicate.



Gov. Hodges kevnoted the program by outlining the many ways that North Carolina is bettering and could better its chances of survival.

The program was part of the Symposium, whose topic is "Survival: American Culture In World Focus."

Points Out Needs

Jackson pointed to a need for technological improvement and industrial growth as one of the essential factors in the drive for survival. He advocated making greater use of the national resources of the U. S., and implementation of various construction programs in order to end some of the current difficulties of the U. S. economy.

The third part of Jackson's program concerned itsel fwith education. Jackson urged passage of a bill that he is co-sponsoring with Sen. Lister Hill (D-Ala.) which would increase federal aid to schools. He also urged that not all appropriations be made to furthering science, but that all fields be aided by the federal government.

Change In Symposium Schedule For Talks By Striganov & Merrill

Today's scheduled program at Carroll Hall for 10 a.m. has been switched to Memorial Hall at the same time due to the anticipated crowd coming to hear Sergei Striganov and Frederick T. Merrill.

Striganov is Counselor of the Soviet Embassy and Charge d'Affaires of the Soviet Union. He is a graduate of the Moscow Pedagogical Institute and a well known representative of his country. He is speaking to Carolina students on "The Basic Concepts of the Soviet Union.

Merrill is Director of East-West Contacts Staff, Division of Public Affairs in the Department of State. He was educated at Cambridge University, England; Princeton University and Columbia University. He has served his country as a diplomat in Rome, Budapest, Istanbul and Paris. His address will be on "A New Development in Cultural Interchange: The U. S. - U. S. S. R. Exchange Agreement."

Tonight at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall Victor Reuther, AFL-CIO leader and brother of leading labor leader Walter Reuther, will speak on "The Fate of the American Tradition." He has been one of the leading anti-Communist labor spokesmen for years.

Appearing on the same program with Reuther will be Jonathan Daniels, Carolina graduate and present editor of the Raleigh News and Observer who will speak on "The Indestructible Tradition." Following Daniels will be J. Spencer Love, president and chairman of the Board of Directors of Burlington Industries, Inc. Love has chosen "The American Direction" as his subject.

The public as well as the student body is highly encouraged to partake in this highly educational series being presented by the Carolina Symposium on Public Affairs. Programs will run through Friday and will include many well known celebrities not previously mentioned.

Your attention is also called to the many seminars and lectures scheduled for the week. Chairman Sonny Hallford has called for a continuance of attendance believing that the only way to benefit from the programs is "through consistent attendance and great interest."

Restaurant To Open Today

Chuck Wagon restaurant holds its grand opening today. Western style food and atmosphere is the order of the day in Don Belton's new restaurant next to the Post Office.

"The only authentic western break-fast" is one of the features of the Chuck Wagon. Thick juicy steaks will also be offered at a price the student can pay.

Chuck Wagon hours are 7:30 a.m. to 2:30 p. m. and 4:30 to 11 p.m. seven days a week. Along with the charcoal steaks and hamburgers Belton will offer both premium and imported beers.

Belton has operated the Carolina Coffee Shop here for the past year and says he is pleasd with the year's results. It was this sucess that prompted him to open a speciality restaurant. Belton said he wanted to open a place, "with the kind of mood and decor that Chapel Hill now does not have." He also wants to keep the prices within the reach of everyone.

Mayo Is First To Make Solo

Gerald M. Mayo, senior from Falkland, became the first AFROTC cadet in the newly initiated flight program to make his solo flight. Cadet Mayo who has ten hours and 25 minutes flying time, soloed on Wednesday afternoon in a Cessna 172.

On Thursday, March 14, Cadet Mayo was duly initiated by the "Flying Tarheels" in an impressive splash at the Bowman Gray Pool, attired in his flying suit.

This ceremony was one of the first highlights to come out of the flight program established by the Air Force to better prepare officers for Flight School. Upon completing 35 hours of flying time and successful completion of the CAA examination ,the Cadets will receive their private pilot's license.

Far East Needs Aid Says Sen. Sparkman

Sen. John Sparkman (D-Ala.) pointed up the need for U. S. aid to the Far Eastern nations, as well as the need for the U. S. to understand these nations' desire for neutrality in a speech Monday at the second Carolina Symposium program.

Talking on the topic "America's Role In This Troubled World," he stressed mainly the trip that he recently took to the Far East as part of his work on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Sparkman spoke yesterday as part of the week long tenth Carolina Symposium on Public Affairs curently going on the UNC campus.

Sparkman said that Sputnik caused a very definite loss of prestige in the Far East; however, he said that the Little Rock segregation problem had about as much effect on the viewpoint of people in the Far East as the Indian caste

Coed Education Heads Symposium Discussion

By JOHN WALLACE

"Should men and women be educated separately or jointly?" was the topic discussed by a panel in Carroll Hall yesterday as a part of the Carolina Symposium.

Dr. Gordon Blackwell, Chancellor of the Woman's College of the University moderated.

The panel was composed of Dr. Katharine McBride, President of Bryn Mawr College, Dr. Chalmers G. Davidson, Director of the Library and Professor of History, Davidson College, Dr. William C. Archie, Dean of the College and Professor of French, Wake Forest College, and Dr. Marguerite Roberts, Dean and Professor of English, Westhampton College.

The panel was sponsored by the Office of the Dean of Women.

Separte Sexes

Dr. McBride stated that the sexes should be separated for education. "A woman's college can build up fields that women are interested in better than a coed school." It is her belief that in coed schools, men usually run the student affairs. "In women's schools there is an opportunity for women to take an active part in the running of affairs."

"The education of males is better when they are separated from females," said Dr. Davidson, in agreeing with Dr. McBride. "There is more freedom of discussion in separated classrooms."

Opposing Views

Dr. Archie took an opposing view in stating that coed schools are better. "There are social, psychological, and intellectual advantages in a coed school." In commenting on the intellectual advantages, he said, "Women have been the best students. In a sense, women are the pace setters, . . . men learn from women." He said that women can absorb facts better and can shoot back straight answers better.

"Men, on the other hand, are bolder and come up with more interesting and perhaps truer answers." He concluded that therefore there is an improvement in discussions when men are included.

Dr. Roberts took a "middle of the road" view in explaining coordinate colleges, in which there is a woman's college with coed aspects. She stated, however, that there is a fuller life in a co-ordinate or a coed school.

Dr. McBride expressed the sentiments of the whole panel when she said, "We should make the best use of all types of our institutions."

Sound & Fury Tryouts Slated

Annual tryouts for Sound and Fury will be held Sunday and Monday, March 23 and 24, from 2 to 6 p. m. in Memorial Hall. Callbacks have been set for Tuesday, March 25, from 4 to 6 p.m.

Scripts for the production are available at Graham Memorial to be looked over and studied. The production is seeking singers, dancers, actors, people to make sets and do back stage work.

GM SLATE

The following activities are scheduled for today at Graham Memorial:

Carolina Symposium, 11 a.m. & 10 p.m., Main Lounge; Orientation, 4:30-6 p.m., Grail Room; Honor System Committee, 5-6 p.m., Roland Parker Lounge I; Ways and Means Committee, 6:30-7:30 p.m., Roland Parker Lounge I; University Club, 7-8:30 p.m. Grail Room; Recreation Committee, 4-5 p.m., Woodhouse Conference Room; A.P.O., 7-9 p.m., Rendezvous Room; Woman's Honor Council, 6:30-10:30 p.m., Woodhouse Conference Room.

John Whitley, Ann Frye Enter Race For Tar Heel Editorship

Four Now In Contest

A sophomore from Thomasville today announced his candidacy for editor of The Daily Tar Heel, bringing to four the number now in the race for the top newspaper post.

John B. Whitley, an English major with four years' experience in the printing industry, threw his hat into the race with Curits Gans, Charlie Sloan and Frye.

Miss Frye, a junior from Hickory, also announced her candidacy today.

Experience

Whitley, editor of his high school newspaper and student sports correspondent for three years for the Thomasville Tribune and High Point Enterprise, listed his newspaper experience as qualifications for Daily Tar Heel editor.

He said his experience includes one year as part-time re-write man for the High Point Enterprise, plus eight months in the composing room of a daily newspaper.

Whitley currently is editor of the alumni newsletter of Lambda Chi Alpha social fraternity, of which he is secretary and representative to the Interfraternity Council.

In his announcement today, Whitley issued the following statement:

"I regret that I have been unable to be a member of the Tar Heel staff in the past as I have had to work due to financial difficulties. But with that problem now out of the way, I desire to put my experience to use. There may be an advantage in this, however.

"I believe that it lies in the realm of possibility that a newcomer to the system may be able to spot its defects quicker than a person who has been very familiar with it.

"In my experience with publications, I have acquired a general knowledge of all phases of newspaper work. I further feel that printing experience can be of extreme value to an editor."

A newspaper should not only keep its readers well-informed, but should also be attractive in appearance.

"I feel the editorial page of the campus newspaper should concern itself primarily with local issues, and that the editor should confine most of his energy to crusade for those improvements which would be beneficial to the University and its students."

JOHN WHITLEY

ANN FRYE

Hickory Girl Wants Post

Ann Frye, junior journalism major from Hickory, announced yesterday that she is a candidate for editor of The Daily Tar Heel.

A member of the paper staff this year, Miss Frye has served as assistant news editor.

In a statement released yesterday, she said:

"Any prospective candidate for the editorship of The Daily Tar Heel necessarily must let the voters know exactly what his philosophy of journalism and of The Tar Heel is. The candidate must also expound on these ideas, insofar as the current Tar Heel administration is concerned, and future plans for improving the paper.

"The type journalism I subscribe to and would try to uphold on The Daily Tar Heel contains those high principles that were supported by Adolph Ochs of The New York Times when, in the face of the successful but outrageous Hearst and Pulitzer 'yellow journalism' in the 1890's, he retained the Times' tradition for accurate and adequate coverage and comment.

"The present administration of The Daily Tar Heel has maintained a high degree of accuracy and adequacy in the news and editorials. If elected editor, I would endeavor to retain the example already set and to instill these ideals in all permanent members of the staff and the turn-over staff that is a common occurrence.

Must Set Example

"The editor of the paper must set the example of good journalism himself before he will ever be able to realize a paper which is known for its correct and complete news coverage.

"So it is that rash promises, which I could make during this campaign, are far less important in determining whether I'll make a good editor, than will be my actual performance in that office.

"As I have hinted, good editorship depends upon: 1) events during the editor's term of office and the manner in which he approaches these events, 2) the issues that develop and the research and eventual stand taken by the editor, and 3) coordination of the staff with sound leadership that is evident through the editor's good performance in the first two aspects mentioned.

"Since I have concluded that the good editor is determined 'absolutely' after having been elected, then to determine 'relatively' before the election whether he

Today's Symposium Schedule

The following is a list of the seminars, luncheons and lectures scheduled for today in conjunction with the program of the Carolina Symposium on Public Affairs.

At 1 p.m. in Carolina Inn—Luncheon for members and guests of the Faculty Club of UNC, featuring Victor Reuther of the AFL-CIO.

At 2:30 p.m.—Carroll Hall, a panel discussion on "U. S. relations with Russia." This panel will feature John Keppel, Deputy Chairman of the Division of Research and Analysis for the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, U. S. Department of State; Barrett Reed, Deputy Chief, Soviet Orbit Staff, Office of Policy and Plans, U. S. Department of State; Lt. Col. Robert B. Rigg, Office of the Chief of Staff and Robert I. Biren, Director of Management Planning, International Cooperation Administration.

At 4 p.m. in the Library Assembly Room, Ben Segal of the AFL-CIO and Michael Harrington of the Fund for the Republic.

University Trustee Dies In Washington Hospital

Judge John J. Parker, UNC alumnus and currently a member of the University Board of Trustees, died at the George Washington University hospital in Washington, D. C. early Monday after he was stricken by a heart attack Sunday night.

At the time of his death he was in Washington to attend the American Judical Conference which was called by Chief Justice Warren. The meeting is to include representatives from each of the ten circuit courts.

Judge Parker, born in 1885 at Monroe, graduated from UNC in 1907. A member of the Phi Beta Kappa, he was awarded an LL.B. from UNC in 1908, an honorary LL.-D. from UNC in 1927, Davidson in 1940 and the University of Michigan in 1942.

In 1910 he married Maria Maffit of Wilmington, who survives him in addition to a son and daughter.

President Hoover appointed him as a Justice on the Supreme Court of the United States in 1930, but his approval failed by one vote.

He has been a judge of the United States Court of Appeals, Fourth Circuit, since 1925, when he was appointed to the office by President Coolidge.

In 1945 he was an alternate member of the International Military Tribunal to try Nazi war criminals.

Parker was awarded the American Bar Association Medal for conspicuous services in the cause of American Jurisprudence in 1943.

He served on various committees for the North Carolina and American Bar Associations during his career, and was vice-president of the American Judicature Society.

Judge Parker served as lecturer at Amherst College in 1950, at Washington and Lee in 1951 and at Washington University in 1954.

He made his home in Charlotte, where his son practices law.

Judge Parker was to have spoken at the UNC Law School's Law Day USA on May 1.

Banquet At Inn Begins Full-Week Symposium

By DAVIS YOUNG and MARY ALYS VOORHEES

Sunday night at Carolina Inn 175 invited guests attended the first official function of the 1958 Carolina Symposium when they sat in on a banquet given in honor of Gov. Luther H. Hodges, Dr. Charles L. Durham and Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington.

Included in the array of personalities were President William Friday of the Consolidated University, Chancellor William Aycock, Mr. William Geer, faculty advisor to the Symposium and Chairman Sonny Hallford.

Also appearing were Sergei Striganov of the Russian Embassy in Washington, D. C., Marguerite Roberts, Dean of Westhampton College in Richmond, Va., Richard Hocking of Emory University and various student leaders from the campus.

Presiding at the banquet was Sonny Hallford who introduced the people at the head table and than presented William Geer, principle speaker, for the evening. Geer recognized the guests and students who have devoted so much time to this year's program.

At the conclusion of the festivities, the guest adjourned to Memor-

Beaux Art Ball Plans Contest

Posters with ballot boxes attached have been placed in strategic areas of the campus to announce a contest for the theme of the first annual Beaux Arts Ball to be held April 11 at Carolina Inn.

Costumes and decorations for the ball, sponsored by the GMAB and University Art League, will be in keeping with the theme, to be announced after the close of the contest March 23.

Each entry suggesting a title for the ,heme shoud be accotmpanied by name and address of the person submitting it, since a prize will be awarded the person whose suggestion is used.

The Beaux Arts Ball will be given in conjunction with the Sidewalk Art Show to be held in down town Chapel Hill on April 11, 12 and 13.

Students and non-students are eligible to exhibit in the show, and all entries, which should be for sale, are to be submitted to Graham Memorial Information Office by Tuesday, April 8.

Entry fee is $1, per person. There will be a 10, per cent commission charged on all sales.

Cowley Declares Need Of Literature For Man

By SARAH ADAMS

"Cultural Survival: The Longer View" was the topic of discussion for the second in the series of evening Symposium addresses. Speakers, Malcolm Cowley, the Reverend Julian N. Hartt and Miss Katharine McBride spoke on the literary, theological and educational aspects of cultural survival last night at 8 o'clock in Memorial Hall.

This program was under the sponsorship of the Alumni Lecture Assoc.

Malcolm Cowley, prominent critic, writer and lecturer, spoke on "Literature and Survival". He pointed out at the outset of his address that 40 years ago the question of human survival would not have been raised, no one even thought about it. Only in the last 13 years, since the dropping of the first Atomic Bomb, have men turned their thoughts to the idea that mankind might become extinct, destroyed by the forces of man himself.

UP Candidates

All University Party candidates will meet Wednesday at 4:30 p.m. in Roland Parker 2 in GM.

Student Party Postpones Editorship Endorsement

The Student Party in a special voted to postpone endorsement of a candidate for editor of The Daily Tar Heel until the regular Party meeting next Monday night.

The action came following an objection from Student Body President Sonny Evans and other Party members that all candidates for the office had not been given a chance to appear.

Ann Frye, Curtis Gans, Pringle Pipkin and Charlie Sloan presented their reasons for seeking the office. A fifth candidate, John Whitley, did not attend the meeting.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the Infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Dorothy Blitzer, Nancy Grubb, Nancy Meiggs, Elizabeth McCutchin, and Carol Yeager and Robert Wellons, Robert Knott, Henry Howell, Henry Handy, John Ward, William Tadros, Leon Adams, Tom Efird, Sam Carrington, Lawrence Kouri, James Hathaway, Alphus Monthall, Donald Spangler, Richard Midkiff, Robert Peebles, Charles Hose, Dean Colbruth, Paul Fuller, Edmund Lively, Michael Young and Homer Gardner.

World Must Let Smaller Nations Follow Own Paths

Senator John Sparkman, appearing for a Carolina Symposium address here Monday, struck a note worthy point in the field of international relations between Russia, the United States and the rest of the world.

Briefly, he pointed to the unfortunate attitude of East and West that any of the smaller nations in Europe and Asia must ally themselves with one of the big powers or face the contempt of Moscow or Washington.

There currently exists in the United States, he said, the Notion that if one of these smaller nations does not commit itself to the West it will eventually lose its national distinction and adjoin itself to the communist orbit.

What the Alabama senator said is, in this time of competition for uncommitted nations, a lesson for the two big powers that smaller countries should be allowed to progress along national lines that will make them distinct units of the world community.

For unless these countries are permitted to travel the untempered course of their own destiny, the world soon will be split into two opposing sides which, combined, embrace all the nations of our planet.

National distinction then will have disappeared. In place of individual countries recognized by peculiar customs and geographic boundaries will be two opposing forces whose destinies on the world scene could not admit of compromise.

There would, after this calamitous courtship, be only an East and a West. And these would be pitted one against the other in proportions far more staggering than the opposition which exists now between the leading world powers.

It is assuring in this time of international power purchase that a United States senator is in sympathy with the natural course of the smaller nations of the world, that he is in sympathy with their stride toward equality in the arena of international politics.

And it wil be a stride forward for eventual international peace if more people in the East and West allow the smaller countries to continue along the pathway to respect which Senator Sparkman discussed here Monday.

Cultural Exchanges May Help East-West Relations

If nothing else, Russian Counselor Sergei Striganov made clear here Monday the complete misunderstanding of each other between the peoples of the Democratic West and Communistic East.

We hope he was sincere in his presentation of cultural exchanges advocated by Russia as a means to eventual wourld peace. For unless that practice contributes to that end the world is in for bitter times ahead.

Striganov left little hope for a summit compromise between Russia and the free world if the Red country is persistent in talks conducted according to blueprints drawn by the Kremlin.

Along these same lines, Senator John Sparkman of Alabama echoed the need for cultural exchange and summit talks as the only salvation from total economic collapse which would befall the United States and Russia in a continuous armaments race.

When two such men can so basically agree on a press platform —when a U. S. Senator and a Russian Counselor outline virtually the same course for international peace —it is indeed unfortunate that this agreement can not be realized on the international level.

Perhaps cultural exchange is the answer to the pressing world problems. Surely such an exchange would not further magnify the tension between East and West. It should at least be given a sincere try by the United States and Russia.

We feel that the United States is willing to go one step further than the Kremlin in any attempt at world peace if Russia will prove her desire for positive action at an international summit.

It now is up to the Communists to prove that desire by giving more than lip service to proposals for disarmament and taking steps to rectify her actions which have brought mistrust from the free world.

Council Plans Leave People 'Bewildered'

By WHIT WHITFIELD

The recent Honor Councils controversy has left many people in a mild state of bewilderment, and the remainder of the people couldn't care less.

Those who pretend to know what makes student government tick are wondering why the single honor council plan was vetoed after passage by the legislature. This was the plan which was a year in the making and had a cast of thousands, yet when success was imminent it was vetoted. The reason given was goobledegook—unadulterated goobledegook-executive discretion at its highest.

By the time that the legislature had given its approval to the new system the mechanics of the problems were such that a New York law factory would have been the only means for interpretation of it.

The brave Tar Heels reporters and re-writers who attempted to present the issues were hampered by conflicting reports from the wealth of authorities involved and by charges and countercharges, real and fabricated. Consequently, it is no wonder that the average student who is to be affected by the honor system does not even know the nature of the system and councils as they now stand. It is for this reason that we attempt to present the workings of both in as clear a translation as is humanly possible.

As it now stands there are two honor councils, appropriately entitled Men's and Women's. However ,in the event that a person objects to this system ,a third council will be formed from the other two and will be presided over by the clerk of the student legislature.

For each council there is a jury of nine who determine whether a student is guilty, or otherwise. Two of these jurors will be permanent and will not be subject to bribes. The others will be appointed by the student body president and will be called rotators for the simple reason that they rotate. The exact nature of their rotations has not been determined by Campus Stores Committee.

Each council will be composed of five elected members who will decide the punishment to be meted out to offenders. In the event that some who appear before the councils will not be quilty, they will most likely remain unpunished.

It is important to note that the jury may convict a student by a two-thirds vote, which means that a person may be as much as one-third innocent and still be subjected to punishment by the councils. This is in keeping with the idea that there is some good in all of us, but not necessarily enough.

This is the situation as it now stands ,but it is subject to change without notice, so we advise you to read the Daily Tar Heel for further developments.

Cuba In Torment

Dictators are like men who ride tigers. They cannot dismount. Last June President Batista of Cuba conceded to a correspondent of this newspaper that it is relatively easy to seize power but very hard to give it up.

So today Cuba is in torment. The effort to hold elections on June 1 is collapsing. There never was any real hope of elections, but General Batista clung desperately to the idea and was unwisely supported in his efforts by the America Embassy in Havana and the State Department. Unhappy Cuba is apparently not to have such a peaceful way out.

The outstanding lesson of these recent hectic weeks is a striking demonstration that a military dictatorship cannot stand freedom of the press. President Batista maintained a censorship last year, but he was persuaded to lift it and restore constitutional guarantees on Jan. 27. In so doing he appears to have sealed the fate of his dictatorship. Now he has clamped the lid down again and reimposed censorship of the press and radio, but he cannot turn the clock back.

His supporters are falling away. The rebel opposition is growing in the form of terrorism and counterterorism. Above all, the dramatic resistance of Fidel Castro and his youthful rebels in the Sierra Maestra at the eastern end of the island is proving the nemesis of the regime. It has long been obvious that the struggle in Cuba centered around these two determined and courageous antagonists—Fulgencio Batista and Fidel Castro. The battle seems to be approaching its climax—THE NEW YORK TIME.

Jackson's Speech: The Challenge

What Sen. Henry Jackson spoke at the Carolina Symposium Sunday night, his words rang true.

He methodically pointed out the extent of the Russian challenge. He also pointed out methodically the ways to rectify this situation.

Jackson pulled no punches. He said frankly that Russia had a low standard of living, but that this low standard of living gives impetus to technological advancement.

He traced the Russian military development to the present, where he said that Russia was ahead of the U. S. in many fields and rapidly catching up in others.

He pointed out that Russia within twenty years could be ahead of the U. S. in all phases of industrial and agricultural development.

He showed how Russia was taking the initiative in foreign aid, and the U. S. was rapidly losing prestige.

What was particularly noteworthy was when Jackson quoted Khruschev as saying that Russians did not need war. Peaceful competition was enough.

Coupled with the tensions of cold war and limited war, peaceful competition is indeed enough.

Jackson's solutions were pertinent to the problems involved. When he suggests increased defense expenditures, he may be hurting the taxpayer's pocket and reducing the standard of living, but he is suggesting the aid of the country in preserving its freedom.

When he proposes extra aid to schools, he may be the target for the cry of "creeping socialism," but he is preparing the future of the country.

When he suggests technological and industrial advancement, he may be drowned out by the interference of the central government, and yet in the recession that currently afflicts the country, the need to make use of the over supply of labor is clearly foreseen.

Moreover, when he underscores the need for highway, hospital, and school construction programs, he is pointing to a real need.

Furthermore, when Sen. Jackson talks in terms of breaking down the barriers to the free spread of ideas, both scientific and non-scientific, he is showing concern for the lack of harmony between the allies, and for the progress of science which is so essential in these troubled times.

The proposal to strengthen the NATO alliance was also a strong feature of Sen. Jackson's program, for without allies, the U. S. effort to preserve freedom in many parts of the world is doomed to failure.

What was left out of the speech, was the U.N., SEATO, and the intricate problems of foreign aid.

The U. S. must strengthen its position in the U.N. by standing on the principles upon which the U. S. was founded, and not hesitating in such cases as that of Tunisia.

The U. S. must strengthen its SEATO alliance, and try to attain a summit conference, even if the eventual result is a status quo.

Finally, the U. S. must take the initiative in foreign aid in order to meet the Russian economic challenge.

All this is going to cost money but the U. S. had better pay till it hurts in order to preserve its freedom.

Eggheads Have Change

There are a few faint signs that it may become again respectable to be an egghead in these United States.

But to anyone who may be misguided enough to aspire to egghead status, be warned that the new egghead is a very different creature from the old discredited egghead of yore.

First of all, the new egghead—Government graded and approved—is no universal scholar. No sir. He is either an atomic physicist, a weapons systems engineer or a mathematician. Once these qualifications have been met, the new Grade A egghead is in business in a big way. His opinions are respectfully requested by news commentators. Like this:

Q: Sir, what do you think of the orbit of the U. S. Satellite?

Egghead: The report of my private Univac would seem to suggest that the apogee of the orbit is too semicolloidal with the squeegee.

Q: Oh, Thank you Sir. And what will be the next big American program?

Egghead: Now we are working on the re-entry problem. We have to get the satellite nose cone back to earth in time for the next Presidential TV program.

And so on . . . . . You get the idea?

Naturally the emergence of the new egghead to a place of national prominence will bring some stresses and strains. Madison Avenue will likely jump on the bandwagon and we may expect to hear shortly that Flicko is the only windproof cigarette lighter that works while going 18,000 miles per hour in outer space.

Even inside the university, all the other departments will have to catch up with the new eggheads' interests. From the law school we now have articles on who owns the moon. The medical school is already busy on space medicine. Everybody in the economics department knows that the stock market is more sensitive to sutellite successes than a Y-Court dog is to a piece of doughnut.

Let's face it though. Some parts of the university are washed up. The departments concerned with the supposedly Finer Things of Life can shut up shp and go home.

We eggheads were never much impressed with this artistic nonsense. Besides, we need the office and classroom space for a new electronic computer that we have ordered.

Economy & The People

So great is President Eisenhower's faith in "the people" that twice in six months he has elected them to right the nation's economy. Worried about inflation last fall, the President knew precisely where to turn to get something done. "I am not advocating any buyers' strike," he suggested. "but I do know this, we should buy selectively and carefully . . . We should not be spending recklessly and adding fuel to this flame." Then, March 5, with the recession obvious enough to be called a recession even in Republican circles, Mr. Eisenhower again appealed to the people for relief: "I believe, of course, that the upturn in our economy will be the result of millions of citizens making their purchases, having greater confidence."

With prices still rising, in spite of the slump, the inept population doesn't quite know which course to pursue. Should they spend freely—not always easy when one is unemployed or about to be—in order to produce a business upswing? Or should they squeeze a dollar long enough to force down what seems to be a rigged price structure? The decision is difficult, but in the Eisenhower philosophy what are "the people" for if not to solve the technical problems of a humble and unsophisticated government?

For a Chief Executive to impose responsibility in such far-reaching affairs upon 531 untrained congressmen might open him to a charge of passing the buck, but to bestow it on 170 million expert citizens is surely nothing more than simple democracy.—The Reporter

LETTERS TO EDITOR

Need For Sidewalks

To The Editor:

I have just listened to a public opinion poll conducted by WCHL studio on the subject of parking meters for Chapel Hill, and what to do with the revenues from the meters.

I have no convictions on the subject one way or the other. They may be a good financial investment, but personally I hate to see our village looking like every other town.

However, I do have decided opinions on how the revenue, if meters are adopted, should be used. The sidewalks, up to the business block, are a disgrace to any place. You run the risk of breaking your neck in the gullies that glut the sidewalks everytime you venture out at night. The street lights are so dim you cannot see the gullies. You just hope and pray for the best. There is no attempt made at draining the sidewalks, so that the time and money spent filling the gullies with sand is worse than wasted, and only makes the responsible officials look stupid for allowing such a makeshift job. I like the dirt sidewalks, but curbing should be built on either side of the walks and culverts used at the low places to carry off the water. These are excellent examples of well-drained walks in the arboretum.

Part of the revenues from meters should be used to provide off-street parking lots. Cars should be allowed on these lots all night free of charge.

If the city fathers will provide better sidewalks and parking facilities then the meters could be a good thing. Any money left over could go to recreation.

ial Hall to sit in specially roped off sections of the Hall reserved for them.

Although the house was far from full, the crowd of over 1,000 thrilled to the words of the three speakers. Hodges acted as keynoter and talked of the role of North Carolina in survival. Dunham was next to appear and delivered a high powered, semi-technical speech on the medical aspects of atomic energy, presenting the positive and negative aspects of exposure.

The crowd got its biggest kick of the evening when Jackson assumed the rostrum and delivered a blistering oration concerning his observations from a recent trip to Russia. He pointed out that the people of the Soviet Union are catching us in every industrial aspect and are surging ahead militarily. Jackson warned that we can reverse the trend, but that it will take a concerted effort on the part of the people.

Yesterday morning, an overflow, standing room-only crowd swarmed Carroll Hall to hear Sen. John Sparkman of Alabama. He addressed the large gathering on "America's Position in Today's Troubled World."

And so the Symposium Week is now underway and will continue to provide Chapel Hill with this concentrated flow of culture. There are still many main meetings and seminars to attend as the week is just beginning.

Sloan Lists Edit Plans

Charlie Sloan, candidate for editor of The Daily Tar Heel in the coming spring elections, today issued the following statement:

"Here are some details of the editorial and business staff daily meetings I recommended last year and mentioned in the first of these statements last week.

"The meetings would include the editor, managing editor, news editor, sports editor, business manager and advertising manager. A meeting place other than The Daily Tar Heel office would be selected to avoid the interruptions of ringing telephones and people trying to conduct business before the office opens each day. A reporter would remain in the office to answer the telephone and take massages.

"Discussion at such meetings would range from complaints one person might have concerning another's department to planning special issues or editions of the paper.

Purpose

"The most obvious purpose of these conference is to assure smoother operation of the staff, resulting in a better coordinated newspaper. There are other benefits of such meetings. They offer everybody on the administrative side of the staff the opportunity to hear new ideas at the same time.

"Complaints can be ironed out quietly instead of by shouting from one end of the office to the other—disputes which do not create the best impression on outsiders who are in the office.

"My plan for daily editorial and business staff meetings form only part of a program for making The Daily Tar Heel an even better paper. I have already discussed the dorm stringer system, and in future statements I will go into detail on other plans I would like to see utilized.

"I am confident that these plans can be worked out because I have served in the capacity of acting editor, as well as in every other position on the writing side of The Daily Tar Heel.

Furtado Clarifies Views On Fraternities At UNC

Don Furtado, Student Party candidate for Student Body President in the coming spring elections, today issued a statement concerning fraternity life at the University.

His full statement, the first in a series of articles in which Furtado will state his views on various issues at UNC, follows:

"In the past few weeks, a great deal of attention has been focused on our social fraternities. Much of this attention has been due to rather spectacularized accounts of Carolina fraternity social life by a number of state newspapers.

"During this same period little credit has been given to our fraternities for their many contributions, such as the tremendous amount of charity work done by the IFC and individual fraternities throughout the year.

"However, it cannot be denied that this critical attention has shown that, in truth, problems do exist, such as our present coed visiting agreement and the presence of book reports and term papers in fraternity files. Such problems should and can be solved through the coordinated efforts of the IFC, the rest of student government, and the administration.

"By adding the President of the IFC to the Student Body President's cabinet, I feel that this coordination can be greatly increased. An investigation of the feasibility of strengthening the IFC Court might bring to light some means of improving individual conduct.

"The fraternities and their governing body, the IFC, must never isolate themselves from the remainder of the student community, for it is to the advantage of every fraternity member as well as to the advantage of the entire campus for them to strive to become an integral part of a working student government team.

"The conscientious concern that has been shown by Bill Redding and the members of the IFC in several instances during the past year has shown their willingness to work to solve our existing problems.

"This concern must continue in the coming year."

Bill Kincaid Named To Daily Tar Heel Post

Bill Kincaid, a journalism major and junior from Lenior, has been appointed assistant news editor of The Daily Tar Heel, News Editor Paul Rule announced Monday.

Kincaid will perform the duties of Ann Frye who resigned the position to pursue her campaign for the position of editor of the paper.

would be a good editor, certain criteria must be set up. And experience has proved in the past to be the most reliable criterion.

Experience

"The Tar Heel is not the only journalistic experience I have had. Previously I worked on the Woman's College newspaper and was appointed news editor my sophomore year. In my hometown (Hickory) I have worked for a local radio station, writing news and commercials, summers and holidays since my junior year in high school. In addition, I was editor of my hgh school newspaper and contributed news articles to the local daily paper.

"High scholastic average, I feel, is also important for the good editor, since this indicates a desire for knowledge, if not intelligence itself. My straight A record here this fall semester shows the high value I place on scholarship.

"In future statements, I will comment further on issues at hand which will be prominent after the spring election, such as fraternities in general and athletics, and on definite plans for staff organization, news coverage and other internal aspects of The Daily Tar Heel."

system.

Sparkman pointed out that there was indeed a growing trend to neutrality characterized by the Ceylonese who want to become the "Switzerland of the Far East." He said further that the ambassadors of the U. S. in these areas are pursuing, at least in three cases, completely contradictory policies with regards to neutrality.

He talked of a discussion he had with United Arab State President Nasser, in which Nasser pointed out that the reason the Soviet Union has had so much influence recently was that they did not hesitate with aid as the U. S. did.

He added that he left Nasser with the feeling that the United Arab State president had gone too far toward the Dussian orbit and probably would be unable to return to the cause of the free world.

Symposium

Cowley expressed the desire that man, instead of trying to develop new things that might lead to destruction, might turn to concentration upon continuing the good things that we already have. Here, he said, literature enters in as an encouragement for survival, both on the individual and national levels.

On the individual level, Cowley said, literature can aid in survival by strengthening our will to survive and by re-affirming our values; by setting our sights on a larger world than the everyday world that we see about us. On the national level, literature aids in cultural transmission by humanizing the country in which we live, by creating a nationally characteristic language and by creating myths by which our cultural and historical past may be preserved.

Professor Julian Hartt, Neah Potter Professor of Philosophical Theology of Yale Divinity School and Chairman of the Dept. of Religion, Yale College, spoke on "Our Cultural Heritage: Theological Aspects."

In effect, Hartt indicated that for our moral survival we must have a true return to religious values, not just a false piety which springs out of sudden desperation at the chaos of our present world.

Schruntek Named Head Of Campaign For Gans

Curtis Gans, candidate for editor of The Daily Tar Heel, has appointed Walter Schruntek, former News Editor of The Daily Tar Heel, chairman of his campaign advisory board.

Schruntek, a junior journalism major, worked for over a year on The Daily Tar Heel, and is currently working on the Durham Morning Herald.

Also appointed to Gans' campaign staff were Paul Carr, Ann Harvey, and Bill Sugg.

Carr, a former SP member, and a candidate last year for president of the senior class, will help Gans out in the dormitory districts.

Miss Harvey, a junior and a UP legislator, was a former member of the Newspaper Research Committee. She will assist Gans in the women's areas.

CCUN Chairman Sugg will aid Gans in the fraternity areas.

Gans outlined a program for better coverage of news on campus in a statement made today.

"A stringer system involving the dormitories is not enough. When I outlined last week, a program for a stringer system, I coupled it with a news tip system as well as a fuller coverage of intramurals."

"The Daily Tar Heel is a student newspaper, and must try to cover the campus as adequately as possible.

"A stringer system must incorporate a man in each dormitory, fraternity and sorority, as well as people in all activities and departments of the University. There should be a person that the staff of the paper can contact in the History Department, Graham Memorial Activities Board, as well as smaller groups such as the Elisha Mitchell Society.

"A news tip system where the editor pays the person who calls in the best story in any month a small cash award, should bring in some interesting and unusual stories.

"There has been a crying need in the past for better intramural and minor sports coverage. This must be rectified to equal the past coverage of major sports that the sports department has done well."

"If these things are done to aid news coverage, I feel from the point of view of news coverage, The Daily Tar Heel can be the best college paper. I feel that I can bring out this type of paper," Gans stated.

Cardboard Installs New Heads At Banquet

New officers of the UNC Cardboard were installed by the outgoing officers of each department following the annual Cardboard Awards Banquet at Lenoir Hall last week.

To symbolize the change in officers, the retiring officer presented his key for the Cardboard quarters to the newly elected officer. New officers are Patrick Dooley, president; Patricia Sweeney, vice president-secretary; Cotten Hale, office director; Lawrence Wilson, chief artist; and Thal Elliott, head usher.

They replace Peter Evans, Carolyn Hofler, Fred Propst, Rachel Speight, and David Ellwanger in respective positions.

After the installation of officers the following awards were given: first year, certificate; second year, monogramed jacket; third year, monogramed sweater; fourth year, monogramed key and chain.

Receiving a first year award were Ed Brown, Charlie Campbell, Garry De Bruhl, Bob Easley, Thal Elliott, Erwin Fuller, Ken Harris, Cotton Hale, Tommy House, Pat Pittman, George Reese, Ed Riner, Chenault Spence, Joseph Stanley, Peggy Smith, Pat Sweeney, and Wayne Wright.

Second year award: Herbert Allred, Pat Dooley, Pete Flahive, Gilbert Huffman, Grady Phillips, Caleb White, Larry Withrow, and Lawrence Wilson.

Third year award: Bill Carden, Don Gray, Dave Ellwanger, Cotton Hale, Carolyn Hofler.

Fourth year award: Bill Akin, Ed Brown, Garry De Bruhl, Peter Evans, Pat Pittman, Rachel Speight, Fred Propst, and Wayne Wright.

Carolyn Hofler presided over the meeting in the absence of President Pete Evans.

Navy Fires Satellite Into Orbit

WASHINGTON, March 17-(AP)-This was "J" day for the Navy and an old Army man in the white house—"J" for jubilation.

There was jubilation and plenty of it, from the instant the Navy's Vanguard rocket streaked aloft at Cape Canaveral, Fla.

Two hours later, President Eisenhower announced through Press Secretary James C. Hagerty that the 72-foot bullet-shaped rocket had successfuly thrust a 6-inch aluminum globe into an earth-girdling orbit.

At the Vanguard control center of the Naval Research Laboratory in the outskirts of Washington, project director John P. Hagen displayed an ear-to-ear grin and a glowing green St. Patrick's Day tie.

No, Hagen said, he wasn't exactly blessed with the luck of the Irish. He's Irish in name only. But his efforts, and those of all the people connected with project Vanguard finally have been blessed with success.

The launching capped months of frustration and failure. In December and again in February Vanguard rockets blasted off and exploded seconds later. In between, the Army shot its Explorer satellite into orbit and the Navy cheered and suffered. Criticism of project Vanguard erupted along with calls for an investigation and talk of taking the satellite program away from the Navy.

How does Hagen feel now?

"Does that require an answer?" he replied, beaming.

At the White House and the control center tension ran like an electric current through staff members on duty in the early morning hours and among throngs of news and camera men.

Alternately sucking on an empty pipe and guaffing coffeefrom a paper cup, Hagen, himself, was on the job at 4 a.m.

He is a native fo Nova Scotia. 49 years old, who started out to be a lawyer, He took some science courses on the side to obtain what he calls breadth and changed his career goal while still in college.

Sig Eps Attend High Point Meet

Seven officers of N. C. Delta of Sigma Phi Epsilon attended the annual Sig Ep Leadership School, held Saturday at High Point College. Together with representatives from the seven other chapters in District V, the Carolinas, the men from UNC received training on rush, pledge problems and finance.

Dean U. S. Dubach, a member of Oregon Alpha of Sigma Phi Epsilon, spoke to the meeting on the values and needs of the fraternity. During his five-day stay in the state, he will visit the Carolina chapter Wednesday and speak to the members.

Attending were Bobby Burrough, president; Jack Reed, vice-president; Clif Paderick, historian; Bennie Baucom, comptroller; Ed Dowland, secretary; John Garver, social chairman; and Ned Todd, rush.

Greatest Years Of My Life — Brennan

Lucky to be a "Flatbush Tar Heel." Nope, that's not a new Betty Smith novel, nor is it a recent Broadway production. It merely expresses the very sincere sentiment of ahandsome 21-year-old fellow Brooklyn named Pete Brennan.

Pete left his home in Brooklyn four years ago and came South to get an education. He was a pretty fair high school basketball player and a guy named McGuire was interested, so he got Brennan a scholarship to Carolina.

Brennan earned that scholarship, and how. Following in the footsteps of Lennie Rosenbluth is not the most attractive challenge in the world, but Brennan did it and he did it well. He has won himself a place right along side Lennie as one of Carolina's all-time great cagers.

Now that Pete has left his collegiate shoes in the dressing room for the last time, how does he feel about these past four years?

"They're the four most wonderful years of my life," says the dark complexioned senior. "I could never have been happier than I have been at Carolina. Everybody has been so wonderful;my coaches, my felow students, the faculty, everybody. I played with the greatest guys in the world and I've loved every minute of it."

Pete, who gets a BS in Industrial Relations in June, hates to leave Chapel Hill. "It's been so great being a "Flatbush Tar Heel," he says. "I'll leave Chapel Hill soon, but North Carolina will always be a part of me; I could never forget a place like this."

Interested In Pro And AAU Basketball

Pete is undecided about his future but basketball will play a prominent patr in it. He squelched rumors that he was not at all interested in professional ball. "I am very definitely interested in the pros" he said. "Right now I'm leaning toward AAU ball but I'm certainly interested in what the proscan offer."..

The professionals don't begin their strong recruiting until after the senior all-star game when they can get a good look at the boys so until then Pete will keep an open mind as regards his future in the game that has been so good to him.

It's a cinch that Brennan will be one ofthe most sought after players around. He was named the ACC's most valuable player this season and has already been named to the Sporting News and Look All-American teams. He's also received second team A-A honors from the Associated Press and third team from United Press.

This year, as the league's top scorer and rebounder, Pete was named to the All-ACC conference and tournament teams for the second straight season. He was the outstanding player in both the conference tourney and the Dixie Classic and he was on the all-tourney team in the Kentucky Invitational just to mention a few of his honors.

Championship Team Had More Balance

Brennan was asked to compare the Tar Heels this year with the tea mwhich won the National Championship in 1956-57.

"The difference was balance," he answered. "We had more balance last season and we had played so much together that we thought together. Everybody knew every move the other would take. With Quigg and myself in the corners, Lennie in the pivot and Cunningham and Kearns outside, we had real good balance."

Pete thinks the Tar Heels had a god season this year but labels next season's club as "potentially tremendous. Anybody who beats this team next year will have to go some. If If Joe (Quigg) is back they'll be that much more effective. We missed him very much this season."

Brennan concurs with those who feel the ACC is the toughest conference in the country. "In this league, anybody can beat you on any given night," he commented. "Basketball and other sports are so intense in this area that you can always expect good athletics."

Good Public Relations Man

Always a favorite with the fans and especially the kids, Brennan admits that "I like kids very much. I have six brothers and three sisters and I worked at a boy's camp for two summers and I enjoy working with the youngsters—very much.

Pete has been praised many times for his treatment of the younger set. He's always willing to sign autographs and has written to many of his little fans personally It's this type of warm-hearted kindness that has made Pete a "nice guy" in everybody's books.

Brennan thinks that as an asset to a team, Wilt Chamberlain of Kansas and ex-N. C. State star Ronnie Shavlik were the best two college players he ever faced.

As for his biggest thrill, it's obvious—winning the NCAA title last year. "That, and the reception we got at the Raleigh-Durham Airport when we got back from Kansas," he adds.

Pete means it when he says he hates to leave Carolina, and his friends and fans mean it when they say they hate to see him go. Tar Heelia was lucky to have had the Flatbush Tar Heel.

TONY SCHIFFMAN—One of many Tar Heel swimmers who performed well in the Eastern Regionals at Annapolis. Schiffman copped a second in the 1500 meters and a fourth in the 440. In both events he did his best time of the season. Schiffman is one of five All-Americans on the Carolina squad; he hails from Greensboro.

Scurlock Beats Sowell In Chicago News Meet

Dave Scurlock was in the foreground with a brokn tape across his chest, and three yards in the background was world record holder of the indoor 880, and 1000 marks Arnie Sowell.

Passes In Final Lap

Comeback he did, and in a big way. Running against a select limited field, the big Tar Heel took an early lead but relinquished it to Sowell and Notre Dame's Date Vandenberg at the half-way mark. Scurlock stayed on their heels, and going into the last lap, passed the leaders and kept his position to the finish. His time was 2:11.1.

Sowell won the event last year, but this was the first time he had run since July. Formerly of Pitt, he is now in the Army and had not been able to get into condition for the earlier indoor meets.

Beatty Gets Race

Villanova distance man Ron Delany set a new indoor mile mark in the same meet, but not with out the assistance of former Tar Heel Jim Beatty. Beatty set up a fast pace from the start and kept the lead until the three-quarters mark. Delaney then took over along with Maryland's Burr Grim and after changing positions a couple of time, crossed the line at 4:03.4 breaking the old mark of 4:03.6. Beatty faded to forth.

DAVE SCURLOCK
. . . Defeats Sowell . . .

Carolina Coach Dale Ranson who made the trip with Scurlock had this to day about Beatty's run. "Jim knew that somebody had to set up a fast pace to pull Delaney out. Delaney runs only to win, but this time, thanks to Beatty, he had to give it more than usual."

The meet is one of the finest on the circut and, even though it was televised in the Chicago area, it was witnessed by a sellout crowd of ten thousand.

The foremost objective in the University of North Carolina School of Pharmacy is the education of ethical, competent pharmacists.

Temple Star Injured

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Temple University's all-America basketball star, Guy Rodgers, is being treated for a "low back sprain" in Temple University Hospital, but should be able to play by Friday in the semi-final round of the NCAA tournament at Louisville. Temple meets Kentucky in the semifinals.

A hospital spokesman said X-rays taken of Rodgers' back were negative. He said Rodgers can play by Friday but "may not be at full efficiency." The Temple ace suffered the injury Friday night as he led Temple to its victory over Maryland in the Eastern Regional Championships at Charlotte.

Rodgers said he may have bruised his back in the Maryland game when he smashed into the press table chasing an out-of-bounds ball. He said he felt no pain at the time. But when he awoke Saturday morning his back was stiff.

Rodgers said he had treatment Saturday and played without handicap against Dartmouth that night. The slick ball handler scored 17 points against Dartmouth as Temple won easily 69-50.

Rodgers was voted the most valuable player in the regionals at Charlotte and his loss would be a staggering blow to Temple's chances for the national title. The Owls, winners of 25 straight games and with a 26-2 record for the season are one of the favorites in the four team field. Kansas State and Seattle are the other teams.

Rodgers, in addition to being Temple's leading scorer, is the "quarter back" of coach Harry Litwack's team. His brilliant playmaking is considered as valuable if not more so than his ability to put the ball in the basket.

Tankmen Perform Well In Easterns

Tar Heels Ready For Nationals

By RUSTY HAMMOND

The Eastern Regional Swimming Championships are over, and Carolina's crack mermen are back in Chapel Hill, but the folks up in Annapolis will remember the Tar Heels and their fine individual and team performances.

Several of Carolina's aces performed well in the Easterns, and no doubt many will get a crack at the big show, the National Championships at Ann Arbor, Michigan, to be held March 28.

The Carolina boys rolled up some of their best times of the entire season at Annapolis. Tony Schiffman had his best time of the year in both of his events, the 1500 meters and the 440 freestyle. Schiffman was second in the 1500 and copped a fourth in the 440. Bill Zickgraf did a good job in the butterfly. Mac Mahaffey rolled to a fourth in the 200-butterfly.

Both of the Tar Heel relay teams did very well. The freestyle team of Jeff Zwicker, Zickgraf, Bill Roth, and Walt Rose was second, and the medley team of Brent Nash, Zickgraf, Rose, and Mahaffey placed fourth.

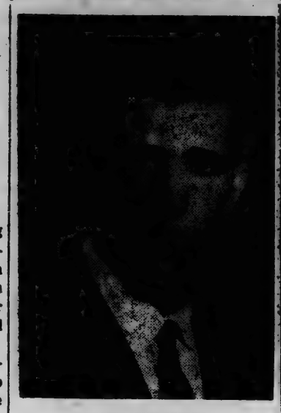
Divers Ned Meekins and Pete Reynolds copped fourth and eighth respectivelly.

The Easterns were a proving ground for the Nationals, and Carolina is a cinch to place some boys at Ann Arbor. Both of the relay teams have a good chance at All-America. The Nationals, as the name implies, will consist of every college in America which has a good enough swimmer to qualify.

Carolina already has five all-Americans in Roth, Rose, Mahaffey, Zickgraf, and Schiffman, and all stand a good chance of repeating. A few new additions to the coveted list would be a nice feather in the cap of first-year coach Pat Earey. Earey guided the splashes to an undefeated season, as they swept through 11 straight meets, including all seven conference foes.

Boxing Appeal

WASHINGTON (AP)-The Supreme Court yesterday gave the International Boxing Club IBC another round in which to challenge a verdict that would drive it out of the fight promotion business.



In a one-line order, the high court agreed to hear IBC's appeal from a decision finding it guilty of monopolizing championship bouts.

The action means the court will decide whether the punishment decreed by District Judge Sylvester J. Dyan in New York was too severe.

Compulsory Meet Set For All Candidates

The Elections Board has announced that the compulsory meeting for party chairmen and all candidates in the spring election will be held Monday night at 8 p.m. in Gerrard Hall.

This meeting is mandatory for all candidates, and absence excuses will be granted only for 1) being in the Infirmary and 2) others reasons approved by the chairman of the Elections Board.

BUDDY PAYNE
Signs Pro Contract

Payne Inks Pro Contract With Ottawa

Buddy Payne, captain of the Carolina football team last fall, and a pick for all-conference end revealed yesterday that he was signed a contract with the Ottawa Rough Riders of the Canadian Pro Football league.

A 205 pounder from Norfolk, Va., Payne was a mainstay on the Tar Heel squad througout his Carolina career. He has been a starter since his sophomore year. He is espcially noted for his staunch defensive play and pass catching ability.

Although the exact amount of the salary was not revealed, it is in five figures. The Ottawa team finished second in the league last season.

"I'm very happy with the contract and terms," said Payne, "and I am looking forward to play football in Canada next year."

He is now assisting Coach Tatum with the Tar Heel's spring practice.

NIT Basketball

NEW YORK (AP) — The first and second seeded teams, Dayton and Bradley, make their first appearances tonight in the National Invitation basketball tournament at Madison Square Garden.

Bradley, defending champion but seeded No. 2, plays Xavier of Cincinnati in the opening game at 7:15 p.m. Dayton opposes Fordham in the second game.

Winners advance to Thursday's semifinals. The Bradley-Xavier victor goes against third-seeded St. Bonaventure, 79-75 winner over St. Joseph's Pa. last Saturday. The Dayton-Fordham survivor opposes St. John's of Brooklyn which upset fourth-seeded Utah 71-70.

Dayton goes into the Fordham game with a 23-3 season record and memories of a one-sided 64-35 victory over the Rams during the campaign. Fordham's record is 15-8.

"Fordham has improved very much," said Tom Blackburn, Dayton coach, "the way they looked against St. Francis they could knock off any team in the country." Fordham beat St. Francis Pa. Saturday night 83-59.

Baseball Squad Leaves For Rollins Tournament

By RUSTY HAMMOND

With the opening games of the Rollins Baseball Week set to begin this Thursday, Carolina's varsity baseball team has been busily preparing for the annual event for the past two weeks

The squad leaves today at 2:00 p.m. for sunny Florida and three days of baseball. Carolina's opening day opponent is the host team, Rollins. They will also face Georgia. There is one game slated for Thursday, a double header Friday, and back to one game on Saturday.

Coach Walt Rabb has set his starting lineup for the initial scrap, and stated that practically every boy who makes the trip will have his chance to compete. The starting lineup for the first game is: Vaughn Bryson, 1b; Carson Oldham, 2b; Captain Roger Hunnicutt, ss; Harold Workman, 3b; and Bruce Crump behind the mound. The outfield starters are: Joe Temple or Allen Pends in left, Gerald Griffin or Johnny Burgwyn in center, and Tommy Saintsing in right. Coach Rabb will send Charlie Aycock, a righthander to the mound for the first game.

The starting mounsman in the second game will be either Wayne Young or Ben Harding, and whichever doesn't start the second game will start the third. Ben Hammet is slated for the fourth game. Dave Floyd, Doug Stimpson, and Johnny Johnson will be ready for bullpen duty.

Coach Rabb stated yesterday that "The unseasonable cold weather has forced the boys to refrain from throwing very hard, and we haven't had much practice in that phase of the game. Everybody on the squad will have an opportunity to play in Florida.

Striganov:

Church Has No Important Role In USSR Life

By ANN FRYE and CURTIS GANS

Sergei Striganov startled his Symposium audience Tuesday morning by saying that the church plays "no role in Soviet culture."

The remark was made during the question and answer period after speeches by Striganov, charge d'affaires of the Soviet Union, and Frederick T. Merrill, director of public affairs in the Department of State in a packed Memorial Hall.

Striganov's speech had contained his definition of Soviet culture and its embodiment in the sciences, art, education and other phases of life. The separation of church and state in Soviet society in his speech provoked the question. "What is the role of the church in Soviet culture?"

Merrill said that development of Soviet culture "is impressive as described by Striganov." Both his and Striganov's speeches concerned the cultural development in both countries, with an emphasis on scientific development and the fine arts as encouraged in both countries.

Questioning what Striganov had referred to as humanitarian aspects of Soviet culture, a student asked the Russian: "What was the humanitarian aspect of the Hungarian revolt?"

Hungarian Revolt

Striganov answered that in the revolt "a small fraction of people raised its hands against the government elected by the people. This (Hungarian) government asked the Soviet Union to assist them in handling this situation. We consider this assistance as a humanitarian act. Nobody knows how many people would have been killed in Hungary if the event had developed further."

In his speech, Merrill accused the Soviet Union of placing limitations on information in comparison with freedom of the press in this country.

2,000 Newspapers

Striganov had cited 2,000 as the number of newspapers published in the Soviet Union. When questioned about the relationship of these newspapers to the government, Striganov said that a small percentage were published by the Communist party and others were published by the government, public organizations, labor organizations and youth organizations, all of which reflect the views of the organization.

Carter Names Campaign Staff

Bob Carter announced yesterday the appointment of Leon Holt, a junior from Julian, as his campaign manager. Holt is at present a student legislator.

Carter also annuonced the appointment of three assistant managers. Miss Jackie McCarthy, a grad student, will be in charge of campaigning in sororities and women's dorms; Paul Carr, a senior will be in charge of the men's dorms and fraternities and Whit Whitfield, a senior, will manage the campaign among commuters and the outlying areas.

Carter has asked that all others interested in helping with the campaign contact either him or Leon Holt at 303 Grimes or call 8-9192.

Jones Named To UP Position

The University Party has announced the appointment of Jerry Jones as assistant to the party chairman, Syd Shuford. Jones primary duties will be working with legislative candidates and coordinating their campaigns.

Other appointments were, Susan Saunders, chairman of the office staff, and Chuck Flack, publicity chairman. Miss Saunders will assist in planning meetings, and Flack will handle Party publicity as well as assist the candidates with their individual publicity.

Shuford stated that this group is the nucleus of the UP staff. He added, "No finer group exists in my opinion. I have the utmost confidence in these people."

SYMPOSIUM:

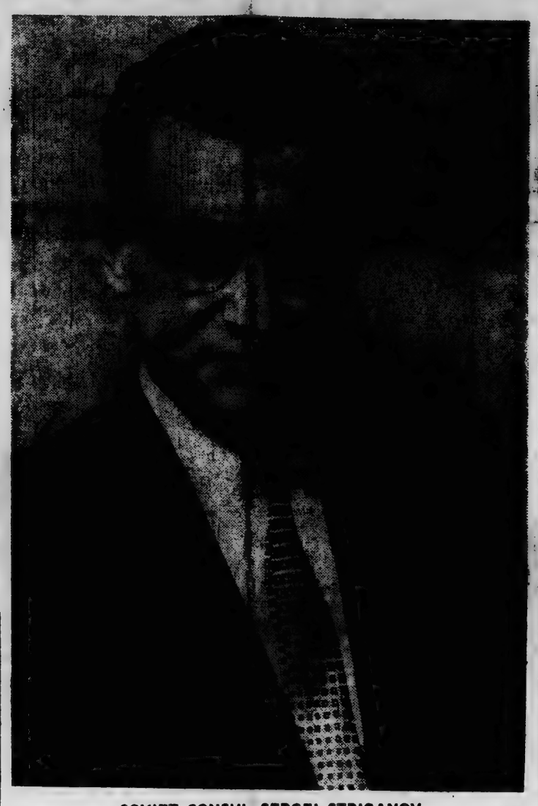
Three Set To Speak Here Today

William Lee Miller, Don Z. Zimmerman and Harry Golden will be the main speakers at today's fifth and sixth sessions of the 1958 Carolina Symposium on Public Affairs being held here on campus through Friday.

Miller, brilliant young theologian and educator will address Carolina students and friends on "A Useless Faith in a Useful Society." He is speaking at 10 a.m. in Carroll Hall.

At 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall, Zimmerman and Golden will speak. The former is talking on "Science and Survival" and Golden on "Minority Groups and American Freedom."

Miller



A graduate of the University of Nebraska and the Yale Divinity School Miller was twice national chairman of the Student YMCA. During the year of 1953-54, he worked at Smith College as an assistant professor of religion and at the same time was radio, television and movie editor of Episcopal Church News. The next year he joined the staff of the Reporter magazine for a year.

He has participated in the Washington Conference for Foreign Policy Research and is a consultant to the Fund for the Republic project on Religion and the Free Society. In the fall of 1958, he will return to Yale University as assistant professor in social ethics.

Orientation Blanks Distribution Set Tonight

Applications for women's orientation counselors will be distributed tonight in the women's dorms. A member of the Orientation Committee will be present in each dorm to explain the procedure of selection and to answer any questions concerning the orientation system.

Applications must be completed and turned in to the dorm president by 5 p.m. Monday at which time all applicants sign up for interviews with the selections committe.

The interviewing schedule is as follows: Thursday, March 27, 2-5:30 p. m., Alderman; Friday, March 28, 2-4 p.m., Spencer, 4-5:30 Carr; Monday March 31, 2-4 p. m., McIver, 4-5:30 Smith and Smith-Evergreen; Tuesday, April 1, 2-3:30, sororities (under classmen in house) and 3:30-4:30, any not able to be interviewed at their assigned time.

On Wednesday, April 2, the selections will be announced and immediately following spring holidays the counselor training period will begin.

Counselor Trainer

Paddy Wall has been chosen counselor trainer for this orientation session. She urges that all applicants be willing and able to give time to the job that will be necessary in order to have a successful orientation next fall.

According to Miss Wall, only those should apply who have a sincere desire to serve and a sincere interest in being of service to others and to the University. Personal qualities looked for in a candidate are: good scholarship, good health, ability to get along with people, ability to organize and paign, leadership, poise and personality.

Invaluable Service

Miss Wall added that "The Orientation Commitee is looking forward to a very successful program and hopes that you will be interested in becoming a part of it. The experience will be invaluable to you as an individual and your service invaluable to the feature of Carolina."

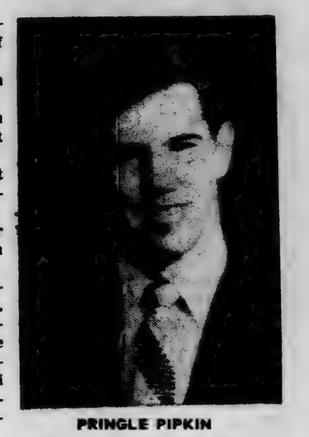
Applications may be obtained in the office of Graham Memorial or from the dormitory presidents.

Chi Psi Maid

MISS MARTHA FORTUNE was feted last night at a banquet at the Chi Psi lodge, honoring her selection as Maid of Chi Psi for 1958. An elementary education major from Brevard, she is a member of Alpha Gamma Delta and has been active in many campus activities. Among the guests at the banquet were Sergei Striganov and Eugeni Tsestroutsov of the Russian Embassy, Mrs. Elizabeth Stack, Charles Bernard, Robert Biren, Miss Luanne Thornton and Ray Jeffries.

Five-Way Race

Pringle Pipkin Is Fifth Candidate To Seek Top Daily Tar Heel Position



Veteran Tar Heel staffer A. Pringle Pipkin, sophomore from Reidsville, today announced he will run in spring elections for editor of the campus newspaper.

The election thus became a five-way race between Pipkin, Miss Ann Frye, Curtis Gans, Charlie Sloan and John Whitley.

Pipkin's announcement follows almost two years' experience on the Tar Heel news staff, in addition to other work as columnist, night editor and proof reader.

He has specialized in reporting events within student government and last fall began a column which probed the actions and implications of political affairs at the University.

Before coming to Carolina, he was editor of his school newspaper for two years, feature editor of the yearbook and associate editor of a school literary magazine.

PRINGLE PIPKIN
Seeks Daily Tar Heel Post

His other activities on campus include: secretary of Phi Eta Sigma, orientation counselor last fall, member of the special freshmen--"suicide twenty-five," member of the Student Library Committee, alumni secretary of Beta Theta Phi fraternity and a member of the local NROTC unit.

Issues Statement

In his announcement today, Pipkin issued the following statement:

"The job of being editor is a formidable one. It requires a deep interest and a will to make personal sacrifices.

"Editorials will be carefully thoughtout before they are written in order to avoid speaking unwisely. National, international and campus events will be considered in the editorials.

"I feel I can present intelligently both the problems of the men in the fraternities as well as those in the dormitories because I have lived in a dorm during the past two years.

"The number of columnists writing for the editorial page must be increased. Only the editorials will reflect my opinion, and the columnists shall be free to express views contrary to my own.

Will Speak Convictions

"Controversal issues will not be avoided. While my ideas are not extreme, I do hold definite convictions which I will not hestitate to express after I have examined the facts.

"Though editorials I will attempt to point out what I believe best for the campus and to arouse students to action. The editor should be a leader.

"I hope to increase the interest of the students in the opportunities of this University and to make them more aware of their social and academic priviledge and responsibilities.

"I will explain my policies regarding the news aspect of the paper, the responsibilities and training of the staff, the business side of the paper and other matters during my campaign."

SYMPOSIUM

Split Profit Plan Urged By Reuther

By PRINGLE PIPKIN

Victor Reuther, Jonathan Daniels and Spencer Love addressed the fifth meeting of the Tenth Carolina Symposium last night.

Reuther a labor leader, asserted that the clarion to call men to action has not been sounded and that much confusion now exists as to what the individual can do.

The current unemployment of 5 million he said was undermining the faith of the people. Modern technology should rule out all want he said.

Ninety-six billion dollars has been lost through the failure of the United States to fully mobilize its industry capacity. "We can win the cold war if we utilize our resourses," he explained.

He propsed a profit sharing program where the workers would get 25 per cent of the profits. The country needs citizens with more buying power, he said.

"Our purchasing power has not kept pace with our ability to produce," he said. To allow the country to go to into a depression he said would be proving the Communists' major thesis that capitalism destroys itself.

He said, however the problems were not insurmountable and was convinced that this country is more than equal to the problems now facing it.

Editor Daniels of The Raleigh News and Observer discussed the subject of "The Indestructible Tradition."

This tradition is the "Acient American faith" which grew out of "the hearts of men." "Our chief occupation should be not with their revolution (Russia's) but with ours" (the revolt in 1776). He claimed the greatest danger to our survival was the fact that the American revolution had become a "remote irrelevancy" to the people on "old crowded continents."

Russia's recent scientific success has "immeasurably improved" the chances of survival. The "newest weapon" is still this country's oldest faith.

Burlington Industries President Love stated that the American directed "is one of survival and coninued growth, approached from any angle."

While Love was optimistic about th growth of America values, he said he was not complacent. Speaking of Toynebee's theory of challenge and response, he said this country still had many problems to face.

In the past increased demands had stimulated production he said and that country must work for its traditions because they "are in some form or other what the world truly wants and needs."

UP Candidates

All University Party candidates will meet in Roland Parker Lounge 2 in Graham Memorial at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Minority Privileges Discussed

"Minority Rights: The Survival of Individual Freedom" was the topic of an informal question and answer discussion conducted by Ben Segal and Michael Harrington yesterday afternoon.

The discussion, sponsored by the YM-YWCA Human Relations Committee, was held in the Library Assembly Room.

Ben Segal, Director of the Trade Union Program on Civil Liberties and Right, presented the unions' point of view on civil liberties and discrimination among workers.

Michael Harrington, staff member of the Fund for the Republic and former associate editor of the Catholic Worker, discussed the Catholic as a minority group.

Among others questions, Mr. Segal was asked, "What efforts are the unions making to fight discrimination in the South and what problems do they run into in this fight?" In reply, Segal stressed that most of the unions of the AFL-CIO are in favor of integration and Civil Rights. However, he said that the biggest problem lies in the fact that the philosophy of the leaders does not trickle down to the rank and file worker.

The gap between the leader and the worker presents, both a problem and an opportunity for unions. In this gap the "race-hate" groups have made the greatest inroads, however, he said that the gap also provides the union with the opportunity to come in and educate the worker and thus change some unfounded attitudes.

Harrington said that he felt that if a Catholic were nominated for the presidency in 1960, he could escape the fate of Al Smith in the election of 1928. The fact that a very strong Southern delegation supported Kennedy's nomination for the vice-presidency in 1956 shows, Harrinton feels, that religious barriers in politics are coming down.

Dinner Fetes Dr. McBride

Dr. Katherine McBride, president of Bryn Mawr College, was entertained at a dinner in Spencer dining hall Monday evening.

A massive spray of yellow jonquils appointed the head table in the dining room, while miniature arrangements were featured on each individual table.

Magnolias, flanked with breath of spring and azaleas were used to create a springtime atmosphere throughout the receiving rooms of the dorm.

Special guests for the event included Mrs. William Friday; Chancellir and Mrs. William Aycock; Dean Katherine Carmichael; Dr. Dorothy Atkins of the Psychology department; Dean and Mrs. James Godfrey; and Mr. and Mrs. Charles McKensie.

Official hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. Norman Bissell, Spencer Hall hostess, and Mrs. Bessie R. Buchanan, dining hall hostess.

Legislative Candidates

There will be a meeting of all Student Party legislative candidates today at 3 p.m. in Student Party Headquarters, third floor, New West.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

Querries Raise Questions About Extension Of Rights

A barrage of questions directed at Frederick T. Merrill, director of East-West Contacts within a division of the Department of State, showed yesterday that our conceited nation is not doing all in its power to improve international relations.

When querried about State Department edicts restricting Russian Counselor Serge I. Striganov to a close radius of Chapel Hill, Merrill pointed to similar regulations on U. S. diplomats in Russia.

But the student who raised the question had a good point. Does this limit on travel by USSR delegates, imposed by the State Department, coincide with the department's plans to extend travel freedoms as a step toward freer international exchange and understanding?

Officially, Mr. Merrill was unable to answer the question, although he indicated his agreement with the student that travel restrictions should be lifted if the U. S. fully wants to carry out her plan.

Indeed, these restrictions should be lifted. We are praying for Russian understanding of American life—and they are hoping for ours—while at the same time restricting their travel to ridiculous limits within our country.

How could Mr. Striganov, or how could any Russian, come to understand a way of life to which he is refused exposal? Washington is not the United States, nor is Chapel Hill. America cannot be defined within the limits of a circle.

We personally regret the restrictions which the State Department has placed against Mr. Striganov. We do not subscribe to the old practice of an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth, for this can only increase apprehension and misunderstanding.

Nor have we been convinced that the United States should restrict, even prohibit, in some cases, the travel of her citizens abroad. Yet this continues the practice, involving American students, newsmen and private citizens alike.

Our government criticizes the Communist world for her restrictions on travel, questions its right to limit any citizen to bounds prescribed by Moscow, sometimes frowns on Kremlin restrictions against American travel within the boundaries of Russia.

We are double-talking freedoms. We refuse to let our citizenry—all our citizenry—travel at will, because we fear something anti-American will be said abroad.

Yet is it not that freedom to speech which is among the most basic rights of the democratic system? Should we, as Americans, not possess the privilege to declare our convictions, even if they are opposed to the national interest?

It is the refusal of that privilege for which we indict the Communist world. If we can suppress convictions, and if it is not wrong for America, than surely Russia is not erring in the suppression of her peoples' will.

The fact that Russia does so on a larger scale is not the escape hatch for American criticism. Only the extension of rights to all Americans will qualify us as critics of other societies.

When that extension is realized, we then can turn to Mr. Striganov and ask: "Is it, sir, your fear of domestic criticism for which you have restricted free thought and speech in the Communist world?"

THE RALEIGH TIMES

The Good And The Bad

The Daily Tar Heel, student newspaper at Chapel Hill, has reminded the other newspapers of the state that there are two sides to the fraternity situation at Chapel Hill.

The student editor reminds the rest of us that fraternities contribute to charity, that more than 300 fraternity pledges spent more than 1,000 man hours of work recently in "Greek Week" projects which have replaced hazing by constructive tasks in various areas of Chapel Hill. He also reminds us that fraternities give gifts to orphans and the indigent at Christmas time, that they have supported community centers, that they have put on clean-up programs at churches, a student nursery, public grounds and private meeting places.

And, the student editor really puts us in our place with:

"But still the criticism continues. It continues because the state press has become infatuated by a Puritanistic approach to the problems of organizations which receive unwarranted publicity when they err, and which are forgotten when notable contributions are made to their University and their community."

Maybe this segment of the state press has become infatuated by a "puritanistic approach." But, it is also possible that this segment has been infatuated all along with the thought that the good fraternities should not be lost to the University and the community by the bad which fraternities can do if they're not careful. For, if fraternities should get out of line too far and too often, you can rest assured that all the good they do between the out-of-line episodes won't keep them open.

So, at the risk of being chided again for being Puritanistic, let's hope that somebody will make sure that the boys at Chapel Hill are reminded forcefully by someone in authority that they'd best stick to doing good and steer clear of what a Puritanistic, middle-aged editor might possibly regard as being silly, childish, off base and definitely not good.—The Raleigh Times.

Might we add that a dictionary is also "useful," both before and after Symposium Week.

Reactions To A Communist In America

By DAVIS YOUNG

Who is Sergei Striganov? Why have Carolina students and faculty members stopped to talk to this imposing gentleman from across the sea?

Perhaps it's because most of us have never seen a real live Russian in the hills of North Carolina. Maybe it's due to a hunger for knowledge about the people of the Soviet Union. And yet, maybe it is because Mr. Striganov has made every effort to convey his thoughts in a congenial and understanding manner.

Monday afternoon he appeared at a press conference along with Senator John Sparkman and Malcolm Cowley and was badgered with questions, while a sprinkling of information was gathered from the other two.

Immediately after this event, a member of the History Department tried to find his way to Striganov to make final arrangements for the presentation of 100 books brought as a gift to the library. To his dismay, Mr. Striganov was surrounded by a large crowd of eager students who sought answers to their questions for almost an hour. Finally the professor was able to tear him away from the multitude of curiosity seekers and talk for a few moments.

Yesterday morning, Striganov and Frederick Merrill became the first speakers able to completely fill Memorial Hall when they spoke to over 2,000 people. There can be little argument that Sergei Striganov was as usual the drawing card.

The audience hung on every word of his concise English and was interested by the facts that he brought. He refrained from controversial topics and in doing so impressed the large gathering.

Following his main address, he was subjected to an intense question and answer period in which he was queried as to the role of German scientists in the Russian missile program, his impressions of America and his opinions of the Hungarian Revolution of 1956.

To these questions, he provided most interesting and provocative answers in which he tried to give the Russian point of view.

The appearance of Sergei Striganov on campus has perhaps been the outstanding moment of this year's program. It is fortunate that Symposium leaders had the foresight to bring him here. Only in an exchnage of ideas with people of other lands can we satisfy our drive for knowledge and learn to appreciate more fully our own benefits.

Mr. Striganov is to be congratulated for his handling of the problems he has faced on this campus and as being a worthy representative of his government. It is to be hoped that soon, Americans will appear in similar roles at a Symposium of Moscow State University.

Grass: An Educational Subject

To The Editor:

The subject of the lecture this morning is grass. Students on the grass, alas! In my more than thirty years on the faculty of the University of North Carolina I have watched the student body increase from a little more than two thousand to around seven thousand. The grass on the campus, I believe, has borne the brunt of this evidence of man's propagative urge. Yesterday morning I counted all by myself 6843 students who ignored our magnificent brick walks and cut across the green in all directions to keep some rendez-ouz with destiny that just couldn't wait. In the meantime the doddering old faculty and the decrepit old deans out of South Building (some of them well past forty if you include the Chancellor tottered along to their various appointments guiding their slow steps inside the bricks.

Did any of these young zealots for learning ever try to grow a blade of grass? Well, it is practically impossible to do. As far as I am personally concerned it is impossible. I have even tried these fancy plugs of zoysia grass that costs ten dollars for a small box and which, in theory, spreads all over the landscape. It all died or my wife's springer spaniel dug it up. However, on this campus there is a horticultural crew that can grow grass. I have seen them do it in small areas protected by wire enclosures from the thundering herd.

As I look out from the top windows of Murphey Hall at the cowpaths leading to the Library, I gnash my teeth (any I have a few of them left) at such stupid destruction of this pleasant terrain. It might be possible to set up control stations at each end of these diagonals, with some capable fellows armed with hairbrushes or solid pieces of plank to minister to the posteriors of the young scholars who are in such a hurry to get to their books. I'll be glad to man such a station on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays at twelve, and I promise to do a good job. This offer does not include first-string football lineman or any of the wrestling team.

All in all, it seems to me that student manners have improved through the years, so there may be some hope for the grass. At the concert of the Pittsburgh Symphony (a good orchestra, incidentally) the other night, it was a fine audience in appearance and actions. Jackets and ties had been substituted for the open collars and rumpled sweaters of some former occasions. Also, at the movies nowadays I feel fewer nobby knees thrust into my back by a supine sophomore in the row behind.

This might be because I seldom go to the movies any more, except to see Brigitte Bardot.

Yours for more verdure.

I am taken aback
by the sack;
filled with unease
by the chemise.
They cloak
a pig in a poke, provoke alarms
at the disguise of charms
dear to the male. Enshroud the contours proud while they expose hose—and knees
that fail to please.
Why then must we submissively accept the sack because some maniac couturiers in Paris lack a love of form?
Pervert the female norm
so they can sell a gunny sack, a funny sack, a dressmaker-in-the-money sack that looks like hell?

Sound And Fury Show: Plans Being Prepared

By WHIT WHITFIELD

We were talking to the great Broadway producer G. C. Pridgen just the other day about the new Solnd and Fury extravaganza to be held on May 2 and 3.

We understand that this year the problem of getting a cast will be somewhat easier than in years past, since he and his associates are browsing around shower rooms offering contracts to aspirant singers.

The director of the show this year will be none other than Cecil Hartsoe who was blamed for all the lousy music which made the last couple of shows tremendous successes. Actually, Hartsoe is not the best pianist or composer, but he's the best in Orange County by far. (He may be the only one). Don't expect too much, for we've seen Victor Borge and Hartsoe is much inferior to him.

Jonathan Yardley and Michael Dunn are writing this year's show due to the fact that Rodgers and Hammerstein reneged on their contract, but it's just as well because Producer Pridgen wanted professionals if at all possible.

For those of you who want good, clean entertainment, go to a movie. We understand that they're better than ever this year. In case you like a little spice, a few off colored jokes that you wouldn't want to tell grandmother, then it may be better to try Sound and Fury. At least they try.

Some of you no doubt think that you have a great talent for singing, dancing, or designing sets. In that case, try Petites Musicales. On the other hand, if you are a goof off, but can carry a tune, and if you have serious doubts as to whether you could ever actually perform, try Sound and Fury. Their requirements aren't very strict. A knowledge of the English language and a willingness to try is all that is necessary. As a matter of fact, we have considered the idea but are still having difficulty with the language requisite.

In case you're interested, try-outs will be held in Memorial Hall (Chapel Hill, N. C.) on Sunday and Monday, March 23 and 24. Any time between 2 p.m. and 6 p.m. will be fine. If you can't make it then, call the assistant secretary in charge of cast recruiting, Mrs. G. C. Pridgen, whose number is not listed. In that case, call Mr. G. C. Pridgen, whose number ought to be listed.

CAN'T WE PRACTICE

Courtesy To Our Guests

To The Editor:

In the entire time I have been here at Carolina, I don't believe I have ever seen such a display of rudeness as was shown yesterday morning in Memorial Hall by some members of our student body.

On the stage was Sergei Striganov, Russian consul, who had so graciously consented to come to Chapel Hill and give an insight of life in his country. Yet before our guest could finish talking around a hundred or so impolite students rose from their seats and marched out of the building, creating so much noise as they went that others were unable to hear the remainder of the speech.

But it is not the speech that is important—it's the manner in which we treated our guest. Do we generally invite someone into our home and go off and leave him in the middle of a conversation to run over to someone else's house? Perhaps some of these people were brought up in such a manner, but I sincerely hope the majority of the student body wasn't.

As I sat there, I was actually ashamed that I went to Carolina when I saw my fellow student acting in such an impolite manner. And I wonder what Mr. Striganov thought of this university.

We constantly talk about setting an example for the remainder of the world. We talk about being the leading world power. Is this the kind of example we want to set? Is this the impression we want to give our guest to carry back to his country?

Mr. Striganov already has a high post in the Soviet government. He could go much higher. He might someday become premier of the USSR.

Should he reach such a position, it might be he who holds the key to world peace. But will he think kindly of the United States when he has such incidents as happened yesterday to remind him of this country? Would he care to negotiate with people who have no respect for a guest? Would you if you were he?

Certainly most who left had classes to attend, but the bell had not rung, and it seems that students should have had enough sense to know that the program was arranged in order that classes could be attended.

And if they had to be late for a class, is there any professor at this university who would not put courtesy and common decency before being on time for a class?

The damage is now done. We can't erase our footsteps. Now we can only hope that our guest will remember the many outstanding things he witnessed during Symposium week instead of thinging of us as a herd of hogs too busy with our own little world to treat our guests with respect.

NOTE TO PARENTS

All you boys and girls who are experiencing difficulty with mathematics and physics, take heart.

Dr. Werhner Von Braun, who was educated in Germany and now the United States Army's top missile expert, once flunked the two subjects.

Said the distinguished scientist: "I flunked classes in math and physics when I was 12 or 13. Later on I picked up."

Today our country and the other free nations are depending upon Dr. Von Braun to keep us in the race with the Russians, scientifically. If we reach the moon, the credit will probably go to him.

The moral: don't condemn junior simply because he flunked a subject or two—he might eventualy turn out to be a genius.—The Charlotte Observer

Carter States Stand On Spring Election Issues

Bob Carter, independent candidate in the race for president of the student body, issued yesterday the first in a series of statements concerning his stand on the various issues which will be brought out in the coming election.

Concerning student government, Carter has this to say, "We must never forget that student government from its very beginning has drived its power from privileges given it by the administration and faculty.

"The very strong student government that we have here at Carolina has developed because students before us have taken these privileges and have responsibly carried out the work necessary to keep these privileges and to gain more. This traditional responsibility and the outstanding work that student government has done in the past and the present gives the current administration great faith in student government.

"One of the greatest jobs a student body president has is to work closely with the administration and to see that student goverament does its job efficiently and well."

Carter feels that the power over student finances and student government employees is a feature which makes our student government unique and strong.

"In the realm of finances we are on our own. This is a great responsibility that we must cherish and protect. This freedom of control over money is very necessary for our current student government and we would be weakened considerably if this privilege were lost. I pledge to see that this privilege is not lost."

"The final great backbone of student government on this campus is our Honor System. I pledge to uphold the Honor System and I shall try to see that its principles are upheld at the University no matter what type of judicial body is responsible for its enforcement."

Soviet Union Diplomats Limited To 25-Mile Radius While At UNC

The two Soviet diplomats on hand for the Carolina Symposium have been limited by the State Department to side trips within a 25 mile radius of Chapel Hill.

These travel limitions were placed on Sergei B. Striganow, number two ranking diplomat in the Russian embassy, and second Secretary Evgeni A. Zaosrovtsev.

The side trips were restricted to 25 miles because that is the limitation placed on American diplomats in the Soviet Union, according to a department spokesman.

The spokesman said the two Soviets asked for the right to make the round trip to Chapel Hill by automobile. At the same time they asked for permision to make side trips beyond the campus for a distance of 35 to 40 miles. It was not specified in the application where and when they intended to make the side trips.

The State Department is willing to take a same liberal view regarding such trips if the Soviet Foreign office will treat U. S. diplomats in the same way.

Bob Cunningham Was Unsung Hero

Years from now when Carolina followers recount the exploits of the 1956-57 National Basketball Championship team they might, in their individual superlatives, overlook the fellow who many believe was the spark behind that team.

But being overlooked is nothing new to Bob Cunningham. The 21-year-old native New Yorker spent four years in the shadows of the big scorers and only those close to the Carolina team know just what a vital role he played in zring ing basketball at UNC to the top of the national ladder.

Modern basketball puts the emphasis on scoring so it's only natural that the majority of the publicity goes to the boys who make the baskets. Bob Cunningham never was much of a scorer and consequently he never got his share of the publicity. Defense and playmaking were his specialties and had an All-American team been chosen on these attributes, Cunningham would probably have been first choice.

Bob doesn't, and never has minded being an unsung hero. He's never been much for press clippings anyway. In his own words, "playing to win is the thing that counts, individual honors are secondary." And, unlike many so-called modest men, Bob really means it.

Somebody's Gotta Stop The Scorers

"Sure I like to score," says Cunningham; everybody does. Sometimes, however, it's more important to stop the opposing team's big scorer than to score yourself."

Bob is notorious for his ability to "stop the big scorer." For verification of that fact, just ask South Carolina's great All-American of a year ago, Grady Wallace or St. Louis star Jack Mimlitz, to name just a couple. Both were victims of the Cunningham clamp and both would just as soon forget their evening with Robert.

There is nobody who is higher in praise of Cunningham than his coach Frank McGuire. Many times over the past two seasons when Cunningham had scored only four or five points in a game McGuire has talked at length about the "terrific game which Bobby played tonight."

Cunningham would like to keep his feet firmly entrenched in North Carolina terra ferma. "We plan to settle somewhere in the state if I don't play AAU ball," he says.

Glad To Have Been A Part

When he used the pronoun "we" he was referring to his attractive wife Frances, a former Carolina coed. The Cunninghams are expecting an addition to the family in the middle of July.

"We will be here all summer at least," Bob said. "I would like to play some AAU ball next year but if I don't I would prefer to remain in North Carolina. We haven't decided where yet because our plans are rather tentative now."

Is Cunningham proud to have been a Tar Heel?

"Most definitely," says Bobby. "North Carolina has gone to the top in basketball in the past three years and I'm proud that I was able to contribute a small part to it. I am very happy that I was a member of the team which won the national title last season."

"This has been a wonderful four years for me," Cunningham continued. "I've met some great people here and I'll always remember them. They have been so nice to me."

He Remembers A Night In The Garden

The inevitable question, what was your biggest thrill, was put to Bob.

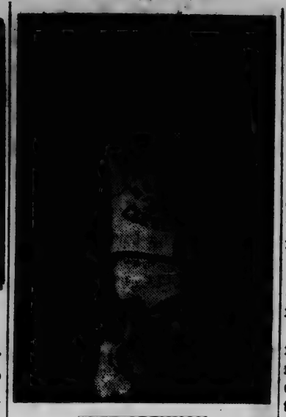
"Naturally, winning the NCAA was a great thrill for us all," he answered. "Personally, through, my 16 points in the Garden last year gave me a great thrill." He was referring to the night against NYU in Madison Square Garden when Rosenbluth was held to nine and his 16 points squeezed the Tar Heels through.

"That night in the Garden," Bob recalls, "my parents and friends saw me in a Carolina uniform for the first time. I had always dreamed of playing in the Garden so that was a great thrill for me."

Who is the best you've ever played against? The answer came in a hurry, "Wilt the Stilt."

Thus, the unsung college career of Bob Cunningham has ended. Perhaps he won't be remembered by all as a great star. But those who followed the Tar Heels closely and those who played with him know just what he has meant to Carolina basketball.

Yanks In Market For Hurler



By JOE REICHLER

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP)—Al Lopez contends New York does not have enough pitching to win the American League pennant. Publicly Casey Stengel scoffs at the Chicago manager's claim but privately he admits he won't feel safe until he comes up with at least one more solid hurler.

That's why negotiations for Ray Narleski, Cleveland's relief ace, are not dead. That's also why the Yankees have felt out Philadelphia about the possibility of a deal for Robin Roberts, no longer the Phillies' meal ticket.

If the Yankees fail to lure Narleski by the end of the first month of the regular season, they'll make a strong bid for the 31-year-old Roberts, once the premier pitcher in the National League. They are prepared to part with several expendable youngsters from their bountiful crop of rookies as well as veteran first baseman Joe Collins.

The key to the entire situation is Tony Kubek, the versatile young man who plays four positions and plays each of them well. At this stage of the spring training season Stengel does not know just where he will play the 21-year-old sophomore . . . or whether he will play at all this year.

PETE BRENNAN
. . . On East Squad . . .

Brennan To Play For All-Stars

Carolina basketball star Pete Brennan has been named to the East Squad for the annual East-West All-Star basketball game in Kansas City next Sunday afternoon.

Brennan was named to the squad yesterday, along with Indiana's Archie Deese. Already on the 11-man East squad for the Shrine Benefit are All-American Guy Rogers of Temple, Lloyd Sharrar of West Virginia, and Connie Dierking of Cincinnati.

Brennan, considered one of the nation's best rebounders, is the ACC player of the year and the top scorer in the conference. To date, he has been named to the Sporting News and Look All-American teams, and he received second team honors from the Associated Press.

Track Team Shapes Up; Short Of Man Power

By RUSTY HAMMOND

With the first dual meet of the conference only a week away, Coach Dale Ranson's Carolina track team, 1958 edition, is beginning to shape up.

The thinclads open the 25th against State at Raleigh in the first of nine meets for the season.

The inclement weather has forced the squad to the tin can many times over the past couple of weeks, but no doubt the State team has been faced with the same problem.

The 100-yard dash shapes up as a contest for two football players, Jim Varnum and Emil DeCantis. The same two run the 220.

In the 440, Dave Scurlock, John Fox, Joe Friedberg, and Doug Henderson look like the top contenders. The 880 features Scurlock once again, in addition to Howard Kahn, Neal Chappel, and Frank Siriari.

Captain Everette Whatley leads the 1-mile field, his cohorts being Cowles Liipfert, John Reaves, and Paul Wachendorfer. The 2-mile field includes Wayne Bishop, Fick Arthur, Alex Coffin, and Pickle Hunter.

The hurdlers, high and low, are Lyndon DeBoard, Lou Glascock, Charlie Sowers, Ward Sims, Ed Schenk, and Bill Lyons.

The field events begin with Don Kemper and Jerry Phaup at shot put; Bill Roth, John O'Neil and Frazier Smith in the discus; Cledith Oakley, Cam Cooke, John O'Neil and Dave Fox in the javelin; and Ward Sims in the pole vault.

The outstanding high jumpers are Wally Graham, Bob Sherril, Lee Shaffer, and Ray Stanley. The best of the broad jumpers are Ward Sims, Ed Brawley, Ennis Robinson, Ray Stanley and Dexter Smith.

There are a number of outstanding athletes from other sports who are out for track, including: Jim Varnum, Emil DeCantis, and Don Kemper from the football team; Paul Wachendorfer and Bill Roth from the swimming squad; and Wally Graham, Lee Shaffer, and Ray Stanley from the basketball team.

FOR LENT — AND FOR ALL YEAR LONG

Next time you stop in the famous old Intimate Bookshop, turn sharply to your left, and notice the large display of religious books we carry.

You'll notice, we hope, that no one religion has a corner on our shelves. There are Catholic books and Protestant books, even some of the better books on the Eastern Religions.

Although most of our books have a scholarly turn, you'll notice that we haven't been exclusive even here. There is a good sprinkling of books designed to give religious comfort and solace.

We sincerely believe that religion is important enough that every man should have the opportunity to search for truth in his own way. Our job is to supply the books he needs, not to herd him into our own corner of belief.

What's more, our religion section is there all year long, not just for Lent. We hope that if books can help you solve your religious problems, you'll find the book you need in the friendly old bookshop.

Mural Basketball

The SAE blue and PIKA white basketball teams emerged as champions in their respective division last night in the league play-offs.

The SAE's defeated the Zeta Psi's 32-23. SAE Jimmy Kelley was the high scorer with 12 points. Members of the SAE squad were, Kelley, Sandy Almolie, Buddy Sasser, Ben Keys, Mike Haley, Jay Walker, and Ed Brunson.

The PIKA's downed the Zeta Psi white team 40-30. Zeta Strud Nash was high scorer with 11. PIKA team members were, Herman Godwin, Daily Goff, David Grigg, Billy Ethridge, Dick Cashwell, Ken Hall, Don Horn, and Everett James.

Golfers Ready For Season

With the season slated to open here on March 22 against Davidson, prospective Tar Heel golfers are anxious for a break in the weather so they can get in final positioning rounds.

For the past two weeks, the links have been crowded with hopefuls, trying to qualify on the team. Fourteen have made it through the preliminary rounds. During rest of this week, these golfers will be playing for position, the low six, competing against Davidson. Later on in the season, the entire squad will be cut to eight.

Heading the list of qualifiers, are four returning lettermen; Tom Langley, Gene Lookabill, Bob Ruffin, and Bill Thornton. Thornton was low in the required four round series with 75, 67, 67, and 72.

Other qualifiers are: John McKee, Charlie Erdman, Joe Callicott, Charlie Gregg, Harry Braxton, Bob Kochenour, Rhod Morris, Walt Wilson, and Johnny Johnston.

Twelve freshmen have made the grade past the first round.

SYMPOSIUM

Hook, Fine To Speak Here Today

By DAVIS YOUNG

Dr. Sidney Hook, chairman of the Dept of Philosophy at New York University and Benjamin Fine, Dean of the Graduate School at Yeshiva University in New York will be the main speakers at today's Symposium events.

Hook will speak at 10 a.m. in Carroll Hall on "Basic Values in a Time of Decision" and Fine is speaking at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall on "Major Problems Facing American Education."

Hook is one of the most controversial scholars of our times and is a three time recipient of a Guggenheim Fellowship for philosophical research in Europe. In 1945, he was awarded the Nicholas Murray Butler Silver Medal for distinction in the field of philosophy for work on his book "Here is History." He is renowned for his opposition to any form of totalitarianism and firmly believes that democracy can and will become a living faith.

Fine has just stepped down as Education Editor of the "New York Times, after having served in that capacity since 1941. He is a native New Yorker and a product of the Columbia University School of Journalism.

He is the recipient of many awards including the Mt. Vernon Teachers' Association Award in 1948 and the Frederick Z. Lewis Medal given by the Teachers Welfare League of New York State. He is a past president of the Educational Writers Association and won a Pulitzer Prize in 1943 for the New York Times.

These will be the eighth and ninth sessions of this year's program. The 1958 Symposium will close tomorrow night when Fine will again speak in Memorial Hall.

The attention of the public is also called to the appearance of Harry Ashmore, editor of the Arkansas Gazette on Friday morning at 10 a.m. in Carroll Hall.

SYMPOSIUM OFFICIALS EXAMINE MODEL MISSILES
L to R. Sonny Hallford, Mary Jane Fisher & Chancellor Aycock

Exhibits On Carolina Symposium Feature Recent Missile Advances

Persons attending the Carolina Symposium on Public Affairs being held on the this week not only will hear about recent missile developments and America's chance of survival in the atomic age but also can view specially prepared exhibits carrying out the theme.

At Wilson Library two special exhibits have been set up: one on U. S. Army missiles and one on books by Symposium speakers. The library will also have on display an exhibit entitled "Books As American Ambassadors."

The books displayed will be selected from the library's collection out of a list of 350 books chosen by the Carnegie Corporation as representative of American literature and its reflections of this country as seen by Americans.

The Carnegie Corporation's selection was published in the New York Times Book Review in an article entitled "The Face We Turn To The World." Another library display prepared in connection with Symposium week is called "Books As Cultural Survivors."

Mrs. Myra Lauterer, who is in charge of the library exhibits, has arranged the displays in conjunction with Evelyn Moore, chairman of the Symposium Exhibits Committee; and Kenneth McIntyre, head of the University's Bureau of Audio-Visual Education and coordinator for Symposium exhibits.

Y Display

In the lobby of the "Y" a display, "Summary of Atomic Energy," will feature a 16mm motion picture projector continuously showing such films as the launching of the Army's satellite "The Explorer" and illustrating various Civil Defense themes.

An exhibit of the Navy's air-to-air guided missile "The Sidewinder" with several posters depicting the Symposium theme can be seen during the week in Lenior Hall.

In the main foyer of Memorial Hall a display containing models of the U. S. Air Force "Matador" missile and the Navy's air-to-air missile "The Sparrow" is being prepared.

Posters

Posters giving brief biographies of Symposuim speakers and illustrating the theme, "Dimensions of Survival: American Culture in World Focus," will also be on display there.

The NROTC Armory will have on display a full scale model of the Navy's surface-to-air "Terrier" missile.

Two Federal Civil Defense Administration exhibits can be viewed in Carroll Hall. "Your Housework For Survival" will illustrate what to do before an enemy attack. what to do when the altert sounds, and what to do after the attack. The other exhibit shows what a person can do about radioactive fallout.

Credit for the exhibits goes to the Office of the Chief of Information of the Department of the Army, Navy and Air Force; the Atomic Energy Commission; and the Federal Civil Defense Authority, as well as the Bureau of Audio-Visual Education of the Extension Division in cooperation with the Exhibit Committee for the Carolina Symposium.

Women's Dean, IWA Entertain Former Coed

An informal luncheon was sponsored by Miss Katherine Carmichael and the Independent Women's Association Tuesday in Lenoir Hall.

The luncheon was held in the honor of Dr. Marguerite Roberts, a dean and a professor of English at Westhampton College, Richmond, Va.; Mrs. William B. Aycock, wife of the chancellor and Mrs. William C. Archie, wife of the associate dean at Wake Forest College.

The guests were introduced by Miss Betsy McKinnon, president of the Independent Women's Association. Informal discussion was led by Miss Carmichael. The topic of discussion was the opportunity on the campus for coeds.

Mrs. Archie, former Carolina Coed, contrasted them with opportunities when she was a student during the 1930's.

Mrs. Aycock and Miss Carmichael noted further changes in the position of the coed through the years to the present time. The roll of coeds in student government, housing situations and degrees for women were also cited.

Yates & Exum Represent IFC

In the Inter-Fraternity Council meeting held Monday night Tucker Yates and Ashe Exum were chosen to represent the local group at the Southeastern Interfraternity Conference on April 11-13 in Gainesville, Fla.

Yates is the new persident of the IFC, and Exum is its new treasurer.

The IFC decided also to invite the candidates for the editorship of The Daily Tar Heel and the presidency of the student body to address the council at next week's meeting. The candidates will presumably declare their intentions as to the fulfillment of their duties.

Walt Fitts reported to the group on the annual Charity Concert, which featured the band of Ralph Marterie. Although all bills have not yet been paid, Fitts said that it appears the concert was a success financially. The money will go to an orphanage through the Orange County Welfare Fund.

Suggestions were made concerning the conduct of Greek Week and the Charity Concert. Also, Pringle Pipkin discussed the current library Lost Book Drive.

N. C. Civil Defense Day Is Slated Here Today

Today is North Carolina Civil Defense day at the Carolina Symposium. This afternoon at 4 o'clock in Carroll Hall the North Carolina Council of Civil Defense, headed by General Edward F. Griffin, and the Dept. of Political Science are presenting the full details of the North Carolina Plan for Survival.

Members of the panel include Major James W. Denning, Colonel Vachel D. Whatley and State Sen. Wilbur M. Jolly. Senator Jolly is Director of the North Carolina Survival Plan Project.

At this meeting the plans for protecting the public in this state from possible atomic war will be presented in full. Dr. C. B. Robson, chairman of the Political Science Department, said yesterday, "This program ought to interest every citizen. The whole matter of civil defense is of tremendous importance to all of us. We are not informed about it and we should take advantage of this program to inform ourselves."

In addition to the program, a new exhibit of civil defense preparations was installed Wednesday in the lobby of Memorial Hall by Kenneth M. McItyre of the Extension Division's Audio-Visual Bureau. This exhibit was originally scheduled for Carroll Hall lobby but it was so big and heavy and intricate that it had to be moved to Memorial.

Legislature To Meet Tonight

The Student Legislature will meet 30 minutes earlier tonight at 7 p.m. on the top floor of New East.

Roger Foushee's (SP) resolutions concerning the ratification of two National Student Association documents will be considered.

The procedures committee which is implementing the new jury system will present its report. "It will be approved I imagine," Student Legislature Speaker Don Furtado said.

The Honor System Commission will offer its proposals for the selection of jurors. The body will also consider appointments to the new Men's and the new Women's Honor Councils, composed of six members each.

YMCA Lists Nominees For '58-'59 Officers

The YMCA nominating committee has announced the following slate of officers for next year: president, Bill Sugg; vice president; Ed Crow, secretary; Thal Elliott, treasurer; Randal Shelton, program chairman, Parker Hodges; and membership chairman, Jack Raper.

The election will be held Monday, March 24, at 7 p.m. in the second floor lobby of the "Y" building. All YMCA members are invited to attend. Nominations may be made from the floor at this time.

Golden Says Real Challenge Ahead For Southern Negroes

Harrington Minimizes Red Scare

Michael Harrington, a staff member of the Fund for the Republic, minimized the danger of the American Communist Party, in a speech yesterday in Graham Memorial, part of the tenth Carolina Symposium on Public Affairs.

Harrington was to speak with Sergei Striganov, of the Russian Embassy, but Striganov was called away at 1 p.m.

Harrington said that since 1934, the Communist Party in America was an organ for Soviet foreign policy, and did not attempt violent overthrow of the American government.

He pointed out that the Soviet espionage agents usually were not party members, but rather, once they became espionage agents, disaffiliated themselves with the party and any other overt leanings to the Communist cause.

Party Not Strong

Harrington asserted that the fact that the Communist Party was no longer able to support a newspaper, that 20,000 of its membership had left the party, and that the Party was divided in sections pointed to the fact that the Communist Party in the U. S. was not as strong as J. Edgar Hoover, and the House Committee on Un-American Activities would like to show it to be.

He asserted that the Communist danger is greatest in the underprivileged nations of the world which don't have a strong democratic influence to counter the drive of Communism.

Favors Aid

He favored aid to these countries that are in an underprivileged condition in order that Communism cannot capitalize on the drive to avoid poverty.

Harrington distinctly opposed the denial of civil rights that he felt accompanied most of the trials about Communist activities.

He further pointed out that he opposed the loyalty oath program, especially when it was accompanied by a questionairre about memberships in groups on the Attorney General's list of "subversive" organizations.

Election Petitions Must Be In Friday

Petitions from all independent candidates in spring elections must be in by 6 p.m. Friday, March 21, Elections Board Chairman Bob Furtado announced yesterday. The deadline includes all nominations for the parties and selection boards. They either may be turned in personally to the elections board chairman or to the student government office.

FULBRIGHT SCHOLAR—Miss Pamela R. Jewett, a graduate student who has won a Fulbright Scholarship for study abroad, is shown discussing a project with John A. Parker, (at right) head of the UNC Department of City and Regional Planning. Looking on in center is James M. Webb, another planning professor. Miss Jewett will spend the 1958-59 year at the University of Sydney, Australia, studying regional planning with Prof. Denis Winston. She will receive her master's degree from UNC in June after two years of graduate study.

Col. Ryan & Editor On Slate

By ED GOODMAN

The advance by the southern Negro to "first class citizenship, economically and politically" will provide his "big troubles," it was predicted last night by Jewish newspaper publisher Harry Golden.

Speaking on a Symposium program which also featured Lt. Col. John A. Ryan, USAF, he pointed out that once the Negro achieves educational and economic equality, "he will be completely on his own."

Comparing the development of the Negro with that of other immigrant groups, such as the Irish, Jews, Slavs and Italians, he said that once the Negro reached this equality he would have to prove himself as those groups before him had done.

"He will then begin to feel his alienation," Golden said, "an alienation which he has never known to this day."

The southern Negro "now has acceptance at an inferior level. Once this equality is achieved," he added "he, too, will go through the wild scramble into the classroom of America that other immigrant groups have experienced."

He said that the Negro would then feel the "great intellectual drive" which has spurred the other groups on to accomplishment.

"Once this happens, the country will gain tremendously in wealth and human resources."

Colonel Ryan, who replaced Brig. Gen. Don Zimmerman on the program said that man's main problem today was to bind his destructive power. He asserted that the survival of both nations and the human race as a whole depended largely on this factor.

"This power that is necessary for nations to survive," he added, "is also a threat to that survival."

"Our primary means of survival, he maintained, is the assurance that we can survive enemy attacks."

3 p.m.—108 Caldwell Hall—Sponsored by the philosophy department, a talk on "Determinism, Freedom and Sentimentality" by Sidney Hook.

4 p.m.—Carroll Hall—A panel discussion on "North Carolina's plan for Survival" by four leaders in the Civil Defense program.

8 p.m.—Memorial Hall—Benjamin Fine, Weil Lecturer, speaking on "Major Problems Facing American Education."

Religion Comes First Says Theologian Here

Religion is the ultimate claim and loyalty, even above American survival, William Lee Miller, theologian, told his Carolina Symposium audience Wednesday.

Miller, in the sixth Symposium session, was concerned with religious, moral and ethical values in his speech "Useless Faith in a Useful Society."

"Relgiions is recommended for survival by everyone and is said to be the foundation of our society and the source of our national strength," he said.

However, Miller maintained that religion is the source of creativity and change that is higher than America and its survival.

Continuing, he remarked that religion has played an important role in three ethical values which are characteristic of the American society and that these ethics when carried on an extreme contradict their own claims.

Cites Ethics

He cited as the American ethics in the present period: democracy, moral distinction (the distinction between right and wrong, good and bad) and practicality.

Les Petites Musicales Concert Slated Tonight

The fourth Petite Musicales concert of the spring semester will be given in the lounge of Graham Memorial tonight at 8 o'clock. Featured artist will be Martha Fouse, soprano of Chapel Hill.

Les Petites Musicales are sponsored by the Music Committee of Graham Memorial Activities Board, UNC student union group. The programs are open to the public at no charge.

Mrs. Fouse is a pupil of Walter Golde, voice teacher and composer also of Chapel Hill. She will be accompanied by a small ensemble composed of Tish Harrer, flute; Bertran Davis, violin; Joanna Scroggs, violin Dorothy Alden, viola; Efrim Fruchtman, violoncello and Wilton Mason, harpsichord and piano.

The program will consist of four Airs from Claudio Monteverdi's "Scherzi Musicale" and selections by J. S. Bach, Handel and Maurice Ravel.

Mrs. Fouse has appeared before Chapel Hill audiences as soloist for the Community Church, the University Chorus, the Choral Club and the University Summer School Chorus. She has also performed in the Music Department's presentatino of "The Marriage of Figaro," and she has appeared in several Plyamaker productions.

Honor & Student Council Selections Announced

Four candidates for Student Council seats and one candidate for Men's Honor Council were endorsed by the Bi-Partisan Selections Board, Chairman George Ragsdale announced Thursday.

Receiving sanction for the Student Council were Eric Roper and Don Miller, aspirants for senior seats; Gordon Street, candidate for junior position and Angus Duff, seeking the sophomore seat.

Jim Smalley was the only candidate who appeared before the Board for the Men's Honor Council and received the endorsement as candidate for a seat on that body.

Ragsdale emphasized that even though the Board will not meet again previous to the election, students may run without endorsement and are urged to do so.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary today included:

Talking About Survival - What Of Student Courts?

"The members of the Bi-Partisan Selections Board are very disappointed in the student turnout for interviews concerning their candidacy for seats on the Men's Honor Council and Student Council. The board met, as was more than adequately announced, for two days, and a total of only seven students came forward. Only one man has been selected by the board to run for one of the three seats on the Men's Council." — George Ragsdale, Chairman, Men's Honor Council.

That little passage, handed to us yesterday, could be entitled "Survival"—or, maybe more appropriately, "The Collapse of the Student Judiciary at the University of North Carolina."

And it is appropriate, during this week of discussion on human survival in an age of powerful missiles and deadly hydrogen bombs, that students at UNC also should turn their thoughts to survival of their own political system at the University.

We pleaded last week for broader participation in our judicial system. But to no avail. The student press published news accounts of interviews wherein candidates for the various student courts could be interviewed. But these were overlooked.

So now the effect is showing. Not only was the turnout for the interviews meager, but of the seven students who took the time to go before the selections board, only one of these was endorsed for service on the Men's Honor Council.

This, indeed, is not indicative of a surviving judiciary at UNC. Rather it points to an apathetic approach to the work of student government and predicts a waning interest in the affairs of democratic participation which, in the end, can only subtract from the freedoms we possess.

We can make no further pleas to a deaf student body. We can urge no further that disinterest in political affairs is the shortest route to encroachment upon individual rights and liberties. The time has passed for warning against the evils of non-participation.

Now, we can only bide our time and hope that students enough will run without endorsement to fill the vacant seats on the Men's Honor Council.

For those still willing to seek a post on either of the men's councils, we will pass on this other information which Men's Council Chairman Ragsdale brought in Wednesday:

"The selections board will not meet again. It can never give sanction to apathetic candidates for public office, particularly on the judiciary. I urge any person interested in running to call Bob Furtado, elections board chairman, immediately and make their intentions known to him.

"Students will invariably choose good candidates for office with or without endorsement by the selections board. Again, I urge any and all devoted persons to run. Great opportunities for service exist. The students, so far, have never failed to answer the call.

"I hope they will not fail now."

The Profit Sharing Plan: Is It Good For America?

Victor Reuther is an impressive man. He has the labor movement and its interest at heart. But we must also remember that his pretty package of economic improvement has been wrapped by the hands of labor leaders.

What we refer to, of course, is his outline given here Tuesday of the profit-sharing scheme proposed by the United Auto Workers of America. We still have not been convoinced that it would be good for the United States, or for the free enterprise system which it practices.

Mr. Reuther feels that a plan for profit-sharing would stimulate efficiency in our plants because labor then would have an interest in improved production techniques. The more a firm made—as a result of this increased interest—the more labor would realize for its toils.

Perhaps Mr. Reuther is correct. But we feel that such a practice would subtract from the progressiveness of management and take from ownership a slice of the pie which it deserves for years of personal sacrifice and responsibility with a manufacturing firm.

We must agree with Mr. Reuther, on the basis of figures presented during his Symposium Week address, that some areas of business in the United States reap exhorbitant profits for the products which they produce. He cited, for instance, that General Motors makes more profit per man for each hour's labor than it pays in wages for an hour's toil.

Obviously, this rate of profit is reflected in the price of automobiles which consumers must pay for their vehicles. And it is further seen in the price of many other products which auto corporations also manufacture today.

Instead of passing a percentage of these profits on to labor, we ask, why could not they be prohibited to corporations in such astounding proportions through a decrease in the price which all Americans must pay for their commodities?

This plan is, in effect, incorporated in the UAW proposal, which would return at year's end a certain sum of money to persons who purchased automobiles in a given production year, which amount would be based on the amount of profits to be divided among consumers.

Labor in automobile plants, however, would be two-way winners—first, in a blanket sharing of 25 per cent of all profits, and second, in a kickback for automobile purchases proportional to refunds to other consumers for similar purchases.

We wonder if Americans generally would not be better benefited through a reduction in costs of manufactured products which would put a stop to our run-away inflation and at the same time give more purchasing power to each dollar earned.

If Mr. Reuther's plan can force such action, then the proposal will not have been for naught. If manufacturing interests refuse to lower prices on theri commodities, surely labor will press with more force for the demands which it has made.

At the present, however, we would not vote for the profit-sharing scheme and would hope that, one of these days, management will recognize its role in the American economy and take steps appropriate to save it from depression.

J.Y.'s JAZZ

June Christy Shines On New Record Album

One of the pretties sights on the jazz scene these days is a young lady named June Christy. Visually, she is a treat; aurally, there are few better. All of her vocal attributes are brought to a head on her mostrecent Capitol release, Gone For the Day.

Before examining the content of this recording, it might be well to spend a little time looking at Miss Christy's background and the style which has enabled her to reach the heights of popularity which he currently enjoys. The most important single element in her career was her long, fruitful stint with the Stan Kenton band. She sang with Kenton for most of the Forties, and during this time built a large and avid following. Her voice was ideally suited to the Kenton sound, and it can be said honestly that she will never be replaced in that organization.

What is this style of June Christy's? It can best be described by the single word "cool." She did not originate this cool style; Anita O'Day, once vocalist with the Kenton and Krupa bands, could best be called the mother of cool singing, and she derived much from Billie Holiday. The essence of this style is a low voice—almost all cool girl singers are altos—and a phrasing which pays a great deal of attention to the words of the song, and at the same time plays with the melody in such a manner as to give the impression of what can only the called a cool sound.

That June Christy's cool style is not without emotion can be readily discovered after one hearing of Gone For the Day. The album was constructed around the concept of a day spent in the country, and the songs were chosen with this idea in mind. Consequently, such songs as "Give Me the Simple Life," "Love Turns Winter to Spring," and "It's So Peaceful in the Country" are included.

The arrangements are by Pete Rugolo, who is also an alumnus of the Kenton band, and all are ideally suited to Miss Christy's style and the signs chosen for the album. He utilizes three different orchestral patterns, ranging from a comparatively large string ensemble to a small jazz group.

To me the most exciting pieces on the album are those which are sung with the small group. These are of a medium tempo, and nver fail to be sprightly and cheerful. "Give Me the Simple Life" is about the best of these, and manages to produce a genuine longing for that somewhat mythical manner of living. Another wonderful song is the moody "When the World Was Young," a piece which has been heard too little and, perhaps, will be brought back on the scene with this recording. The record is one which should be bought by all, for it is certainly one of the finest effort by one of our finest singers.

"I Think I'll Orbit Over To The Army-Navy Club"

FROM THE NATION

Dr. Teller And Dr. Brown

Harrison S. Brown is not the father of the H-bomb or any other instrument of destruction, great or small. He is only professor of geochemistry at the California Institute of Technology. On March 9, though, he made a speech at the University of Minnesota which it would be well for the President, his scientific advisers, and every literate American to read and ponder.

Dr. Brown made a point bearing on the novelty of the self-evident which has not been stated before—that it is necessary to solve problems on the emotional as well as on the intellectual level. And its corollary, that in politics scientists have emotions like other men. This brought him to the emotions of Dr. Edward Teller, who, said Dr. Brown, seems to be motivated by a "deep-footed hatred of the Soviet Union which borders upon the fanatic. From this hatred there stems the belief that no agreement with the Soviet Union can be trusted and that in our modern technological age no inspection system can be relied upon."

That the Soviet Union is to be feared by the United States is perfectly true, and vice versa. But to allow these fears to determine policy to the exclusion of all other factors is political folly and also, possibly, biological suicide. In the long run the world's problems would be no less feverish if the Soviet Union should obligingly sink into the sea or disintegrate in accordance with the Dulles formula. The nuclear weapons would remain and other nations would develop them, and the Tellers of tomorrow would be as vindictive and hopeless as those of today.

"I believe," says Dr. Brown, "that Dr. Teller is willfully distorting the realities of the situation. I believe that it is possible for us to secure agreements with the Soviet Union to stop tests and I believe further that the agreements could be of such a nature that the Soviet Union would adhere to them because it would be very much to her advantage to do so."

Brown disagrees particularly with Teller's thesis that the United States would be at an inherent disadvantage in any such agreement because the Soviet Union would "bootleg" tests. The agreement, Brown argues, need not bar all testing, only those tests that could be detected by the established network. "This would mean that no appreciable radio-activity could be poured into the atmosphere to contaminate the air, no appreciable air pressure waves could be initiated, no large ground waves could be generated." If Teller or his Russian counterparts could devise means to get around these restrictions, they would be free to do so. At least they would not be as free as they are now, and the world would be that much safer for mankind.

Teller says that he knows Brown well. "He is a nice boy and has done some good work," he added. Teller is fifty, Brown forty. It may be that the boy knows the father of the H-bomb better than the father knows the boy.

Anti-Intellectualism Antidotes Are Not Apt

In an eloquent attempt "to put an end to this silly and derisive national joke about intellectuals," James Reston, the Washington correspondent of the New York Times, recently gave his readers an impressive listing of "Phi Beta Kappas who have had something to do with the affairs of this city." They included five of the last nine Presidents of the United States. It's not at all difficult to see why Taft and Wilson were given keys, and if you think about it for a minute you can imagine Coolidge as a diligent if not a particularly inspired student. But frankly we were rather surprised to learn that two Harvard boys named Roosevelt had made it.

We have looked into the matter briefly, and it turns out that we had been deceived by Teddy's compulsive muscle flexing: he ran up quite a distinguished academic record. The grades of his young cousin Franklin, however, averaged out just barely on the sunny side of what is known along the banks of the Charles as "the gentlemanly C." His attitude toward scholarship while he was at Harvard was succinctly summed up in a letter to his mother: "The courses will do me lots of good whether I get B or D in them, and to do the former would make me work so hard that I could not do justice to my senior year." His major efforts at the time were devoted to the Crimson, and as president of the paper he wrote vigorous editorials demanding more adequate fire protection in the dormitories and calling for "aggressive, vigorous determination" on the football team. Although young Franklin was considered sufficiently bookish by his friends to be elected librarian of both the Fly Club and the Hasty Pudding Institute, the Phi Bete Kappa key to which Mr. Reston refers was awarded many years later and was distinctly an honorary one.

We have not recited these details out of any loutish desire to belittle F.D.R. or Phi Beta Kappa. We have great respect for both. What we would like to suggest is that there is really no way of measuring all the intellectual benefits Roosevelt derived from his years at Harvard. One can examine the grades he got from Kittredge, Irving Babbitt, and Frederick Jackson Turner, but how can one judge what it meant simply to be in the same academic community with Santayana and William James, in whose courses he was never enrolled? There may even have been some truth in that letter the young man wrote to his mother.

We are disturbed not only by the anti-intellectualism Mr. Reston deplores but also by some of the antidotes that are being prescribed these days. Nearly everybody knows that the "joke about intellectuals" isn't so funny any more, and as a matter of fact the pendulum seems to be swinging pretty far in the other direction. It may be a good idea to make our young people study harder and take more science, but we would argue that most of the screws that need tightening are at the high-school level and earlier rather than in our colleges, at least in good ones.

Speaking for one of the best of them, President Pusey of Harvard makes the following observations in his annual report:

"In recent weeks there has appeared in the United States a new troubled concern about education. There is a widespread feeling in America at the moment that we have left undone in this area things which we ought to have done. Specific points of complaint are that our educational system has been too lenient in its demands upon students, and, of more urgent importance, that it has failed to produce enough scientists and engineers, especially enough top scientists and engineers, to have kept American's technological supremancy unchallenged . . . . Harvard men may well be wondering if there is a mandate here for further change at Harvard.

"I hope it will not be considered pharisaical of me if I say at once that I do not believe there is. In my judgment the present times demand of Harvard neither change of direction nor new emphasis, but rather only a more assiduous application to our traditional tasks."

Not even a Yale man could disagree.—THE REPORTER.

A Fractional Wife In A Fractional Life

by Charles Schulz

Editors around the state were startled to read an interesting statistic in Chancellor Gordon Blackwell's installation speech at Woman's College the other day.

Sam Ragan of the Raleigh News and Observer did a double-take on the following sentence: "A recent study of sophomore girls at Vassar College revealed that the chief goal of almost all of them is to marry and have their 27 children."

Sam was reassured later to learn that a decimal point had been left out and that the figure should have read 2.7 children.

But Phillips Russell of the Chapel Hill News Leader remained perturbed. He asked these questions: "How does one have .7 of a child? Why not go ahead and round out the missing .3 so as to have three complete children? What may be expected of seven-tenths of a child in subsequent life?"

Life has become fractionalized. Editor Ragan speculates that under the current scheme of things (with women outliving men) each man, if he wants to get huffy about it, can claim 1.1 women or each woman only .9 man. Would anybody be interested in that kind of fractional choice?

And we wouldn't be at all surprised to glance in the back seat of our kindergarten car pool some morning and find .6 of a shy little girl riding serenely along with the other 1.0 children. One particularly rowdy five-year-old boy, though, would surely measure at least 1.9 on the sociologists' statistical charts.

Ah, well, let us retire to our .7 of the national income home and contemplate our 1.2 income tax return.—Greensboro Daily News.

Ann Frye Lists Campaign Staff

Ann Frye, candidate for editor of The Daily Tar Heel, Wednesday released the names of members of her campaign staff.

Buzz Merritt, senior journalism major, will serve as head of the staff. Other members include Parker Maddrey and Roy Lucas, journalism majors and members of the Tar Heel staff, Wyndham Hewitt, Tar Heel staff member and Lucy Posgate, Student Party member.

Miss Frye said, "I am fortunate to have these outstanding individuals heading my campaign for editor of The Daily Tar Heel."

Dr. K. C. Frazer To Address NROTC Today

Dr. K. C. Frazer will address the members of the NROTC Unit today at noon in Carroll Hall Auditorium.

His topic will be "National Security through International Arrangement." Prof. Frazer is a long-time member of the Political Science Department here.

Recently he took a leave of absence to serve as the Nimitz Professor at the Naval War College. His field of study is international relations.

The public is invited to this meeting.

FOR LENT — AND FOR ALL YEAR LONG

Next time you stop in the famous old Intimate Bookshop, turn sharply to your left, and notice the large display of religious books we carry.

You'll notice, we hope, that no one religion has a corner on our shelves. There are Catholic books and Protestant books, even some of the better books on the Eastern Religions.

Although most of our books have a scholarly turn, you'll notice that we haven't been exclusive even here. There is a good sprinkling of books designed to give religious comfort and solace.

We sincerely believe that religion is important enough that every man should have the opportunity to search for truth in his own way. Our job is to supply the books he needs, not to herd him into our own corner of belief.

What's more, our religion section is there all year long, not just for Lent. We hope that if books can help you solve your religious problems, you'll find the book you need in the friendly old bookshop.

Sparkman Speaks Out For Women During Luncheon At Pika House

By JOAN BROCK

The Carolina coed has a friend in Sen. John Sparkman of Alabama who visited the campus this week in conjunction with the Carolina Symposium.

While attending a luncheon at the Pi Kappa Alpha house Monday, we chatted with Senator Sparkman, Pika alumnus, and obtained several of his personal opinions on matters of interest to UNC students.

Taking a strong stand in defense of coeds, Senator Sparkman rejected the recent suggestion, made by Professor Burton of Syracuse, that the number of women students be drastically reduced to eliminate crowded conditions in co-edutional colleges.

"We should increase facilities, not eliminate coeds," he said. Senator Sparkman stated this was his first visit to the UNC campus and he had found it most enjoyable. He described UNC's campus as "beautiful and impressive."

When asked what he noticed first about the campus, he recalled that the Morehead Patterson Bell Tower attracted his attention and "seemed to stand out as a sentinel." Explaining he had always known about the University, he added it was a pleasure to see for himself the things he had heard about.

Basketball Talk

Recalling several major basketball games, Senator Sparkman mentioned he had followed UNC's number one team during last season.

On the political side, he expressed the opinion that economic issues will dominate the 1960 presidential campaign.

When questioned about Governor Hodges' status as a possible vice presidential candidate in the 1960 campaign, he said he believed Hodges is capable of wining the support of the people.

"I am exteremely fond of Governor Hodges. He is a capable and fine person," he added.

Catholic Issue

Commenting on the effects John Kennedy's Catholic faith would have on the campaign of 1960 if he were nominated for President, Senator Sparkman said he was sure the issue would come up, but that he doubted it would play the part it did in the Al Smith campaign of 1928. "The South fought Prohibition and Tammany, not just Catholicism," he explained.

When asked what the most exciting experience in his political career has been, he cited his first election to Congress terming it "the first thrill." He quickly added, however, that his nomination for vice president in 1952 was the most memorable event.

John Kerr of Warrenton, president of the fraternity, served as official hist fo rthe luncheon. Other guests included Dean Katherine Carmichael and Mr. and Mrs. Claude Shotts.

Carter Gives Statement Concerning Fraternities

Bob Carter, independent candidate for student body president, dealt with the relationship between student government and fraternities in a statement Wednesday.

Carter's statement said: "One of the important issues facing student government at the present time is the relationship between the power and responsibility of student government and organizations such as the Inter-Fraternity Council. It is my feeling that problems arising in some specific area and involving only that area should be handled by the organizations set up for this particular purpose, that is the IFC.

If at any time such an organization does not assume that responsibility and this situation is known, then student government, which is responsible for the welfare of all students, should look into the situation and see that something is done about it.

There are many issues which concern the whole student body and not just one particular area, and each situation should be considered individually in determining under whose realm of power such issues should be placed. Never should student government act as an outsider in any problem but as an integral worker trying to help all students in all areas.

Noble Wins Goettingen Scholarship

Bob Noble, sophomore English major from Raleigh, has received the annual Goettingen scholarship to Goettingen University in Germany.

In addition to Noble, three alternates have been selected: Frances Reynolds, Bruce Berryhill and Don Herring.

The scholarship pays for one year's study at Goettingen University. Included in the scholarship are funds for tuition, room and board and transportation.

Noble plans to leave for Germany in the latter part of June, and will study German before going to the University. His year of schooling will include studies in German literature, history and culture.

Susan Campbell, John Minter To Head Carolina Handbook

Don Herring, Chairman of the YMCA Publications Board has announced the selection of Susan Campbell as editor of the 1958-1959 Carolina Handbook and John Minter as business manager.

The selection came at the close of an extensive evaulation of last year's edition of the publication in which both Sue and John took part.

The Carolina Handbook—Carolina's orientation guide for new students—is published jointly by the YMCA and the student government. The two groups worked together last year for the first time when a grant of $1200 was given to the Handbook to help finance an expansion program to give the new student a more complete view of Carolina.

This year's editor, Sue Campbell, a junior from Rowland, stated that work will begin on the Handbook immediately after the staff has been selected. Included in her present plans for the new Handbook are a reorganization of the sections and the inclusion of more informal photographs.

John Minter, a sophomore from Raleigh was last year's business manager for the publication.

Students interested in working on both the editorial and business staffs are requested to contact Sue or John, or the secretary in the YMCA.

Big Turnout For Bridge Tournament Monday

Twenty-nine couples participated in what was the largest bridge crowd of 1958 at the Carolina Bridge Club Monday. The Master Point session was divided into two sections.

Following is a listing of student winners:

North-South (Section "B," all students): First place was won by Dana Dixon and Bill Caison, second place by Don Gray and Jim Butler and third place by Joe Converse and Richard Hicks.

East-West (Section "B"): First place was won by Mr. and Mrs. J. Gray McAllister III, second place by Vasant Bhapkar and Krishna Murthy and third place by Leonard Sacks and Peter Marks.

The only student couple to play in Section "A," Dan Duke and Dick Potthoff, won third place.

Covering The Campus

MEDICINE DEPARTMENT

Dr. R. Wolberg will be visiting lecturer at the Dept. of Psychiatry of the UNC School of Medicine today.

His wife, Dr. Arlene Wolberg, will conduct a seminar for members of the house staff today at 12:30 p.m. Her subject will be "Dynamics and Therapy of the borderline Patient".

PHI CHI LECTURE

The Phi Chi Medical Fraternity annual lecture will be held at the School of Medicine today at 4 p. m.

This year's speaker will be Dr. Michael Bellnt, consulting psychiatrist of the Travistock Clinic of London, England. His subject will be "Opening Moves in Psychotherapy." The lecture will be given in the Clinic Auditorium of the School of Medicine.

GERMAN FRATERNITY MEET

The Beta Rho chapter of the national honorary German fraternity, Delta Phi Alpha, will meet tonight at 7:30 in 108 Hones Hall.

The meeting, which is open to the public, will include a brief initiation of new members, and a panel discussion by three German students now on the UNC campus regarding the problems faced by an American student attending a German university.

PHILOSOPHY LECTURE

The Departments of Philosophy at UNC and Duke University will jointly sponsor a lecture by Professor G. H. von Wright on "The Hererological Paradox," Saturday at 8 p. m. in the Library Assembly Room.

On Sunday Professor von Wright will lecture in the Philosophy Seminar Room at Duke at 8 p.m. on "The Logic of Negation."

CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP

The Carolina Christian Fellowship (IVCF) will meet for the Thursday evening Bible study tonight at 7 o'clock in the Choral Rehearsal Room of Hill Hall. All students are welcome.

EXECUTIVE PROGRAM

A noted University of Chicago economist, Prof. Ezra Solomon, will serve as visiting lecturer for the Executive Program at UNC during the week of March 24-28.

Forty top executives who are enrolled in the fifth annual Executive Program will spend that week on the campus hearing lectures by Solomon and members of the School of Business Administration faculty.

PSYCHOLOGY SEMINAR

Dr. Fillmore H. Sanford, national mental health leader for the University of Texas, will address the UNC Psychology Department Seminar on Friday at 4:30 p.m. in Gardner Hall.

The subject for discussion, "The Role of the Behavioral Sciences in the Space Age," will be in conjunction with the Carolina Symposium on Public Affairs.

WUNC PROGRAM

Radio station WUNC will broadcast live the Symposium lecture tonight at 8 o'clock. It will also present a transcribed broadcast of the 8 p. m. Weil Lecture Friday. This lecture will be broadcast Saturday at 8 p. m.

Carolina Meets Rollins In Baseball Season Opener Today

STARTING HURLER—Charlie Aycock, a right-hander, gets the nod as starting pitcher today against Rollins College in Florida. The game is the opener of the Rollins baseball week as well as the season lid-lifter for the Tar Heels.

Aycock On Mound For Tar Heels

By RUSTY HAMMOND

The Carolina baseball team will no doubt attract the envy, as well as the support, of many fans back home. The squad is currently in sunny Florida for the annual Rollins baseball week.

Carolina meets host Rollins in a single game today, with right hander Charlie Aycock on the mound for the Heels. Tomorrow the Tar Heels play both Rollins and Georgia in a double-header, and Saturday they face Georgia in another single game.

Coach Walt Rabb announced before leaving that the Rollins series will be a probing ground for his athletes. With a few exceptions, the team is composed chiefly of sophomores and non-lettermen; thus, Rabb will have to experiment in order to come up with a solid starting nine for the beginning of conference play.

Although everyone who made the trip to Florida will probably have a chance to play, a tentative starting line-up has been set for today's game. Vaughn Bryson, 1b; Carson Oldham, 2b; Captain Roger Hunnicutt, ss; Harold Workman, 3b; and Bruce Crump, c; compose the starting infield. The outfield features Joe Temple or Alton Ponds, lf; Gerald Griffin or Johnny Burgwyn, cf; and Tommy Saintsing rf.

With Charlie Aycock pitching today, tomorrow will find Wayne Young and Ben Harding working the double-header. Ben Hammet will face Georgia from the hill Saturday in the series finale. Ready to come in from the bull-pen are firemen Dave Floyd, Doug Stimpson, and Johnny Johnson.

Rabb expressed concern recently about the lack of throwing practice on the team. The inclement weather ever since the opening of practice has brought on the trouble.

Last year's excellent team finished the year with a 15-10 overall record, and a tie for second place in the conference.

Brennan; Kearns Join East All-Stars In K C

Carolina basketballers Pete Brennan and Tommy Kearns have been named to the East squad to compete in the annual East-West shrine benefit game in Kansas City.

Brennan, appointed Tuesday, was a second team all-America in the AP, and copped first team honors in the Sporting News and Look. Pistol Pete finished the season as the top ACC scorer and rebounder. The handsome senior finally came into his own this year after being Len Rosenbluth's shadow the first two years of his career.

Tommy Kearns, often called the quarterback of the Tar Heels, is famous nationally for his excellent play-making and ball handling. Kearns' clutch play was instrumental in the Tar Heel's 1957 National Championship.

The King's Korner series on graduating basketball stars will be completed upon Kearns' return from Kansas City. Brennan and Bob Cunningham have already received notice in the column.

Campy Better Than Expected

GLEN COVE, N.Y.(AP)-A friend visiting Roy Campanella in the hospital, asked the half-paralyzed Los Angeles Dodger catcher how he felt.

Campanella grinned broadly. "I'm scufflin" he replied. The incident was related Wednesday by Frank Slocum, an aide to baseball Commissioner Ford Frick. Slocum was the only person, except Campanella's wife and attending physicians, allowed in the catcher's room.

"He is doing much better than I expected or even hoped he would be," Slocum said. "I don't mean he is laughing, but he has made progress physically and mentally."

Campanella suffered a broken neck in an automobile crash near his home on the early morning of Jan. 28. There was fear at first he might never walk again.

The latest hospital bulletin, however, reported Campanella had recovered a sense of feeling as far down as his lower abdomen and added: "This gives rise to hope."

Slocum said when he visited Campanella, a therapist was helping the catcher exercise his arms and fingers.

"He is able to flex his muscles really something. Also important, of course, is that his mood is so much better than it was.

"For instance, even when he had recovered from the first shock of his injury, they told me, he had a brooding lack of interest in baseball to a point he not only wouldn't discuss it, but didn't like to have anyone else do so.

"But when I walked in, he was listening to a Yankee game on the radio and he spoke of some of their hitters and how he would want them pitched to if he were catching.

"But after a few innings he seemed to tire. He asked the nurse to turn it off."

Co-Rec Winners

The annual Co-Rec volleyball tournament came to a close Tuesday night with the Zeta Psi-Alderman-1 team carrying off the trophy.

The winners defeated the Theta Chi's-Pi Phi team in two straight games. Trophies were presented to each individual on the winning team.

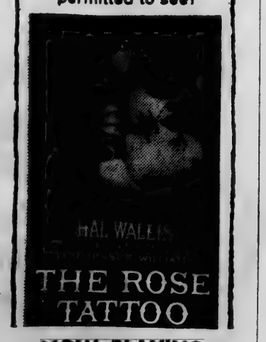
The Zeta Psi-Alderman-1 team members were Mary Montgomery, Catharine Bolton, Anne Thomas, Walter Wilson, Charlie Rouse, and Billy Bost.

Gold Rush For Giants; Bums

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The shift to California by New York's two National League baseball clubs gives every indication of becoming a bonanza for the senior circuit.

The San Francisco Giants have announced they expect to have $1,400,000 cash in the till before they open their season against Los Angeles April 15.

Ticket manager Pete Hoffman says the advance sale last year was only $570,000.



He predicted that over the entire season the Giants will outdraw the Los Angeles Dodgers, transplanted from Brooklyn.

This expression of confidence raised a few eyebrows in the Dodgers' front office. Harold Parrott, business manager, said the Dodgers passed the $1,400,000 mark, "weeks and weeks ago." Tuck Stainback, former major league outfielder who is in charge of the Dodgers' bloc sales, says the Giants simply can't match Los Angeles in attendance this year because they have a 22,000 seating capacity to the Dodgers' 93,000.

"We're going to start off with a bang," says Parrott. "We are going to break the all time major league attendance record the first day of the season in Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum. Cleveland holds the record. The Indians set it for the fifth game of the 1948 World Series against Boston. They had a crowd of 86,288 that day."

While the Coliseum seats 101,000 for football, its maximum for baseball, due to revisions, will be 93,000, and that is how many people Parrott says will be there to open National League baseball in Los Angeles.

Cummings And Lowe Named As Blue-White Quarterbacks

By DAVE WIBLE

Rain and mud forced spring football practice inside yesterday as the Tar Heel gridders go into their last few sessions before the practice ending Blue-White game Saturday afternoon.

The Tar Heels have had good weather for the most part until this week. Practice was called off Tuesday, so the squad will have to work today and tomorrow in order to get in the allotted 20 days before Saturday. Usually there is no practice on Thursdays.

The squads have been named and with the exception of the White backfield, the Blues will be the upperclassmen, and the Whites freshmen. The squads will not practice separately until tomorrow.

The Blues will be led by quarterback Jack Cummings. Rounding out the ball carriers will be halfbacks Jim Schuler and Danny Droze and fullback Don Coker. Emil Decantis, Henry Clements, Ed Lipski, and Daily Goff will also be in the Blue backfield.

In the line for the Blues will be John Schroeder and Al Goldstein at ends, Co-Captain Phil Blazer and Don Redding at tackles, Fred Swearingen and Fred Mueller at guards, and Ronnie Koes at center.

For the Whites, sophomore Nelson Lowe will be doing the quarterback chores, working with halfbacks Wade Smith and Sonny Folckomer. Bob Shupin will be the fullback. Lenny Beck, Russell Hollers, Roy Wall and Conrad Sloop will play supporting roles.

In the line for the Whites will be ends Frank Riggs and Jim Rice, tackles Moose Butler and Robbie Smith, guards Paul Russell and Charlie Branson, and center Rip Hawkins.

The game will have the regulation four quarters with a special halftime show during which the Blue-White Queen will be crowned. In addition, two extra quarters will be played in order to give all the players an opportunity to show their stuff.

The game is expected to draw a large crowd. Tickets may be purchased at the Woollen Gym ticket office or from any Monogram Club member. Game time is 2 o'clock.

Scurlock OK

Tar Heel track star Dave Scurlock has sprained his ankle and will be on crutches for the next few days. The injury is not serious and will not affect his running this spring.

Rookie For Cincinnati May Star

By ED WILKS

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—Spring phenoms come and spring phenoms go in baseball, but the Cincinnati Redlegs think they have one who's coming on the run.

The kid's name is Vada Pinson, a 19-year-old outfielder up from class C ball "Mickey Mantle jumped from class C, didn't he?" asks Manager Birdie Tebbetts. Pinson is getting a chance at the big time now because he can fly.

"A guy who can run like this kid," said Birdie, "can run away from his mistakes.

"He can beat out that bad swing. Or he might single and try for second at the wrong time in a ball game and you're ready to let him have it, but he slides and he's safe."

Pinson, a Californian (Oakland) who was born in Memphis and went to the same high school that turned out Redleg outfielder Frank Robinson and all-America basketball player Bill Russell, was only something short of sensational last season at Visalia (California League).

Newcomers Top Golf

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.

NEW YORK (AP)—The current winter golf tour has been notable not just because so many winners have been players who reached the top within the past two or three years.

There have been a good many times when a look at the leaders in a tournament would show fewer than a half dozen names that would be familiar to a fan who hadn't been watching closely for a couple of seasons.

Latest to come to the front are a little, drawling Southerner with the improbable name of J. C. Goosie and a 22-year-old Californian with an odd backswing, John McMullen.

Stan Smith (left) discusses characteristics and color coding of polyethylene insulated cable with A. A. Little, Nebraska Area Transmission Engineer.

"Growth makes opportunities in the telephone company"

In October, 1957, only four years after graduation, Stanley W. Smith was appointed District Plant Engineer in Northwestern Bell Telephone Company. Here Stan tells what his responsibilities are and how his promotion came about.

"I'm responsible for outside plant engineering in a district which includes about one-third of all Bell telephones in Nebraska outside of Omaha," Stan says. "That's about 35,000 phones, and the number is growing every day.

"The most important part of my job is to plan for growth and have facilities ready when needed. This means planning for pole lines, aerial and underground cable, and conduit lines to the central office. I also make cost estimates for all planned construction so that money can be budgeted for it.

"This is the kind of job I really like—one which combines engineering and management. And it was the continuing growth of the business," Stan points out, "that opened up this new assignment for me. My predecessor was appointed to a newly created position and I was selected to replace him.

"What the future holds for me depends on a lot of things. But I can see from my present job that growth will keep opening opportunities for myself and other engineers like me. I'm more convinced than ever that the telephone company is the place to get ahead in an interesting and challenging career."

Stan Smith graduated from the University of Nebraska in 1953 with a B.S. in E.E. degree. He is one of many young men who are finding rewarding careers in the Bell Telephone Companies. Legislature Tables 'Clause'

By PRINGLE PIPKIN

By a vote of 20 to 13 the Student Legislature moved to table Roger Foushee's (SP) resolution dealing with discriminatory clauses in constitutions in student organizations.

This resolution was to ratify the National Student's Association's Basic policy "declaration on student responsibilities and rights."

The discriminatory issue was brought out by section 10 of the declaration, which says student organizations will be recognized "provided that the constitution or purposes shall not include discriminatory clauses to race, or as to religion . . ."

The ways and means committee added this section. "However, recognition may not be denied to a student organization because of racial or religious clauses contained in its national charter."

Foushee moved that the amendment of the ways and means committe be stricken from the resolution. The committee's change was contradictory he said.

The resolution received considerable and heated debate. Tog Sanders (UP) said that the Legislators had not consulted their constituents and that the Legislature was acting to rapidly on a matter which "involves everyone on the campus."

If the resolution is not brought off the table before the last session of Legislature, then it will automatically be killed.

The Legislature passed Foushee's resolution to ratify the NSA declaration on academic freedoms.

Then the body began work on the report of the procedures committee, which is setting up the procedures for the juries and the new Honor Councils.

After the first section of the first article had been read, this report was tabled.

After the Legislature had heard and approved the report of Charlie Huntington, chairman of the Honor System Commission, it moved special orders on a bill introduced by Dave Biren (UP).

This bill amended the Honor System Commission, it moved special orders on a bill introduced by Dave Biren (UP).

The procedures committee report was brought off the table. The Legislature continued in its consideration of the report.

Nursing School Appointments Announced

Dr. Elizabeth L. Kemble, dean of the School of Nursing, has announced the appointment of Miss Cleone Hill as instructor in Public Health Nursing on the faculty of the School of Nursing.

Miss Hill, a graduate of the Garfield Memorial Hospital School of Nursing, received the degree bachelor of science from Eastern Nazarene College, and the degree master of arts from Teachers College, Columbia University.

Mrs. Fay Jenkins Martin has been appointed as part-time instructor of nutrition on the faculty of the School of Nursing. Mrs. Martin, who received her B. S. degree in home economics education from Woman's College has taught home economics at Hildbran School, Hildebran; and Valley Springs High School, Skyland.

Mrs. Louisa Lanham Spell has been appointed part-time instructor on the faculty. Mrs. Spell received the bachelor of arts degree from Converse College; bachelor of science in nursing from Vanderbilt University School of Nursing; master of science in public health from UNC.

FOR EDITOR

Selections Board Makes Report On Candidates

The selections board for Editor of The Daily Tar Heel met on Monday and Wednesday and approved four of the five candidates to appear before it.

This in no way disqualifies the fifth candiate from running, a spokesman of the board said.

This board was set up by the Student Legislature, on recommendation of the Newspaper Research Committee to screen candidattes for Editor of The Daily Tar Heel and provide the campus with some factual basis for their selection.

The selections board issued statements with regard to each of the candidates. They follow in alphabetical order:

ANN FRYE: Ann Frye impressed the board as an adequately experienced newspaper woman, and excellent student, a stable individual, and a good citizen. The board feels that she would produce a newspaper with which the student body could be proud.

CURTIS GANS: It is the opinion of the selections board that Mr. Gans experience in connection with this post is adequate to qualify him as a worthy candidate for the editorship. He has demonstrated a high degree of interest and proficiency in all the aspects of the Daily Tar Heel and a throrough working knowledge of its organization and operation.

PRINGLE PIPKIN: The board feels that Mr. Pipkin has adequate experience on The Daily Tar Heel as a newsman to qualify him for the job as Editor. The board further feels that he has the ability to handle all aspecti of the paper asd that he is well informed on campus and current affairs.

CHARLIE SLOAN: Mr. Sloan's experience on The Daily Tar Heel is adequate as is his journalistic experience elsewhere. We feel that the students will be adquately re-

What Has It Meant?

A Closer Look At Symposium Week

By DAVIS YOUNG

What kind of a week has it been for you? If your like most Carolina students, its been a week of enjoyment and education with the Carolina Symposium.

It hardly seems that a week has gone by for some of us, but for others, particularly those closely associated with the Symposium its been a lot longer than a week.

As this year's program comes to a close, let us look in retrospect at the names of the six individuals most responsbile for this fine week.

Sonny Hallford has served as chairman and has given willingly of his time for the past five months. He has had to oversee all of the phases of this monumental project and in the end has often been called upon for the decisions which affected the program.

Another Big Cog

William Geer of the social science staff, is the faculty advisor and has been another important cog in the Symposium's ever turning wheel. Along with Hallford, he has been most responsible for this year's event.

Mary Jane Fisher the able secretary has probably set a new all time record for the most correspondence ever written on this campus. For five months and at least five hours every day, she has been busily engaged at her typewriter. For her outstanding work, she was awarded membership in the Valkries.

Herman Godwin, executive secretary, was the jack of all trades around the ymposium office. He was called upon to do a great variety of tasks and, according to Chairman Hallford, performed them all "exceeding well." When the Symposium ends, he will assume his new post as chairman of Orientation.

Program Arrangements

Jerry Oppenheimer, vice chairman, has been most responsible for arranging the present program. In addition to serving as vice chairman, he also headed the program committee.

Al Goldsmith has done a splendid job as treasurer. Almost entirely due to his efforts, the Finance Commitee raised over $5,500 dollars to cover expenses. At the termination of this week he will begin his campaign for the presidency of the student body on the University Party ticket.

The list does not stop here either, for attention could be called to the fine work of Mrs. Anne Beale Sanders, general office secretary, to the committee chairman or to various faculty members. However, the names of Hallford, Geer, Fisher, Godwin, Oppenheimer and Goldsmith must come first.

Harry Ashmore, Benjamin Fine Talks Terminate Carolina Symposium Today

Defense Discussed

By DAVE JONES

"If North Carolina and its citizens expect to survive possible nuclear attack, they must plan and train to survive," said State Sen. Wilbur M. Jolly as he opened the panel discussion on North Carolina Civil Defense yesterday afternoon in Carroll Hall.

Senator Jolly is North Carolina Survival Plan Director.

"At no time in the history of the world has there been such a potential for destruction. Our greatest single problem is to conceive what the effect of such an attack would be," he continued.

In stating the reasons why the experiences of World Wars I and II are not applicable to today's situation Senator Jolly said that our allies and our military were able to hold the aggressors at bay long enough for our nations production to be implimented into the war effort. However, in our next conflict the areas will be the first target.

Must Cope With Attack

"We must plan to cope with attack by an enemy which possesses a nuclear weapon powerful enough to release the destructive power in a single bomb that is equal to the combined destructive power of all the bombs that were dropped on Germany during World War II."

Other members of the panel were Maj. James W. Denning, communications officer, North Carolina Council of Civil Defense, and Col. Vachel D. Whatley Jr., assistant projects director, chief planner of the North Carolina Survival Plan, N.C. Council of Civil Defense.

Gen. Edward F. Griffin, director of the N.C. Council of Civil Defense, was unable to attend this panel, due to a Civil Defense operation which could not have been scheduled in advance. His duties as chairman were performed by Senator Jolly.

Communications System

Major Denning outlined the North Carolina communications system and its objectives. They are three in number:

1. To gather information and intelligence. This concerns such items as damage done to hit areas and facts concerning enemy operations.

2. Dissemination of information and intelligence. This can be accomplished by means of the news media, the National Warning System (NAWAS) and by state communications systems.

Hook Unable To Make Scheduled Trip Here

By DAVIS YOUNG

Today will mark the termination of the 1958 Carolina Symposium on Public Affairs with the appearance of Harry Ashmore at 10 a.m. in Carroll Hall. He will be immediately followed by Benjamin Fine, after a short intermission to allow students having 11 a.m. classes to leave.

Fine is speaking this morning to make up an address he was scheduled to give last night. His plane was grounded at the Washington Airport.

Ashmore will be speaking on "Education for Survival in the South Today." Fine will address Carolina students and friends on "Major Problems Facing American Education."

Fine will speak again at 8 p.m. This time he is talking on "The Responsibilities of Citizens for Educaton." This address has been changed from Memorial Hall to Hill Hall.

SYMPOSIUM

Security Is Topic For Talk Here

By PAT DOOLEY

"National Security Through International Arrangement" was the topic discussed by Kenner C. Frazer at a symposium session in Carroll Hall yesterday.

The talk was delivered to a near capacity house of Carolina midshipmen and NROTC staff members.

Frazer, a veteran Naval officer of World War II was introduced by Capt. A. M. Patterson, commanding officer of the Carolina NROTC unit.

U.S. Participation

Frazer said our participation in the international treaty arrangements is for several reasons.

1. To have a trip wire for early warning of any aggresive action being started against us.

2. To have friendly arrangements with countries across the oceans where we can base counter-forces in close proximity to any would-be aggressors.

3. To enable us to make the best use of powerful moving military platform, Strategic Air Command and the Atomic Navy.

4. To keep the battle line away from our greatest potential, the U.S. Mainland.

5. To defend the vital areas of the world against aggressors and the chaos which occasionally arises from their own weak government organization.

Only Answer

Fraber thought the only answer for peace in the tri-polar world of Russia, the U.S. and the newly freed forces of Africa, India and others was in the formula of regional alliances.

After the address Frazer answered questions from the floor.

"How do you feel about recognizing Red China in the U.N.?"

"Some nations feel the admission of Red China is in order, but most free nations still feel the Communists must make some more open reparition for their action in Korea before they can be admitted to an organization which professes peace above all," he responded.

"Do you think the U.N. is an effective organization?"

"In some instances we have used the U.N. for an open forum in which to trade blows with the Soviet. This action has driven some smaller countries into an even more resigned position of neutrality, he maintained.

Weil Lecture

Fine has been selected to give this year's Weil Lecture. He is presently serving as Dean of the Graduate School of Yeshiva University in New York and is a former Education Editor of the New York Times.

He is a product of the public school system of New York City and received his undergraduate degree from Rhode Island State University. He also holds three degrees from Columbia University.

He started his journalistic career in 1933 when he worked as a reporter on the New York Post. He went to the New York Times in 1937 and became Education Editor in 1941. He resigned this post last month. In 1943, he was awarded a Pulitzer Prize.

Attendance Good

Sonny Hallford, chairman of this year's Symposium program, stated yesterday that he was very well pleased with the result of Symposium Week up until now and strongly urged students to make a strong turnout for the last day.

He stated: "The attendance has been good at all sessions this week and we are particularly pleased with the widespread participation in seminars. We are certainly looking forward to a large crowd for Ashmore and Fine today.

"We regret that Sidney Hook was unable to be here as scheduled yesterday morning. However, it was through no fault of his own as he was grounded at the Washington Airport due to adverse weather conditions."

Election Petitions Must Be In Today

Petitions from all independent candidates in spring elections must be in by 6 p.m. today, Elections Board Chairman Bob Furtado has announced. The deadline include all nominations for the parties and selection boards. They either may be turned in personally to the elections board chairman or to the student government office.

AT LENOIR HALL

'The Breakfast Special'

The picture above is a bowl — a Lenoir Hall bowl—and the lines drawn in the bottom encircle yellow food particles which remained in the vessel after it had been washed in Lenoir Hall kitchens.

Lenoir Hall, you will recall, is the student cafeteria at the University of North Carolina — the cafeteria with an "A" rating from the State Board of Health.

It's the place from which come, so often, complaints about uncleanliness and uncookedness — where egg particles cling to sterilized forks and dirty glassware is passed on to other students, still dirty, after its route through the dishpan.

But you only hear about these things, because thousands eat at Lenoir Hall daily and you're only a number passing through the cafeteria line. So you never witness this uncleanliness yourself.

Then one day you drop in for a cup of coffee, spot a friend and have a seat until the class bell rings. He points to the cereal bowl he just got from the "clean dish" rack, and there in the bottom is the Lenoir Hall special:

Food particles, clinging still to the walls of the glass container which long since has passed through the cleaning process — whatever it is—at the student cafeteria.

We have the bowl. We stole it. And we'd be glad to show it to any and all who are concerned about cleanliness at Lenoir Hall. Even, mind you, to the State Board of Health—if it looks that closely before rating eating establishments.

If we fail to prove the uncleanliness point, we at least have the evidence to show that a lot of free food is being given away at Lenoir Hall.

Economic Betterment Is Route To Social Equality

Editor Harry Golden probably made as much sense as any Symposium Week speaker when he said Wednesday night that the Negro's economic and political betterment will determine his orientation into American society.

Comparing the development of the Negro with other imigrant groups, he said that once the race is judged equally with other foreign stock in the United States the Negro would have to prove himself as those groups before him have done.

"He will then begin to feel his alienation," Golden said — "an alienation which he has never known to this day."

The role of economic improvement for the Negro also was pointed out by Sen. John Sparkman earlier in the week, who said an improved economic status for the Negro would contribute to his acceptance in the American society of the future.

Doubtless this is true, for history shows a gradual orientation into the social arena, on the part of all minority groups, on a scale commensurate with their economic status. As groups have climbed the ladder of economic levels, so has their social status been improved.

There is, therefore, argument for the Negro that among his best routes to social equality is in the area of economic self-respect, without which the higher goal never can be reached.

The question raised by this premise is: In American society, will that group on the lowest rung of the economic ladder always be the segment of the community which least enjoys social equality? Or will the United States some day parcel out its privileges without respect for income and irregardless of minority distinction?

We hope so. For unless that is the practice, our country always will be fighting the battle of civil liberties, with the Negro in the spotlight today and another group on the stage of minority discrimination tomorrow.

Duke Power Company, noted Mr. Golden, has done more to erase discrimination in the Charlotte area than all the NAACP's combined. Maybe what we need is more Duke Power Companies.

Do Some Work, Prevent A Fire

Again Tuesday, like on so many other days during the current school year, lights were temporarily out at Graham Memorial Student Union.

If the blackout were an isolated occurrence at GM, we would have no complaint about the electrical system in the building. But the frequency of the trouble points to real problems which could be costly in the future.

The trouble stems from overloaded wires at Graham Memorial. When too much power is being drawn at once, a fuse burns out and the manager Rand Bailey replaces it with a new one. Of course, improvements to the wiring system could correct these shortages.

We wonder if the University maintenance department should not see to those improvements before Mr. Bailey comes to GM some day only to find it burned down because of an overloaded electrical system.

Carolina Carrousel

Good Service At Beginning; Will It Last?

By GAIL GODWIN

Hey, Bo! Pardner, wake up and eat again. The Carolina Coffee Shop has given birth to a beafling baby restaurant where you can eat Western style for thirty cents up to four dollars and thirty cents.

Always eager to try new things, we decided to eat supper there on "opening night." We sat down and ordered, got up and went down to Kemp's to cash a check, and when we came back an eager-to-please young lad practically met us at the door with our steaks!

It's just like eating in Mama's kitchen again. The copper is shining over the stove, and you can see what's cooking. Just like Mama's—that is, if Mama is from Texas and has three or four grills on her stove.

All the waiters wear clean blue jeans and blue denim shirts with a red scarf to top it off. What is more they are alert. None of this "Yoo, Hoo! PLEASE! Could I have some more coffee!" All we did was think coffee and our waiter snapped to attention and lo the coffee was there. We felt like Nikita Khruschev commanding his Russian drill team.

Don Becton seemed elated over his first day's results: 532 for lunch, and a capacity by five o'clock that evening.

Sombreroes off to a good idea. The steak was good ,the lettuce was crisp, and everybody was nice and polite.

But, as the radiant young thing in love exclaimed to her wonderful, wonderful boyfriend as they walked through the orange blossoms: "I wonder if it will last!"

We hope so.

BASIC RESEARCH

Has the United States yet learned its lesson on basic research? Has it learned that this is the indispensable "seed corn" from which all technological advance grows—all the undreamed-of products of new industry, all the military weapons of tomorrow, all of mankind's brave flights beyond the horizons of atmosphere and gravitation?

Has the United States, which historically has specialized in applied research and mass production while keeping basic research as a penny-pinched stepchild, realized that primary research must be fostered, nurtured—and really adequately financed? — Christian Science Monitor

CARE For Israel; Cleanup Drive

To the Editor:

Recently my attention has been called to CARE handbills which have been posted on bulletin boards in most of the dormitories. These handbills have been designed to stimulate aid for the following countries: Ceylon, Colombia, West Germany and Berlin, Greece, Hong Kong, India, Israel, Italy, Korea, Pakistan, Peru, and Yugoslavia. But—what happened to these Arabic countries who are more needy than the countries mentioned above?

To my knowledge, Israel is not a poor country. The U. S. has always been an unlimited bank to Israel, and avoided Jordan whose population contains a large number of refugees who have been kicked out of their own homes by the Israelis. These CARE handbills have been designed for the care of the children of the world, and not for leaders of certain countries.

Students always argue with me and say, "You Arabs do not like the West." If this is true, and I do not believe it is, why shouldn't the West, I mean America, try to put some love in the hearts of the needy children, who never knew where their home was and whose land is being cultivated by people who have no right to put their plow in it.

From experience, I say that the Arab people do not like Russia, even though she offers them financial aid. You say Egypt favors Russia. No, I will very frankly tell you that it is against Egypt's law to have Communist members in the government.

In this article, readers, I do not mean to show a selfish viewpoint, but it is based on truth and reality.

CANS FIRST

To the Editor:

Greek Week, with its clean-up help to various spots in town is a fine idea. But how about cleaning up our own front yard?

It seems that those 6,863 students, after walking on Professor Wiley's incipient grass, then cover the campus, dropping coke bottles and paper cups and other waste paper under the bushes and on the lawns. Spring is coming, we hope, and then we and our many visitors from all over the world will enjoy the famed beauties of Chapel Hill.

The NO LITTER campaign is keeping North Carolina's highways amazingly neat and attractive. Do you think we students could have a similar campaign on our campus? Extra trash cans stragically placed outside all buildings, and at every corner of the walks would be needed first. Then, not "down with the coke bottles," but "UP AND IN."

A Talk With Striganov; The Varying Ideologies

To The Editor:

Walking in the rain from Memorial Hall to the library, I asked Counsellor Striganov whether or not the works of Nicolas Berdyaev are still published in the Soviet Union. The Counsellor's answer was, "I have never heard of this man." When I pointed out that Berdyaev, a Russian who left the Soviet Union in the 1920's, was one of the most important philosophers and theologians of the 20th century, the Counsellor nodded and said, "Oh, well I never read any religious writing." (Mr. Striganov did admit to reading the Bible, but of course he reads this particular work as literature, and not for the religious experience.)

Later, in the Bullshead Bookshop, I handed our Russian friend a paperback copy of Berdyaev's critique of Dostoevsky. Striganov examined it with great interest and then called his traveling companion. The two of them exchanged some fast conversation in Russian, and then Striganov translated for me, "He says that he has heard of this man, but has not read him."

A Hearst editorial writer would seize on this incident to "prove" that the omnipotent secret police have frightened poor Sergei to such an extent that he is afraid to read men like Berdyaev. Would that this were so! Because then our problem of coexistence would be much easier. Because then, with the relaxation of Stalinist controls, we could depend upon the Striganovs of the Soviet Union to read Berdyaev, and many others. But it is not so, and it is not that easy. The plain truth of the matter is that Striganov is so hypnotized (I can think of no other word) by the Marxist orthodoxy that no other philosophy has any relevance for him. Marx has handed Sergei the secular keys to the kingdom, and there is absolutely nothing else. One is reminded here of Leon Trotsky, with his usual arrogance, telling a group of Soviet Mohammedans, "In 25 years you will forget all this nonsense." (We must scrupulously avoid the temptation to tell Friend Sergei exactly the same thing.)

Our recent Russian visitors have finally answered all the questions—good questions, bad questions, crackpot questions, vicious questions, smart questions, dumb questions—in a manner which has endeared them to all of us. Both these representatives of the U.S.S.R are thoroughly likeable fellows. But it is precisely this fact which tends to blunt the very real differences between us, the very real obstacles on the road to a genuine co-existence. The very affability of these fine representatives tended to let them get away with answers that were patently ridiculous.

For example: everywhere that Striganov went, he was asked about the role of the Soviet Union in the suppression of the Hungarian Revolution. Instead of replying (as he well might have) that there was, and is, a "cold war" going on, that the Hungarian Revolution was simply a very tragic episode in that "cold war," that the Soviet Union did what its own national interest compelled it to do, instead of taking this kind of an approach, Striganov attempted to justify the intervention on the strictest kind of legalistic grounds. "The legitimate, sovereign government of Hungary requested the aid of Soviet troops," he said, over and over again. This is true, but it put him in the impossibly paradoxical position of denying the right of revolution. Well, we Americans will remain true to our revolutionary heritage even if Mr. Striganov ignores his!

Incidentally, there were not one, but two, interventions by Soviet troops in Hungary. The first was on October 24 at the request of the government, headed by Imre Nagy, against whom the the revolution was directed. After an initial pacification, Nagy responded to mass pressures from the Hungarian people to announce on November 1 the neutrality of the Hungarian Republic. Then, on November 4, came the final and conclusive Soviet intervention. Premier Nagy told his people: "In the early hours of this morning, the Soviet troops launched an attack against our capital city with the obvious intention of overthrowing the lawful, democratic, Hungarian government. Our troops are fighting. The Government is in its place . . . ."

No, those big bad Russians don't have horns growing out of their heads. Quite the contrary. There are as many decent and likeable Russians as there are Americans. But we must not let out realization of this fact obscure the terrible difficulties which must be overcome in order to win the peace. We can only hope, and pray, that the threat of thermonuclear oblivion will compel us all to realize that peace is the ONLY alternative.

PETER B. YOUNG

Discriminatory Clause

The Dallas Morning News—Rightly, the National Interfraternity (Greek letter) conference complains that more than 50 American colleges exclude social organizations that bar membership for color or other causes.

Man is a gregarious animal, but like all flocks prefers to foregather with his own kind. He is entitled to his particular prejudices, right or wrong. It makes as much sense to hold that a Catholic club must admit Presbyterians or a Democratic club Republicans as to endeavor to eradicate by college fiat the likes and dislikes of a group.

Colleges have sometimes inveighed against clubs and fraternities as violative of the spirit of democracy. But clubs exist in college and out and always will. Anyway, if this keeps up, the old-fashioned man who has been taught that his home is his castle is going to find that it is a public lodging house.

Candidates Issue Statements Regarding Issues, Tar Heel

Sloan Talks On News

Charlie Sloan, a candidate for editor of The Daily Tar Heel, said Wednesday that national news has a definite place in the Tar Heel if it is properly handled.

Sloan said, "Students can get all the national news they want out of the many large newspapers serving Chapel Hill, but The Daily Tar Heel can offer them something these other papers cannot." He referred to this something as can extra factor." Sloan said that we have a number of experts on campus who can "relate the news from Moscow to the man in the dorm."

Satellite Story

He cited as an example the launching of a Russian satellite. A reporter receiving the story from the Associated Press would call "a physicist known to be an expert on gravitation," and "one of the top members of the political science department."

The reporter would read the story to them and ask for their comments on the effects of that event to the country and the students here.

Two Stories

The managing editor then dummies in two stories, the AP's and a story about the comment of the two experts, "I believe," said Sloan, "that if the major stories are handled this way, interest in world and national news can be stimulated and the quality of the paper will be improved."

He added "Off-campus news should not force campus stories out of the paper. But, some campus stories have the nature of being more or less timeless, and are as fresh on Wednesday as they are on Tuesday. As long as care is exercised in the judgement of news stories, The Daily Tar Heel can cover the campus and offer information on the outside world without slighting anybody."

Oldest Dorm

Old East is the oldest dormitory on this campus having been erected in 1793.

Goldsmith; Points Out Pressing Need At UNC

Better cooperation and coordination among various groups on campus has been called one of the pressing needs" at UNC by Al Goldsmith, University Party candidate for president of the student body.

In a statement to The Daily Tar Heel Goldsmith said:

"There needs to be some way for the president of the Student Body to keep in closer contact with the honor councils, the Interdormitory and Interfraternity councils and Women's Dormitory Council. There is also a need for a means for these groups to be in closer contact with the administrative branch of student government. The president's Cabinet is the ideal place for this closer association to be developed, but under the present setup the Cabinet is composed of only ten students selected at large.

"I would like to to se the president's cabinet reorganized to be composed of the presidents of the Interfraternity Council, the Interdormitory Council, the Panhellenic Council, the Independent Women's Council, the chairmen of the Men's Honor Council, the Women's Honor Council, the Student Council and the Women's Residence Council. "In addition I would like to see at least one Legislature member and four members selected at large. This new composition would increase the membership of the cabinet, but I believe that it will make a more effective cabinet.

"It should be understood that this cabinet is not designed to dictate, but rather to advise. I feel that the president can be best advised by those who know intimately the problems of "campus. A cabinet composed of the above would include most of the major bodies on campus thus enabling the president to keep in closer association with the groups they represent."

Tunisia With West

TUNIS, March 20 (AP) — President Habib Bourguiba said today Tunsia has chosen to stay with the West. This was the day he had threatened to break with his Western allies over his dispute with France.

Bourguiba expressed condifence that with the help of the U. S.—British good offices team French troops would be pulled out of this former French protectorate.

"We have decided to cooperate with the West," he told applauding delegates to the constituent assembly in the red-brocaded throne room of the Bardo palace.

Pipkins Outlines Plans To Improve Tar Heel

Pringle Pipkin, candidate for editor of The Daily Tar Heel, in a statement Wednesday said:

"The news coverage of this paper can be improved You have heard many schemes for accomplishing this feat. I offer one basic plan. The staff must be increased and its training should be improved.

"Many competent high school journalists come to this campus in the fall, but only a small percentage find their way to the staff of The Daily Tar Heel.

"This situation can be changed by actively recruiting all high school students and transferring juniors who have had journalistic experience.

"Then a definite training program will be set up in order to keep these students interested in the paper. There will also be awards and recognition given to these students.

"With these additional staff members I will first concentrate on improving the coverage of the areas of general interest. Articles should be given a place in accordance with the interest of all students.

"The paper should not become inundated with numerous two inch articles. Those of very special interest and importance should be placed on the front page. Other articles should be put in. Covering the Campus where they can be easily found.

Features

"Feature articles will be used to stimulate the interest of the students in the University and to produce little known facts.

"If the amount of advertising can be increased, and I believe it can, there will be more six page papers and more feature articles.

"News will not be slanted. The facts will be presented in their entirety and every effort will be made to keep from destroying the context of statements.

'Yellow Journalism'

"I do not believe that a "spectacular" newspaper is necessarily a good one. "Yellow journalism" has no place in The Daily Tar Heel.

"It is not the function of this newspaper to see how black it can make the name of the University. It should point out both the bad and the good.

Carter Is For Union

The task of working with the administration in obtaining a new UNC student union has been called "one of the laregst jobs facing student government during the next few years" by Bob Carter independent candidate for president of the student body.

Carter elaborated on his statement by saying:

"Everyone is certainly aware that our present union and its facilities do not adequately serve the campus. The present building is only one wing of a structure that was planned when the student body numbered only 2500, and now with 7000 students the building is forever overflowing with people wishing to use its facilities and services.

"In June we will get a new director for our union, Howard Henry. Student government and Henry will have to continue the plans and work which have already been started for a new building.

"It will our job to get all students behind the administration, faculty, the Board of Trustees, the Advisory Budget Commission and the State Legislature in an all out effort to gain funds as soon as possible for a new union.

As student body president I would pledge to work for this union in every way possible in hopes that we would get an appropriation for it during the next year."

JOHN WHITLEY: While we recognize and appreciate Mr. Whitley's potentialities as a fine Editor, we feel that he should first acquaint himself with the operations of The Daily Tar Heel. He has not worked for the paper before. We cannot approve Mr. Whitley at this time.

Military Pay

WASHINGTON, March 20 (AP) — A bill raising military pay scales was approved by the House Armed Services Committee today and routed toward the floor.

A companion measure, which like the House bill is designed to keep more good men in the service, is pending in the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Furtado Gives Viewpoints On Coeds Visiting Dorms

Don Furtado, Student Party candidate for student body president, gave his views on taking dates to men's dormitory social rooms in a statement Thursday.

Furtado said: "Because of the lack of adequate recreation and reception facilities in the town of Chapel Hill and on the University campus, it is mandatory that a woman's visiting agreement be set up to allow man's dormitory residents to bring dates into dormitory social rooms at specified hours during the week.

"At present, women are not allowed in dormitory social rooms except on rather rare occasion. I am confident that if the residents of a dormitory show a willingness to abide by certain necessary regulations concerning hours and conduct, then the administration will approve such a measure.

"In some dormitories, this agreement may not be feasible because of the particular location of the social rooms, but this should not prevent approval of such a policy in those dormitories (such as those in the upper quad, Winston, etc.) where the plan is operationally practical.

"The supervision of such an agreement would probably become the responsibility of the IDC.

"This is not a unique agreement, for such regulations are presently in existence at other colleges. The unique thing is that such an agreement has not been set up previously here at Carolina."

Candidate John Whitley Calls For Fair And Impartial Editorial Policy

A fair and impartial editorial policy which would face controversial issues squarely and concern itself to local issues was announced today by John B. Whitley as part of his campaign platform in the race for editor of The Daily Tar Heel.

"I would like to see editorial cartoons dealing with local incidents in the campus newspaper, and I believe that guest editorials should not be used unless they are very outstanding or discuss issues of extreme interest to the student," Whitley said.

Whitley, a sophmore from Thomasville, said he believed all campus organizations no matter how small, should be covered as thoroughly as possible.

"A large, qualified staff is an asset to any newspaper. I would strive to encourage more students, particularly journalism majors, to become members of the staff.

"With a large staff, I feel the problems of adequate and prompt coverage can be solved," he said.

Dorm Students

Whitley asserted that he would try to help unify dormitories students because as the largest single group on campus, they cannot work together as the smaller groups can.

To help them work together, he said "Possibly The Daily Tar Heel could act as a focusing device of the energies of this large element by pointing out different paths to follow, or by the use of a campaign for a beter unification of the campus as a whole."

Commenting on various ways to improve The Daily Tar Heel, Whitley said, "The sports department has done a terrific job in major and minor sports coverage, and I would like to see this good work continue.

"I believe more color work and intramural roundup features would be improvements.

Layout

"The Daily Tar Heel should be attractive in appearance. I stand for a consisten day-to-day policy of layout."

By explaining and illustrating his ideas on layouts to staff members, Whitley said he believed he could produce a consistent format policy.

He said he would strive to improve the quality of the pictures with the existing facilities.

"Every newspaper needs depth. I see the need for articles on women's activities, features and stimulating editorial columns."

Whitley said he would like to see all students and organizations get a newspaper every day without fail.

Whitley was the editor of the Thomasville High School newspaper and was student sports reporter for the Thomasville Tribune and The High Point Enterprise for three years.

Later he worked as a part-time rewrite man for the High Point paper. He has had four years' experience in the printing trade including nearly a year in the composing room a daily paper.

CHEVY'S NEW V8 LEVELS THE HIGHEST, HARDEST HIGHWAY OVER THE ANDES!

To prove the durability of Chevrolet's radical new Turbo-Thrust V8,* the tremendous flexibility of the new Turboglide transmission,* the incredible smoothness of Full Coil suspension, we tackled the most challenging transcontinental road in the world — the 1,000-mile General San Martin Highway. To make it harder, the Automobile Club of Argentina sealed the hood shut at Buenos Aires — no chance to add oil or water or adjust carburetors for high altitude.

So the run began — across the blazing Argentine pampas, into the ramparts of the forbidding Andes. Up and up the road climbed, almost 21 miles in the sky! Drivers gasped for oxygen at 12,572 feet — but the Turbo-Thrust V8 never slackened its torrent of power, the Full Coil springs smothered every bump, the Turboglide transmission made play of grades up to 30 percent. Then a plunge to the Pacific at Valparaiso, Chile, a quick turn-around and back again. Time for the round trip: 41 hours 14 minutes — and the engine was never turned off!

Blue-White Game Tomorrow; Scrap To Climax Practice

By DAVE WISLE

The weather cleared up enough yesterday afternoon to allow the last rough day of spring football drills before the off-season ending Blue-White game which will be in Kennan Stadium tomorrow at 2.

This afternoon the squads are in for light workouts to give the bruises and bumbs a chance to heal before tomorrows finals.

Head Coach Jim Tatum has divided his staff between the two squads with Coaches Ed Hickey, handling the blues, and Coaches Fat Preston, and Emmett Cheek Ed Kinsler, Bud Carson and George Barclay guiding the Whites.

Drills Went Well

Everyone in football corner at Woollen Gym seems to think that overall, this year's practice has gone very well. Comparing with last year, Coach Hickey commented, 'I think that the overall spirit and desire is better. We have more strength at each position so the boys are having to fight hard for top spots. I think that this competition is the main feature of this year's practice."

Spring practice is designed to give the younger boys experience, and to experiment with combinations that might be used next season. The squads have been divided so that the younger and less experienced boys can work with the older ones.

Dark Horses

Looking at individuals, many dark horses have come into their own during practice and will be worth watching tomorrow. At tackle, a position that continually worried Tatum last year because of lack of depth, Phil Blazer and Don Redding have looked very good. Moose Butler, and Robbie Smith appear to be the answer for the depth problem next year.

Two holdouts last year, John Schroder and Fred Muller have been very impressive this spring. Schroder is starting for the blues in Buddy Payne's old position, left end, and Mueller is a starting blue guard.

One of the most outstanding freshmen so far has been Rip Hawkins. A starting Tar Baby guard last year, Hawkins has been shifted to center where he will start for the whites. Tar Baby fullbacks Frank Riggs, and Jim Rice have been shifted to ends where they will start for the whites.

GAME TO BE TELEVISED

WUNC-TV, Channel 4, will televise Carolina's Blue-White football game tomorrow, direct from Kenan Stadium.

This annual intra-squad game will wind up a month of off-season football practice for the Tar Heels. Eighteen lettermen as well as some promising new faces are expected to be scattered on opposing teams.

WUNC-TV remote cameras will bring the Blue-White football game to Channel 4 viewers beginning at 2 p.m.

Tar Babies Prepare For Season Opener

The freshman baseball squad is one of many athletic teams around the campus trying to fight off the cold weather and get into shape for the start of the season. The frosh play Durham High School here in practice gam today at 3:30.

Coach Pat Earey ,who guided the swimming team to an undefeated seasoned, has also taken the reins in freshman baseball. Because of the inclement weather, Earey has had his troubles in trying to get a really good look at his players.

The outstanding candidates for starting positions so far are: Angus Duff and Carol Bolick, c; John Sirott and George Boss, 1b; Fred Norton and John Blackwell, 2b; Tommy Kemp and Bud Ellerbe (football), ss; Clark Smith and Bob Wilson. 3b; Bob Chapman and Buck Morris rf,; Dee Fraly and Dick Hord, cf; and Jim Grimsley and Ski Olzewski, lf. First baseman Mike Widoff is lost through a broken leg sustained while sliding.

The team has a number of top-notch pitchers perhaps the strongest part of the team. They include Jerry McNeil, Hennie Seippley, Bob Stokes, Russ Hoke, Hom Gizzard, Wayne Allen, Phil Ridgon, and Bob Deaton.

The bad weather has kept the squad from scrimmaging, but it is still clear that there is a lot of potential power at the plate. The pitchers show good control, but the curve ballers haven't had a chance to do their stuff yet.

North-South Basketball Game To Be In Raleigh

RALEIGH—If basketball is a big man's game, the first annual North-South game here March 28 has enough tall and talented performers to please everyone.

The North squad, which will be coached by Joe Lapchick of St. John's, is a towering array of all-star talent which averages almost 6-feet-5 in height with scoring power to boot.

Coach Everett Case's South team average 6-feet-2½, which doesn't fall into the midget category by any means.

The North has three men in Jack Parr the 6-9 Kansas State husky, Tink Van Patton, a 6-8, 225-pounder from Temple, and Wayne Embry, a 6-8, 240-pounder from Miami of Ohio.

The shortest man on the Yankee team is guard Tom Garberina, a 6-1 sharp-shooter from LaSalle. Falling into the 6-3 group are Hal Greer of Marshall, Jack Quiggle of Michigan State and Rudy Finderson, a little All-American star from Brandeis.

Going up the height ladder at 6-4 are Don Ohl an All-Big Ten guard from Illinois, George Kline another All-Big Ten choice from Minnesota and Alen Bockhorn of Dayton.

The South's biggest caker is 6-10 Temple Tucker, an All-Southwest Conference pivotman from Rice. The shortest player is Tommy Kearns, the 5-11 pepper-pot from Carolina.

Between Tucker at 6-10 and Kearns at 5-11, are six-footer Whitey Bell of State, 6-1 Joe Hobbs of Florida, 6-2 Dom Flora Washington and Lee and Nick Davis of Maryland, 6-3 John Nacincik of Maryland, 6-5 Wendell Carr of Wake Forest and Pete Gaudin of Loyola of New Orleans, 6-6 Jim Newcome of Duke, and 6-7 Dave Keleher of Morehead State.

The North Squad will use Greer, Kline, Finderson and Bockhorn at forwards; Paar, Van Patton and Embry at center; and Quiggle Ohl and Garberina at guards.

Lining up for the South will be Nacincik, Newcome, Carr and Guadin in the front court; Tucker and Keleher at center; and Bell, Kearns, Davis, Hobbs and Flora at guards.

The teams arrive in Raleigh Wednesday afternoon and will work out twice Wednesday and twice Thursday. A short blackboard drill will occupy the squads Friday morning.

Tickets for the game are $3., $2.50 and $2. and are on sale at the Reynolds Coliseum Box Office.

NCAA Basketball

By DON WEISS

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Temple and Kansas State carry more impressive credentials and Seattle has its Elgin Baylor but folks hereabouts wonder if this won't be the weekend Kentucky bags its fourth national collegiate basketball championship.

The Wildcats 21-6, with more NCAA appearances 10 and more crowns 3 than any other college power, play streaking Temple 26-2. Tall and talented Kansas State 22-3 meets Seattle 22-5 in Friday's NCAA semifinals at 18,500-seat Freedom Hall.

Seats have long since been sold out for the two-day blue chip tournament windup that will determine Carolina's successor as national champion. With standing room, the crowd may number 21,000, making it the largest indoor basketball gathering in history.

Many of them will be filled by blue grass partisans — ready, willing and hoping to celebrate Kentucky's return to basketball's pedestal.

It has been seven years since Baron Adolph Rupp's Southeastern Conference perennials won their last national title, and even Coach Rupp wasn't sure he had a possible contender this year with a team he called longer on experience than talent.

Comes Spring

By The Associated Press

One of the worst winters in years bowed out Thursday with a final, nasty blow at the eastern seaboard. A storm swirled in from the Atlantic and dumped up to two feet of snow on coastal areas.

The wet snow and accompaning wind gusts of up to 75 m.p.h. wrough havoc with communication and powerlines. Washington had its worst power damage since the early 1940's. It even hit the white house.

Power failures forced the Pennsylvania Railroad to cancel all service —except commuter trains—out of New York's penn station. Trains and planes in many sections were running late or not at all.

MY CLOSEST SHAVE by Elgin Ciampi
Skin Diver, Shark Expert, Author

"My closest shave happened under water while baiting sharks to photograph," says shark expert Elgin Ciampi. "My speared bait-fish hid in a hole, pouring clouds of blood around me. Smelling blood, a 7-foot man-eater, unable to find the bait, rushed me. I dodged and started taking pictures. I kept the camera between us while the shark circled hungrily for five full minutes. Then my air supply ran short, so I used psychology: I lunged at the shark with my camera. Startled, he shot away—and so did I!"

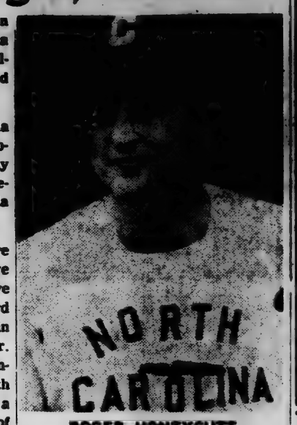
Play Twin Bill Today With Georgia; Rollins

WINTER PARK, Fla. (AP)—Veteran Charlie Aycock pitched the Carolina Tar Heels to a 5-3 victory over Rollins College here yesterday in a red hot pitchers duel.



The Tar Heels take on Georgia and a return bout with Rollins today in a double-header. They play Georgia again Saturday before returning home from sunny Florida and a 70 degrees temperature.

Aycock went seven innings before retiring in favor of fireman Dave Floyd. Aycock gave up only five hits, and struck our four. Floyd pitched no-hit ball during his skein on the mound, also striking out four.

Shortstop and Captain Roger Honeycutt led the Carolina attack with two for three, one of which was a double, the only extra base blow of the contest. Vaughn Bryson, Tar Heel first-sacker, was the only other man to get over one hit in the hard-fought contest. Bryson had two for five.

Carolina never trailed throughout the game. The Heels drew first blood in the fourth when they put together two walks and three errors for their first two counters. They picked up two more in the seventh when they strung three singles together with a Rollins wild pitch. The insurance run came in the eighth.

Coach Walt Raab was very pleased with his team's performance as the squad is composed chiefly of inexperienced players and sophomores. Winning the season opener is always a big morale booster, especially for a young club like the Tar Heels.

For Whom Tolls Bell?

BELLEVILLE, Ill., March 21 (AP)—Three men who enlisted the aid of a passerby stole a 100-year-old church bell weighing more than a quarter of a ton.

Sid Berman, who told police he helped the men load the bell on a truck Wednesday night, said they told him they had purchased the bell from the Union Methodist Church.

The 600-pound white brass bell was valued at $1,000.

The bell stood on the church grounds and was to have been used as a memorial.

Army Claims

SINGAPORE, March 21 (AP)—The Indonesian army claimed today it had 300 rebels trapped against a lakeshore in North Sumatra and that rebel forces were being deeply whittled by death and desertion.

The revolutionary regime, on the other hand, announced over its radio at Bukittinggi that it had formed a fledgling navy and put it into action against a government blockade.

A rebel leader also charged that Soviet ships had arrived at Jakarta, capital of President Sukarno, with arms shipments for the government forces.

Living Costs

WASHINGTON, March 21 (AP) — The nation's living costs, moving contrary to the business decline, rose to another new record level in February.

The rise of two-tenths of one per cent from January in the government index represented the 16th time in 18 months that consumers' costs have angled up to a new peak.

Food, the main item of family budgets, again was the chief factor. This was due to continued bad crop weather in Florida and throughout much of the South—where most of the winter's fruit and vegetables are grown.

Valkyrie Sing Entry Deadline Is Extended

The deadline for the submission of entries in the Valkyrie sing has been extended to March 25. Any organization wishing to enter should send in an entry form to Peggy Funk at the Chi Omega House by this date.

According to Miss Funk, chairman of the Sing, the deadline for entries has been extended because of the delay in getting copies of the changes in the Sing to the various campus organizations. The changes are that there will be just one women's group, one men's group and a special group, instead of having sorority, women's dorms, fraternities, men's dorms and special groups divisions.

However, these major groups have been divided into musical skit and singing divisions. A cup will be awarded to the Winner of each division.

Prospective Jurors To Be Interviewed

The Honor System Commission urges all students who are interested in serving as a juror on either the Men's or Womens jury to come to the honor council room on the second floor of Graham Memorial for an interview.

Both men's and women's jury members will be interviewed by the seven member committee composed of Honor System Commission members.

All applicants should fill out application forms before coming to the interview. These forms can be obtained in the student government offices on the second floor of Graham Memorial.

Dates for interviews are Monday and Tuesday from 4:15-5:30 p.m. and 7:15-9 p.m.

LITTLE ROCK CRISIS

Ashmore Hits Coverage Of Racial Issue

By MARY ALYS VOORHEES

"The Little Rock school integration situation, which started out as a local issue, has been built by default of southern and national leadership into a national constitutional crisis."

This was the assertion of Editor Harry Ashmore of the Arkansas Gazette as he addressed an overflow audience in Carroll Hall yesterday.

Here for the Carolina Symposium, he went on to say that "the South's besetting problem is not the accommodation of the rising aspirations of its Negro people, difficult as they may be, but its inability to reduce the issue to rational terms.

"In slightly different terms, the same thing is true of the non-South, called upon now to translate its pious principles into action and blinking painfully over the mote in its own eye.

"There is a reason to wonder if our system of education has served us adequately when in its ultimate flowering it has produced a generation, north and south, that appears not only unable to grasp the implications of the race problem but unwilling to face it squarely.

Turning to his home state, he felt "Little Rock was simply the temporary focus of a great, continuing, and unresolved American dilemma which touches upon fundamental concepts of morality, of social change and of law. News coverage has concentrated on only the exposed portion of the iceberg; the great submerged mass remains uncharted.

Troubled Silence

Ashmore emphasized another side of the controversy: the substantial and silent mass of plain citizens—confused and deeply disturbed—who were caught between the committed and dedicated partisans. They were people who deplored desegregation and violence. They simply subsided into troubled silence.

Taking a swing at the Eisenhower administration, Ashmore criticized the President's failure, when defiance was mounting in the South to "use the great moral force of his office to persuade Southerners of the justice of the Supreme Court required of them" and to exercise the firm leadership after trouble developed.

People Unaware

"The American people are still not aware of what Little Rock really demonstrated—that not only did the administration have no plan to meet the crisis when it came, but even now, with all the bitter lessons before it, still has charted no effective course of action nor displayed any disposition to do so.

"It is clear that Southern leadership has no program and no policy except the negative one of delay at any price—and part of that price will be a steady deterioration of race relations not only in the South but in the nation at large.

"Just as the Little Rock story did not begin in Little Rock, it will not end there—whatever the ultimate fate of the eight children now remaining in Central High School."

Carter Calls For Work With NSA

Bob Carter, independent candidate for president of the student body, has called for a more extensive relationship between UNC and the rest of the student world through the United States National Students Association.

Carter expressed his position by saying:

"Student Government at UNC is presently a member of the larger body of U. S. students, the United States National Students Association.

"Our national dues to this organization are $155 a year. I do not feel that we at UNC are getting or trying to get all the benefits which are available for our use through the SSA.

"Student government shiuld take advantage of this opportunity and work much more closely with the NSA than it has in the past in order to acquire advice and information.

"The majority of this work would be done through the NSA coordinator but I feel that the president of the student body should see that the coordinator does his job well.

"Student Government at UNC also needs to be aware of its responsibility as a leader among the universities and colleges in the South, as well as in the nation and in the world.

"We are looked to by other schools for leadership in such areas as student government, academics, race relations and student-administration relations.

"I feel that I am aware of this need and as student body president I would try to fulfill this responsibility to other students and I think the effect of such action would strengthen and cause our local student organization to grow to greater heights."

Career In Librarianship Is Topic For Talk Here

"Librarianship as a Career" will be the topic of a panel discussion held for seniors in the Library Assembly Room Thursday, March 27, at 4 p.m.

This program is for the information of seniors who do not have definite vocational plans. However, all interested persons are welcome to attend. The panel discussion will last one hour and will be followed by refreshments.

Since the shortage of librarians rivals the shortage of teachers in acuteness, it has been pointed out that there is much to learn about opportunities for advancement in the library profession.

Three speakers will explain opportunities in the various types of libraries: Dr. Jerrold Orne, University librarian, for university and college libraries; Miss Myrl Ebert, medical librarian, for special libraries; and Miss Margaret Kalp, associate professor of library science, for school and public libraries.

The question, "how do I become a qualified librarian," will be answered by Robert Miller, assistant profesor of library. Isaac T. Littleton, assistant University librarian, will moderate the panel and remark on library administration.

Les Petites Musicales To Present Concert

Les Petites Musicales will present concert pianist Lily Keleti Sunday night at 8 p.m. in Hill Hall.

Miss Keleti, professor of piano at the University of Ohio, performed here last summer for the Music Department to a capacity crowd.

The Petites Musicales is sponsored by Graham Memorial Activities Board. The performance is open to the public without charge.

The pianist has appeared in many cities in Europe, both as a recitalist and soloist with leading orchestras. She has also made appearances on the principal radio stations in Budapest, Vienna, Berlin and Paris.

Miss Keleti is Hungarian by birth. She first studied at the Royal Academy of Budapest under Sekely and Lee Weiner, and later under Izadore Philippe of Paris.

The famous pianist came to the U. S. in 1952, and was engaged successively by Liberty College in West Virginia and the University of Portland, Ore., as a piano teacher.

She has performed as a soloist with the Wheeling, Wa Va., Symphony and recently played the Tchaikowsky Piano Concerto No. 1 with the Ohio Symphony.

The program will include the Liszt Sonata in B minor, the Haydn Andante, Variations in F minor, Chopin's Impromptu in F sharp major and the Delibes-Dohnany "Naila Valse."

Goldsmith Urges More Executive Leadership

Stronger student government executive leadership was urged Friday by Al Goldsmith, University Party candidate for president of the student body.

He cited the University's need for a new student union, gymnasium and class rooms as examples of more forceful action on the president's part.

In his statement to The Daily Tar Heel Goldsmith said:

"Strong and forceful leadership is greatly needed in the executive office of Student Government. Our University is growing with rapid strides—both in enrollment and in area, but our facilities are not keeping pace with the growth.

"We need desperately a new student union, a new gymnasium and new classroom facilities, but we will not make any progress in getting these unless more forceful action is taken, especially, by the executive branch of student government.

"We can cry forever from the offices of Graham Memorial that these things are needed, but I do not believe that this alone is forceful enough. What is needed is a president who will go out sand work as a representative of the student body for these improvemnts.

"Our of the immediate needs is a new student union. Graham Memorial is entirely inadequate for our present student body, and consequently there is a lack of office space and a lack of a good place for students to take dates.

"There needs to be a nice place for a dorm man to entertain his date and a student union should provide this. I will, if elected, work constantly—even go to Raleigh to meet with members of the State Legislature—to help get a new student union.

"The office of president is more than a great honor ,it is a challenge to go outside of Graham Memorial and get things done.

Candidates' Meet Set Monday Night

A compulsory meeting for all candidates for the spring election will be held Monday at 8 p. m. in Gerrard Hall.

Bob Furtado, chairman of the Elections Board, will read the elections law to all candidates. Candidates for student body offices and the editorship of The Daily Tar Heel will be allowed a short time to address the group and state their views.

Harry Ashmore:

South's Negative View On School Integration Harms Race Relations

By DAVIS YOUNG

Editor Harry Ashmore of the Arkansas Gazette said today the South's "negative policy on school integration" will result in a "steady deterioration" of race relations throughout the United States.

Ashmore appeared at a press conference at Gerrard Hall along with Benjamin Fine, Weil Lecturer yesterday afternoon.

Commenting on the coverage given to the Little Rock situation by both Time and Life Magazines, Ashmore said, "They didn't really present an accurate picture of the events taking place. Time tends to crowd so much into so little space that their articles tend to become editorials instead of news stories.

"They missed the boat in Little Rock. Time did a real hatchet job on Governor Faubus that I must agree with though."

Queried as to significance of the Little Rock episode he went on to say, "It is one of the greatest tragedies ever. Once Faubus called out the militia, Ike had no choice. However, the situation could have been avoided in the beginning.

Stirred Up Violence

"City officials were under the opinion that the situation could be controlled by local authorities." He went on to indicate that the Governor had attempted to stir up violence that need not have existed

Fine generously praised Ashmore for his stand on the Little Rock crisis, saying that "I don't know of any editor in the country who has the courage of Harry Ashmore." He respected the fact that Ashmore had risked his standing and position for what he believed in.

Threatened

Ashmore later admitted to having been threatened at various times, but dismissed the threats as having originated from "crackpots." He also stated that many people in Little Rock had organized a boycott of his paper which had been quite successful in cutting the circulation.

In answer to a question from the floor, Fine stated that he felt that "integration is a Northern as well as a Southern problem."

Ashmore concluded his remarks on Little Rock by saying "before last fall, the situation racially speaking was the best that I had seen in the South. However, tensions are now greater there than ever."

Public Forum Slated For Presidential Hopefuls

The Campus Christian Council is to sponsor a question and answer forum for student government presidential candidates.

The forum will be open to the public and all students have been urged to attend.

All three presidential candidates will be available to answer questions on their policies. The purpose of the forum is to raise questions that in the past elections have not been raised or have been ignored.

The forum will be held in Gerrard Hall Thursday, March 27, from 7:30-9:30 p.m.

Gardner Presentation Set Tonight

The Oliver Max Gardner Award will be presented to a member of the Consolidated University faculty tonight in Raleigh. The award is given to the faculty member that has contributed the most to the welfare of the human race in the past year.

Presentation will be made after the awards dinner in the College Union on the campus of State College. The award consists of an annual income from a trust of $25,000.

Oliver Max Gardner is a former governor of North Carolina. He also was ambassador to the Congress of St. James.

Gardner established the award in 1949.

Gardner said the award should go "to that member of the faculty of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, who, during the current scholastic year, has made the greatest contribution to the welfare of the human race".

Y Conference Attended By 36

The annual YM-YWCA Spring Conference whose theme was "Tour Through The Wilds Of Creation" was attended by approximately 36 students. Through the exploration of the fields of art, music, drama, and literature, an attempt was made to help today's college student gain a better understanding of himself and the world about him.

First, a critical examination of the world through painting was made.

A reading of Koestler's "Darkness at Noon" inspired a more realistic view of the beliefs which today's college student holds.

The belief that out of chaos comes faith and unity was expressed by a dramatic presentation of Paton's "Cry, The Beloved Country."

An final worship service, which included a modern dance to sum up the significance of each field of creation, concluded the Conference.

Plans were made for the Y luncheon yesterday in Lenoir Hall.

STUDENT FELLOWSHIP

The United Student Fellowship will have its regular Sunday meeting at the United Church of Christ on West Cameron Avenue. After a supper at 6 p.m. Sterling Whitener will show slides on Hong Kong from 7-8 p. m.

UNC Physicist Receives Grant As Sloan Fellow

A Carolina physicist, Dr. Rolfe E. Glover III, has been named as an Alfred P. Sloan Research Fellow by the Slian Foundation of New York City in connection with his studies in low temperature physics.

Dr. Glover will receive an "unrestricted" grant of $21,000 to support basic research which will be performed here. Dr. E. D. Palmatier, chairman of the Physics Department, anounced the selection of Dr. Glover.

The grant will permit Dr. Glover to expand and enlarge his efforts in basic research, and he will in the next two years use the funds to advance his studies, with the aid of graduate assistants that the funds will enable him to hire. He will also be able to acquire additional supplies and materials for his research projects.

The Alfred P. Sloan grant is "unrestricted" and given with the general objective to encourage research by outstanding young faculty members at recognized colleges and universities who wish to carry on fundamental researches in mathematics, chemistry and physics, but are hampered by lack of funds.

Award winners are known as Alfred P. Sloan Research Fellows. In making the award to Dr. Glover and to others in 44 colleges and universities of the nation, Sloan said, "In this program the Foundation is trying to make a significant contrbution to the support of basic scientific research in America."

Dr. Glover has been studying the superconducting behavior of thin metal films for the past four years. Such films have recently been found to have special application in highspeed computer memory elements. They have also been used in radiation detectors.

SYMPOSIUM

Fine Urges Raises For Educators

The nation needs "educational statesmanship" which can be obtained by cooperation of the press, educators and the public, it was declared last ight by Dr. Benjamin Fine, dean of the graduate school of education at Yeshiva University. Dr. Fine delivered the second of the 1958 Weil Lectures here. .

"Educational statesmanship calls for a three-way partnership between a responsible press, an alert educational profession and an informed public," Dean Fine asserted.

Salaries of school teachers ought to be tripled, with a range of $10,000 to $20,000 annually per teacher, if the "dangerous teacher bottleneck" is not solved in America, Fine stated. To get the best brains in teaching and put 500,000 additionally needed teachers and professors in the classrooms, salaries of educators will have to be equal to salaries of engineers, doctors, scientists and businessmen, he said.

Fine said the present teacher training institutions in the nation, many of them at odds with liberal arts institutions, "need revamping." May of the teachers colleges "are weak and entirely inadequate," said Fine. "The number should be cut in half. And then perhaps half again. That would leave 500 strong, unified teachers colleges or schools of education. Education would be strengthened. The profession would be enhanced. The weak sisters would be forced out, leaving the field open for those remaining."

Dean Fine deplored the "aping of the Soviet philosophy of education" by over-emphasis on sciences since sputnik. The nation needs scientists, he said, but not at the expense of a balanced education.

"The present plan to improve education by offering a handful of science scholarships, or by tapping the superficial or peripheral aspects of American education are totally inadequate," he said. "To get better scientists, or better social scientists, we must start at the beginning. To get a good corps of scientists, I would start at the first grade. I would develop a sound system of elementary education. I would then strengthen the high school program. Our high schools are the weakest link in our educational system. By the time a student reaches college he should have a good, sound background in the arts, the sciences and basic educational courses."

North Carolina: Leading State In The Southland

You can listen to a man like Harry Ashmore and experience the feeling deep down in of a love for North Carolina that you never realized even existed before.

You can hear this gallant newspaper editor talk of desegregation and the ugly effects it has had throughout the south, and thank God for North Carolina and what it stands for.

And even though you know that all is not yet right, you can share with the rest of his nation the feeling of fairness through relative liberalism which distinguishes the Tar Heel state among the nation.

Here we have freedom. Here university students can assemble in a public forum to hear about and to discuss the biggest problem facing our nation on the domestic front today. Here liberals and conservatives meet on common ground, because both groups respect the rights of others, and place these rights above their personal sentiments.

Maybe that is why North Carolina is the foremost leader of southern states. Perhaps that is why, above all others, we have earned the respect of a nation torn between sectionalism and universal individual rights.

We wonder, after hearing Mr. Ashmore's timely address, if the south is not cutting off its nose to spite her face—if she is not dampering freedoms of the many to curtail the freedoms of the few.

In Missisippi, Mr. Ashmore noted, new voting requirements have been instituted which obviously are directed at limiting the Negro ballot. But at the same time, these requirements also could put the reins on the white vote.

At a southern college, a liberal Quaker not only was forced to cancel a scheduled address, but in turn the college's board of trustees coerced the administration into taking an oath to support segregation at the institution.

And this type of action is occurring all through the south. We are robbing our people from one state to the next of democratic privileges in a frenzied attempt to hold down the exercise of freedoms which our national constitution guarantees.

In the end, the south can only be the loser. In the end, we can only be so entangled by legislation against minority groups that the web will be weaved for the corrupt political dominance of the various institutions within our state governments.

We all have heard about restrictions against the right to public assembly. We know universally that among man's most basic rights is that right to freedom of speech and thought. And we know that any effort to curb the expression of any group is in complete defiance of what our constitution guarantees.

In the south, all these privileges are being abridged. In the south, democracy has given way to demagoguery and the impassioned bitterness of a few is contributing to the downfall of a nation—because that nation stands on and is responsible to equality.

And we turn to North Carolina. We are making strides forward. We are earnestly attempting to travel the pathway to desegregation which all admit is marked by hardships and trying times. Yet we are moving in a forward direction.

North Carolina is known for her liberalism, has been known for her liberalism since the days of early colonization when she was a refuge to the religiously abused. In that light we are blessed by an asset the magnitude of which can hardly be judged in the breadth of our history.

Let us hope that the Tar Heel state will remain a liberal state. Let us hope that ever more she will be judged for her respect of all and the discrimination of none. Let us hope that not one citizen is denied his right to free thought and public expression.

Let us, in a word, hope that North Carolina continues in the tradition which has made her the guiding light of all the southern states.

Election Laws Due For Change

A major fallacy now exists in elections laws which the student legislature should take into consideration immediately after the April 1 elections.

Specifically, we refer to the practice of selecting The Daily Tar Heel editor on basis of popular vote and not by a majority of the electorate.

Take, for instance, the situation which currently exists on the campus. Five candidates are seeking the Tar Heel post, and all any one of them has to do is to get more votes than any of the other single candidates to win.

Thus, candidate A could win the editor's chair with scarcely more than 20 per cent of the total vote. That is because no runoff provisions now apply to this particular election.

In other student government races, however, runoff provisions do exist. For instance, in a three-way race for student body president a candidate must win a majority of the vote to gain the office which he seeks.

When no majority vote is realized on the first ballot, a runoff is held between the two candidates with the most votes in the first election and the top man in this second election then wins the presidency.

This same practice should apply in the election for Daily Tar Heel editor. For we believe that no person should be placed in office on gaining only 21 per cent of the total vote, and the student body generally doubtless will concur.

The implications of the current practice will probably be seen in the coming elections. It will be interesting to see on what percentage of the total vote your next year's Tar Heel editor will be chosen.

Just between you and us, we hope it's by more than 21 per cent.

WISE & OTHERWISE

Election Time: Writer Views '58 Candidates

By WHIT WHITFIELD

This spring a new horde of editorial candidates has appeared on the scene.

The Editorial Selections Board (Court of Star Chamber) is unable to stem the tide. The Selections Board may or may not deem a candidate qualified, but this is no stop-gap, for those candidates who are deemed unqualified will doubtless run anyway. And one of the surest ways to get elected on this campus is to run independent of any sponsorship by a campus organization.

At the last unofficial count there were 93 candidates, each of whom is the most capable, interested, and highly qualified.

The two most recent aspirants who have thrown their proverbial hats in to the ring are Norman Nurd and Bridgette Borden.

Norman is not sure of his major as he is just a sophomore on campus. He eats regularly and wears clothes with remarkably regularity. He likes blue, regardless of the color.

Norman was associate editor of his high school newsletter, and is presently serving as a feature writer on his fraternity newspaper. Other than that he has no exeprience in newspaper work.

This is an advantage for him (or so he says) for " a person with no training is able to better ascertain the problems which confront a student newspaper."

Bridgette is a junior phys-ed Major from Bear Trap. She is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Kappa Beta Phi etc., ad infinitum. (All honoraries).

Her campaign statement follows in part:

"Should I receive the affirmative mandate of the student body, I will endeavor to incorporate into the pages of the Daily Tar Heel sound principles of ethical journalism, carrying forth the great traditions established by John Peter Zenger, Joseph Pulitzer, William Randolph Hearst, and Drew Pearson.

"As I see it, my intellectual capacities will permit me to assume unequivocal leadership in the role of editor of the Daliy Tar Heels."

"I will make no rash promises; in fact, I will make no promises at all, but I will say this, that no promises are better than some a tall."

Readers Disagree With Gans

Mr. Gans,

I trust that your article of the 15th advocating cash payment to student help in Lenoir Hall was written in the interest of the student worker and not as a result of any political aspirations you might entertain. This being true, I would suggest that you investigate your proposition and determine its full affect on the income of the average self-help student. You stated in your article that "A compromise last year seems to have made a dead issue this year." You're right. The issue is dead, and it's dead simply because most of us are satisfied with things as they are. Here's why.

Most of us work during the summer and earn enough to pay at least a part of our way through school, averaging $600 to $700 a summer. This means that we must pay federal income tax at the rate of 20% on any additional cash we make during the school months. The prospect of paying from $80 to $90 income taxes out of our present earnings is far from attractive. Allowing for the automatic 10% deduction given by the federal government, it would still be necessary for our pay rate to be increased about 23% from 76c an hour to 93c an hour in order for us to net 76c an hour and break even. Such an increase is highly unlikely.

You may have a point when you say that the student gets not benefit from what he saves by eating the 40c special—but not a good one. If, for example, a student saved 18% of his meal tickets he would have two alternatives other than going to summer school. He could either quit work his final semester and pay for his meals with his savings or continue to save his tickets until he graduated and then turn them in for cash. However, if he were paid in cash he would be forced to save 18% and would get on direct benefit because the government would take this much in taxes.

Of course some students don't make enough in the summer to pay taxes. These are the students who should be working in the library, Graham Memorial, and the other places where cash is paid. Lenior Hall is one of few places where the sutdent can get a tax break; so before you attempt to bring to life a dead issue, at least check to see if a majority will benefit from any changes.

—LaFontine Odom

Mr. Gans:

In your Saturday column you devoted your attentions to the so-called "evils" of the meal ticket system by which Lenior Hall student employees are paid. You seemed to believe it would be to the workers' advantage to receive cash payment rather than meal tickets. We would like to point out a few fallacies in your arguments.

First and most important, Mr. Gans, the payment of cash to the average Lenoir Hall worker would lift his annual income so that he would be required to pay some or more income tax. To offset this increased tax payment, the worker would need a 20% increase in his income. No income tax payment is required under the meal ticket system.

May we pose this question? How many Lenoir Hall workers did you actually consult before writing your editorial, Mr. Gans? Does your editorial really reflect the views of the students who work in Lenoir Hall? We think not.

Next, if you had bothered to check the facts, sir, you would have found that there are many self-help jobs available on campus and none of the students are forced to work in Lenoir Hall.

Finally, Mr Gans, does not your candidacy for editor of The Daily Tar Heel have an influence upon your sudden change from an aloof parliamentarium to a sympathetic humanitarian? I believe you will find being a good politician is not always compatible with being a good journalist. We, the undersigned, are all workers at Lenoir Hall and definately are opposed to the cash payment plan suggested by Mr. Gans.

In Russia, They Drink Their Vodka 'Straight'

By DAVIS YOUNG

In an exclusive two-hour interview with Ergeni A. Zaostrovsten, second secretary of the Soviet Embassy in Washington, D. C., this correspondent was filled in on the basic concepts of Russian education and its present functions.

Zaostrovsten is by profession a lawyer and a graduate of the Institute of International Law in Moscow. He has been in this country for six months and prior to his present assignment, he was a professor in one of the larger Russian universities.

I first contacted him at a press conference held on this campus on Tuesday afternoon featuring Senator John Sparkman, Malcolm Cowley and Sergei Striganov. At the termination of this event, we adjourned to his room at the Carolina Inn for a most informative and educational stay.

He informed me that in the Soviet Union children start to school at the age of seven and must continue for as many years. At the end of this period, they are subjected to a battery of examinations and comprehensive aptitude tests to determine the vocation for which they are most suited.

They then proceed to study for three more years in a more specialized atmosphere. The end of this period corresponds with graduation from an American high school.

The student is then ready for one of the free state universities. He may choose any that he likes and will spend much time looking at schools before deciding. The grading scale in all high schools runs from five, through one and if a student has maintained all fives and fours, he is eligible for a scholarship amounting to 10,000 rubles or 110 American dollars a month. This will cover all of his expenses.

The first semester of college runs from September until January, when a fifteen-day vacation is granted from the labors of academic training. If a student is far from home or without parents, the state will send him to a special student's rest home for this period, where he will make contact with other students.

The second semester starts in February and runs until the middle of June. While in school a student is expected to attend four hours of lecture each day as well as a two-hour seminar. After this he must prepare at home for the next day.

During the course of study, a student will become well versed in all phases of science as well as his native language, a foreign language (often English), the Russian Constitution and Russian and European history.

In 1956, 1,800,000 young Russian students were enrolled in institutions of higher learning. An additional 200,000 will enter this year to swell the ranks of the country's 800 colleges and universities.

Aside from this tremendous interest, there are over 4,000 specialized schools in the Soviet Union today. Since 1941, the Russians have trained over 8,000,000 men to work in the field of transportation alone.

Zaostrovsten said that every student is also guaranteed a job after graduation. However, he is not forced to take this job. If he doesn't he may seek employment on his own. Another point of interest was the fact that of the 20,000 students now enrolled in Moscow State University, 16,000 are enrolled in the college of sciences.

Commenting on the impact of this year's Carolina Symposium Zaostrovsten called it a useful program. He said, "it is a good way for students to know more of their own country as well as those of others.

"It will help those who participate immensely. This program should create a drive and ambition in students to study harder and to seek the answers to their questions."

Concerning the launching of a Vanguard missile by the U. S. Navy on Tuesday, he called it an "outstanding American scientific achievement."

As a parting shot he commented on American Vodka. He said, "it's good, but we like to drink it straight at home."

THE EDITORIAL VIEW:

Viewpoints And Ideas Basic To Symposium

The University of North Carolina has been described as the "citadel of the southern mind" and throughout its illustrious history it has repeatedly demonstrated that the description is an apt one.

"The Carolina symposium on public affairs," in progress on the campus this week, is a type of activity which has served to spread the reputation of the University far beyond the borders of the state which is its main support.

This symposium carries out one of the principal functions of a forum worthy of the name. It presents divergent viewpoints. It offers speakers whose tones range from the drawl of an Alabama senator to the halting accents of a Russian diplomat.

Such forums are all too few. The practical scientists may develop the artificial moons, but it will be the political and social scientists who determine whether these moons reflect hope or serve as signs of impending disaster.

It is reassuring to the legions of alumni and admirers of the University of North Carolina to have this fresh illustration that the campus in Chapel Hill is still a market place for ideas, popular and unpopular alike.

Such intellectual commerce is as essential to the life of North Carolina — the South and the world—as is the trade in more tangible commodities. Out of it comes the broadened understanding that must be the prelude to peace—and survival—Charlotte Observer.

Candidate Ann Frye Outlines Plans For Tar Heel Reportorial Staffing

Ann Frye, candidate for editor of The Daily Tar Heel, issued a statment Friday in which she discussed the reportorial organization of the newspaper:

"The Daily Tar Heel at the present time offers no salary to its reporters, and the reporters are the 'backbone' of the paper. Since they represent the foundation of the Tar Heel, the editor must meet two problems pertaining to them: keeping the staff interested enough to stay on the paper without pay and teaching them principles of good journalism.

"In the first place, as I have noted this year, there are two types of individuals who will stay on the Tar Heel staff all year: those who are interested in obtaining an executive position or those few who are genuinely interested in getting all the experience possible prior to a career in journalism. These represent only a few persons, however.

Turnover

"Other staff members come from journalism classes that require three weeks work on the Tar Heel. Some of these people stay on longer, but usually there is a regular turnover every three weeks.

"The first type of staffer will stay on without pay during the year, but the second type, as I have indicated, usually will not. To keep more people on the staff, I can see only one possible practical solution: that is, that these people be given news assignments which challenge their ability and, when completed, give them the satisfaction of real achievements. The carrying out of this solution rests with a good editor whose judgment would lead him, among other things, to appoint a good, alert news editor.

Journalism Students

"I am in Journalism School and understand the attitude of those persons in news writing courses who are under the three weeks Tar Heel work requirement. In my capacity as assistant news editor, I met these people and saw their indifference to the Tar Heel upon being assigned uninteresting and minor news articles.

"If elected editor, I feel that I have had the contact with the staff retention problem to try this one practical solution I can see.

"The Tar Heel would be useless if the people working for it did not get as much out of it as they put into it. The staff should learn something from their work on the Tar Heel.

Whitley Names Myers Head Of Campaign

John Whitley candidate for editor of The Daily Tar Heel, announced Friday that Bob Myers, senior journalism major associated with the Sports Publicity Department, will be his manager for the campaign.

Whitley said that he regrtted that the Bi-Partisan Selections Board had not endorsed him as a candidate for The Daily Tar Heel editorship, but he did not look upon his not having worked on the staff as a serious handicap.

He added:

"I regret that the Editorial Selections Board did not choose to endorse me as a candidate for the editorship of The Daily Tar Heel because of the fact that I had not been a staff member of the campus newspaper.

"Although I regard the board as qualified to judge editorial candi dates, I feel I am qualified to give the student body the top-notch paper which it deserves considering my other experience."

Not Serious Drawback

Whitley said that he did not look upon not having worked on the staff as a serious drawback. "In my other experience, which includes three years in publication work and four years in the printing industry," continued Whitley, "I worked one year as a part-time rewrite man for the High Point Enterprise, during which time I became well acquainted with the city daily system.

"Actually the campus newspaper employs a system very similar to the above-mentioned, and rightly so," he added, "for the staff members of the Tar Heel very shortly will be seeking positions with larger newspapers, and the experience gained here will be invaluable to them."

Should Be Energetic

Whitley pointed out that he thought a capable editor should be energetic and be well acquainted even with the smallest element in the operations. He added, however, that the editor should not dominate the newspaper to such an extent as to antagonize staff members.

"The editor should remember at all times," stated Whitley, "that one major purpose of the campus newspaper is to offer an opportunity for students interested in journalism to apply their knowledge to practical working situations, and that harmony in the front office provides for a better newspaper."

Gans: DTH Editor Should Provoke Thought Here

Curtis Gans, candidate for editor of The Daily Tar Heel, announced yesterday that he felt that the editorial page of The Daily Tar Heel "ought to provoke opinion."

Gans added, "A newspaper can provoke opinions without being irresponsible. Any newspaper has a responsibility to the facts, and an editor need not create controversy, since there are many controversies latent in the University right now."

"One has only to look at the student aid situation, the low faculty salaries, the rising cost of room rent, the ultra-slow progress towards a coliseum-armory, the lack of foresight with regard to married student housing, the high prices in Chapel Hill ,the slowly decreasing status of the UNC library, and some social regulations, to realize that there are plenty of controversies latent in UNC.

Editor's Responsibility

"The editor has a responsibility to comment on these. He has a responsibility to bring out the facts of these situations, and to try and stimulate student participation in the newspaper."

"The editorial policies must be based on fact, and hence the news department of the paper should undertake studies on various aspects of campus life."

"The editor also has a responsibility of placing the UNC campus in its perspective with the world. He must bring the UNC campus up to date on major developments on the national and international scene."

World News

"However, the newspaper is primarily a student paper and should not be cluttered up with international news, when there is plenty of news on campus.

"The best policy to have with national and international news is to print only that international news that has a chance to be treated editorially."

"Moreover, the editor should not devote more than 50 per cent of his editorial columns throughout the year to international news. His primary function is to cover the campus adequately."

"The Daily Tar Heel can be an interesting and provocative newspaper without being irresponsible.

"I feel I can make The Daily Tar Heel this type of paper—the best college paper."

Smith Dorm Holds Annual Dance

A touch of spring and old Ireland prevailed Friday night in Smith Dormitory which held its annual dance from nine until one.

Doyle Craven's combo furnished music for the "Shamrock Shuffle" and additional entertainment was provided by Miss Jo Carpenter, who performed a dance to the music of "Brazil."

Refreshments were served later in the evening to the girls and their dates and guests of the administration.

Fay Jenny of Charlotte was in charge of the dance arrangements, which featured a Saint Patrick's Day theme.

Kappas Elect Scholarship Chairman

Cynthia Daley of Charleston, W. Va., has been elected scholarship chairman of the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority. The Kappas completed the election of their officers Wednesday night.

On Thursday night the Betas played host to the Kappas at a dinner and informal get-together, followed by an evening of dancing at the house.

KAs Party At Beach

This past weekend the KAs and their dates took advantage of the warm weather, packed up and headed for the seashore. On Friday afternoon, about 1 o'clock, approximately 100 KAs and their dates left Chapel Hill and traveled to Pawley's Island, S. C., for a weekend beach party.

The group took Nick Kerns and his combo along to entertain them during the trip. Dick Stoker, Johnny Lomax and Hoke Simpson went along to help Nick liven up the festivities with a few of the latest "rock and roll" hits.

Friday night the group held a ship wreck party in the beach pavilion where pirate, nautical, middy, and calypso costumes pervaded the atmosphere.

Chaperones for the events were Mrs. James B. Connell of Henderson; Mr. and Mrs. Nick Kerns of Chapel Hill; Mr. and Mrs. Freddy Bardin of Wilson and Mr. and Mrs. Harold McCain of Raleigh.

Tired and slightly sunburned, the group returned to Chapel Hill about 6 o'clock Sunday evening.

snow damage was the worst in 40 years. The area was placed under a state of emergency as the storm cut everyday life to a crawl.

More than 40 deaths were attributed to the storm in eight eastern states. Victims died of heart attacks, exposure, electrocution and traffic accidents.

Government weather forecasters, caught short in advance predictions of the storm's severity, were hopeful it would blow itself out over the Gulf of Mexico by Saturday.

More than 1½ million homes and business establishments were without electricity from Virginia to Maine. Many were without heat, lights, cooking facilities, radios, elevators and other electrical devices.

Not Color

RALEIGH, March 21 (AP)—Assistant Labor Secretary J. Ernest Wilkins told Negro students here today qualifications rather than color will determine who gets the jobs in the future.

Wilkins, the highest ranking Negro in the federal government, spoke to a Shaw University assembly, urging the students to concentrate on science and math rather than "snap" courses.

(This is the third in a series of 5 articles on Carolina's four senior cagers—Ed's Note)

'I'll Never Regret My Choice'—Roy Searcy

Roy Searcy is a friendly, serious minded young man who loves basketball. The Draper, N. C. native entered Carolina four years ago along with Bobby Cunningham, Pete Brennan, Tommy Kearns and Joe Quigg. Roy too was interested in playing basketball for Frank McGuire.

Roy's a senior now and the record boks show that he never got to play a whole lot of the game he loves. But he's anything but bitter about it and as he puts it "if I had it to do over I'd make the same choice."

Searcy spent the majority of his time on the bench watching his teammates win the glory. That doesn't seem like such a happy way to spend four years, but Roy is sincerely philosophical about it.

"You can never realize," he says, "how much you can learn just being associated with men like Coach McGuire and others whom I've come in contact with here. I have gained an awful lot of realistic experience here that I don't believe I would have ever gotten anywhere else.

I've played basketball with a great bunch of fellows and that has meant a great deal," Roy continued. "It has been wonderful just being a small part of the group which won 89 and lost only 14 in the last four years." Roy was referring to his four senior sidekicks (although Quigg was out this season) who were instrumental in acheiving such a record for Carolina basketball.

Accent A Little Tough To Understand

Has the fact that most of his teammates here have been Northern boys ever really bothered Roy?

"Certainly not," he says. "Oh, for the first year it was a little tough because I had to re-adjust but after that I got along just fine. I became very close to the boys and there was never any barrier between us."

Searcy recalls back at the beginning of his freshman year when he and Brooklyn born Brennan along with now departed Charlie Adams of Cary, N. C. went out for lunch together "Pete was trying to be a nice guy," smiles Roy," and while we were sitting at the table he said something to us which we couldn't understand. I thought he was speaking to Charlie and Charlie thought he was speaking to me. As it turned out, we just looked at each other and laughed like heck. I couldn't understand Pete's accent for a while, he grinned; "now I understand every word he says."

You Know You Gotta Fall Back

Searcy, like the rest of the seniors, considers the NCAA title in 1956-57 his biggest thrill in basketball.

"I didn't get to play much but I think I was just as happy as anybody on the club when we won that championship," he said. "I think my greatest moment came when Tommy (Kearns) through the ball up in the air in the final second of the Kansas game. We knew we had it then and the long, long haul to the top was over."

Roy paused a moment, then added: "This year was just an example of what I was saying about realistic experience. We went all the way to the top last year and it was a great feeling. We knew we had achieved the ultimate but it was also inevitable that we had to fall back a little bit. That's the way life goes and it's through things like this that you can learn a lot whether you're on the court or on the bench."

Searcy agrees with Brennan and Cunningham that Wilt Chamberlain is the best college player he saw in his four years here." I think Chamberlain is about the greatest around today," said Roy.

Plans To Attend Law School

Searcy will get his BS in Industrial Relations in June and would like to go to law school next year. He says he's never thought much about coaching, although many agree that he'd make a good one. "I want to get that law degree more than anything else," he said.

Basketball is not in Roy Searcy's plans for the future. Undoubtedly he could have played much more at another school but he's not sorry he chose Carolina. Searcy will be a success in whatever he does because, over the course of the last four years, he's proven that you don't have to be in the thick of the battle to learn—it's been four great years for him.

Blue-White Game This Afternoon At 2

By DAVE WIBLE

Spring football practice will come to a close this afternoon at 2 o'clock in Kenan Stadium when the divided Tar Heels meet head on in the Annual Monogram Club sponsored Blue-White game.

The game will be a regulation affair with special half-time ceremonies. The Blue-White Queen will be crowned, and Monogram Club President Giles Gaca will present the Carolina Coach of the Year trophy to the year's most outstanding coach.

After 19 days of "very successful" practice, Tar Heel head coach Jim Tatum is looking foreward to today's game and the results it will bring. "This is one game that I'm always confident we will win," Tatum commented. "Come to think of it though, we could tie."

Turning to the more serious side Tatum said, "Although we realize the importance of defense, we hope the offense will do a lot of scoring. After touchdowns we won't kick. We want to try for the two points instead of one, and see how it works."

Tatum's referring to the new rule which gives a team two points if it runs or passes, and only one if it kicks for an extra point. After a touchdown, the ball is now placed on the three rather than the two-yard line as before.

Coaches for the Blues will be Ed Hickey, Pat Preston, and Emmett Cheek. Ed Kinsler, Bud Carson and George Barclay will handle the Whites. Tatum will use his talent where it is most needed.

Fans will have an opportunity to preview next season's Tar Heels from every angle. The squads have been divided with care so that all the players will have a chance to show their stuff. Experience leans to the Blues, which has last season's starting backfield in its favor, althuogh it is spread over two units.

Jack Cummings, who proved to be one of the conference's top passers last season will be the quarterback for the Blues. Jim Schuler will be His left halfback with Danny Droze toting from the right. Don Coker, a converted halfback will have the fullback chores. The second Blue backfield unit will consist of Henry Clements at quarterback, Emil Decantis and Daley Goff at the halfback posts, and Ed Lipski at fullback. Goff, Schuler, and Lipski all started with Cummings last season.

The Whites will be led by quarterback Nelson Lowe. Tatum wanted to hold Lowe out last season but the loss of Dave Reed and Curtis Hathaway forced him to be used in the last two games. Lowe will be working with Wade Smith and Sonny Folckomer as halfbacks, and fullback Don Shupin. Russ Hollers will handle the second unit with Lenny Beck, Roy Wall, and Conrad Sloop.

Several key players will miss today's game because of injuries. Curtis Hathway, who suffered a broken arm last seaso, will be out along with Don Kemper, Jerry Amos, and Jack Lineberger. This valuable quartet will be ready come next fall.

The game will televised by WUNC-TV direct from Kenan Stadium beginning at 2 o'clock.

Tar Heels Beat Rollins; Lose To Georgia In Twin Bill

Suger Ray Rated Well By Basilio

By JERRY LISKA

CHICAGO (AP) — Middleweight champion Carmen Basilio does not intend to make a mistake common to opponents of Sugar Ray Robinson the second time around. That's getting careless.

The stony-faced little guy who makes his first defense against Robinson, the man he dethroned, in the Chicago Stadium Tuesday night commented Friday:

"I know better than anybody else that last year Gene Fullmer went the distance and beat Robinson for the title and then got belted out in five in their rematch.

"And I know the same guy has never licked Robinson twice.

"Nobody can say he won't make mistakes in the heat of a fight, but all my training for this rematch has been concentrated on not getting careless.

"I know how hard Robinson can hit. I took some pretty good shots in that September bout in New York. But I learned a few things which may help me, depending on the pattern of the fight. Robinson says he learned something about me, too. So, there you are."

As far back as 1943, Robinson made a practice of learning his lessons well from his rare defeats. Sugar Ray had a record of 40 consecutive victories marred by 1 10-round loss to Jake La Motta. Robinson avenged that first defeat of his career a few weeks later with a 10-round verdict over Jake.

Softball Clinic

The Intramural Department has announced that its annual clinic for intramural softball officials will be held Monday and Tuesday afternoons at 4 o'clock in room 301-A Woollen Gym.

Anyone interested in officiating intramural softball is invited by the department to attend. The clinic is designed to orient officials with Carolina intramural rules. The officials will be paid for each game they work.

Honeycutt's Clutch Single Wins For Heels

WINTER PARK, Fla. (AP) — The Carolina Tar Heels snapped back from a shutout at the hands of the Georgia Bulldogs to whip host Rollins College in the second game of a double-header.

In the first game, the Tar Heel bats were silent throughout the contest as Georgia pitcher Bob Payne limited the Heels to but three hits. The Bulldogs scored all their runs in the third on three singles and a double by George Stover.

Roger Honeycutt's clutch single in the ninth inning brought home the winning run for Carolina in a hard fought game. The Tar Heels had evened the second game with two runs in the 7th on a double by Johnny Burgwyn and single by Carson Oldham and Alton Pons. In the ninth, Oldham walked and went to second on a fielder's choice. Honeycutt slammed a booming single to bring him home.

Dave Floyd relieved starter Ben Harding in the 7th after Rollins had gone ahead 4-2 and with two men on base. He worked out of trouble and pitched well the rest of the way.

Cincy Pitching Better

By JACK HAND

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—Cincinnati lives and dies by the home run. The Redleg thumpers knock the ball out of the park. Then the enemy sluggers blast off.

That sort of free trading often winds up in scores like 13-10 and 10-8 and bitter-frustration for a pitching staff, to say nothing of a manager.

General Manager Gabe Paul decided to do something about it after watching Cincinnati trundle home fourth in 1957, beaten 15 lengths. Gabe sacrificed some of his power by trading Wally Post to Philadelphia. In return he got Harvey Haddix, a cunning left-lefthander.

Bob Purkey was snared from Pittsburgh and the veteran Bill Wight from Baltimore. A careful gleaning of the farm crop brought an assortment of rookies. Willard Schmidt and two other young righthanders were acquired from St. Louis.

Famed Producer Mike Todd Perishes In Fiery Airplane Crash

GRANTS, N. M., March 22 (AP) —Famed Producer Mike Todd perished in flames early today with three others in the crash of his twin-engined airplane "The Liz," named for his actres wife Elizabeth Taylor.

The executive-type plane plunged with tremendous force, exploded and burned in the Zuni Mountains of Western New Mexico southwest of here at 2:05 A.M. (MST) in a storm.

One who died was a movie writer, Art Cohn, who was working on the story "The First Nine Lives of Mike Todd."

The secretary for the colorful and flamboyant 50-year-old producer of "Around the World in Eighty Days" said in Los Angeles that Todd, Cohn, 49, pilot Bill Verner, 45, and co-pilot Tom Barkley, 34, definitely were aboard. He had seen them off at Burdank at 10:41 P. M. (PST) yesterday.

But officers who made their way to the remote crash scene about 20 air miles southwest of this uranium mine-mill town said they could recover only what appeared to be parts of three bodies. Condition of the bodies made positive identification at least temporarily impossible.

Wife Collapses

Miss Taylor did not accompany her husband. She stayed at their West Coast home because of a cold. She collapsed when she heard the news and was placed under sedation.

Todd, an enthusiastic air traveler, was flying to New York for a testimonial dinner tomorrow night. Film writer Cohn was along so they could discuss the book Cohn was writing about Todd, who often was called the modern Barnum and boy wonder producer.

Cohn wrote a column for the San Francisco Examiner. In his first one, he wrote, "Things seem to happen where I happen to be, and I aim to keep that way."

Verner, the pilot, was a major in the Air Force reserves and flew a C46 during World War II over the Himalayas between India and China.

Co-Pilot Barkley was one obtained at Burbank when the regular co-pilot failed to show for the flight, said Dick Hanley, Todd's secretary, in Los Angeles.

CAA investigator Glen Hughes said that judging from the wreckage, the plane appeared to have rammed nose-first into the ground.

Hard To Believe

Like Liz, others who knew Todd found it hard to believe he was dead. This was a hurricane in human motion, a man always on a runaway horse.

He was 50 but no one ever heard it wrom him.

"I got a new birth certificate when I married Liz," he once said. And Liz answered him: "He gets younger every year by marrying younger wives. I know I'm going to be old for him one of these days."

Just the other day he lectured before the students and faculty at the University of California at Los Angeles about his recent trip to Russia.

"I think I did a lot for democracy over there," He said. "The Russian people all were impressed with the fact that a juvenile delinquent could grow up in America and get a better job that the president—Elizabeth Taylor's husband."

He also told the students that the Russians were the greatest showmen in the world.

"I thought all these years I was stealing from Barnum but I actually was stealing from them. I went over to see the cold cuts—you know the tombs of Lenin and Stalin. It was the slowest moving line I had ever seen and the officials made it that way on purpose. I always instruct my ticket-sellers to slow down so the public always sees people in front of the theater. It's good box office psychology."

Last Of Big Spenders

Liz always called Todd the "Last of the great, big spenders" and that he was.

Even when he was broke, he spent money like a maharajah. His first Hollywood picture "Around the World in 80 Days" now has passed the 33 million figure in world grosses. As his son, Mike Jr., said recently:

"We expect any day now to be making as much money as dad spends."

The plane that carried him to death, a twin-engine Lockheed Lodestar complete with bar and berths and accomodations for 10, cost him $6,000 a month whether he used it or not.

(See Todd page 3)

'Whither Thou Goest'

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD, March 22 (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor, filled with sedatives and fighting a 102-degree fever, babbled over and over again today:

"I can't believe it's Mike."

The beautiful star and her husband, Mike Todd, had a pact between them: "Whither thou goest, I goest too."

But Todd broke the pact last night despite urgent pleadings from his wife.

"I just told her: 'Dammit, you're staying home with that virus. And that's final,'" Todd told this

Nine Candidates May Be Disqualified From Running In Upcoming Elections

John Brooks' Eligibility Questioned By Officials

By SARAH ADAMS

Nine candidates for offices in the spring elections may be disqualified from running, The Daily Tar Heel learned yesterday.

Word came from the Office of the Dean of Student Affairs that candidates Doug Bayliff, Leon Holt, Happy Hurst, Carolyn Peal, Buck Hurdley, Tonny Brannon, Bill King and Dick Stoker will be ineligible to run.

According to Ray Jefferies, assistant dean of student affairs, the candidates did not meet the scholastic requirements as set up in Article VII, Section 5 of the election laws.

Also, some question has arisen as to the eligibility of John Brooks, SP candidate for vice president of the Student Government. Brooks' case will come before the Elections Board Monday afternoon, Elections Board Chairman Bob Furtado said yesterday.

Asked to comment on Brooks' status, SP Chairman Pat Adams maintained:

"The Elections Board has been furnished the information concerning the requirements for being a candidate in any position. It (the board) now has to decide whether the candidates are eligible to run."

Election Laws

Article VII, Section 5 of Election Laws asserts:

"Any candidate for appointment or election to office in Student Government shall meet the following qualifications:

"(A) If said student shall have completed only one semester in residence at this University prior to that semester in which he is nominated, he shall have an overall scholastic average of "C" or higher.

"(B) If said student shall have completed two or more semesters in residence, he shall have an overall scholastic average of "C" or higher for the entire period in residence, in addition, said student shall be credited with 27 semester hours for the two semesters immediately preceding the semester in which said student is nominated, or 30 semester hours of summer school or correspondence work is necessary in addition to the two regular terms preceding his nomination."

SP Replacements

SP Chairman Pat Adams announced the following replacements for disqualified SP candidates:

Misses Martha Turner, junior from Miami, Fla., and Betsy Miller, junior from Coral Gables, Fla., will replace Happy Hurst and Carolyn Peal in the Dorm Women's legislature district.

Warren Jackson, a freshman from Chattanooga, will replace Leon Holt in the race for the legislature seat from Town Men's IV.

Buck Hurdley, will be replaced by Rudy Edwards, a junior from Rutherfordton, in Dorm Men's II.

No replacement has been named as yet for Doug Bayliff who was running for Treasurer of the Senior Class.

UP Replacements

UP replacements, as announced by UP Chairman Syd Shuford, are:

Hamp Lefler, a junior from Newton, will replace Bill King as the UP candidate for vice-president of

State Professor Wins O. Max Gardner Award

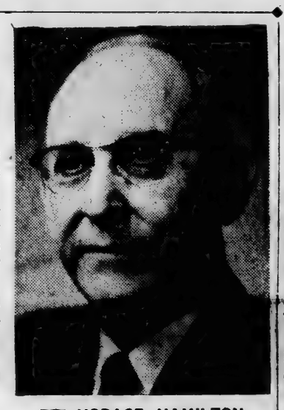
RALEIGH—Dr. C. Horace Hamilton, nationally-known head of the Department of Rural Sociology at North Carolina State College, was named 1958 winner of the Oliver Max Gardner Award last night.

The award, accompanied by a citation, was presented to Dr. Hamilton as the member of the faculties of the Consolidated University of North Carolina who, in the judgment of the Board of Trustees, "has made the greatest contribution to the welfare of the human race" during the current academic year.

A veteran teacher and author whose writings have influenced public policy on medical care and population problems, Dr. Hamilton long has been one of the nation's key figures in the realm of rural sociology.

He was president of the Rural Sociological Society in 1949-50 and is currently president of the Southern Sociological Society.

Author



A prolific writer, Dr. Hamilton is author or co-author of 14 books and monographs, 67 scholarly articles for professional journals and other periodicals and 10 special rural sociology reports.

The award citation declared that Dr. Hamilton "has been applying horse sense to the science of sociology for more than 30 years as teacher, scholar, interpreter of social problems, social statistician and social philosopher.

"He has published in so many fields that some of his associates classify him as a sociologist, some as an economist and still others as an authority on medical care . . ."

Friday Presides

President William C. Friday of the Consolidated University presided and introduced previous recipients of the Gardner Award. The award was presented to Dr. Hamilton by Mrs. P. P. McCain of Wilson, a member of the Gardner Award Committee of the Board of Presentation of the award was the highlight of the 10th annual Gardner Award dinner, held in the main ballroom of the State College Union Building.

Candidate John Whitley Discusses Editorial Policy Of Daily Tar Heel

"The editorial policy of the campus newspaper should meet issues squarely on the nose," John Whitly, candidate for editor of The Daily Tar Heel, asserted today. "I feel the current policy is in the middle of the road. However, the editor should neither be too liberal or too much of an extramist."

"First and foremost, the editorial page should represent a fair and impartial opinion; the editor taking all facts into consideration before writing. The student editor should present his own personal convictions, and realize that public opinion can be and often is wrong.

"The Daily Tar Heel should confine its editorial comment chiefly to local issues, with its purpose to strive for the good of the student and the welfare of the University.

"I see the need to keep the student body up to date on those prominent national and international issues, but feel that chiefly only those world issues which affect the students directly or reflect on the University, and on which the student editor is qualified and prepared to speak should be discussed on the editorial page.

Interpretative Edits

"More interpretative editorials and those in a lighter vein should appear on the editorial page. In many cases, issues arise with which the average student who is not involved or is not a member of the specific organization or group not only doesn't understand, but knows nothing about. I see the need to acquaint the average student better with his University.

"I feel that guest editorials should appear only when they are very outstanding, or discuss issues of extreme importance to the student.

"The campus needs to be better unified. Because of their great number and individual diversity, the dormitory students can not work with the speed and the harmony that smaller groups can. The student newspaper owes it to the students to strive for a stronger unification of the campus.

Candidates' Meet

All candidates up for spring election must meet Monday at 8 p.m. in Gerrrad Hall, according to the elections Board.

Miss Frye States Views On Fraternity Clauses

Ann Frye, Daily Tar Heel editorial candidate, expressed her opinion on the matter of discriminatory clauses in fraternity clauses in a statement Saturday.

"The justification of the existence of fraternities at this University depends upon their participation in efforts mentioned to fraternity pledges recently by Dr. James Godfrey, dean of the faculty: development of intellectual abilities, growth of moral stamina and the promotion of self-discipline among the members.

"The nurturing of these qualities, I feel, would be impared if fraternities were compelled to eliminate any clause from their charters, which are national in origin. The prestige, if not the actual broken tie, of a local fraternity with the national organization would have a detrimental effect on the fraternity, I feel.

"Let me state that I think any discrimination as to religion, race or economic status is morally wrong. However, I cannot attack fraternities on the basis of discriminatory clauses because I consider fraternities to be private organizations.

"I conceive of a fraternity as a private corporation, which is subject to the rushing rules and social regulations of the Inter-Fraternity Council just as, for example, any business organization is subject to commerce and tax laws of the state of North Carolina and the United States."

Pipkin Names Campaign Staff

Cowles Liipfert, a sophomore from Winston-Salem, has been named manager of Pringle Pipkin's campaign for the Editor of The Daily Tar Heel.

Mary Alys Voorhees, managing editor of The Daily Tar Heel, and Sarah Adams, news staff member, will help in the campaigning with the coeds.

Bill Pfefferkorn, junior from Winston-Salem, will take care of arranging public meetings.

The telephone number of the campaign manager is 89068 and his address is the Beta House, 114 S. Columbia St.

IFC Invites Candidates

The Inter-Fraternity Council has invited all editorial and presidential candidates to appear at a special IFC meeting Monday at 7 p.m. in 105 Hanes Hall.

Library Books Drive To Run Monday-Friday

A drive to round up all library books which are "illegally held" begins Monday and will last through Friday, March 28.

All of these books are to be brought to the Student Government office on the second floor of Graham Memorial. No questions will be asked and accumulated fines will be cancelled.

The books will be returned to the library by this committee.

This campaign is being sponsored by the Student Library Committee, which along with conducting drives also reviews the problems of the library from the viewpoint of the students.

Mike Simpson, chairman of the committee, will report to the Student Body President at the conclusion of the book drive.

"Our business is to have the book available to anyone when it is needed," University Librarian Orne commented.

He explained that the library was interested in fines only as means to get the students to bring the books back on time so that the books will be there for other students to use.

The fines are turned over to the North Carolina Treasury, and the library gets no benefit from the money.

However, if a book is lost, the library gets the money the student must pay to buy another book, and it is replaced if it is possible.

Throughout a year around 200 volumes are lost from the library.

Charlie Sloan Lists His Editorial Qualifications

The need for an editor to be thoroughly familiar with every phase of the operation of the Daily Tar Heel was expressed Saturday by editorial candidate Charlie Sloan in a campaign statement.

Sloan continued to say:

"I feel that I have the qualifications necessary to a good editor because I am familiar with every part of The Daily Tar Heel.

"Since my first story, a column, appeared in the first issue of The Daily Tar Heel in the fall of 1955 when I was a freshman, I have held the position of reporter, columnist, associate editor, managing editor, night editor and proofreader.

"In addition I have substituted for regular staffers as editor, news editor, sports editor and photographer.

"But The Daily Tar Heel isn't the only place where I have had newspaper experience. In addition I have had stories printed in The Arlington Citizen, The Northern Virginia Sun and parts of publicity releases printed in the Washington Post and Times Herald and the Washington Sunday Star. I have had pictures published in the Durham Morning Herald and The Charlotte News.

"Yet the best experience neccessary to a good Daily Tar Heel editor is experience gained on The Daily Tar Heel. Almost three years of work on the paper have given me this experience. An editor who knows the entire paper can make the editorial page one of the best in the country, and assure that the rest of the paper lives up to the standards of the editorial page."

SP Invites Candidates

All editorial candidates have been invited to the Student Party meeting Monday at 7 p.m. in Roland Parker 1 & 2 in GM. Party Chairman Pat Adams announced that the platform will be presented at that time and SP will decide whether or not to endorse an editorial candidate.

Elections & Father Time Wait On None

By PAUL RULE

If you think you're cramped for time, pity the poor candidates for editor of The Daily Tar Heel.

Monday night the frantic five have been invited to appear before the Student Party at 7 o'clock and express their views. Also at 7 p.m. they have been asked to grace an IFC meeting by putting in an appearance for a similar reason.

In case they figure out a way to attend two gatherings at one time, they won't have many minutes to linger at either because the Elections Board has demanded their presence at a public meeting with all other candidates in the spring election at Gerrard Hall at 8 o'clock.

One of the candidates considers these developments of minor importance since he also has other engagments at 6, 9, 10 and 11 p.m. the same night.

You don't have to have a split personality to run for editor, but it helps!

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Carol Suther, Nancy Grubb, Marion Eells, Ruth Mills, Gale Willingham and Jane Patten and John Ward, Gafton Andrews, Claude Grigg, Everett Ellinwood, David Goode, Jerry Oppenheimer, John Robinson, Charles Pappendick, Edwin Levy, Joe Hagendorn, Dean Culbreth, Robert Peebles, Joseph Ferrell and Edmund Lively.

Sound & Fury Tryouts Set

Tryouts for this year's Sound Fury production, "No Time For Squares," wil be held this afternoon and Monday from 2 to 6 p.m. in Memorial Hall. Call backs will be on Tuesday.

The show will be presented on May 2 and 3.

Cecil Hartsoe, director of the show, announced that the following persons have been selected as committee chairmen: business manager, Jack Mitchell; lighting, Al Sally; costume designer, Anne Riggins; stage managers, Lloyd Shaw and Gail Rice; publicity John Harris; music, E. Bruner, props, Nicey Fleishman and makeup, Barbara Lewis.

Choreography will be done by Tom Davis, who has been seen in several Sound and Fury productions and who is well known as half of the dance duo, Tom and Chee Chee Davis.

Lab Photographers Should Learn How To Photograph

Somebody should teach the photographers at the UNC photo lab how to take pictures—not pictures for the wall but pictures for newspapers.

We have been discouraged over and over again by the apparent complete lack of appreciation for newspaper art which is evident in virtually all of the photo lab's pictures.

One dollar and a half—the price paid for photo lab pictures—is high enough when the work is good. It is exhorbitant when that work displays no appreciation for what makes a good newspaper picture.

You can look at just about any of the lab's work and denote, usually, the same distinguishing characteristics: in receiving an award, a line of persons without expression; a committee shot, a collection of deaf-mutes without life.

Furthermore, the lab photographers should familiarize themselves with newspaper column measurement in order to print their pictures to whatever column size a newspaper might require. We have found in the past that, for some of the photographers, a two-column by five-inch picture has no meaning when it comes to printing the work.

We particularly were discouraged during Symposium Week when the photo lab photographers, assigned to take pictures at Memorial Hall addresses, stood back 25-30 feet from the subject and fired with their expensive equipment.

Of course, the reproduction shows the lit-up face of the speaker—maybe his hand if it's high enough—who looks like a startled Ku Klux Klansman photographed in an open field in the blackness of midnight.

This kind of photography has no life. It is not good for newspapers. And it leaves the impression that photo lab photographers have no more originality than to photograph their subjects in a statue-like erectness from behind a speaker's stand.

A photographer who subscribed always to this practice on a daily newspaper could not long hold his job. He must realize that there is more to a picture than a contrast between black and white, that a good picture has character and life.

Photo lab photographers also should realize this. Some day one of them may be taking pictures for a good newspaper. Or another may appear at the University of North Carolina as a speaker on the Symposium Week slate.

We feel that, in the latter case, our visitor deserves a somewhat better display in our daily newspapers than that which the current photographers now afford their subjects.

Congratulations In Order For Dr. C. Horace Hamilton

It takes five type-written pages to enumerate the role which Dr. C. Horace Hamilton, head of the Department of Rural Sociology at N. C. State College, has played to make him this year's winner of the Oliver Max Gardner Award.

But it takes only a single phrase, combining all his services, to show the end result of that role: In the eyes of the Consolidated University Board of Trustees, Dr. Hamilton "has made the greatest contribution to the welfare of the human race" of all members of the university faculties during the current academic year.

The Daily Tar Heel would, therefore, like to take this space to congratulate the State College faculty member not only for the award which he deserves but also for the unselfish service to the state and nation which earned him this coveted recognition.

Dr. Hamilton's name is closely linked to the North Carolina Medical Care Commission, a group insurance program patterned exclusively for college faculties, and broad studies of rural life and its problems in North Carolina.

When Former Governor Gardner created his now popular award, he stipulated that the recipient each year should be the member of all faculties within the Consolidated University who "has made the greatest contribution to the welfare of the human race."

It is men like Dr. C. Horace Hamilton who deserve not only the O. Max Gardner Award, but other recognition as well for their unselfish contributions to the welfare of society.

Nothing New

The State Department sent astounding word to Chapel Hill where speakers have been discussing the general problem of world.

It was represented by a gentleman named John Keppel who wears the imposing title of deputy chairman, Division of Research and Analysis for the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe. And, according to news reports, he said that all the problems listed by the Russians as subjects for a summit meeting have been discussed many times before. Then he said, "At the present time, and until new negotiable problems come to light, the United States has nothing to negotiate."

So here we are: In an age of danger we have settled nothing, so until some new problem comes up we can negotiate nothing. Maybe this is high level diplomacy but the problems most of us want settled are the old ones which haven't been settled but involve the survival or doom of millions on this planet.—RALEIGH NEWS & OBSERVER.

Student Shortage In The Making?

We agree with Dr. Benjamin Fine that salaries for school teachers should be raised, but not necessarily to the extent which he has proposed.

In an address here Friday night, he said salaries should be tripled, with a range of $10,000 to $20,000 annually per teacher, if education is to get the caliber of teachers which a good system requires.

Well, we know a lot of teachers who scarcely earn their current salaries. The numbers are so great nationally that to replace them really would create a "dangerous teacher bottleneck."

Teaching particularly on hagh school level, should be repaid on a scale proportional to that of other professions which require equal training, responsibilities and time spent on the job. That pay scale is not now proportional.

However, the scales should not be tipped too far in the teacher's direction. That profession, while important, does not and will not universally incorporate personnel who deserve $20,000 per year.

And just watch. If that fabulous amount ever becomes the norm for teachers' salaries, our country will be so overrun by teachers that they'll be complaining about a student shortage.

Manners And Role In Self-Preservation

By GAIL GODWIN

It is a sure thing that not many boys read GLAMOUR magazine, but if they can sneak a glance at one when their friends aren't looking, they might profit from a little article in this month's issue.

Douglas Fairbanks, the suave, sophisticated, mannerly man of two [illegible] has some helpful hints for those who want to succeed with the ladies as Fairbanks undoubtedly has succeeded with people in general.

"Manners," says Mr. Continental, "stem from the instinct of self-preservation. That is, if I consider you, maybe you'll consider me. It's the best way of getting on—and may we all get on until we blow each other up."

What a let-down when we meet a young man who has that Fairbank-ish look about him and then turns not to be the type that bounces along beside you on the sidewalk—on the wrong side; or, when you go out to eat, says to you: "Well, tell the waitress what you want, honey,;" or, when it comes time to get out of a car, says "Slide out on my side so I won't have to go around." (And so you squish under the steering wheel with your eleven crinolines.)

Fairbanks has even circumvented the familiar "Bring us another beer, Joe." He glances at his companion and says "Let's have the other half of this."

"That way, tender young co-eds won't feel like alcoholics, boys.

It has been said by arrogant males that women have lost the right to demand chivalry by their desire to intrude into the man's world. It has been said by arrogant college males that there is no place for all this chivalry in the informal life of the campus.

No, maybe it is sort of difficult to treat a lady like a powderpuff in long skirts when she is wearing bermuda shorts made just like yours.

But I have heard lots of complaints about some of our brothers who lack manners, and I have never heard a girl despair because Johnny treated her like a princess.

The day has still not come when the fair sex will pass up Fairbanks the Flatterer for Ulysses the Uncouth.

It happened in a crowded streetcar one evening recently. A gallant passenger shifted his bundles, arose, pretended to take off his hat, and said to an equally if not more burdened female standee.

Man—Won't you take my seat, madam?

Lady—Oh, thank you so much! I'll take the seat with pleasure, but I don't want you to stand up.

Man—Gee, lady, I'd like to accommodate you in both ways but what would people think if you were to sit on my lap?

Ashmore: The South's Mr. Courage

By DAVIS YOUNG

Harry Ashmore's appearance on campus last week is one this school cannot afford to soon forget. The modest and quiet editor of the Arkansas Gazette should have been a great example of raw courage for this student body.

He typified the old song-"Laughing on the outside and crying on the inside" for this is how he seemed. He was amused at the mention of Harry Golden's "vertical plan for desegregation," but his heart was heavy as he talked of the strife and hate now residing in his town of Little Rock.

He laughed when a spectator questioned him about a small anti-segregation paper being printed in Pedal, Miss., but shook his head when talking of the use of federal troops in integrating Central High School.

In recent months many of the citizens of Little Rock spearheaded by such great institutions as the White Citizen's Council and the pre Orval Faubus faction have organized a boycott of his paper causing great financial loss to his firm.

It is common knowledge that Harry Ashmore has been threatened many times since the "October Revolution." He claims that most of these adverse inclinations are the work of "crackpots," but we wonder if this is so.

He is rejected in his own city by a great majority of the population. He is found unacceptable by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Many in the North don't understand his stand and are confused.

He has been heard to say that "the South's besetting problem is not the accommodation of the rising aspirations of its Negro people, difficult as that may be, but its inability to reduce the issue to rational terms."

This has been the work that Harry Ashmore has so long tried to do only to be rejected at every turn by every faction.

Time and again during the fall, and since, he has risked his life, economy and position to take an unpopular and often dangerous stand on the current racial problems confronting us in the South today.

America needs more people like him and the field of journalism could use more of the type of honor and devotion to principle displayed by Harry Ashmore.

His proposals may be open for attack and his methods for scorn. However, his integrety and sincere interest in this great problem confronting us all cannot be doubted.

If Senator Kennedy ever writes a second edition of "Profiles in Courage," I proudly nominate Harry Ashmore.

OFFICE CAT

A teacher in a New England grammar school found these facts in a composition on Longfellow, the poet, written by a fifteen-year-old girl.

"Henry W. Longfellow was born in Portland, Maine, while his parents were traveling in Europe. He had many fast friends, among whom the fastest were Phoebe and Alice Carey."

Analyzing The Groups Which Meet At Lenoir

By P. W. CARLTON

It has been said that America is a nation of organizations. This appears to be correct. Take note of the number of clubs that have sprung up in our communities. There's the Society for Propagation of Young Duffers; Alcoholics Unanimous; Coeducational Camping Corps (meets in the arboretum each night); and many others. It is therefore not surprising that there should be a departmentalization involved in our dining habits. It is to a consideration of this aspect of campus life that we shall turn our attention.

The denizens of the dining hall fall into several main categories. These groupings revolve about the various schools of the University. For instance the Lawyers, the Zoologists (a merry crowd,) the Boatanists (or is it Botanists) the Geologists, D.A.'s and others. Of course there is a body made up of those unfortunate individuals who don't belong to one of the exclusive circles. These are to be pitied and relegated to the oblivion of small tables situated in the center of the room. The elite always retire to some corner of the establishment, whence they can observe and ridicule in comparative seclusion.

A typical evening at Lenoir begins about five-thirty. Up until this time there has arrived a sprinkling of the "uninitiated," but no major force has appeared on the scene. At approximately five-thirty-one, the influx begins. First the geologists appear in typical klondike style, dumping an assortment of rock hammers and peajackets in the foyer, then noisily stomping into the room in their blue jeans and hiking boots. These characters roar through the line like a plague, snatching food from the counter and entertaining the general public with shouts of "Go on, cut ya off a little piece," and "payass the buttah." They finally settle down to eat. One of them is quite enterprising and soon sets up a 200 transit for the purpose of taking some topographic measurements. The territory in question is in the form of a blonde across the room. This in addition to the classification of the general collection of rocks that each has secreted on his person. It is a harrowing experience to eat with these people since they toss these missles from one end of the table to the other during this display of academic devotion, and there is nothing less conducive to good digestion than the sight of a goodly lump of quartzite passing overhead.

No sooner has this minor tornado subsided than the Dramatic Arts group enters. This is undoubtedly the most versatile aggregation on campus. Each has his mark of distinction, be it a beard, shaggy hair, unorthodox clothing (green ties and purple shirts) or peculiar mannerisms. This group occupies another large table and carries on animated conversation. Their after dinner activity consists of re-enacting duels from "Hamlet" and Caesar's murder in which several innocents are usually receive wounds. (And don't you think it isn't hard to draw blood with a butter knife, either.)

Meanwhile, the lawyers enter in a dignified procession, each with his briefcase, and quietly discuss the business at hand. Their rhetoric is often inspiring, however. On a certain occasion, it is said, a young blood, enraged over some legal point, leaped upon the table in traditional Roman style and discoursed at great length upon the inhumanity of man. Eventually someone yelled "Throw him a fish," at which rejoinder the young man stepped down, the picture of dejection, and began to separate the spaghetti from his shoelaces and pants cuffs. They say that his habeas corpus was found suspended from a light fixture the next day.

Among the larger groups that infest the chow hall is the I.L. Literate College Cuisiniary. This mob, composed of alumni of a nondescript junior college, constantly annoys the populace by its very mode of dining. Their adaptation is that of FOS (Female Observation System.) At the approach of suitable material, all activity ceases, cups suspended in midair and forks halfway to the mouth. All heads are swiveled and eyes trained on the approaching object. The heads rotate in unison as the target passes, undulating delightfully (or rolling like an LST in a heavy sea), and, if the situation warrants, a spontaneous sigh ascends from the group. Then normal activity is resumed. Most of the inmates of this group are resolutely dedicated to the premise of liberty, loving, and liquor. Just recently they were hatching a plot against the University which called for the impeachment of Bill Thursday, and the installation of Percy Flowers as president. I believe they dropped it, since Flowers declined the offer, he being detained elsewhere.

The Zoologists are not too popular with the populace as a whole, for they usually enter wearing blood-stained lab coats, often carrying some homework in the form of dissecting pan containing some Zoological specimen (a shark for instance). Their eating habits amount to minute dissections of each morsel of food. One disconcerting eventuality is the discovery of some minute parasite in the meat products being served.

Last in our consideration, but certainly not less notorious than any of theiry predecessors, is the large aggregation of Buttonists that perpetrate themselves upon the group in Lenoir Hall. The Bottomists usually appear in a clatter of Vasculums, attired in muddy field trip clothing and ungainly boots. They elbow their way through the queue, assembling platefuls of the vegetabes which are their stock and trade, and settle like a dark cloud in one corner. Immediately the mumbling of numbers can be heard emanating their vicinity. These sounds can be traced to two oversized sporophytes of the group, who have worked out a classification system for all the females on campus. As one enters they rattle off her classification and floral formula, (measurements to the layman). Occasionally you can spot one dissecting an english pea in search of the cotyledons. (They're real hard to find.) After meals they simultaneously light up and disappear in a dense cloud of smoke. Under this cover they are free to discuss their latest projects, such as the installation of parking meters on the benches of the arboretum and construction of a cocktail lounge (complete with hi-fi and tv) for the prupose of holding seminars.

Such is the life at Lenoir. Needless to say it is a rare privilege and an edifying and enriching experience to dine among the cultured folks who patronize such an establishment. I highly recommend that students one and all eat at—the Rathskeller.

YWCA CABINET

Anyone interested in serving on the YWCA Cabinet has been asked to sign up this week in the Y building.

Goldsmith Hits UNC Cut System

Al Goldsmith, University Party candidate for president of the student body, struck out Saturday at the present cut system, calling it "confusing" and "in many ways very unsatisfactory." "Instead of a progressive step I feel that this new system, which leaves class excuses up to the individual instructors, has resulted in an undue tightening of cut regulations in many classes and extreme confusion in others," he added.

Points Out Faults

"I would like to point out a few faults in the present system:

"Many professors do not understand the new system. There has been little explanation of how the system is or should be applied.

"It is often difficult for students participating in extracurricular activitis for which written excuses were formerly issued to get excused under the new system.

"There is no guarantee that deserving students and upperclassmen will receive any laxity in cuts. Too often instructors allow no cuts to students.

Dean's List

"The new system takes from the Dean's List one of its most effective rewards—unlimited cuts. In fact there is not even any more mention of a Dean's List.

"I believe that Carolina students should be treated as nature individuals and that instructors should not interpret this new system to mean no cuts, or that cuts should be restricted now where before there were unlimited cuts. I feel that this system can and should be improved and I pledge if elected president to work with Dean Godfrey and other members of the administration to bring about a better system."

Mike Todd

Money was of no concern to Todd: "Money is only important to people who haven't got it. I've never been poor, only broke," he said. "Being poor is a frame of mind. Being broke is a temporary situation."

His personal phone bill was $2,000 a month. He was never away from a phone. Once a friend contacted him as he drove along in his phone equipped Rolls Royce. As the friend talked, Todd said:

"Hold on a minute, the other phone's ringing."

Todd was born Avram Hirsch Goldbogen, the son of a Minneapolis Rabbi. The family later moved to Chicago.

"I once was arrested in a crap game when I was six," he joshed.

Early in life, his natural ability to con people got him in a carnival. When he was 17, he formed a construction company. A few years later, sound took over in Hollywood.

Makes Millions

Mike Todd came to Hollywood and passed himself off as an expert in building soundstages. Before he was 20, he had made a million dollars, mostly off Hollywood producers.

By the time he was 30, he lost it. He was worse than broke—he owed a million. But his standard of living never changed.

He produced Broadway shows, such as "Hot Mikado," "Mexican Hayride," "Something for the Boys" and "Up in Central Park." They grosed $18,000,000 but Todd wound up owing a million.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE — Dr. George Schlager Welsh, associate professor in the Dept. of Psychology and Psychiatry, has been granted a leave of absence for the academic year 1958-59 to assume the position of visiting associate professor of psychology at the University of California in Berkeley. During the academic year 1956-57, Dr. Welch held the position of Fulbright lecturer in the Institute of Psychology of the University of Florence, Italy.

Selective Service Test Date Set

A Selective Service college qualification test will be given May 1. Its purpose is to provide evidence to be used by local boards in considering deferment of a registrant from military service as a student.

Any Selective Service registrant who is a full time college student and has not previously taken this test may apply.

Applications for the test must be postmarked no later than midnight Friday, April 11.

The three-hour written examination will be given at approximately 1,000 centers.

Carolina is one of the centers. Students enrolled in the University may take the examination here.

Applicants should contact any Selective Service Local Board for a bulletin of information, and application and a mailing envelope.

Instructions in the bulletin should be carefully and completely followed.

For additional information any Local Board may be consulted.

reporter in a phone call just a few hours before takeoff at 10:30 last night.

Less than five hours later Todd and three others perished in the crash of the private plane he had recently dubbed: "The Luck Liz."

The news of the New Mexico crash was brought to her by Dick Hanley, Todd's private secretary, who was informed by The Associated Press. Hanley brought the actress' personal physician, Dr. Rexford Kennamer, with him when he broke the news.

It was early morning but she was up with her three young children when Hanley and Dr. Kennamer arrived at the huge, Spanish-style house the Todds were renting while she made a motion picture in Hollywood.

Hanley said she was stunned at first, then collapsed and started babbling hysterically. The thought of her three children, Mike 4, and Christopher, 3, sons by her previous husband, Michael Wilding, and Liza, 6 months, Todd's daughter, quieted her.

Her close friend, Actress Debbie Reynolds, who is married to singer Eddie Fisher, promised to take care of the children and shortly afterward the three children were sent to Miss Reynolds' home with a maid.

the Senior class.

Buddy Spoon, a freshman from Charlotte, will replace Dick Stoker in the race for a Town Men's III legislature seat.

No replacement has been named for Tony Brannon who was runing for legislature from Dorm Men's H.

Concerning the disqualifications, Ray Jefferies expressed regret. "I am sorry. All the candidates were capable, they just didn't meet the requirements of the Election Laws."

Two other changes were made in the SP slate this week.

Alice Pohl, a freshman from Chapel Hill, has been appointed to fill a nomination vacancy in Town Women's District.

Mike Hayes, a junior from Greensboro, has replaced Harold Donnagon who recently dropped out of the race for Legislature seat from Town Men's III.

Norman Smith, sophomore from Franklin, will replace Ken Harris, who recently dropped out of the race, for a legislative seat in Dorm Men's V.

Cosmopolitan Club Lists Future Plans

The Cosmopolitan Club, headed by Jean Pierre Boissavit, will sponsor several community projects in the near future.

Any foreign students interested in participating are requested to drop their names by the Y office as soon as possible.

An expense-free trip to a Pittsboro Negro school is proposed for Thursday afternoon, March 27. Six foreign students are needed to speak about their native countries.

The project of painting a clinic building at St. Helena Island in South Carolina will be undertaken jointly by the Y and Cosmopolitan Club April 3-7. Twelve persons are needed. The only expenses will be transportation.

A delegation of five students is needed for a trip to New York City to participate in a seminar on human rights on April 11-12. The trip will be organized by the CCUN for foreign students.

Spring Football Ends As Blues Overpower Whites 31-8

Cummings Passes For 3 Blue Touchdowns

By DAVE WIELE

The 1958 model of Carolina football was unveiled yesterday afternoon in Kenan Stadium when the Blues defeated the Whites 31-8 in the annual Blue-White intrasquad game which brought to a Spring practice to a close.

Perfect football weather invited close to 2,000 fans to the stadium to get a preview of next Fall's coming attraction along the football line. The fans on hand plus a large regional television audience saw the more experienced Blues roll over the Whites almost at will.

Sophomore quarterback Jack Cummings led the Blue attack with the perfection of a professional mixing up his air and ground attack enough to keep the Whites guessing. Three of the Blue touchdowns were off of his passing arm. The Blues scored twice in the first half and three times the last. The Whites only score came with 2:35 minutes left in the game.

Blues Score First

The Blue's first score came with 10:39 left in the first quarter when sophomore halfback Jim Schuler dived over right tackle from the 6 yard line. The talley ended a 75 yard drive which began at the opening kickoff.

Danny Droze took the opening kick on the five and carried it to the 25 where the Whites held the Blues for three downs. Cummings was roughed when he tried a kick, and the 15 yard advantage gave new go power to the Blues. Four times in a row the Blue backs made first downs. Schuler went for 12, Danny Droze 12 and fullback Don Coker 11. Inside the White 17, the Blue's found the going tougher. After an incomplete pass, Schuler dove to the ten. Droze got 4 yards closer setting up Schuler's score. Cummings tried to pass for the two-point conversion, but missed.

The Whites came back with the ball, but after making a first down, they fumbled their possession away. The second units came in and the ball changed hands six times with neither team threatening. Just before the quarter ended, the Whites kicked, giving the blues the ball on the 50.

Cummings Passes

The first Blue unit came back in and in 11 plays found themselves on the White 3. In one of the prettiest plays of the afternoon, Cummings called for a field goal. Blazer faked it, and Cummings rolling out to his right and found Al Goldsteine open in the end zone. Droze tried right guard for the extra points but was stopped. The second units came back in, and the rest of the half turned out to be a stalemate.

Jim Schuler opened the second half with a 36 yard kickoff returned to the his own 41. On two successive plays he went to the White 45, and then to the 38. Droze and Coker carried to the 23 where Cummings passed to Droze for the score. Cummings passed to Droze for the bonus failed.

Golf Scores

The Whites got the ball two more times before forced to kick from their own 8. The Blues returned the punt to the White 28. Cummings hit John Schroder with a 18 yard pass. Droze dove to the 2, and Daily Goff scored. Blazer kicked for another point.

The final Blue score came with 9:12 left in the game. Cummings intercepted a White pass on the White 15. Droze and Lipski carried to the three where Cummings found Goldsteine open again in the end zone. Cummings pass to Droze for the points after was incomplete.

The White score came after, Blue back Emil Decantis fumbled on his own 23. The White's Mike Greenday recovered. The second White unit moved the ball to the 28. The first team came back in, and with Nelson Lowe calling the signals, scored in 5 plays. Wade Smith set up the score with an eight yard run to the 2. Lowe sneaked over. Lowe passed to Frank Riggs for the extra points.

The game, and Spring practice ended, with the Blus in possession in the center of the field. After the regulation game was over. Coach Tatum called on the players who didn't get to play much to scrimmage.

NCAA Swim Meet

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP)-Swimmers from 54 schools assemble here next weekend to shoot at host Michigan's mastery in the 35th annual NCAA meet.

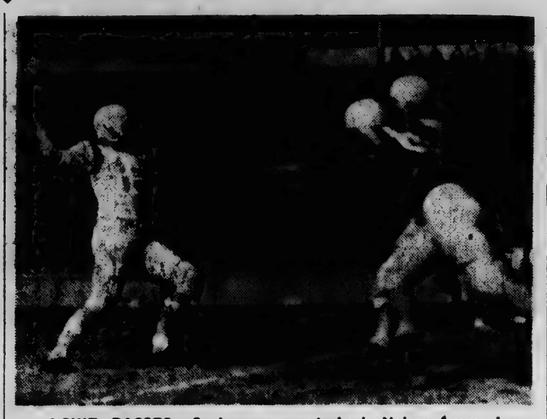
The three—day meet begins Thursday and lasts through Saturday. Saturday's final events will be televised nationally CBS-3 p.m. EST.

The defending champion Wolvines are favored to repeat last year's victory.

Michigan expects to receive most of its competition from Yale. Neighbor and arch-rival Michigan State [illegible] cause trouble.

Ohio State, Michigan and Yale are the only three schools ever to win the NCAA water crown since [illegible] first were awarded in 1937.

Robin Moore of Stanford is expected to take over again in the 50-yard freestyle after missing last year's meet due to an injury. Moore is world record holder in the 100-yard freestyle.



Outstanding individual performers are entered from Harvard, North Carolina, Washington State, Brown and Iowa.

Kentucky Is New NCAA Champ

Kentucky last night defeated Seattle 84-72 for the NCAA Championship and succession to the Tar Heels as National Champs.

Tatum Pleased With Upcoming Sophomores

By RUSTY HAMMOND

In spite of the fact that it is officially the second day of spring, it was perfect football weather here yesterday for the 13th annual Blue-White game. Regional TV no doubt hurt the gate-only 2000 fans turned out—and most folks stayed at home to observe the action.

Coach Jim Tatum, commenting on the performances of the two teams, said "Our fresh quarterback, Henry Clements, looked very good. Our weakness certainly isn't quarterbacks. We have four good ones in Lowe, Hollers, Cummings, and Clements. We may hold Curt Hathaway out next year. I started Droze and Schuler at halfbacks to give them more experience, instead of DeCantis and Goff I'll probably platoon these halfbacks next year."

Whites Inexperienced

Tatum stated that the reason for the Blue team's overwhelming triumph was the inexperience of the White team. "They blockd well and tackled sharply. The main trouble was that the quarterbacks weren't used to working with the center. Rip Hawkins." Hawkins had been a guard until last Monday.

Tatum seemed particularly pleased by the play of his upcoming sophomores, last year's freshman team. He remarked that this year's frosh squad gave him three times as much help as last year's team.

Doc White Lauded

Buddy Payne, year's team captain, presided over the impressive halftime ceremonies. The intermission began with a service award presented to Doc White. Carolina trainer, by the NCAA, District 3. White was honored as being the strong right arm of the coaching staff, and a personal friend to every player. Payne cited certain Monogram activities throughout the year, including the Christmas baskets, establishing of a scholarship fund for needy athletes, and the Blue-White game. He also announced that the letter-winners will be in the Valkyries upcoming sing fest, stating that "We may not have quality, but we will have quantity."

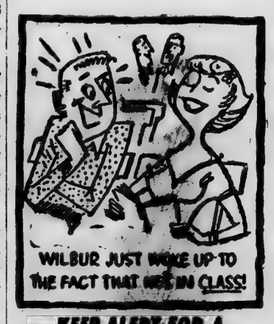
Wilmington Set For Open

WILMINGTON, N. C. (AP)-Six former Azalea Open champions, including Arnold Palmer, the 1957 winner, will compete in the 1958 golf tournament opening here Friday.



Palmer, the Latribe, Pa., star who once captained the Wake Forest College golf team, heads a long list of the circuit's top pros who will seek a share of the $15-000 prize money. The tournament also has an added $2,000 purse under the tournament player plan.

Mike Souchak, the firmer Duke star who plays out of Grossingers, N. Y., will be among the field. The winner here in 1956, Souchak always plays well on local courses.

Other previous winners in the field include Billy Maxwell of Odessa, Tex., 1955 winner; Bob Toski of Miami, Fla., 1954; Jerry Barber of Los Angeles, 1953; and Henry Ranson of Bryan, Tex., 1949.

The 72-hole tournament on the 6,681-yard Cape Fear Country Club course will be played in three days this year. Eighteen hole rounds will be played on Friday and Saturday, with the 36-hole windup on Sunday.

The Wilmington tournament had several "on" and "off" periods during the fall and winter. The PGA assigned the usual Wilmington dates to Miami Beach. But the Florida sponsors cancelled and the Azalea accepted the available dates.

Georgia Defeats Tar Heels In Final Tournament Game

WINTER PARK, Fla. (AP)-The University of Georgia, baseball team, helped by five Carolina errors, exploded for five runs in the eighth inning Saturday to defeat the Tar Heels 7-2 in the Rollins Round Robin baseball tournament.

Ben Hammett, the losing pitcher, had given up two runs until the unhappy eighth, and none of the runs scored in that inning off him and successor Doug Stimpson was earned.

The Georgians picked up six hits. Billy Hearn, the winner, held UNC to seven.

Carolina got its first run in the fourth when catcher Bruce Crump, who had two for four, tripled and right fielder Alton Pons singled. Tommy Saintsing, pinchhitting in the ninth, singled, advanced on a fielder's choice and scored on second baseman Tommy Oldham's double.

XAVIER WINS NIT

NEW YORK (AP)-Xavier's Cinderella team shot past Dayton in the third minute of an overtime period Saturday to defeat the top-seeded Flyers 78-74 and win the National Invitation basketball tournament in Madison Square Garden.

Hank Stein, who sparked Xavier's earlier round victory iver Niagara and St. Bonaventure, again was a vital factor for the unranked Musketeers from Cincinnati. He scored six points in the extra session.

With the score tied 69-69, Stein connected on a jump shot at 2:05 of the overtime, Tony Oldberding had a free throw and Stein two more from the foul line to give Xavier an insurmountable 74-69 lead.

It was only the fourth time that an unseeded team captured the title in the 21-year history of the NIT. The other teams were San Francisco in 1949, CCNY in 1950, and LaSalle in 1952.

Al Goldsmith, Don Furtado and Bob Carter will be on hand to answer the questions submitted by the council and questions from the general public.

The council will submit ten questions for consideration and then the meeting with be thrown open to the public.

According to the council this forum is being held to raise questions that have not been raised in the past or over looked.

The council's questions are as follows:

1. "What qualifications should candidates for the Honor Council and jurors have? Are they being met now? If not, how will you see that they are?

2. "What will you do to see that Negro students obtain further opportunities in Chapel Hill? Considering living quarters, eating places, scholarships, movies etc.

3. What is your attitude toward big-time athletics at the University? a) Do you condone a special group of students, ie. athletes with special function, segregated from the other students? What is your stand? b) What do you think about paying coaches' salaries out of line with University professors?

4. "What will you do to enforce or remove the no-drinking rule?

5. What problems do you see in fraternity—Student Government relationships? What if anything can be done?

6. How effective do you think the honor Code is as stated? What would you do to strengthen it?

7. "What useless offices are there in Student Government and what will you do about these? Examples class officers.

8. "What are your views on the present procedure for selection of editor of The Daily Tar Heel?

9. "What can be done to improve student sportsmanship at athletic contests?

10. What would you do to or through the IDC to make dormitory life more conducive to study?"

Phi To Visit WC Tonight

The Phi Society, one of Carolina's debating organizations, will make its annual visit to Womens College tonight.

The debate topic is be "Compulsory Testing of School Children at Age 12 to Determine Whether or Not They Should Continue in Academic Work or be Placed in a Trade School."

The WC visit is one of a series of steps aimed at increasing the importance of Phi's position in the UNC campus.

A large group of Carolina students is planning to accompany the debate group and President Jess Stribling said any other members who wish to go should contact him at the Sig Ep House.

Goldsmith Picks Kerr To Manage Campaign

Curtis Gans Endorsed By SP As Candidate For Tar Heel Editor

By DAVE JONES

Editorship candidate Curtis Gans was endorsed by the Student Party last night. This action came after the party had heard from all five candidates and after a brief discusion on the question of whether or not to endorse.

Gans comment to the Daily Tar Heel, immediately after having been endorsed was: "I am very gratified at the trust that the Student Party has placed in me. I feel that this a mandate for honest, courageous journalism on the U.N.C. campus."

The party's Vice Presidential Candidate, John Brooks spoke briefly, outlining the reasons behind the question of his eligibility. He then recommended that the party set up machinery which would enable a new candidate to be chosen immediately in the event that the Student Council should declare him ineligible to run.

On this recommendation, the party voted to empower the Advisory Board to choose a substitute candidate. All intetrested persons have been advised to contact the board before it convenes, should it convene tomorrow evening for this purpose.

Rudy Edwards was elected party vice chairman by acclamation. This party office was vacated at last Monday's meeting by the resignation of Leon Holt.

Chairman Pat Adams presented the party's platform to the Group and after a brief discussion and a few minor changes it was approved as follows:

SP Platform

THE STUDENT PARTY PLEDGES TO WORK FOR:

1. The establishment of a Women's Visiting Agreement for men's dormitories.

2. The estalishment of all-night study rooms.

3. The placement of sound absorbing wall phone booths in dormitories without booths. (Booths' such as those in the YMCA and in Graham Memorial.)

4. Liberalizeation of the Class Attendance Policy to permit at least three free cuts under the new attendanee regulations.

5. The elimination of the "Self Liquidating" requirements in dormitory construction, which raise room rent with each new building in order to pay for its construction.

6. A Central File of constitutions, financial reports and membership lists of all student activities.

7. Periodical paid leaves of abscene for faculty members in an effort to halt our loss of capable instructors.

8. The addition of IDC, IFC, and WRC Chairmen to the President's Cabinet.

9. The successful operation of the recently altered Honor Courts.

10. The immediate acquisition of a new Student Union, through consulation with the State Legislature and Budget Planning Commission.

11. Continued efforts to effect a workable solution to the Parking Problem.

Aubrey Brooks Scholarship Winners Listed

Eleven Aubrey Lee Brooks Scholars were selected Saturday in the annual scholarship awards established by the late Aubrey L. Brooks of Greensboro.

Brooks gave the Consolidated University of North Carolina securities worth about one million dollars. Income is used to help needy and worthy young men and women from 12 counties comprising the "Old Imperial Fifth Congressional District" to attend any of the three units of the University.

The ones selected Saturday were:

To Woman's College at Greensboro: Judieth Carol Bason of Graham, Mary Doris Mitchell of Durham, Elizabeth Susan Hayes of Chapel Hill, Brenda Day of Woodsville, Rebecca Joan Overby of Spray.

To State College: Charles Alfred Burton of Oxford Orphanage, Oxford: Dennis Wade Bowman of Westfield in Stokes County, Larry David Nixon of Elkin.

To the University: James Curtis Abell of Yanceyville, Erastus Bennett Parks III of Reynolds High in Winston-Salem, and Allison Eugene Wood of Jamestown in Guilford County.

The Brooks grants are valued at $500 a year.

Thornton Brooks and Dr. Taylor Brooks of Greensboro were present and participated in the awards of the scholarships.

President William C. Friday presided at a meeting at the Carolina Inn, honoring the scholarship winners and runners-up from Alamance, Durham, Orange, Person, Rockingham, Caswell, Forsyth, Guildford, Granville, Stokes and Surry Counties.

Grad Student Wins Award

Lloyd E. Berry, UNC graduate student from Houston, Texas, has won a 1958 Marshall Scholarship. British Ambassador Sir Harold Caccia announced the award from Washington Monday. The award entitles Berry to two year's study at a United Kingdom university.

Berry will do post-graduate work in English for a higher degree at Magdalene College, Cambridge, and will take up his studies this fall.

The Marshall Scholarships were established in 1953 as a British gesture of appreciation for Marshall Aid. They provide two year's post-graduate study at British universities for twelve American students(selected annually on a basis of scholarship and character.

The grant covers tuition, transport to and from the United Kingdom, and a sufficient living allowance.

Candidates Who Missed Meet To Contact Furtado

Those candidates who did not attend the compulsory meeting Monday night have been asked to contact Bob Furtado by 6 p. m. today.

If they cannot get in touch with Furtado ,they must have a written statement in the Student Government office by 6 p. m. today.

It either case, they must pay a one dollar fine.

Today Is Last Day For Juror Interviews

Today is the last day for interviews for prospective men and women Honor System jurors. Applications can be found in the Student Government office from 4:15-5:30 and 7:15-9 p.m.

„The reason for establishing the new system is to make the Honor System more effective by getting more people in direct contact with the Honor Council, and by letting the students share more responsibility with the system.

In the new system the Attorney General Committee investigates the case and presents it in court. In the actual trial, the jury decides the innocence or guilt. Sentence will be decided by the Honor Council.

The jury is composed of: two permanent jurors from a group of four and seven chosen from the applicants for the rotating jury.

The new system is used separately for both men and women.

National Body Recognizes Ping Pong Club

The Chapel Hill Table Tennis Club recently received notice of recognition by the United States Table Tennis Association, according to Bob Galloway, president of the club.

The club was formed shortly before Christmas by a group of Universty and high school students, who felt that there was a need for such a club in 'his area.

From 15 members at its birth, the club has grown so that it now includes some 20 members and approximately 150 active participants.

Chad Ross, Bob Brockman, and Galloway are currently copping the honors in the weekly ping-pong tournaments, held every Sunday night at 7 p.m. in the game room of Graham Memorial.

Galloway said that he was currently negotiating for use of Woollen Gymnasium on Sunday nights in order to have enough room to meet the demand of ping-pong enthusiasts.

Galloway invited all students who have any interest in table tennis to come and play any Sunday night.

Carter Expresses View On Vending Machines

Bob Carter, independent candidate for president of the student body, has initiated the idea of a training program for student government leaders. Carter also spoke for a continuance of the sharing of vending machine profits with the dorms.

In todays statement, Carter said:

"At the present time each men and women's dormitory on campus is receiving $50 from the vending machine profits fro dorm TV repairs during the year. This money was given only for the current year.

"These funds were asked for because the dormitories were spending a great deal of their social funds in order to pay for such repairs. I feel that this extra money has helped the dormitories financially this year and this practice should be continued next year.

"Any of the repair money that is not used during the year should be carried over and in time a surplus would be accumulated with which a new TV set could be purchased. As president of the student body I would work toward getting this repair money for all dormitories, men and women.

"Another area of importance in student government is leadership training. Many of the people who are elected or appointed to positions are not adequately familiar with their positions to fulfill them properly.

"Although a system of leadership training could not be planned and carried out before the election, such a program could be held after the spring election and also one could be planned for next year.

"I feel that such training would be beneficial to all concerned and would add greater continuity to all organizations. Student Government would not necessarily plan or sponsor any or all of these leadership programs, but it would be the job of the president of the student body to see that as many organizations as possible had them. As president I would try to see that this would be done."

Furtado Takes Swing At Room Rent Hikes

Don Furtado, Student Party candidate for student body president, gave his opinions Monday increasing room rent to pay for men's dormitories.

In a statement to The Daily Tar Heel Furtado said:

"During the past year, the University has almost completed construction on three new men's dormitories. I am pleased to have these badly-needed facilities added to the University, but I am very concerned by the manner in which these new dormitories will be paid for on a self-liquidating basis.

"In other words, the students themselves will pay for the dormitories through their room rents over a period of years.

Rents Will Rise

"The use of this self-liquidating plan will cause an increase in all dormitory room rents next year. If the self-liquidating policy is continued, each addition to the University's facilities will be accompanied by a rise in dormitory room rent.

"It is not the job of students at a state university to provide funds for the construction of dormitories. This is the duty of the state of North Carolina and they must accept that duty.

"I know that the self-liquidating construction plan is as distasteful to the administration as it is to the students, but this fact, in itself, has not eliminated the use of the self-liquidating policy.

"The president of the Student Body must next year take a leading part in an active student-administration campaign to end the unwarranted and unacceptable policy of paying for the construction of new dormitories by increasing dormitory room rents."

Senior Class UP Nominees Present Slate

University Party candidates for senior class offices announced their campaign platform in a statement from senior class presidential candidate Jeff Hare, Monday.

The platform includes: setting up the senior class budget as soon as possible and organizing the various senior class projects and necessary committees early. "The UP candidate pledge to do the upmost to serve the class efficiently and with credit to the offices to which they aspire," Hare said.

Oother candidates on the UP slate for senior class offices include: Hamp Lefler, vice-president; Betty Root, secretary; John Whitaker, treasurer and Sarah Arnold, social chairman.

Hare, who has served as clerk of the Men's Honor Council and chairman of the Summer School Council, has served as chairman of the Finance Committee of the Student Legislature.

The Finance Committee, under Hare's leadership, has made the change to let the senior class propose its own budget. In the past, the budget had been formed before the new officers took their positions.

Hare, who has also been an orientation counselor and a member of the Bi-Partisan Selections Board, has stated that he has "talked with George Ragsdale, this year's president and wuold like to work closely with him in the various senior projects for the remainde rof the year."

SP Chairman Calls Furtado Best Qualified

Student Patry Chairman Pat Adams endorsed Student Party presidential candidate Don Furtado in a statement to The Daily Tar Heel Monday.

Adams said, "Don has impressed all of us who have worked with him this year with his quiet, determined leadership. He is without a doubt the most experienced and qualified candidate."

Commenting on Furtado's varied activities in student government, Chairman Adams said, "As vice-president of the Student Party and speake rof the Legislatuer Don has shown that he can handle complex problems.

"He has worked on the Honor Council changes, the Student Union plans, as a member of the GM Board of Directors, as well as with many other problems facing the Carolina Campus."

Adams added, "The Student Party has furnished able and dedicated leadership for the last two years beginning with Bob Young, and I am sure that Don Furtado will offer the same dynamic leadership."

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Carol Jean Suther, Nancy Grubb, Jane Pulley, Rosalind Earle, and Johnsie Thomas and Charles Phillips, Dean Culbreth, Robert Peebles, John Ward, Michael, Kopuski, Townsend Holt, Joseph Ferrell, Edmund Lively, John William Ott, Joel Fleishman, Everett Ellenwood, David McFadyen, Nelson Leverage, David Parrish, Spencer Gray, Fred Baber, Donald Patrick, Raymond Collins, Abe Walston and Harold Stensel.

Down With Compulsory Attendance At Speeches

A Carolina coed raises an interesting question elsewhere on today's editorial page in pointing to the desirability of compulsory attendance at dormitory speeches by campus politicians.

While she admits to the desirability of being informed on local affairs of a political nature, she asks if that desirability in turn makes compulsory attendance at speeches desireable.

Well, we think we can answer her question—undesireable though our answer may be for the campus politicians. Compulsory attendance at such gatherings is not desireable and should be lifted forthwith.

If coeds can be made to listen to political speeches, attendance at these functions also should be forced upon Carolina gentlemen. And if both sexes are made to listen to candidates for student body president, their attendance also should be required for addresses by the humblest of the numerous candidates participating in spring elections.

What this would mean, of course, is that Carolina students would spend all their time between now and April 1 listening to campaign speeches by countless numbers of political candidates. Their nights would be filled by compulsory meetings.

That, we feel, is undesireable. But it is not nearly so undesireable as the very practice of being forced to attend meetings of any kind at UNC, and particularly meetings of a political nature.

When you can be forced to attend political meetings, you can be forced to vote. And, conceivably, when you can be forced to vote you can be forced which way to vote. Thus, compulsory attendance at political speeches is a threat to the democratic practice of voluntary participation.

Theoretical though that threat may be, we feel its implications are sufficient to demand at once the cancelling of compulsory attendance at political speeches, leaving UNC students with the privilege of listening to whom they please whenever they please.

Honor System Commission Needs You For Jury Duty

The newly instituted Honor System Commission currently is holding interviews to select jurors who will serve in the student courts recently revised by the legislature.

It is appropriate, therefore, that we should take this space to explain the importance of the interviews and the contributions to the judicial system at UNC which the Honor System Commission is attempting to make.

Under provisions of a bill passed by the student legislature last week, the HSC will select students on the basis of sincerity, interest, competence and understanding of the judicial system for service as jurors within the student courts.

Students who meet up to the requirements of the HSC wil be among a list held by the Attorney General's office, which will call students in for jury duty for cases coming before student courts.

The importance of this practice lies in the campus-wide participation in judicial affairs which the jury system promises to stimulate at UNC. It is an interest in the judicial system which does not now exist.

As a step to further broaden that interest in the future, the Honor System Commission has been set up as a temporary body which one day will be dissolved when its work has produced favorable attitudes among students for the jury system.

When that temper of mind has been created—when the jury system becomes an integral part of campus life in which all students will participate—selective interviews will give way to universal jury duty on the student courts.

Consequently, in its first stages of transition from a rather closed and intimate group to a greatly expanded system involving the entire student body at large, the judiciary at UNC now needs extensive and capable participation to assure a beter judicial system and fairer justice for all.

The Honor System Commission needs and requests your help. If you're interested in student government, or if you want to contribute in a large way to campus life, drop by for one of the interviews the commission is holding this week.

In the end, you will be contributing to a better judicial system at UNC.

The Winds Of Doctrine

The Carolina Symposium, which ran all last week at Chapel Hill, easily attracted the most varied collection of big names this state has seen in a long time. It also exposed the University students who comprised the major part of the symposium audiences to a wide variety of opinion—some orthodox and some unorthodox, but most of it stimulating.

Here are a few samples of what regular attendants at the lectures and discussions heard:

"The Negro of the South has been here for generations, but he will soon be an immigrant, into the American culture. His big troubles will begin when he achieves first class citizenship politically and economically . . . He will go through the same process as the Irish, the Jews, the Slavs and the Italians in America."—Harry Goldon of Charlotte, editor of the Carodina Israelite.

"There is no rhyme or reason for the economic crisis in which we find ourselves, or for artificially rigged inflation."—Victor Reuther, administrative assistant to the President, United Auto Workers.

"We must contrive to make money and our monetary system our tools for better distribution of our growing productivity rather than our master."—Spencer Love, president of Burlington Industries.

"Many educators are afraid of change. They are afraid of labels. If report cards are tampered with, teachers are accused of being progressive. If the gold stars are discontinued as a competitive device, they are accused of sabotaging private enterprise. If the 100 per cent promotion policy is introduced, schools must defend themselves against attacks from 100 per cent American organization."—Dr. Benjamin Fine, dean of the Graduate School, Yeshiva University.

"Our greatest business is to get along with the continuing American revolution which only those who call themselves its Daughters could possibly believe was merely a basis for big bosomed local pride."—Jonathan Daniels, editor of the Raleigh News and Observer.

"More than 2,000 newspapers are published in the Soviet Union. A small proportion published by the (Communist) party reflect the point of view of the party."—Sergei Striganov, charge d'affaires, Russian embassy.

"The attitude of J. Edgar Hoover and the House Un-American Activities Committee toward the Communist party in America is a hoax. The party today is decimated and hardly a factor at all."—Michael Harrington, staff member, Fund for the Republic.

And so it went. "All the winds of doctrine," to use Milton's phrase, "were let loose to play upon the earth." Some were true and some were false, but we, like Milton, need not fear that truth will be "put to the worse in a free and open encounter."

What, after all, is the purpose of a college education if it isn't the pursuit of truth? In our own state, the Carolina Symposium is a contribution to that pursuit.—WINSTON-SALEM JOURNAL.

J. Y.'S JAZZ

Something For All In 'Sound And Fury' Jobs

Sunday at two o'clock in Memorial Hall the 1958 edition of the "Sound and Fury" began its tryouts. Because I had a good deal to do with putting this show together, I am vitally concerned with its welfare, and wish to take time out from the world of jazz to tell a little about the way the show operates, what it's all about, and to urge every member of the student body with even the slightest talent or interest in the stage to take part in the show.

As you all know, the "Sound and Fury" is a student show which relies entirely upon the enthusiasm of the student body for its success. A show like this is more than a group of actors; it is a group of people of varied skills and interests—writers, carpenters, stagehands, musicians, painters, all the many and varied types that go into the making of a successful show. All these people will be needed to put the show on, and all of you can help.

I have never been able to give an adequate resume of the show's plot, because it is extremely complicated. Suffice it to say that it is a story of life in New York City, a life composed of many different elements. These elements are far from homogenous, which tends to add to the complexity of the plot. A lot of the show is based on jazz—the music and the life that goes along with it. It is here that the show reaches whatever potential it may have ,a potential guaranteed by the wonderful melodies of Mike Dunn and Cecil Hartsoe, two of the greatest people I know.

There are a lot of wonderful people who are working on the "Sound and Fury" this year—G. C. Pridgen is producing it (But then what doesn't he produce?), Cecil Hartsoe is directing it, Eleanor Brawley puts all those details together that we can't seem to figure out for ourselves, Ed Crow is designing the sets, Jack Mitchell is running the adding and subtracting end, and a whole slew of talented, friendly people are doing millions of small tasks. You'd like to work with these people.

If you want to get your face on the stage, there are a lot of parts—big and small—about forty as a matter of fact. There won't be as much dancing as usual, but any aspiring Fred Astaires or Agnes DeMilles should come around; we can use you. If you like to sing, try a solo lead or a chorus part; the songs are fun to sing. If you like to bang a hammer or wield a brush, Ed Crow is going to have some spectacular scenes to be put together. And those people who pull the curtains and move the props are indispensable; without them, we're sunk.

There is a lot to do in the "Sound and Fury" this year, and we need a lot of people.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

Cleanliness At Lenoir Hall

To the Editor:

It is to be regretted that the editorial and the picture of the dirty plate occupied the place of the lead editorial in the Friday Tar Heel, because it was completely out of character with editor Eisele. He could never have seized on the dirty plate and written a diatribe insinuating that this is a typical occurence at Lenoir Hall. I think it is remarkable that of the tens of thousands of knives, forks, spoons and pieces of china washed at Lenoir Hall every day, that a dirty piece turns up so rarely.

It is true that hot water only hardens eggs, making it stick like cement, and that unless it is scrubbed off before placing dishes and flat ware in the dishwasher it will stick and not wash off. But consider how almost impossible it is to inspect every fork or dish before it is brought to the dining room. I think the cafeteria is kept remarkably clean. I have never found a dirty piece in the eight months I have been eating there. I don't contend there haven't been any dirty dishes, but if this was a common occurrence, surely I would have run across it.

If anybody wants a thankless job, just let him go into the food business. The Lord himself couldn't please everybody. The one comment that I would like to make to the managment of Lenoir Hall is that the fresh vegetables, carrots, cabbage, broccoli, Brussell Sprouts, cauliflower, asparagus, turnip greens, spinach, are over cooked. When fresh vegetables are cooked too much they lose their food value. A good rule is cook these vegetables only a few minutes, and remove from heat as soon as you can stick a sharp fork thru them. It is difficult to get vegetables just right when huge qualities must be cooked and served hot, but it can be done. It sometimes requires re-education of the cook, and sometimes of the customers, but if we are to get the most from the food we eat, the effort is worthwhile. I am sure the management and the cooks are open to suggestions. They have a hard job, and they are doing a good job. There is no call for sarcasm and ridicule. I am sorry that editor Eisele didn't assign his guest editor to another column on his page.

Mrs. Otelia C. Connor

(Ed. Note—Mrs. Connor indicates in her last sentence that the editorial to which she refers was not written by Mr. Eisele. He did, in fact, write the editorial.)

ATTENDANCE

To the editor:

I feel that attendance of speeches made by candidates for student government is highly desirable since it is in the interest of informed voting.

Several nights ago in house meeting it was announced that next week candidates for student government positions would speak to our dormitory and that attendance at these speeches is compulsory. I would like to raise a question: Does the desirability of having students attend these speeches make compulsory attendance desirable?

Perhaps this question is analogous to the following one: Does the desirability of church attendance make compulsory church attendance desirable?

Preparing For Brussels Fair: Trying Experience

By FRANK CROWTHER

(Edit Note: Mr. Crowther is former associate editor of The Daily Tar Heel.)

It's really very easy to prepare for the Brussels World's Fair. All one needs is strong nerves, excessive patience, a good finger nail clip and three months supply of tranquilizers.

After receiving my telegram on Thursday, March 6, I went into a state of trauma—there were exactly 28 days to withdraw from school, transport my belongings from Chapel Hill to my home in Chevy Chase, obtain my passport, et cetera, et cetera, et cetera. In this explanation of my own predicament, the reader may be able to understand some of the confusion which has plagued the Fair officials and, at the same time, learn something of the function of the American Guides at Brussels.

In the original planning for the fair, the officials decided that they would need 250 Guide-Demonstrators, preferably American youths between the ages of 19 and 25. One hundred of these guides would be selected by the respective governors of the states; the others would be selected by a special screening program executed by the Department of State. My application was to the latter program.

The confusion came when the officials realized that their funds were not sufficient to cover all of the proposed programs. Therefore, an additional request for $2,054,000 was entered into the budget which President Eisenhower sent to the Congress. Of this amount, $689,000 was for the employment of the Guide-Demonstrators. This being an election year, some of the House members realized that they had a prime opportunity to embarrass a Republican State Department, although calling the State Department either Republican or Democratic is rather ridiculous. They were and are aiming at the present administration.

As the reader knows, all appropriations of Federal monies must originate in the House of Representatives. Therefore, the House had first shot at the bill. Since the Democrats have control of both houses of Congress there are Democratic chairmen of all committees and sub-committees. The chairman of the sub-committee which handled the funds for the State Department was Rep. Rooney, an old war-horse who has been in the House for 25 years. Eventually, he saw to it that the Brussels Fair funds were cut to one million dollars. The Senate, after they received the bill, and being wiser, as they usually are, restored the total amount of $2,054,000. This is the present situation.

The next move is for Rep Canon, chairman of the House Ways and Means committee, to call for a caucus wherein the members of the House and Senate will meet together and attempt to compromise. Both Rooney and Canon realize that, once the caucus is called for, they will not have the votes to block the funds, so they are being obstinate about calling for the meeting. They plan to wait until the last minute.

Meanwhile, the Brussels Fair officials are having apoplexy. They had approximately 1,000 applications, mostly from college students like myself, and decided to notify 100 of them that they were to be employed by the government. The one drawback was that they could not guarantee our employment until the outcome of the appropriations bill was definitely known. So they asked us to gamble. Unless we had begun our preparations immediately (this was March 6th), it would have been impossible for us to sail on the proposed date of March 28th. One hundred of us took the gamble.

The latest word came in a telegram from New York last night (March 19th): "Will advise definitely by late Friday evening March 21 whether travel plans March 28 must be cancelled. Do not ship luggage." So here I sit in Chevy Chase, French book in hand, seven Siamese cats for company, a warm fire in the fireplace and 12 inches of snow on the ground outside with more coming.

Now a word on the guide program itself.

The Department of State has arranged a comprehensive training program for the guides. From the moment we board the ship, our every moment has been planned. In the mornings we have daily language study of French and German under a special method developed by Language Research, Inc. at Harvard University.

The rest of our program is under the direction of the Council on Student Travel with an experienced staff of college and university faculty members to conduct the seminars.

The seminars include: (1) Daily Art lectures on Western Europe, illustrated by slides from the Metropolitan Museum; (2) Briefing on cultural patterns in Western Europe, an introduction to the political, religious, economic, ethnic customs and Western European traditional etiquette; (3) Lectures and discussions to clarify our own thinking about the USA, its European roots, its problems and strengths; (4) Forums on "Questions Americans are asked in Europe"; (5) A recreational program to include European and American jazz, formal dances, talent nights, etc.

After our arrival in Brussels, a second training program has been set up. The main activities of each day consist of: (1) French and German classes; (2) a lecture topic, such as "Your Brussels Fair", "Social Structure & Customs in Belgium", "Art & architectural landmarks", "Belgian economic & political structure", and "The educational system in Belgium;" and (3) a field trip pertaining to the daily lecture topic, such as meeting the university students and having a dance with them, visiting the Palais des Nations, Palais de Justice, Musee Moderne, la Bourse, Palais des Beaux Arts, ect.

Three days before the fair opens, our final activity will be a party for the Belgian students as well as for students and representatives of other countries.

I had hoped to give a more detailed account of the fair and its activities, but that will have to wait until I send my next column—probably from shipboard, in which I will try to evaluate our training program. That is, if we ever board the ship!

Charlie Sloan Names Mike Simpson To Manage His Editorial Campaign

Mike Simpson, a senior History major from Charlotte, has been named general campaign manager for Charlie Sloan, The Daily Tar Heel editorial candidate announced yesterday.

"As general campaign manager Mike will be a great asset in helping me contact people and informing them of my qualifications," Sloan said. Simpson will help cover areas of the campus Sloan's dormitory campaign managers will be unable to reach.

Sloan released a partial list of his campaign team with his announcement of Simpson as general campaign manager. "I have asked several good friends living in dorms to help me out. These men will concentrate on informing the students in their dorms of my qualifications," he said.

Dorms Staff

The list of dormitory campaign managers includes Tom Isenhour, Cobb; Ben Taylor, Stacy; George Mayo, Everett; Joost Polak, Lewis; Graham Neville, Joyner; Fred Still, Manly; Bob Kasely, Mangum; Jim Jordon, Ruffins; Buddy Shapard, Winston; Tom Overman, Old West; Mike Simpson, Old East and Jerry Shields, Steele, according to the candidate.

Sloan said he would release the names of his campaign representatives in the women's dorms, sororities and fraternities soon.

According to the junior journalism major from Arlington, Va., these people are all thoroughly informed of his plans, platform, and views on various issues.

'Should Lead Opinion'

Sloan pointed out that he has had almost three years' experience on The Daily Tar Heel and during this time has served in every capacity on the writing and photography side of the paper.

When asked what he thinks are the most important duties of the editor, Sloan said, "to make sure the news pages cover the campus and the editorials lead rather than mirror student opinion."

Whitley States His Stand On Discriminatory Clauses

"Our Greek-letter socities deserve a true, impartial representation of their activities in their student newspaper," John Whitley, candidate for the editor of The Daily Tar Heel, commented today.

"The American Greek- letter fraternity system has a great many enemies in this country today. This feeling has arisen partly from the social revolution which followed Word War II.

"We can be sure that a large part of all existing unfriendliness towards frtaernities is simply a matter of ignorance and misinformation. The public is influenced by the kind of publicity that happens to come their way. The kind of publicity given to fraternities in the news that most people read has often been unfavorable.

"In all fairness to these socities, I see the need to publicize their positive and constructive activities.

'Good Fraternity School'

"I am confident that the administration is behind the fraternity system, and I feel sure it would be proud to call Carolina a "good fraternity school."

"But the fraterunties must take the initiative, they need to devote a great deal of serious effort to improving their public relations, and work closer with University officials.

Impartially, I will strive to get the fraternities all the publicity they deserve, and will work with them, as I will all groups, in as fair a way as possible.

"The discrimatory clauses problem presents a legal dilemma. By the human right of choice or by the right of voluntary association, our socities have the right to choose those members whom they desire as associates, as long as they do not invade the rights of others.

Should Recognize

"Through the right of recognition, the University has the right to recognize or refuse to recognize its student organizations based upon how such organizations select their members.

"And society, as a whole, stands by to say that while all men are equal, this does not mean that they must all have the same friends, or the opportunity to have the same friends.

"The choosing of one's own friends and associates is a social right which cannot be confused with civil rights, and therefore is not subject to legislation abridging that social right. I am opposed to the use of legislation in the solving of this issue.

"There seems to be a wide gap between the thinking of college fraternity leaders who resent being pushd to eliminate restrictive clauses from membership requirements and those who are doing the pushing. I will strive to close this gap.

Legislation Not Answer

"Legislation is not the answer. If outsiders do not agree with the system for selection, it is their duty to try to educate the members of the group to try to change the basis for selection. If they attempt to legislate, they destroy or take away the rights of the group.

"Pressure groups can not solve the issue from the outside; the change must come from within the fraternity system itself.

"On the issue of delayed or early rush ,I think it should be left to the IFC to decide, as all fraternity matters should be."

SOUND AND FURY—Jean White, Pee Wee Batton and Jack Spooner (L. to R.) recreate a scene from last year's Sound and Fury production, "Thieves' Holiday." This year's production is underway, and the cast will be announced soon.

Curt Gans Wants More Provocative Matter On Daily Tar Heel Edit Page

Curtis Gans, candidate for editor of The Daily Tar Heel, stated yesterday, that The Daily Tar Heel should be a more lively paper than it currently is.

"College should be the breeding place of ideas, and a college newspaper as an educational enterprise should be in the forefront in presenting as many ideas and opinions as it possibly can.

"The Daily Tar Heel can be a great force for improvement, under the right leadership. The paper has the ability to understake various studies and investigations into various aspects of campus life and bring to light either needed improvement or a need for praise.

"The paper should draw on the full resources of the University in dealing with the problems that face the campus and the world. Professors in the University should be able to write for the newspaper on topics of national and international interest, on which they are perhaps better acquainted than the student.

Provocative Editorials

"The paper ought to elicit student opinion both through provocative and responsible editorials and through the use of the GMAB Polls Committee.

"Moreover, the paper ought to have provocative features on various aspects of campus life. Right now the basic courses in the French Department are undergoing a revolutionary change under the leadership of George Daniel. This and other news can be treated in a manner that is both interesting and educattional.

"There is also a crying need to acquaint the students with the variety and background of the people that make up the educational community.

"Features on students from all walks of campus life from scholars and athletes to campus politicians and artists, as well as professors and administrators should definitely be published.

Area Happenings

"There is also a distinct need for a feature on the happenings in the Raleigh-Durham-Chapel Hill area in movies, television, radio, ice skating, bowling, concerts, and whatever else this area offers the student to do.

"Things like women's athletics and group projects, which curreatly go unnoticed should be written about. Activities of groups outside of the limited area of studeat government should be covered more thoroughly.

"A paper which can present ideas, cover the interesting events that happen on campus, and have features dealing with problems and people connected with campus affairs is a truly good campus paper with adequate coverage.

"This is the type of paper I intend to bring to the campus—a lively and interesting paper."

Candidate Pipkin Asserts Criticism Will Get 'Action', Not Antagonism

Pringle Pipkin candidate for the editorship of The Daily Tar Heel, advocated that "the function of the editorials of The Daily Tar Heel should be to improve all aspects of the University."

Pipkin expressed his opinions on editorial policy in the following statements to The Daily Tar Heel:

"Nothing can be held above criticism. However, criticism should be directed in such a manner that it produces action rather than just antagonism.

"Criticism should be followed by some logical suggestion of how to make the necessary changes, and the editor should be well enough informed so that he can name specific defects.

"The suggestions of the paper must remain practical if the editorials of the paper are going to be respected. The editor can be a leader without losing contact with the aspirations of the students and the University.

"Approximately 80 per cent of the editorials will deal with the University and its students. During the past year I have covered every Student Legislature meeting but three.

I am aware of the problems facing student government, and through the columns I have written I have gained experience in dealing with these problems.

"The editorials will not be used to show I can solve all of Dulles' problems for him in three easy steps when such important campups matters as an increase in dormitory rent cries for investigation and discussion.

"I will talk with student leaders, both dormitory and fraternity, and University officials in order to determine their problems and those areas in which the editor can help solve the problems.

"Though the editor is a leader, he is also a public servant whose job is to make vocal the proposals, complaints and aspirations of all his constitutients.

"However, the editor must use common sense and discretion in choosing what he will write about, and, when honest disagreement occurs, he must state his views openly and frankly without trying to please everyone.

"If the editor wants to conduct a crusade on the behalf of some group, he must inform himself of that groups problems and desires. He must remember that what he will write usually has some effect on that group's situation.

"The editor must be a vital member of the Universty community. Used irresponsibily, The Daily Tar Heel can bring great discredit to the students and to the University.

"A responsitel editor sincerely interested in the betterment of his University can be one of the greatest assets that the University could have."

Ann Frye Emphasizes News Angle

Daily Tar Heel editorial candidate Ann Frye said Monday that if elected editor she would place her greatest efforts on the news.

"A newspaper could still be called a newspaper without editorials, but there is no such thing as a newspaper without news.

"Therefore I think the main efforts of the editor should be directed to the news that appears in The Daily Tar Heel. There is presently great need for improvement of news coverage, improvement of writing and better selection of the news before it comes out in the Tar Heel.

"If elected editor, I would emphasize the news, and of somewhat lesser importance would be page two. If I see the need of editorializing about some aspect of campus life (and there are enough issues to fill many editions of The Daily Tar Heel), I will approach these issues with thoughtfulness and clarity. However, I will not seek issues just for the sake of writing about something.

"A good newspaper is good because of its news and not because of a well-written editorial page.

"People read news and form opinions from news stories. but now many pepole are actually influenced by an editorial? How many Americans were influenced by the overwhelmingly Republican editorial pages in the 1948 election?"

Golfers Make Debut Today Against State

The 1958 edition of the Carolina varsity golf team will open its season this afternoon by playing host to Roy Clogston's golfers from State. This afternoon's match at Finley Golf Course was to have been the second outing of the season for the Tar Heels, but it became the first when last Saturday's match against Davidson was cancelled.

Although the final pairings for this afternoon's contest have not been fixed, Coach Chuch Erickson will rely heavily on the returning lettermen from last years squad. Lettermen Tom Langley, Gene Lookabill, Bob Ruffin, and Bill Thornton have lead the qualifiers and are expected to see action today.

The other qualifiers who will be shooting for a starting spot against the Wolfpack include John McKee, Charlie Erdman, Joe Callicott, Charlie Gray, Harry Braxton, Bob Kochenour, Sted Morris, Walt Wilson and Johnny Johnson.

The freshman golf team has been cut to twelve members and is now composed of Ed Justa, Paul Erhardt, Jimmy Rouse, Bob Vontempo, Jim McCall, Dave Goode, Cris Jones, Mike Deutch, Marvin Blount, Guy McGraw, Ramsey Green, and John Brown. The frosh are still practicing and do not swing into action today.

Basilio-Robinson Bout Tonight, Champ Favored To Keep Title

By JERRY LISKA

CHICAGO, (AP) — A current 8-5 choice, Carmon Basilio makes the first defense of his world middleweight title tonight in a rematch with amazing Sugar Ray Robinson, who seeks that crown for the fifth time.

The 15-round match, beginning at 11 p.m., in the Chicago Stadium will be broadcast nationally by CBS and shown on closed circuit television in 140 cities and 38 states.

Likelihood of a new indoor fight gate record dwindled with only $256,000, excluding reservations, in the sponsoring International Club's till at noon Monday. Unless a tremendous box office rush develops before fight time, the record of $422,918 set in the stadium in 1947 by Tony Zale and Rocky Graziano appears safe. Actual attendance tomorrow night may be between 17,000 and 20,000.

Considerable mystery surrounding Robinson's weight wil be lifted at Tuesday noon's official weigh-in in the stadium ring. Rumors had it Sugar Ray was four or five pounds over the 160 limit Saturday and will have to dry out plenty to make the official poundage. He just made 160 when he was dethroned by Basilio in their fierce 15-round battle in New York last Sept. 23.

Basilio, smallest bona fide middleweight champion in history, has no weight problem at all. He'll probably scale 153 or 154 and by fight time may be spotting Sugar Ray as many as 10 pounds. Former heavyweight champion Joe Louis said that Robinson, after a heavy, nourishing post weigh-in meal may be as heavy as 165 entering the ring.

Basilio, at 5-8½, also will spot Robinson more than 4 inches in height and about 3 inches in reach. But Carmen, 30, has a 7-year advantage in the vital age department.

It isn't Robinson's weight, height or reach, the boring-in Basilio needs to fear. It's Sugar Ray's knockout punch which the 37-year-old Robinson seems to unleash when his back is against the wall. Each of three times Robinson has won back the middleweight title, it has been by knockouts — Randy Turpin in 1951; Bobo Olson in 1955; and Gene Fullmer last May.

All signs point toward a replay of the fierce encounter in New York in September in which the two judges voted for Basilio and Referee Al Berl called it for Robinson.

Illinois scoring is on a point system rather than by rounds as in New York. In Illinois, the "five-must" system is used. A round winner gets five points and a round loser any lesser number with a draw being called five-five.

There is no love lost between Basilio and Robinson. Rugar Ray's handlers, at a pre-fight physician examination last week, complained loudly about use of medication on Basilio's cuts in the first fight. They claimed the salve stung Robinson's eyes.

Sunburned Baseballers Return, Rabb Pleased With Team's Play

By RUSTY HAMMOND

Back from its trip to sunny Florida, the baseball team yesterday in practice had to return to the inclement Chapel Hill weather which is hampering all varsity sports to a great degree this spring.

The Tar Heels split their four games in the Sunshine State, taking two from Rollins and dropping a pair to Georgia.

Rabb Pleased

Coach Walt Rabb commented yesterday, I was well satisfied with the team's performances in Florida. I got a good chance to look all the boys over down there, and I can see now that our defense will be good. With the exception of that one bad inning (the eight against Georgia when they blew the ballgame wide open in the first game of Friday's doubleheader) that it will come through. We met three left-handers down there. I asked the other coaches to pitch left-handers because we will face a lot of southpaws in the conference."

"Right now we are about a week behind schedule because of the weather. I was impressed with the work of Dave Floyd (Floyd, a reliefer, put out the fire twice to save the game). We will have good catching, and whenever a double-play situation came up, our infield handled it well. The only problem we have now, as before, is the overall inexperience of the squad."

Weather Hampers Practice

The team yesterday was working play situations the best they could against the climatic forces. The wind was whistling all around Emerson, and it felt about 20 below.

When one player failed to run full speed in a steal, Rabb cracked, "You ought to be able to run up here on this hard ground after sliding around in that sand down there (Florida).

Coker Out

Footballer Don Coker, now free aftre the Blue-White game, was working out with the team and is regarded as a top-notch outfield prospect.

Basketball Semi-Finals

By virtue of winning their game last night SAE fraternity and Winston Dorm will meet Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock to decide the All-Campus basketball champion.

In the opening game last night the Law School actually defeated the Winstonites 45-37, but they were forced to forfeit the game because of of two ineligible players in the lineup. Former varsity players Cooper Taylor and Jippy Carter were the ringers that cost the barristers a shot at the title, but in the actual game they spearheaded the lawyers Pyrrhic victory.

In the second game SAE came from behind late in the second half to catch their Pika opponents and then won the game going away by a 40-25 score. The SAE's were paced by Sandy Ainslie who had 14 points and Buddy Sasser who contributed 12. Daily Goff was highman for the PiKA's with 6 points.

Howell Hall, the home of the University of North Carolina School of Pharmacy, was named for the first dean of the present school, Edward Vernon Howell.

LOCKMAN INSURANCE

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Veteran Whitley Lockman, who broke in with the Giants as a teenage whiz, now provides the insurance so necessary to a San Francisico club counting heavily on a new crop of rookies.

Orlando Cepeda, the 20-year-old power hitter from Puerto Rico, currently displaces the 31-year-old Lockman at first base and and another newcomer, Willie Kirkland, is expected to take over in the outfield from the campaign's start.

This leaves Whitey, in his 13th year of major league ball, without a regular job. Still he figures in Manager Bill Rigney's planning.

"Lockman can play two or position, run, pinch hit, bunt-all those things so necessary to a good bench man," the skipper declares. "He's a seasoned pro who knows what to do."

Whitey also bats left handed and hitters from that side of the plate aren't numerous on the San Francisco club. The sale of Don Mueller to the Chicago White Sox left just three portside hitters excluding pitchers — Lockman, Kirkland and Dusty Rhodes.

Trackmen Travel To Raleigh To Open Season With State

By DAVE WIBLE

Conference cross-country champions, and second best indoors, the Carolina track team will move into its third yearly phase this afternoon when it opens the outdoor season against State in Raleigh.

Weather wise, it has been a rough change over for the Tar Heels. Rain, mud and cold has limited the workouts, and caused the thinclads to be far behind their planned training schedule.

No Scurlock

The Tar Heels will be without the services of middle-distance sensation Dave Scurlock, who is still recovering from a sprained ankle. The injury is not serious, and should not affect his running later this spring. Still on crutches, Scurlock does not know when he will start running again.

The freshmen from the two schools will also meet. The Tar Babies won't be able to field a full squad since no one has applied for the wide open hurdle and high jump spots.

A favorite trick of head coach Dale Ranson, is to grab a freshman, lay a pencil on the floor, and get his name if he jumps over it. "A thousand freshmen in this school, and none of them wants to get their feet off of the ground," Ranson sighs.

The varsity picture is not so sad. Paced by team captain and miler, Everett Whatley, two-miler, Wayne Bishop, and hurdler, pole vaulter, and broad jumper Ward Sims, the Tar Heels should give the Wolfpack something to worry about.

Are college students going to the devil — or to God?

Not long ago, college students were mostly known for their atheistic, devil-may care attitudes. But today, something is happening on campuses all across the country that's bewildering the older generations! Now, in this week's Saturday Evening Post, read how cynicism on the campus is being replaced by religion — with amazing facts from many top institutions that will surprise you: Read about the "standing room only" signs hung outside many churches near leading college campuses . . . the great renewed popularity in religious courses in our sophisticated eastern colleges . . . and what many religious leaders say is behind this sudden rebirth of faith!

Be sure to read one of the most timely and significant articles of the day, "Religious Revolution on the Campus," by college chaplain, Jones B. Shannon.

Mike Todd Buried While Wife Screams & Brothers Squabble

By JAMES BACON

CHICAGO, March 26. (AP)—Mike Todd of flim fame around the world was buried today as his beautiful widow, Elizabeth Taylor, screamed "No, No" and his cab driver brothers started a family argument.

The beautiful brunette movie star let out a piercing scream the first time she saw the casket that held the body of her husband, who was killed with three others Saturday in a New Mexico airplane crash.

As she cried hysterically, Todd's older brother, Carl Goldbogen, created a ruckus that almost stopped the simple Jewish rites before they started.

Goldbogen, 61, a Long Beach, Calif., cab driver, had been estranged from Todd and some other members of the family for years but he flew to Chicago for the services anyway. He had fought earlier with his brother, David.

Then as the funeral party entered the tent that secluded the rites from a crowd of 2,500 curious, Carl screamed:

"Get that Hanley out of here. He wouldn't let me in the house."

He was objecting to the presence of Dick Hanley, Todd's executive secretary. Then David tried to restrain Carl but the cabbie yelled:

"Throw me out. I dare you to throw me out. I will not be here while Hanley is here. I know I am only poor Carl."

Finally, brother Frank took over and appeased him. Carl said: "I'll do it for you, Frank." And the service went on.

Miss Taylor, who has been in semi-hysteria since hearing the news of her husband's death, barely made the walk from the limousine to the grave.

With her bearded brother, Howard, holding one arm and Dr. Rexford Kennemar the other, the actress' feet barely touched the ground at times as she approached the tent-over the Goldbogen family plot.

Twice during the rites in Waldheim Cemetery in suburban Forest Park, she wailed: "No, no."

Then as a final gesture, she flung herself on the bronze coffin and sobbed quietly:

"I love you

"I love you, Mike."

Then, back to the limousine at the end of the service, she let her head fall on the shoulders of her brother, Howard. As the car had difficulty getting through some 300 or more persons who lined the roadway, she said:

"Please, for God's sake get the car moving."

Those who were closest to her feared that the ordeal was too much for the 26-year-old widow, still suffering from a virus attack that reached a 102-degree fever.

Policemen who escorted her up an elevator of the Drake Hotel said she collapsed but was quickly revived by her doctor.

According to the Jewish custom, male survivors of the dead producer spoke words over his casket. His son, Mike Jr., 28, called his father "the greatest human being I've ever known."

Brooks' Candidacy Still In Question Following Elections Board Decision

Professors Taylor, Radford Honored

By WYNDHAM HEWITT

Chancellor William B. Aycock announced today the recipients of this year's "Be Be" Tanner Award. They are Prof. George V. Taylor of the History Department and Prof. Albert E. Radford of the Botany Department.

This is the third year the $500 award has been given. The award was established by Kenneth Spencer Tanner and Sara Tanner Crawford to recognize excellence in teaching of undergraduate students, preferably first and second year students.

The formal presentation of the award will be made at the general meeting of the faculty in April.

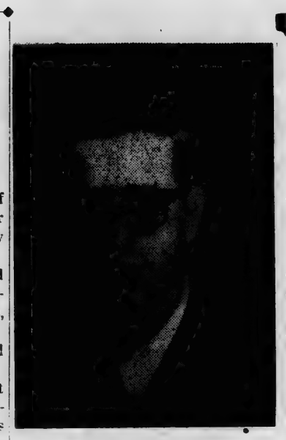
In selecting candidates for this award the Faculty Committee got in touch with students, graduates of the University and faculty members. Actually the students play an important part in the selections for this award. Members of Phi Beta Kappa, The Grail, Golden Fleece, Scabbard and Blade, Valkyries and Alpha Phi Omega were contacted for nominations.

Former Winners

Former winners of the award are Bernard Boyd, professor of religion, J. R. Caldwell, professor of social science, David Basile, professor of geography, William M. Geer, professor of social science.

Professor Radford became a teacher out of necessity. When he returned to UNC after World War II he was working on his Ph.D. With the increased enrollment at that time it was apparent to the University that they could not keep him here unless he started teaching. He did not want to teach but in order to stay at the University he consented.

Radford got his B.S. degree from Furman University and because of his high scholastic average was allowed to go straight into work on his Ph.D. at Carolina.



In 1941 his work was interrupted by the call of Uncle Sam. Radford entered the Army as a private and was discharged in 1946 as a Captain in the Army Engineering Corps. While in the Army Radford helped construct the first pontoon bridge across the Rhine in Germany.

On Research Project

Radford is presently connected with the research project "Flora of the Carolinas." He is heading the two state research project, which is studying the plant life on the coast of North and South Carolina.

Professor Taylor came to Carolina from Michigan State when

JOHN BROOKS
Eligibility Doubtful

'Veep Nominee Said 'Ineligible' To Run

By DOUG EISELE

Indications were yesterday that John Brooks, Student Party nominee for vice president of the student body, will not be eligible to run in spring elections.

The Elections Board ruled Monday that Brooks, a junior from Greenville, is ineligible to participate in spring elections because he does not meet requirements set forth in election laws.

The election laws say a candidate must have an aggregate of 27 hours in the two semesters prior to the semester in which he is nominated for office. Brooks has only 25 hours.

After the Election Boards decision, the vice president nominee appealed to the Student Council but Council chairman Mac Patton said his body "definitely will not hear the case, as it stands now."

A Student Party spokesman told The Daily Tar Heel that no candidate has yet been named to replace Brooks in the race for the vice presidency.

"As far as we know, he's still in the race until someone makes a definite decision as to whether he can run," he said.

Attorney General Sonny Hallford, however, questioned about the Election Boards decision and the refusal of the Student Council to hear the case, was much more definite about Brooks' candidacy.

"John Brooks cannot run," he said. "John Brooks cannot run independently. If John Brooks runs we'll put him in a cell somewhere."

In his appearance before the Election Board, Brooks said his lack of sufficient hours to meet requirements of the law followed doctor's orders that he should not take a full schedule.

Sticks To Laws

The board, however, stuck to a strict interpretation of the law. "Election laws say you must have 27 hours for two semesters immediately preceding the semester in which you are nominated," said chairman Bob Furtado." John Brooks had only 25 hours."

The ruling on Brooks by the Election Board followed closely on the heels of an announcement Saturday from the Dean of Student Affairs office which ruled eight other candidates for spring elections ineligible because they did not meet the requirements of the election laws.

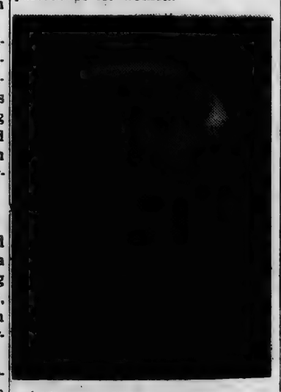
"Not Over Yet"

Just what the outcome of Brooks' attempt to remain a candidate would be was not known yesterday. He indicated, however, that he would press still further for added consideration by the Election Board.

"It's not over yet," he said.

Dot Pressly, Miss Baldwin Honored At Chi Omega Eleusinian Banquet

Miss Alice Mary Baldwin received the ninth annual North Carolina Distinguished Service Award for Women from Epsilon Beta chapter of Chi Omega at the annual Eleusinian Banquet Tuesday night at the Carolina Inn.



Retired Chancellor Robert Burton House presented the award to Miss Baldwin, "scholar, historian, educator, administrator . . . because she has devoted her lifetime to the enrichment of educational opportunities for women."

Miss Baldwin accepted her award and spoke about her experiences and work in North Carolina.

The Chi Omega Prize in Sociology was awarded to Dorothy Pressly of Raleigh, who by the judgment of a committee of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology best exemplifies high scholarship, leadership and promise of productive citizenship.

Chapter members receiving awards were Katherine K. Coe a senior from Washington, D. C. who was named outstanding active; and Mary Roberts of Anniston, Ala., a junior who won the annual scholarship award.

Miss Baldwin was cited as the first woman to be elected to membership of the faculty of Duke University, as Dean of Women of Trinity College and subsequently Dean of the Woman's College of Duke University, and for her research and publications which have contributed to historical knowledge.

Six Receive Med School Service Awards

Six men have been presented with Distinguished Service Awards by the School of Medicine Friday night.

The awards, given annually, went to Thomas J. Pearsall, Rocky Mount; Clarence Stone, Stoneville; Collier Cobb Jr., Chapel Hill Dr. Arthur H. Hondon Jr., Durham; Dr. Eugene P. Pendergrass, Philadephia and Dr. Wesley C. George of Chapel Hill, a member of the faculty. With the exception of Stone, all of the men attended UNC.

The awards, which were presented at the banquet held in connection with Medical Alumni Day, go to persons who have made outstanding contributions to the field of medicine or the School of Medicine.

A citation was awarded each person which told of the outstanding service the recipient had rendered the School of Medicine.

Conference Set Here March 27

The Southeastern Theatre Conference is holding its ninth annual meeting in Chapel Hill March 27-29.

The purpose of the conference is to compare notes on regional theatre, and in this connection Marian Gallaway of the University of Alabama, Wilton Mason of the UNC Music Department, and Tom F. Driver of Union Theological Seminary will be featured speakers, with John Chapman, Drama Critic for the New York News and Arnold Colbath Catawba College also on the roster.

Celebrating Paul Green Year in the Southeast, conference productions of eight one-act plays by Green will be presented in Memorial Hall at 8:30 p. m., Friday and Saturday.

Green will speak to the group at a dinner meeting Friday at 6 p .m. in Lenoir Hall.

An exhibit entitled "Contemporary Theatre in the United States (A Survey in Words and Pictures)" will be on display in the Person Hall Art Gallery in conjunction with a conference tea at 4 p. m. Friday.

The Saturday session will include tryouts for eight summer theatres in The Forest Theatre at 2 p. m.

All session of the Conference are open to the public. Registration fee is $3, and reservations for the Friday evening dinner are $2.

Bill Sugg To Head YMCA For Next Year

Bill Sugg was elected president of the YMCA by acclamation in the Town House meeting Monday night.

Other officers elected were Ed Crow, vice president; Thal Elliott, secretary; Randy Shelton, treasurer; Parker Hodges, program chairman (all by acclamation) and Jack Raper membership chairman over Forest Patterson who was nominated from the floor.

The new officers will be planning next year's program during the next month and will be initiated in April or the last of May.

World In Brief

Service Pay Hike

WASHINGTON, March 25. (AP)—The House today passed 366-22 a bill to make military careers more attractive—with a hefty pay raise as the immediate inducement.

The bill's benefits, going to practically all servicemen with more than two years service, were estimated to cost 668 million dollars a year.

House passage was by roll call vote, sending the bill to the Senate. However, the House acted only after listening to some acid

'Visit To Outer Space' Is Theme For Beaux Arts Ball Here April 11

"A Visit to Outer Space" is the theme chosen by a committee for the first annual Beaux Arts Ball to be held April 11 in the Carolina Inn Ballroom.

The theme was chosen as a result of a unanimous vote on two suggestions submitted by Mr. eHnry Meyer, 7 Hillsboro Apt. and Henry Grady, 2 Pettigrew Dorm. The two will split a prize of five dollars credit at the Intimate Bookshop awarded by the University Art League.

The committee, in selecting this theme, found it the most timely and the one with the best possibility for imagination and individuality for costumes and decoration.

Tickets for the ball may be obtained at Graham Memorial Information Office at $1.40 for couple or stag.

Orientation Blanks

Applications for Women's Orientation Counselors are due from Alderman dorm by noon Thursday and from other dorms and sororities by noon Friday.

Prospective counselors can pick up application blanks fill them in and sign up for interviews in the Graham Memorial office.

Got Talent? Here's Chance To Be A Star

By MARY MOORE MASON

There's music in the air around Chapel Hill these days, and it comes from Chapel Hill students, students who are sending records out to be played across the nation.

Many of us have heard of George Hamilton IV of "Rose and the Baby Ruth" fame, of Andy Griffith who made "What It Was Was Football" here, of Hoke Simpson and "Gigi" and of Pee-Wee Batten who sang "My Big Brother's Friends."

All these talented students got their start through Colonial Records, a small recording company, headed by Orville Campbell, which has its studios located in Swain Hall.

However, just within the last few weeks, a completely different type of recording venture has been started, a company owned and operated by students who are looking for student talent on the campus to record.

Looking For Students

Bill Tunstall, one of the owners of the enterprise, said just the other day, "To my knowledge nothing like this has been done on the campus before. We are looking for students who can sing and play instruments, and we already have some people writing tunes and words for us."

When asked what the name of the company was going to be, Tunstall said that it was to be Tobe Records. He picked the name "Tobe" when he was looking through Life magazine one day and saw somebody with that name. He like the name, so he and his "silent" partner decided to name their company that.

Tunstall himself is a veteran who went to Campbell College at one time and who has also had quite a lot of radio experience. He has worked at radio stations in production and announcing in Texas, Oxford, Southern Pines and Durham. Here at UNC he is a Radio-TV-Motion Pictures major.

The first record that his company has made is one of a group led by Nick Kearns well-known campus entertainer and combo leader. One side of the record has a catchy rock and roll song "Down in Mexico," on it; and the other side holds a ballad with a slight swing, "What Did Somebody Say?"

The record has been played in the local stations but also on Jimmy Capp's programs, "My Best to You." It is now being considered for RCA.

The group of boys who made the record and who are eagerly awaiting its outcome are Ed Crow, the sophomore drummer; Dick Stoker, sophomore sax player; Donald Trapp, arranger; Ralph Harrington, Gerald Purgason, and Jim Shumate, singers; Doyle Craven, bass; Wally Kurfiit and of course, Nick Kearns.

Who knows, maybe we have another George Hamilton IV right here on the campus. Whoever he is, he might do well to go down to Swain Hall and be "discovered" by Bill Tunstall and his recording company.

GM SLATE

The following activities are scheduled for today at Graham Memorial:

Pan Hellenic Council, 3:30-6 p. m., Grail Room; Kappa 7-9 p. m., Roland Parker Lounge I; Carolina Forum, 4-5 p. m., Woodhouse Conference Room; Honor System Committee, 7-10 p. m., Council Room; Polls Committee, 4-5:30 p. m., Roland Parker Lounge I; I. D.C. Court, 7-11 p. m., Woodhouse Conference Room; Bridge Lessons, 7:30-9:30 p. m., Rendezvous Room.

Jobless Pay

WASHINGTON, March 25. (AP)—President Eisenhower today sent Congress a proposal for a 50 per cent increase in the number of weeks unemployed workers may draw jobless benefits.

The White House estimated that the program, a federal augmentation of existing state benefit programs, would cost 500 to 600 million dollars.

Wanted: Boys, Boys, Boys & More Boys

By MARY MOORE MASON

Boys, boys, boys. That's what the UNC trip to Europe this summer needs. They now have twenty attractive young women going, and six young men. Odd as it might seem, this call of distress came not only from the young ladies involved but from the gentlemen who are slightly afraid of the ratio.

The tour now has room for about three more boys, and those who are interested have been asked to apply at the Y office.

The following boys are already going: Dick Stoker, Ward Sims, and Norm White from UNC; Tom Hunter, Davidson; Waring Boys, NC State; and Ed Willingham, UNC graduate.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Carol Suther, Nancy Grubb, Nancy Hamilton, Caroline Richards, Rosland Earle, Mrs. James Pully, and John Thompson, Townsend Hall, Frank Riggs, Nelson Lavern, David Parrish, Frank Abernathy, John Smallwood, Don Patrick, Ray Collins, Abe Walston, Harry Stessel, Dick Clark, Mick Bell, Bill Miller, Charles Phillips, Dean Culbreth, Ed Lively, John Williams and Joel Fleishman.

Political Propaganda: Nothing But Hogwash

Election time in Chapel Hill is more confusing than the panic scenes in Ernest Hemingway's "A Farewell To Arms."

Suddenly, candidates become publicity crazy and their anxiety is further augmented by the so-called question-answer forums which various groups on the campus must conduct during the campaign.

The Daily Tar Heel, more than any other group or institution on the UNC campus, feels the full brunt of this helter-skelter activity which characteristically describes elections in Chapel Hill.

For instance, of a total 229 news inches on pages one and three in the Tar Heel on Tuesday, approximately 112 inches were devoted exclusively to material involving the upcoming elections—about 50 per cent of our total news space.

The figure would be much higher if we discounted pictures used on both pages and the space occupied for 'heads' which precede all stories. Surely, the amount occupied by campaign and election material then would be well over 60 per cent, maybe as high as 70 per cent.

We point this out not because the Tar Heel plans to refuse campaign propaganda between now and April 1, but to show that, by and large, our aspiring candidates are now hastening to exert in a week's time a hoped-for respect for themselves which a year has been unable to produce.

That is the tragedy in elections at the University of North Carolina—the fact that student candidates seemingly rely on a period of one or two weeks in which to present themselves favorably to a student body which should have been forming opinions throughout the year.

It would, indeed, be better if, when election time rolled around, our political aspirants could rest on their records of a year's service to the student body—a period in which respect for the politicians could be moulding—instead of relying almost solely on the campaign propaganda which they have printed in the Tar Heel.

We have not witnessed such extensive, free political advertisement—and that's all it is—in any of the numerous other college newspapers which find their way into our offices. Nor do we see this mad influx of campaign material into other papers in our state and nation.

But when election time rolls around at UNC, if this campaign propaganda can be used as any yardstick, it appears almost as if scores of unknowns thrust themselves onto the political scene with hopes that The Daily Tar Heel will lead the blind to the ballot boxes—and, particularly, that the blind, once there, will know which way to vote.

We do not resent this purpose which we are supposed to be serving. But we do resent the implications of it—that without The Daily Tar Heel no candidate in a political campaign would have a prayer against his more publicity-crazed opponent.

If our political aspirants cannot win without The Daily Tar Heel, they do not deserve to win. If they have not gotten across to the student body in a year's time what they attempt to cram into a period of 14 days, they're not worth a majority vote.

In a word, if it takes endless shouting in a campus newspaper in place of proven leadership and long-standing respect to win a political election, there's hardly a candidate at UNC deserving of the office which he seeks.

GUEST EDITORIAL

Lay The Soul Bare

Each passing day and week a distressing note rings louder around the nation. This note comes not from any single internal disturbance, it has arisen from the nation as a whole and reflects back to the nation as a whole.

What is the note? A fact readily agreed on in any rational circle is that the two armed camps in the world are running a race for supremacy. Herein is the disturbing factor, the race is not being run on different paths, it is being run on the same one. The evil is not in the running, it is in the way of running.

Communism infiltrates free countries. Russia sends up a satellite; democratic revolution ends a dictatorship, and the United States sends up a satellite. And so the race goes.

Communism and Russia use propaganda, they spread stories about the evils of capitalists and capitalism. They guard their secrets carefully, make plans for new weapons, new tactics, and new revolutions.

Democracy and America use propaganda, spread stories about the evils of communists and communism. The Pentagon selects its press releases with care, holds back information about new weapons and tactics, while the state department keeps our foreign policy enclosed in the midst of a dark cloud.

Kruschev drinks, smiles, kisses babies, and shakes hands. Eisenhower plays golf, smiles, and shakes hands.

The people in Russia are ignorant of their government and its plans: they are told what to do and they follow blindly, under threat of physical ostracism.

The people in the United States are ignorant of their government and its plans. They are not told what to do, yet they follow blindly, under threat of social ostracism, which follows from complacency and conformity.

The government does not cry out, and the people do not cry out: they only follow, and follow along the same path as their enemies.

Can it be that the blind are leading the blind? Is not democracy fighting fire with fire, and becoming enveloped in it? With complacency, conformity and ignorance ruling the people, and bureaucracy ruling the government, is not America absorbing that which it believes it fights? The only answer is "yes."

The question now arises—if fire cannot be fought with fire, how must it be done? The answer lies in the opposite. Cold destroys heat, and democracy can destroy communism. But wait. America is a democracy. But no. It is no longer a democracy. What then is a democracy?

Communism relies on, or is founded on strictness, or adherence to the set order. Democracy must then rely, or must be founded on, looseness, on freedom. What looseness and what freedom? No propaganda, complete revelation of plans and actions, and above all, new ideas. This is democracy and this is the way to fight communism. New and plentiful ideas and new and plentiful actions from the ideas is the answer. And these must be laid open, exposed. Unbounded democracy can beat bounded communism. In short, the nation must lay bare its soul.

If ideas and complete revelation of these ideas are the answer, the path on the other side of the fence, from where will these ideas come. The answer to this is education. What kind of education? Not the narrow and limited education of the Communist kind, of science, and science, and science. But education with science, and philosophy, and art, and religion, and history, and languages. The soul of the nation is in its education, and, when that is laid bare, then the soul is laid bare.—The Cavalier Daily.

WISE & OTHERWISE

Election Time For Russians: Nobody Loses

By WHIT WHITFIELD

On the inside pages it passed unnoticed, but it was there nevertheless. We're speaking of the Soviet election returns of last week.

The local political factions might do well to investigate some of their methods, for it seems that they have devised a method whereby the candidates do not have to campaign. There is no wasted effort and no defeated candidates are frustrated.

Communist leaders nominated 1,378 candidates for 1,378 seats, and 1,378 pieces of red machinery were "elected." This must be an indication of the excellent administration the Kremlin is offering this year. What else?

No one can say that Soviet Russia is not democratic, for 133 million voters or 99.97 percent of those eligible cast their ballots after due consideration. The fact that .03 percent did not vote at all would seem to some western observers an indication of civil strife and unrest in the Soviet Union. Nyet! says the Kremlin. The same opinion was voiced by Sergei Striganov of the Soviet Embassy who was visiting in Chapel Hill at the time. His comment was, "the Party is doing well." He felt it unwise to comment further.

(Note: Soviet ingenuity is incredible. Another time-saver for the electorate: Printed ballots which merely have to be folded and placed in the ballot box. (saves money on marking pencils too.)

While we're on the subject of Russian ingenuity it might be interesting to note that the Satellite race is tied at two apiece now. The question which naturally arises is what are the Russians up to now?

Although we can claim no authority in the matter, we submit that the Ruosians are not sleeping, and that they have something up their sleeves to stun the world. Since the alleged experts in such matters variously disagree as to what it is, we would hasten to conjecture that maybe they'll use a real satellite next time. The question is, who goes first—Poland or China? Or maybe they'll send Egypt to the Moon.

Some one brought to our attention that one of our columns was reprinted in the Greensboro Daily News last Thursday. We were pleased but quizzical, so we called Mr. H. W. Kendall of the News to inquire the reason. He informed us that circulation was off somewhat, so that it didn't make any difference. We thanked him and hung up. We'll still not quite sure what he meant.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

Letters On Lenoir, Middle East

To The Editor:

In view of Mr. Hamad's "unselfish, truthful, and realistic" viewpoint, which appeared in The Daily Tar Heel on March 21, I would like to present several facts. Mr. Hamad speaks about the negligence of the West toward Jordan. In his article he neglected to say that his artificially created country of Jordan, which until after World War II had not even existed, was brought into being by Britain, one of the Western countries against whom the Arab world is presently at odds, as a gift to the late King Abdullah. I might also add that Jordan was maintained by the British at a rate of $33 million per annum until the autumn of 1956. General John Baggot Glubb, an Englishman, founded and directed the Arab Legion, which was supposed to have been the best army in the Middle East. The gratitude that General Glubb received for this was to be dismissed by the Jordanians after many years of service in that country.

If Mr. Hamad will recall the events of the autumn of 1956, he will remember that it was largely through the efforts of the United States, who broke with her long-standing allies, that Nasser's neck was saved during the time that Egypt was under attack. Also, as I am sure Mr. Hamad will recall, the United States, by sending her Sixth Fleet to the Mediterranean, played a large part in preserving the independence of Jordan last spring. Since then the United States has been more than generous with aid and weapons to the Jordanians.

Concerning the poverty which Mr. Hamad speaks of in Jordan, one would think that a king of a certain Arab country who receives unlimited wealth and still permits slavery in his country would help his brethren instead of spending his money to maintain huge harems and to give away Cadillacs for gifts. Also until 1956 King Hussein of Jordan ran all over his country in sports cars and planes, letting the British run his country instead of giving his money to his poverty-stricken subjects.

Perhaps Mr. Hamad should reconsider his viewpoint before criticizing the country whose hospitality he is enjoying.

Tax On Script

To The Editor:

I had occasion to spend some time in Chapel Hill this past Saturday and noticed two letters to the editor which concerned themselves with an income tax question. I believe it involved students working at Lenoir Hall whose letters to you seemed to imply that no income tax liability were incurred if meal tickets, rather than cash, were used to remunerate services rendered.

Perhaps there is a ruling to that effect by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with which I am not familiar and which would dispose of this question.

Normally speaking, however, there is little difference as to tax liability between cash and script payments. Both of them are fully taxable to the employee. I feel fairly safe in stating that even if meals were furnished to employees at Lenoir Hall for services rendered without any script being issued, the value of such meals would have to be reported as taxable income.

One provision of the Code deals with meals furnished for the employer's convenience. Perhaps a showing under this provision could lead to exempt status. However the facts contained in these letters would lead me to believe otherwise.

May I suggest that the students concerned request a clarification of this question through the office of Mr. James Williams at the University. His decision should be given considerable weight by all involved.

I enjoy reading your fine paper from time to time.

Realism, Truth Needed: They Finally Said It

U. S. business has been aware of the economic slump for months, but public use of the words "slump" or "recession" has been taboo until now. Business writers have been hesitant about calling the slump what it is, as a bather unaccustomed to the surf is hesitant about getting into a cold ocean.

Here's the way the gradualists among business writers let us in on the bad (or should we say "unwelcome"?) news:

September 15—"The mood among businessmen who look to next year is one of caution. Now nobody is alarmed. Some of the economic signs are just uncertain."

October 15—"Business is in a leveling-off period. We are not having a recession, as some say."

November 1—"Eisenhower's economic advisers are not convinced of a downward business trend. They only note some weaknesses as well as strong factors in the economy. This is an adjustment, not a recession."

November 15—"Business is slightly off. No bust. No recession. It's just that there is nothing in the offing to lift the level of business."

December 1—"Business leaders agree that we are in for some decline in business. Whether the decline will last six months or 12 months is not certain. But this is still not a recession."

January 1—"The business decline will likely continue for at least six months. It's to be worse than any decline since before World War II. But no depression. Hardly a recession."

January 25—"The slump is the real McCoy. It's not a bad recession. But the boom is over. And the news will get worse before it gets better. Prepare for the shock."

The business writers, at long last, reluctantly, have given us the ugly facts of economic life, and their version of the facts runs a bit contrary to the somewhat rosy estimate of the economic situation promulgated the other day by President Eisenhower.

Well, what the country ought to have is the truth. Neither false pessimism nor false optimism will serve us. Realism should be a strong ally in warding off any threat of real depression.

Insurance For The Day After Tomorrow

The day was tomorrow when an atomic bomb fell on my house. I heard the noise and came running home from the supermarket two blocks away, where I was buying some milk.

Only my house was destroyed—nothing else—just a big crater remained. Well, I got kind of excited about the whole thing, ran around screaming and such, but there was nothing to get upset about. Nobody was in the house when the thing dropped on it. So I relaxed. Didn't even think of all my possessions lost, or why the bomb didn't destroy the city.

A huge jet bomber flew around overhead, cruising and circling, waggling its wings once in awhile. That inanimate object looked nervous, and well it might, because one of the neighbors said that it had dropped the bomb, which was disarmed so that only the TNT went off.

"Only the TNT!", I said. "Well, I guess that puts a different light on things!" I suppose I was a little angry at the Air Force.

Things happened fast after that. I stayed at my aunt's place that night and took a few phone calls. One call came all the way from Washington and I spoke to the President. He said he was sorry it happened. I thanked him. He was very kind about the whole thing and offered to pay the damages. I graciously said no, you don't have to pay, I'll charge the government.

Well, I got a few thousand letters and telegrams, too, and my name was in all the papers. People I had forgotten about wrote that they were glad I was safe. Some wrote that they were sorry I was safe. I forgot about THOSE people again.

With all the attention I was getting (some guy in Texas offered to replace everything I had lost), I didn't have much time to really think deeply about what had happened to me, or why it had happened. No, as a matter of fact, I once thought that the Lord sent me to the supermarket that day. But that was all.

Then I got to thinking about it, about whether those planes should be flying around up there like that. And in spite of all the trouble the accident caused me, I figured that maybe this A-bomb-carrying is a good thing, after all. Because maybe someday a bomb will drop and destroy not a house, but a whole city—and it won't be dropped by OUR Air Force.

I want to be sure they don't get away with it. And as long as only the TNT went off, and this accident business doesn't hurt anyone or happen very often, I figure that insurance up there is worth all the trouble.—UCLA Daily Bruin

Carter Gives Viewpoints On Finances Feels Students Should Control Funds

Bob Carter, independent candidate for president of the student body, took a stand on student finances in a statement to The Daily Tar Heel Tuesday:

"One of the reasons student government at Carolina is as strong as it is, is the control that students have over student funds. Students determine how our funds are spent, we hire and fire the employes who audit the money, and we determine what our financial policy will be in the future.

"This work of controlling student money is done through the treasurer of the student body and the Student Audit Board which is appointed by the president of the student body.

"Students must always remain aware of their responsibility in controlling this money because if we ever fail to adequately do so we might lose this cherished privilege.

"Our student government budget amounts to over $120,000 a year and we are among only four or five other universities whose student budget is as large. A student body president at Carolina needs to have a good background in student finances and really understand the job of presidency in relationship to this area of student government.

"I feel that my work as treasurer of the student body, treasurer of the IDC, as a member of the finance committee of the Student Legislature, and as an ex-officio member Student Audit Board has given me the experience in finances that would enable me to lead student government in this realm during the coming year."

MY CLOSEST SHAVE by Bill Bridgeman Douglas Test Pilot

"My closest shave was during the first try at a speed record in the fantastic Douglas Skyrocket," says Test Pilot Bill Bridgeman, author of The Lonely Sky. "A special B-29 dropped me like a bomb at 30,000 feet . . . I turned on my rockets and climbed to 40,000 . . . when suddenly all power failed. Rocket power, cabin pressure, heat—everything went—and the window frosted over so I couldn't see. Finally I got the radio going on an emergency battery . . . and a pilot in a chase plane talked me down to a blind landing!"

ROQUEBRUNE, France, March 25. (AP)—Sir Winston Churchill left his sick bed today for the first time in four days and turned his thoughts to an early return to England.

Professors

Professor Garrett, former professor of French Revolution courses, retired. Taylor is presently teaching social science and French Revolution courses here at Carolina.

Professor Taylor graduated from Rutgers with a B.S. in history. He got his Ph.D. in European history from the University of Wisconsin.

Publishers of History of Civilization, a history text book, asked Taylor to revise this text. His revised edition will come out near the end of 1959. He has done this revision in connection with 33 other contributors.

Revolution Research

During the past ten years Taylor has been doing research on the French Revolution. He is working on a book in connection with this research. It will be a discussion of social and economic problems of the French Revolution.

Professor Taylor said these things drew his interest to this subject. It was an engaging intellectual problem. There is an abundance of information in this country on that subject, and it was a very dramatic event in history.

Welcome Decoys

When it gets along toward the end of the month, and folks are broke, when you could turn the first six guys you see upside down and shake them without getting change for a quarter, then we thank whatever gods there be for our perennial browsers.

For one thing, as the heading on this advertisment suggests, they act as decoys. Who knows when some lucky guy with a buck or so left may pass by and be moved to join the contented group?

For another, they are a comfort to us. A customer in a lonely vacant shop can move on, but the crew has to remain among the echoes and brood. It's nice to know that what we have to sell still has appeal, even though the customers are too broke to buy!

But most of all we take your visit as a compliment. There are so few places in this sputnick-circled world where intelligent men and women can gather without feeling pushed around and grafted on!

When you come calling at the month's end, we hope it means that our venerable joint is such an oasis.

FOR FACULTY

Furtado Calls For System Of Leaves, Pay Raises

Low salaries and the lack of paid leaves of absence were blamed for the University's loss of "many of its most outstanding professors" by Don Furtado, Student Party candidate for president of the student body Tuesday.

"Two years ago the faculty received a 5-10 per cent pay increase," aded Furtado. "This was not enough but it was a step in the right direction. In February of 1959, the State Legislature convenes again, and it is almost certain that another pay boost will be proposed.

"The role which students can play in bringing about this much needed legislation must not be underestimated. Next year the students must once more give their complete support, to a faculty pay raise, through individual letters, personal contacts, and student resolutions and petitions, just as they did in 1957.

Paid Leaves

"Dean Godfrey, the dean of the faculty, is presently working diligently to initiate a system of paid faculty leaves.

"Presently, there are only seven or eight leaves granted each year which offer little opportunity for individual study. This is very discouraging to many of the younger and more promising members of the faculty. We tend to forget that professors need to do more than stand in front of a class for for several hours a day.

"They need opportunities to add to their own knowledge and to contribute to the general fund of learning through study and writing. By increasing their own knowledge they have more to offer the students, and as they gain recognition from their colleagues, the University also gains recognition.

"The president of the student body must lead the students in a coordinated student-faculty-administration effort to obtain faculty pay increases and a system of paid leaves of absence."

Don Furtado Names Staff

Don Furtado, Student Party candidates for president of the student body, has named Frank Farrell as overall coordinator of his campaign.

Sonny Hallford, Furtado announced yesterday, will manage the campaign in men's dormitories. Libby McCord, he said, will head the campaign in women's area while Bill Redding will manage campaign activities in the fraternity area.

In commenting on his appointments, Furtado said, "These four students have displayed their capabilities in many fields in the past. I am very proud to have them workign actively for me as my campaign managers, and I am sure that once more they will illustrate the initiative and conscientious work for which they have often been recognized."

Farrell, a junior from Lillington, is president of Alpha Epsilon Delta, a pre-med fraternity. In the past Farell has served as chairman of the Publications Board. He now holds a Reynolds Medical Scholarship and is active in the Student Legislature.

Libby McCord, a senior from Spartanburg, S. C., is co-chairman of the Campus Chest. She is a member of the Women's Residence Council and the Orientation Committee.

Redding, past president of the IFC, has served on the Men's Honor Council and as speaker pro-tem of the Student Legislature. He is a present a member of the Order of The Grail.

Goldsmith Defends UNC Fraternities; Wants New Visiting Agreement Here

In the wake of what he described as "a great cry for reform" of the fraternities, Ajl Goldsmith, University Party candidates for president of the student body, spoke out Tuesday in defense of the Greek letter societies.

"I believe fraternities are an important part of our campus. They provide great services in offering rooms and meals to many students, and they do much good for the betterment of the campus and community. I think fraternities are here to stay and justifiably so, because they are a vital part of our college community," said Goldsmith.

"I think that fraternities need a good bit of soul-searching, but I believe the Inter-Fraternity Council with its present strong leadership will be able to effect such changes as are necessary to return the fraternities to their former position of prominence. I would like to see student government and especially the president of the student body work with the IFC on this matter.

"I think student Government should cooperate fully with fraternities and never try to dictate to them; and to promote this I propose to make the IFC President a Cabinet member. Student government should take a domineering role only if fraternities themselves become incapable of solving their problems.

"I am opposed and shall always be opposed to any outside group try to force fraternities to institute delayed rush or abolish discriminatory clauses. We must recognize that fraternities are essentially private organizations and what they decide to do about who to take as members and when to take them in, is up to them or their representative body or bodies.

"I would like to see accepted and will work to have accepted the new fraternity visiting agreement. I believe this new agreement which is the product of much work by the IDC is much better than the old one and is basically a sound and realistic document."

Mike Todd Buried

As the cemetery rites took place, a show business memorial service was held in Hollywood where George Jessel eulogized:

"This dark, wiry thing that calls himself Mike Todd is a combination of many qualities. He has the talented pleadings of the pushcart peddler and the audacity of a Roman emperor but . . . a man of great strength."

Jessel's eulogy was taken from the speech that he was to have delivered Sunday night at a New York Friars' Club dinner honoring Todd as the "showman of the year."

Todd was en route to that dinner when his private plane crashed in the New Mexico mountains early Saturday.

Miss Taylor would have been along but for a virus attack.

Todd's family went to elaborate precautions to prevent any of the hoopla that was associated with the showman's life, even moving up the ceremony at Waldheim Cemetery by more than an hour.

But there were some Todd-like touches as cars double parked on nearby Roosevelt Road and created a minor traffic jam.

A band of 12 gypsies showed up before the funeral, complete with violins and tambourines, and offered to play music for the rites.

Only the family and intimate friends of the Todds were permitted inside the tented Goldbogen plot. Mourners included singer Eddie Fisher and MGM designer Helen Rose.

Out of respect to Todd's memory all theaters showing his 1957 Academy Award winning movie, "Around the World In Eighty Days," were closed today.

Candidates Must Pay!

Bob Furtado, chairman of the Elections Board, has announced that all unexcused candidates who failed to attend the compulsory meeting Monday night may be reinstated by the payment of a one dollar fine by 8 o'clock.

All unexcused candidates who fail to pay this fine by the deadline tonight will be disqualified from the the election.

Candidates may pick up expense account forms in the Student Government Office at Graham Memorial. These forms, along with a sample of all campaign literature, are to be turned in at the Student Government Office not later than 6 p. m. Monday, March 31.

AGAINST WILLIAMS

Net Men Open Season Today

By ELLIOTT COOPER

Nothing but optimism surrounds the Carolina tennis team which opens its season today against Williams College. There are some excellent prospects on the varsity, and coach Ham Strayhorn feels that the team is a cinch ot improve the 8-9 mark that was established a year ago, his year's squad will be shooting to regain the national ranking and the ACC championship captured in 1956 when the Tar Heel netters posted a 18-1-1 record.

Strayhorn Impressed

Coach Strayhorn is guiding the team until regular varsity coach Vladimar Cernik returns to Chapel Hill on April 1. Although practice sessions have been hampered by the rain, Strayhorn is high in his praise of the team's chances this year. He has been particularly impressed with the play of veterans Bob Bortner and Steve Bank.

In match play Bortner and Bank will be backed up by Ben Keys, a ranking player in the South, Marshall Happer, Walter Lockett, Bobby Mallins, and David Myers.

For Williams, the Carolina tennis matches are an annual event. he Ephmen from Williamsberg, Mass. will take on the Tar Heels again tomorrow in addition to today's match. In the two matches held last year each school won once; each time the score was 5-4. The Tar Heels will have revenge on their minds today; prior to last year it had been a long time since Carolina lost to William in tennis.

Powerful Frosh

In addition to an improved varsity, Strayhorn is expecting great things from the freshmen. The coach states his opinion this way, "the best freshman club since Bortner and Ban were freshmen." The chief reasons for this optimism are Spencer Gray, Bruce Sylvia, Buzzy Coward, Dee Heather, and Tommy Ricks.

A POEM (?)

Rain, rain, go away, little Johnny wants to play.

Little Johnny needs some sun, to play some tennis and have some fun.

His golf strokes hurt, his baseball stinks, running the hundred he only sinks.

Little Johnny is plenty tall, but very sick of basketketball.

Officials End Rough Season Of Volleyball

Eight men, about one-fifth of the members of the Volley Ball League organized by Pete Mullis, associate professor of physical education at the University, suffered injuries while playing the active game before the end of the volley ball season last Wednesday.

William C. Friday, president of the Consolidated University, had sore muscles but managed to walk without showing pain. People just thought that he was a bit more reserved than usual.

Roy Holsten sprained his ankle and was bedridden a while. His boss, Charles Shaffer, UNC director of public relations, damaged a knee in a scuffle for the ball.

Jim Wadsworth, director of housing for the University, is said to have broken his leg. Actually a bone was only chipped.

Basketball Finals

The SAE blue and Winston dorm basketball squads will clash this afternoon at 5 o'clock in Woollen Gym to decide the intramural All-Campus Champion.

Winner of the fraternity blue league, the SAE's defeated the PiKA whites in the Tuesday night semifinals to win the fraternity title and advance to the finals.

Dormitory league champion, Winston was defeated in the semifinals by the Grad champs, Law School. It was discovered however, that Law School had ineligible players disqualifying the team. Winston was given the nod to go into the finals.

Track Meet

The varsity and freshman track meets with State in Raleigh were rained out yesterday, and will be run today weather permitting.

Match Postponed

The Varsity golf match with State yesterday was postponed because of rain.

ROBINSON WINS

Sugar Ray Robinson decisioned Carmen Basilio to regain the middleweight crown for the fifth time in last night's fifteen round championship bout in Chicago.

VARSITY NETTER: Varsity tennis star Steve Bank will start in the Carolina lineup this afternoon when the Tar Heel team entertains the Ephmen from Williams College. The match will start at 3:30 on the varsity courts.

Coaches Shun 24 Second Rule

By WILL GRIMSLEY

NEW YORK (AP) — The controversial 24-second rule got a chilly brushoff from the basketball rules committee, and a group of college coaches said Tuesday they weren't a bit surprised.

"The rules is good for the pros but no good for the colleges," said Harry Litwack, whose Temple team was a semifinalist in the national tournament last week-end in Louisville.

Alvin Doggie Julian of Dartmouth and Frank Bucky O'Connor of Iowa said "amen."

Litwack and O'Connor are rival coaches in the annual East-West all-star collegiate basketball game next Saturday night at Madison Square Garden.

They and other coaches, who sounded off vociferously against the 24-second rule, were luncheon guests of the New York Herald Tribune, which sponsors the game for the fresh air fund.

The 24-second rule, used by the professionals, stipulates that a team must take a shot at the basket within 24 seconds after it gets it hand on the ball. Otherwise, a whistle toots and the ball is given to the other side.

The National Basketball Committee, which makes rules for colleges, high schools, YMCA and amateur teams in the United States and Canada, didn't even consider the regulation at its meeting in Louisville Monday. A year ago there was a strong campaign to make the rule a part of the college game on the grounds it would prevent late game stalling, cut down deliberate fouls and speed up the game.

"It's understandable that the pros want it," Litwack said. "There game repends on gate receipts. They must keep the game close to interest crowds. But if you install it in colleges you kill coaching finesse and you end strategy in the game.

"Besides the pros are different. They're specialists. College kids would panic if they kenw they were compelled to get the shot off in a certain time."

O'Connor said he thought it unfair to try to penalize a team which has built up a lead. "Those leads are hard to get sometime," he said. "Why make rules to help the guy who is behind?"

Julian, chairman of the coaches' rules recommendation committee, said an exhaustive survey had been made to discover the 24-second rule is not needed. "We checked 3,000 games," he said, "and discovered that the average time of getting a shot off is 16 seconds-well below."

Seven Carolina Swimmers Leave For National Championships Today

By RUSTY HAMMOND

Today at 1:30 p.m., seven Carolina swimmers, including five all-Americans, will leave for Ann Arbor, Michigan accompanied by head tank coach Pat Earey, and his assistant, Dick Jamerson.

The Tar Heels will breeze into Michigan before a wave of records, laudits, and honors from all over the south. These swimmers are members of a team which ran through 11 straight meets this year without sustaining a single defeat, including all seven conference opponents. The 11 wins stretched a two-year win streak to 21, one of the longest in the nation.

Coach Pat Earey, the amiable red-head who last year coached the Greensboro Senior High swim team, had a first-year season that successful doesn't accurately describe. Earey was awarded runner-up honors in the Monogram Club's coach of the year presentations last Saturday in the Blue-White game.

In the ACC championships, held here in Chapel Hill, the Heels won all but four of the twenty -plus events, and were at least second in all but one. Both the medley and freestyle relay teams copped firsts. Ned Meekins ran away with the diving, both high and low boards. Tony Schiffman ripped off three firsts. Mac Mahaffey, Bill Zickgraf, Walt Rose, Brent Nash, and Bill Roth all had first place finishes.

In the Eastern Regionals, held in Annapolis, the Tar Heels were swimming against the best in the east and the Carolina boys rolled up some of their best times of the entire season. Schiffman was second in the 1500 meters and fourth in the 440, and both of these events saw Schiffman chalk up his best times of the season. Zickgraf performed well in the butterfly. Mahaffey rolled to a fourth in the 200-butterfly.

Both of the Tar Heel relay teams did very well. The freestyle team of Jeff Zwicker, Zickgraf, Roth and Rose was second; and the medley team of Nash, Zickgraf, Rose, and Mahaffey placed fourth. Divers Ned Meekins and Pete Reynolds copped fourth and eighth respectively.

The all-Americans taking the trip are Roth, Schiffman, Rose, Mahaffey and Zickgraf, who will be accompanied by Nash and Meekins.

Last year, Carolina's great Charlie Krepp was a double-winner in the Nationals as he racked up firsts in both the 100 and 200 backstroke. This year's Nationals begin Thursday, and Carolina will again be well represented.

The present University of North Carolina School of Pharmacy was established in 1887.

The ship lurched as the pilot shifted into hyper-space drive and Snrrr fell awkwardly, his tenacles grasping in vain for a firm grip.

"Andromeda!", he raged. "I've told that idiot a million times if I've told him once — double clutch!"

Jrgll smiled, lying securely in his acceleration couch. "If you weren't so obstinate about standing up during take-off, you wouldn't be falling on your fnnff all the time."

Snrrr snorted, or came as close to a snort as a Malthusean can, and climbed to his feet, or whatever it was that he stood on. "We've got work to do. Let's get on with it." And so saying, he bent intently over the stereo-dimension plotting board and began computing feverishly.

As the minutes passed, his features became more and more distorted with frenzy. Suddenly he exclaimed, "Great Polaris' ghost! We've been sabotaged! Someone has put us on a collision course with Vega. We'll crash in less than two thousand years. We can't possibly change course in that little time."

And sure enough, they crashed. Which all goes to show that they'd have been better off playing pool at Graham Memorial.

U.S. Fires 3rd Satellite; May Come Within 100 Miles Of Earth

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla., March 26. (AP)—America fired its third satellite into orbit around the earth today but the newest man-made moon may exist only a few days in space.

Explorer III, an 80-inch long metal tube with instruments designed to solve some of the secrets of the outer atmosphere, was blasted aloft by the Army's Jupiter-C rocket at 12:38 p.m. (EST).

Four hours later, Maj. Gen. John B. Medaris, head of the Army ballistic missile program, said the satellite probably would plunge to its death in a maximum of two weeks.

Wernher Von Braun the German scientist who developed the Jupiter-C, said the satellite would swing as close as 100 miles to the earth in its orbit.

This is a much closer approach than any of the other satellites have made.

Inside it were two radio transmitters, designed like those in the other American satellites to Broadcast information on cosmic rays, cosmic dust and the temperatures of space.

One transmitter inside Explorer III will broadcast on a frequency of 108.03 megacycles with a power of 60 milliwatts. These signals, which can be picked up by any radio ham, are expected to continue for two months, if the satellite lasts that long.

The other transmitter, operating on 108 megacycles at 10 milliwatts, may remain in operation longer.

Something new in Explorer III is a tiny memory unit which can store up information on cosmic rays and, on radio command, transmit it back to earth on a tape recorder.

In its swift travels, the satellite will encounter temperatures ranging from 148 degrees below zero in the earth's shadow to 290 above in the sunlight.

To protect the sensitive electronic parts against such severe heat and cold, the satellite surface was painted with zirconium oxide. This is designed to hold the temperature range inside the instrument compartment to a range between 32 and 122 degrees above zero.

WEATHER

Cloudy and cool with occasional rain or drizzle ending today. Friday, mostly cloudy and continued cool.

Student Council Reverses Decision; Hears Brooks Case In Special Trial

Case Gets Nod After 2nd Ruling

A "liberal" ruling Tuesday by the Elections Board played a major role in the succesful appeal of the John Brooks case to the Student Council.

The board, meeting in special sesion Monday, ruled Brooks (SP) ineligible for the student body vice presidential race on grounds that he did not meet scholastic requirements set forth in election laws. That decision, said Board Chairman Bob Furtado, was based on a strict interpretation of election laws which say a candidate must have 27 hours in a certain period before his nomination to be elgible to run for a student office.

Brooks, however, had accumulated only 25 semester hours during the required period, following doctor's orders to take a limited schedule at UNC.

Reverses Stand

Then on Tuesday, in complete reversal of its strict adherence to election laws, the Elections Board accepted the nomination of Ralph Cummings who was chosen SP candidate for vice president after Brooks had been ruled ineligible and lost an appeal to Student Council.

Election laws say that "all nominations for office shall be made in writing and shall be presented to the Elections Board not later than nine class days prior to the established date for elections."

The Election Board gave a liberal interpretation of this ruling, however, feeling that circumstances permitted the Student Party to nominate a new candidate to replace ousted Books, although the nine-day-deadline had passed.

Heard Last Night

It was that "liberal" ruling, coupled with the alleged unconstitionality of the scholastic requirements set forth in election laws, on which Brooks later repeated and won his appeal to the Sudent Council. That appeal was to be heard last night.

Brooks, in a letter to Student Council Chairman Mac Patton, questioned the constitutionality of Section 5, sub-section (b) of Article VII in the election laws upon grounds that:

"This law as interpreted is in direct violation of the basic freedom of all members of a democratic society to participate as candidates for public office and that this as interpreted is discriminating against students in good standing with the University. . ."

In his attack on the law he pointed to the preamble of the student constitution which says, among other things, that the constitution's purpose is to "make personal freedom secure."

JOHN BROOKS

RALPH CUMMINGS

No Verdict Is Rendered By Tar Heel Press Time

By DOUG EISELE

In a surprise move, the Student Council yesterday agreed to hear an appeal from vice presidential nominee John Brooks who previously had been ruled ineligible for spring elections by the Elections Board.

Brooks' appeal—at first refused by the student court—was to come before the Council at a special called session beginning at 9 o'clock last night. A decision was expected later in the evening.

The surprise move threw a monkey wrench into campaign plans for the Student Party, whose advisory board had met Tuesday night to name Ralph Cummings its candidate for student body vice president to run in place of Brooks.

Cummings' nomination came shortly after Student Council Chairman Mac Patton said his body would not hear Brooks' appeal from an Elections Board decision that Brooks was ineligible to run in spring elections April 1.

After that ruling the Student Party, thinking Brooks definitely was out of the race, hastened to name its new candidate. But confusion followed when the Student Council later decided to hear Brooks' appeal.

To Eliminate One

Asked what his party would do if the council reversed the Elections Board decision, Student Party Chairman Fat Adams said another advisory board meeting would be called to eliminate one of its two veep candidates from the race.

"We'll cross that bridge when we come to it," Adams said, referring to the possibility that a ruling in favor of Brooks by the council would leave two SP nominees in the vice presidential campaign.

Brooks made his appeal to the Student Council on grounds that the Elections Board did not show equality in disqualifying him from the race and that one of the election laws cited in his case was in conflict with "personal freedoms" guaranteed in the student constitution.

BULLETIN

A student council decision on the eligibility of vice-presidential candidate John Brooks had not been rendered in time last night for publication in today's Daily Tar Heel.

As the hearing continued late into the night, it still was not known whether the SP candidate from Greenville could continue in the race for the student body office. A full report will appear in The Daily Tar Heel tomorrow.

Public Forum Features Edit Candidates Tonite

The five candidates for editor of The Daily Tar Heel will participate in a forum in the Main Lounge of Graham Memorial tonight at 8 o'clock.

The forum was necessitated by the decision of the Women's Residence Council not to allow editorial candidates to come to dormitory house meetings because of the time involved.

Ann Frye, Curtis Gans, Pringle Pipkin, Charlie Sloan and John Whitley will each give short talks.

The forum is sponsored by the Student-Faculty Forum Committee of Graham Memorial Activities Board.

Present Editor Doug Eisele will moderate the forum, according to Student-Faculty Forum Committee Chairman Louis May.

May said each candidate for the post would be allowed equal time to state his qualifications and to specify what if any changes he would make in the way The Daily Tar Heel is operated.

A student-candidate question and answer period will follow talks by the candidates.

May urged all students to come to this discussion, which will be the only one in which all candidates will appear together.

IFC Donation Pushes Campus Chest To Goal

By ROBERT CRADDOCK

The Interfraternity Council in voting Monday night to donate $100 of recently-acquired fine money to the Campus Chest pushed the Campus Chest drive to $2005, bettering the goal by $5.

Libby McCord, co-chairman of the drive, said the board was deeply indebted to the IFC for its contribution and most appreciative for its assistance in surpassing the goal.

The drive, originally suheduled Feb. 22-28, was extended through Mardh 5. At the scheduled close of the drive only $1000 had been collected. When the drive officially closed March 5, the amount was $1700.

Through efforts by Campus Chest Board members and other interested students, the additional $305 was solicited in the past two weeks. During this time the UP, SP, IFC and various individuals gave substantial contributions.

Funds for the drive were solicited from dormitories, fraternities, sororities, Glen Lennox and the faculty. Other fund raising projects included a Lenoir Hall jazz session, a Five Dollar Club, a large chest in Lenoir Hall inviting donations and a booth in Y-Court which distributed information concerning the Campus Chest. A fund-raising project by the Pan-hellenic Council requested each sorority give up one meal and donate the money saved to the Campus Chest.

The drive was organized by the Campus Chest Board headed by Libby McCord and Gene Parker. Board members are Jean Pierre Boissavit, responsible for studying beneficiary agencies; Susan Purser, special projects; Sarah Williamson and Howard Holderness, publicity; and Tom Ray and Tog Sanders, solicitations.

The Campus Chest is a united appeal combining all campus-wide drives into one annual drive. It is jointly sponsored by the YMCA, YWCA and student government.

Theatre Meet Opens Today

The hinth annual meeting of the South Eastern Theatre Conference opens here todya with registration at 11 a.m. in the Playmakers Theatre.

Following a business meeting presided over by John Caldwell of the University of Louisville, who is president of the conference, will be an address by Marian Galaway of the University of Alabama who will speak on "The Adventures of a Playscript When It Goes to Broadway."

Persons attending the conference will spend the remainder of the afternoon participating in panel discussion on such subjects as children's theatre, college and university theatre, commuityn and summer theatre.

The future of regional theatre is the topic for consideration tonight at 8 o'cloc in the Playmakers Theatre.

Absentee Ballots

Written requests for absentee ballots for the spring election must be turned in to the Student Government Office before 5 p.m. Friday.

Ballots will be available in the Student Government Office in Graham Memorial before the weekend at hours to be announced later.

Interviews For Jury

Interviews for positions on the Honor System Jury will be held in the Council Room at Graham Memorial today from 4-5:30 p.m.

Applicants should fill out an application blank and make an appointment at the Student Government Office at Graham Memorial.

Interviews will not be held again until after spring holidays.

Legislature To Consider Appointments

The appointments of three women students to the Honor System Commission will be considered as part of the agenda for the Student Legislature tonight at 7 o'clock in the Phi Hall in New East.

Lee Wardrup, speaker pro tem, will preside as is customary for the last official session of the Legislature.

Of major interest will be the make-up of the budget for next year.

Pat Adams' (SP) bill providing for the purchase of an accounting machine for the Student Activities Fund office will be considered. At present the machine in the Activities Fund office is said to be beyond repair.

Since the Activities Fund Office has not sufficient funds to replace its machine, Adams's bill calls for an advance by the treasurer of the student body from the general surplus to the Student Activities Fund Office on a loan basis.

Needed: Men To Carry Out The Fall Orientation Program; Apply Now

By BILL KING

Orientation Chairman Herman Godwin announced yesterday that plans are now complete for the fall orientation program and that application blanks and study manuals are available at Lenoir Hall, the YMCA, Graham and the Library.

Godwin urged that all men who are interested in becoming orientation counselors fill out and submit their applications as soon as possible. The application blanks may be handed in at any of the four application and manual locations.

Selection Program

Godwin has announced a two-part selection program which he and his committee will carry out in choosing approximately 150 counselors for the fall program.

The first part will be a general test administered to all applicants on April 15 at 7 p.m. in room 268 Venable.

After that individual interviews, scheduled for April 16-23, will be held by the Orientation Committee. Applicants will be notified of their interview date and time.

Chairman Godwin explained that the test would be of a "general nature" containing questions about practically all phases of campus life here and that the study manuals will be invaluable in preparation for the quiz. The interviews will last approximately four minutes each.

An estimated 2,000 new students will enroll here this fall and Godwin and his committee have worked with the administration for several weeks setting up what they hope will be the best orientation program ever held.

Wide, Conclusive Program

"We are going all out to have a wide and conclusive program this year," Godwin said. "I was extremely pleased with the Orientation program last fall and I hope and feel that it will be as good if not better in 1958."

Godwin urged students to take an active part in the program and to get in their applications as soon as possible. "We need about 150 good men to carry out this very important program. They will be performing a service to the University as well as themselves and the success of the program wil lie primarily in their hands.

For Coming Election

University Party Reveals Platform

The University Party has announced its platform for the upcoming campus election.

The released platform contains the following planks:

1. "We pledge to face and conquer any and all situations which may arise within the realm of Student Government.

2. "We pledge to work with the Administration to establish adequate social facilities in dormitories and a women's visiting agreement for dorms.

Student Union

3. "We pledge immediate acquisition of funds for a new student union by contacting the members of the 1959 State Legislature, if necessary.

4 "We pledge clarification and re-examination of the present cut policy to rid the present confusion which exists in many classes.

5. "We pledge reorganization of the president's cabinet to include the Honor Council and Student Council Chairmen, IFC, IDC, and WRC Chairmen, one legislator and four members-at-large. This will provide a well-informed and more functional group to advise the president.

Public Relations Board

6. "We pledge a Public Relations Board to work with The Daily Tar Heel and the University News Bureau in providing a more intense and widespread recognition of the many fine things accomplished on our campus.

7. "We pledge equal social privileges for nurses; for they now share equal responsibilities.

8. "We pledge cooperation with the Administration in formulating and implementing the current expansion program.

Rent Hikes

9. "We pledge elimination of the "self liquidating" method of dormitory construction. All the people should finance their University.

10. "We pledge cooperation with the honor councils in implementing their new jury system.

11. "We pledge positive and deliberate work to effect a workable solution to the present parking problem.

12. "We pledge cooperation with the IFC to return fraternities to their former place of prominence on this campus and throughout the State."

Petites Musicales Presents Soprano Ethel Casey Sunday

Ethel Casey, soprano of Raleigh, will appear on the next program sponsored by Les Petites Musicales. The recital which is open to the public and free of charge will be held in the lounge of Graham Memorial at 8 p. m. Sunday.

Mrs. Casey appeared in another Petite Musicale program in February when she assisted duo-harpists Emily Kellam and Suzann Davids in a recital. The same program, in which Mrs. Casey sang a group of Spanish songs by Manuel de Falla, was given by these artists as the first Sunday afternoon Musicale at the N. C. State Museum of Art.

The singer has also performed recently at the museum as the soloist in a recital of compositions by Walter Golde, Chapel Hill teacher and composer. She will sing one of Golde's numbers on this Sunday's evening program, "Song of the Sea." Also included on the program are works by Brahms, Cesar Franck, Poulenc, de Falla and Charles Ives.

Mrs. Casey is well known to Durham and Raleigh music groups as soloist for the Raleigh Oratorio Society and at Duke University where she was the soprano soloist for last May's performance of "Elijah."

Prentis Sedberry of Durham, who will accompany Mrs. Casey, has played for the Oratoria Society and the Grass Roots Opera Association. His musical activities include performing at Duke Memorial Methodist Church in Durham.

Dave Jones Elected University Club Head

Dave Jones was elected president of the University Club at its meeting Tuesday evening. Other club officers, vice president, secretary and treasurer will be chosen by the body next week.

Retiring Club President Frank Innman was presented with a rosewood gavel as a memento of his year of service to the organization.

Cheer Leader candidates John Whitty (SP) and Carter Jones (UP spoke to the club and gave their experience and qualifications.

New Poll Sent Out To Students

The Graham Memorial Activities Board Polls Committee has mailed questionnaries to 300 students chosen at random on the UNC campus.

Jan Cobbs, chairman of the Committee, has asked students to return the cards by Saturday.

"We are hoping for much better cooperation on the part of students than we had last time" Jan Cobbs said. "We hope to have the results published before spring vacation."

The following are questions included in these questionnaires:

1. Did you attend any evening sessions of the Carolina Symposium?

2. Was the Symposium worth while? Did you like the subject?

3. Would you turn in someone for a violation of the honor code?

4. Should the city of Chapel Hill install parking meters?

5. Should non-members of UNC be admitted free to UNC social and cultural functions?

6. Should high school students be permitted to use the facilities of Graham Memorial?

Do you vote in UNC campus elections?

Elections Board Should Start Serving The Students

If all went as scheduled, the Student Council by now has ruled on an appeal by John Brooks, vice presidential nominee of the Student Party, from a former decision of ineligibility handed down by the Board of Elections.

At this writing, the Student Council through its chairman, Mac Patton, has just decided to hear Brooks' appeal. The case was to come before a special session of the court late last night.

Whatever the Council's decision, The Daily Tar Heel feels the Council acted wisely in reversing a previous decision not to hear Brooks' appeal. We also believe that, taking all circumstances into consideration, Brooks should be allowed to participate in spring elections.

The trouble all began when the Elections Board, discovering that Brooks did not meet requirements for semester hours set forth in election laws, rulde him ineligible to run for the post for which the Student Party had nominated him.

Election laws say a candidate must have an aggregate of 27 hours in the two semesters prior to his nomination for student offices. Brooks had only 25. But this deficiency followed doctor's orders that Brooks should take a limited schedule at UNC.

Giving a strict interpretation of election laws, the Elections Board refused to take the doctor's orders into consideration with the mandate that Brooks could not be a candidate for the vice presidential post. He then appealed to the Student Council.

Then things at Student Party headquarters began happening. The party's advisory board nominated Ralph Cummings to take Brooks' place, although the case for all purposes had not yet been finally solved. The Student Party then had, and maybe still does have, two candidates.

So what did the Elections Board do? It failed to give a strict interpretation of yet another provision in the election laws—a provision requiring that all candidates must file for office within nine days before election—and handed down the rather liberal ruling that Cummings, under the cirsumstances, would be eligible to run.

That ruling, mind you, was handed down just five class days before election day April 1—and it was a complete reversal of the board's previous practice of sticking to a strict interpretation of election laws, namely, in the Brooks case.

Now, what we want to know is this: how does the Elections Board explain this complete turnabout in its policy, particularly when circumstances in the first case are, we feel, even of more significance than they were in the second?

The Elections Board has conducted itself in this same unexplainable manner previously in the current campaign scramble. It announced in the middle of last week that petitions of candidates would be acceptable up to 6 p.m. on last Friday. But there was no one to accept petitions in the board's office after 5:45 p.m. Friday!

In addition, despite the timeliness of the case and its importance to the Student Party, the Elections Board refused to hear Brooks problem when it evolved last Friday, and instead called a meeting for that purpose on Monday. The decision, however, was not made public until Tuesday.

The Elections Board is here to serve the students. It should serve the students quickly and in fairness to all. To do that it must change its attitude immediately and carry on in a manner which will return some dignity to its purposes.

It Doesn't Make Sense

Six Students have been suspended for illegal entry into buildings in search of quizzes. Investigations are continuing.

This is nothing sensational or tragic. But on the other hand this is nothing for Tech to be proud of.

This is especially nothing to be proud of when one considers what the implications might be. How many students are involved in cheating at Tech? Not in such large things as illegal entry, but in the smaller acts such as carrying "cheat sheets" to quizzes and glancing at a neighbor's paper for an unknown answer.

Whatever the number—and actually it makes little difference—the fact is that there is cheating at Tech. The fact that students have been caught at so serious a thing as illegal entry for quizzes makes the situation condition red. There is cheating in any institution. But when it reaches the point it possibly has here, it is serious.

A solution for the problem lies with every student at Tech. For every student committing any act of cheating is guilty of the same thing the six were. It is a matter of individual integrity with each student.

Cheating doesn't make good sense from any standpoint. We came to college to get an education. An education consistes of learning what is put before us. Do we learn when we borrow the answer? Obviously not. Then we are cheating ourselves out of the good of the education—what we came here for.

Then there is the unprovable, at least from the standpoint of the test tube. Cheating "catches up" with us. If we cheat long enough, eventually there will be resulting circumstances "paying us back" for the cheating. It has happened to the six, not that they probably deserved it any more than a lot of others of us. This is something proven only by experience.

Next, it doesn't make good sense to let others around us cheat, for they are cheating us. They are taking advantage of us, using unfair competition.

Finally, what does it do to the degree we receive for four years of labor? The fact that there is cheating in the school granting the degree obviously takes much from it.

Whatever the outcome of the present situation. Tech should use it to profit by inspiring the student body to better sense about the thing, by adopting what measures seem necessary to prevent cheating in the future.

North Carolina Wins A Battle

"Thanks" are in order for Governor Luther Hodges and the delegation which he headed in Washington in blocking tolls on the federal-owned Blue Ridge Parkway.

Secretary of The Interior Seaton disclosed Wednesday that he had given up the idea of imposing toll charges on the highway for which North Carolina granted land rights-of-way.

Seaton said North Carolina protests had convinced him it would be unwise to collect tolls for use of the scenic highway which links the magnificent Blue Ridge with the Shennandoah Valley to the north.

A wise decision, Mr. Seaton. Because of the Parkway North Carolina has become truly one of the nation's leading vacation lands—and probably in great measure because drivers are not charged to see the beauty which the Blue Ridge offers.

Rock & Roll—As e.e. Would Describe It?

A few days ago I was browsing through the "Collected Poems of e. e. cummings" while a radio in the background was blaring forth the animalistic sounds of one of the more popular rock and roll groups. Assimilating this varied potpourri of sounds and ideas, I soon began to associate the two in my mind, and before long was wondering how Mr. Cummings would attempt to express the sound of this new music. Not being able to resist the temptation, I began to try a hand at poetry a la e.e., and if you will pardon the verse, this is the result:

"yeeeeew buuuuug mmmmeeee baaaabeeeee
yug yug
grunt grunt
ugh" snorting animals transformed to wax apparitions
gyrating orally over air waves excite young girls wow gee gosh and what is more let's go!
whirling skirts showing legs twisting turning do i see something i shouldn't o no clean little girls don't do nasty things
"rock and roll is good for American youth"
"rock and roll is healthy music"
if this is health give me more but if you want my own opinion this is sex
as the saxophone player spreads out over the floor like silly putty
gyrating sensually
emits erotic noises and the young girls slowly, deliberately, gyrate too, spasmodically suddenly the music stops and the dream is over

Pretty lousy, isn't it? But that ought to put it in the same class with its subject.

"Quiet! We're Thinking Up A New Reason"

Attendance Is Hit, Gans Endorsed

To The Editor:

On Tuesday night, the campus Christian Council held an open forum for the students of this campus to enable them to hear the views of the three student body presidential candidates-Bob Carter, Al Goldsmith and Don Furtado.

As usual the students were quick to seize the opportunity to educate themselves to facilitate a wiser selection for the position of the presidency. After all, those who went, reasoned—why shouldn't we go as this is the most important student office on the campus and it is important to vote in the right man.

And so off trooped the crowd to hear Carter and Goldsmith and Furtado. As it wound its way across campus, it gained momentum and added to its already swelling ranks.

Pretty soon, it wasn't a small crowd, but one that rumbled as it walked and whose talking and laughing resounded off of the walls of South Building as it stampeded by.

Thundering across the Y-court it aimed straight for Gerrard Hall, the site of the evening's activity. When confronted with the vastness of the mass approaching them, officials of the Campus Christian Council were doubtful that all could be accomodated in the tiny meeting place.

However, after shoving and crowding, the entire mob found seats and sat down to listen to the three scheduled speakers.

It was wonderful to see so many smiling and eager faces, thought the candidates. Everyone on campus is tired of hearing this apathy routine and finally the students are doing something to disprove the critics. How could this be termed the "beat generation" when so much enthusiasm could be brought out of one single group?

Impartial observers on the scene of action wondered if this could be the University of North Carolina with such a large turnout. Wasn't this the school that had a membership of only 300 in the two political parties. And wasn't this the school whose vice president had been forced to practically beg student legislators not to leave the weekly Legislature meeting early because one person less would not have left a quorum?

How could this be the place they had all heard about?

But, gentle readers, this is the place. That thundering herd trampling all obstacles as it roared across the Ycourt was in reality a piddling group of eight (8) interested students who had taken the time to go and hear the candidates for the highest office on the campus.

Those eight (8) represent about one-one thousndth of the seven thousand (7,000) students on campus. Won't it be wonderful if eight (8) people vote in the election next Tuesday But don't let it worry you. Keep on with your present attitude. At least, you will have the satisfaction of knowing you are in the majority.

To The Editor:

We of the 1958 staff of The Daily Tar Heel are supporting Curtis Gans in the election for editorship of the paper. We base this decision upon these three factors—his proven ability as a thoughtful, creative writer, his responsibility as a person, and his extensive journalistic background.

We sincerely feel that, under the leadership of Curtis Gans, The Daily Tar Heel could once again achieve the status of one of the nation's finest collegiate newspapers. For this reason, we are lending him our full assistance in the forthcoming campaign, and hope that every student will take full cognizance of his merits before voting.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

About Lenoir Hall Pay—

To the Editor:

This letter is in response to the two letters drawn by Mr. Gans' article on the meal ticket arrangement of wage payment currently in practice at Lenoir Hall.

First, I personally feel ((and my opinion is shared by others) that to deny a working man the right to spend his wages in any way he sees fit is an infringement of human rights. Under the present system at Lenoir, the floor boys are paid in non-negotiable script. This script is redeemable only in exchange for food at Lenoir or in the Pine Room. In other words, the student worker has no choice; he must eat at Lenoir Hall. The fact that almost all the students who need to conserve money choose to eat all their meals at Lenoir, does not enter into this. These student workers are denied the right to choose. The money that they earn must be spent in the place which this money is earned. Suppose the Ford Company paid their workers in automobiles—script redeemable only for food. Or the Wilson Library paid their employees in books, etc. Silly, isn't it?

Of course, these boys must eat! The two examples are not quite the same thing. They point out only half the story: the silliness in paying students only in script. The fact that the student is forced to spend his wages in the company which gives him them is the crime. It violates the basic rights of an individual.

To further point out the injustice, Lenoir Hall makes a profit on the meals it forces its employees to buy! I believe the current rate of pay for the floor boys is 75c per hour. Deduct the profit that Lenoir Hall makes from the meals they force the students to buy and how much is Lenoir Hall really paying these boys?

The library doesn't pay even 75c per hour. This is true. But it is also true that they do not restrict their employees as to how their wages are to be spent. The practices at the library do not justify the practices at Lenoir. And also, Lenoir Hall makes a profit; the library does not.

Lenoir Hall can afford to pay 75c per hour in cash. And they can afford it without raising the cost of meals. I expect that this statement will draw wounded screams of NO from the powers that be! It has in the past and, I imagine, it will now. All right, raise the price of the student special to 45c. I would guess that this would bring in an additional $25 per day. This amount would easily cover the cost of the raise (and I mean a RAISE, both in salary and in human dignity).

Now the non-workers will object. They will have to pay more for the food—10 cents a day more, 70 cents a week more, etc. Their complaint is with the management of Lenoir not with the students-workers who are being deprived of their American rights to spend their wages as they, not Mr. Prillaman, see fit. Is a dime a day too much to ask for your fellow human beings' rights? I hope not! This is America, isn't it? The land of the free (to spend the wages you earn as you choose) and the home of the brave (enough to demand their rights). Try demanding a just wage at Lenoir some time, that is if you want to start collecting your unemployment insurance as of immediately. The wage problem at Lenoir must be solved from outside, not inside. A worker who opens his mouth usually finds himself directed to the door.

As to prospect of the door, let me correct a remark made in one of the letters. There are no jobs available on this campus now, and there have been no jobs available on this campus for quite some time. (Except, strangely enough, at Lenoir, where there are always jobs available.) The author of one letter instructs Mr. Gans to check his facts before writing; I suggest he also could profit from a little investigation of the situation.

Which brings me to another point. The statements, so passionately phrased, on the subject of income tax need some investigations also. I have not received any instruction in the problems of Uncle Sam's "clearly" stated income tax forms, so perhaps I had best just state the law and allow the readers to use their own 20/20 on them.

Helpful Information on How to Prepare Your Income Tax Return on Form 1040 for 1957. Publication 3 (Rev. 9-57). Page 5.

"Payment in Merchandise, etc.—If your employer pays part or all of your wages in merchandise, services, stock, or other things of value, you must determine the fair market value of such items and include it in your wages."

"Meals and Living Quarters.—Employees who, as a mater of choice, receive meals and lodging from their employers whether or not it is agreed to be part of their salaries must include in income the fair market value of the meals and lodging. However, if, for the convenience of your employer, your meals are furnished at your place of employment or you are required to accept lodgings at your place of employment as a condition of your employment, the value of your meals or lodging is not to be reported in your return."

Well? How do you see it now?

As for the political, or attempted political, attack on Mr. Gans, I think it was foul. Perhaps Mr. Gans should in the future, as you imply, lick up the egos of voters, express the "popular" viewpoints on campus, refrain from anything which might cause controversy, and, in general, be the absolute guardian of the status quo. Or else!

How about it, Mr. Gans, want to try this? It might get you elected. And you do have the summer to wash the fifth off your own integrity. Be quick about it too! Election day is near!

And the "voting public" have spoken!

Or have they?

Pipkin Urges Freedom Be Responsible In Edits

Pringle Pipkin, candidate for editor of The Daily Tar Heel, said in a statement Tuesday that an editor should have freedom, but this freedom must be bounded by a sense of responsibility. He added other qualities that he thought an editor should have:

"I think an editor can cooperate with student and University officials without fear of becoming their tool or mouthpiece. The editor should try to meet the officials half-way.

"If he can help solve the problems of any worthwhile organization, he should certainly make an attempt. The editor should always be available for suggestions, though he must always use his discretion.

Will Discuss Problems

"He can not know all of the problems on this campus. My office will be open for students to come in and discuss the problems of their organizations and any improvements that they think should be made in The Daily Tar Heel.

"I feel that the basic editorial philosophy of the editor is a very vital and real issue. The man whom you elect will be the one whose paper you will have to live with during the next year.

"The editor should lead student opinion and work for reform when it is necessary. However, when the editor becomes abstract and vague, he loses much of his effectiveness.

Represents Student Body

"The editor must remember that what he writes will be taken to represent the student body to those not close to the University.

"I believe that while editor should have great freedom, this freedom must be bounded by a sense of responsibility. Freedom without responsibility is a dangerous thing.

"The editor should be tempered by this responsibility when he considers diverging in an extreme way from the student viewpoint on non-campus issues of a basic nature.

Issues Come First On News Pages, Says Frye

Ann Frye, candidate for editor of The Daily Tar Heel Tuesday explained her policy regarding the handling of campus issues.

"Only after The Daily Tar Heel has informed its readers of campus issues through the news pages, does the editor have the right to approach the issues through editorials.

"Presently, there are at least three obvious issues that need to be presented in news stories and then in editorials. These issues have to do with the revision of the Honor Councils, a new student union and the building of new dormitories on a self-liquidating basis.

"With the advent of juries into both honor councils, the editor must see to it that news stories follow the successes and failures of the jury system. The editor's job will be to evaluate the jury system.

Student Union

"In July a professional man will arrive on campus to head all functions of Graham Memorial student union. With his presence on campus, the possibilities for a new student union are better than would be with a non-professional man as president of Graham Memorial.

"The editor's job here would be to present editorially why a new student union building is needed, with a special slant toward members of the North Carolina Legislature who receive copies of the Tar Heel.

Room Rent

"There is a strong possibility that room rent will go up $30 next year because two million dollars worth of bonds to build new dormitories here must be paid off on a self-liquidating basis. This means that the money to pay off the bonds must come from room rent.

"News stories must be written to show that at least two recently built dormitories had money appropriated by the State Legislature, that a state science appropriation was made for the proposed addition to Phillips Hall and that if self-liquidation is used to pay for future dormitories, then high room rents will keep many prospective students from considering attending the University.

"The editor, after the public has been informed through news stories, must interpret the facts and take a stand editorially."

NANCY ADAMS
Honor Council Chairman

Nancy Adams Will Head Honor Council

Nancy Adams, junior from Miami, Fla., has been elected chairman of the Women's Honor Council for next year.

A transfer from Stephens College, Miss Adams has served this year as a member of the Women's Honor Council and of the ROTC Angel Flight.

In commenting on her election Miss Adams said:

"I fully realize the responsibility and challenge which the job ahead of me presents. I am grateful for the leadership and aid which this year's Council has given me.

"I am looking forward to working with next year's Council and the new jury system and am confident it will be an efficient system."

Miss Adams succeeds Kit Whitehurst, senior from Danville, Va., as chairman.

Gans Calls For A Larger Paper

"The Daily Tar Heel ought to be a larger paper more often and should have a large Sunday edition," Curtis Gans candidate for editor of The Daily Tar Heel said yesterday.

Gans stated, "The Daily Tar Heel can easily expand its advertising in order to provide a large enough paper to include the necessary feature and news material that should be in the paper each day.

Advertising salesman should be recruited from the student body and work on a commission basis, which should give these people added incentive to get more advertising.

Self-Help Jobs

"It is entirely within the realm of possibility that the people who work on the paper's advertising staff in the future can have one of the best self-help jobs on the campus.

"It is further possible that The Daily Tar Heel can get enough advertising from out of town to stimulate enough competition in Chapel Hill. Such advertising response would justify a study into the comparative prices of out of town and Chapel Hill merchants.

"The Daily Tar Heel can also increase its revenue and provide for many extra pages if it would start to tap the subscription resources of the 40,000 living alumni and 7,000 parents.

$15,000 Profit

"If only one-tenth of these subscribed to The Daily Tar Heel, the paper would profit to the tune of $15,000 which makes for many extra pages as well as an increase in advertising rates and greater advertising due to increased circulation.

"There then would be a justification for a large and featureful Sunday paper including a news of the week in review page which could serve as a subscription seller to those who would be unwilling to buy the paper every day of the week.

"There needs further to be a definite improvement of circulation on campus, so that students in dormitories get the paper to their doors on time each day."

AFROTC Detachment Going To Azalea Fete

Some 52 members of the local Air Force ROTC detachment will be present at the Azalea Festival this weekend at Wilmington and will be in the grand parade Saturday morning at 10 o'clock.

The band squadron, the drill team and the color guard will march in the event in honor of the floral city. They will leave Friday at 1 p.m. and return on Sunday.

Capt. Humphries, commandant of cadets, and M/Sgt. Albert Boyer will accompany the cadets who will make the trip by car.

Charlie Sloan Names Staff

Charlie Sloan, candidate for Daily Tar Heel editor, released the names of his campaign managers in the women's dormitories yesterday.

He explained that their duties would be much the same as the dormitory campaign managers he named Monday. Each girl will help see that the girls in her dorm know something of Sloan's qualifications and plans.

The list of campaign managers includes Fay Jenny, Smith; Jane Hall, Carr; Molly Davis, Alderman and Lynne Courtney, Spencer.

Names of representatives in sororities and fraternities have not been released, Sloan explained, because the members of each of these groups know who is helping him out with his campaign.

The junior Journalism major from Arlington, Va., also reviewed his plans in his statement.

"I think, after nearly three year's experience on The Daily Tar Heel, that the way to the best Daily Tar Heel is through more efficient organization of the entire paper," he said.

More efficient organization can be achieved through daily meetings of the editors of the various sections with the business and advertising managers through a dormitory stringer system and through training more people for the night staff, Sloan concluded.

Joel Chadabe Recital Slated This Evening

Student Pianist Joel Chadabe will present his junior recital in Hill Music Hall tonight at 8 o'clock. The event is open to the public without charge.

A music major at Carolina, Chadabe is currently studying piano with Dr. Wilton Mason.

Chadabe is primarily interested in musical composition. He may be remembered for his score for the Carolina Playmakers production of "Peer Gynt" in the spring of 1957, as well as for a short poem for symphony orchestra which was performed by the University Symphony this past December.

He has studied composition with Noel Sokoloff in New York and has attended two summer sessions of the Mannes College of Music. His piano background includes study with Vladimir Pastukoff, Walter Hautzig and Miecyslaw Munz, all of New York.

Chadabe will open the recital with the Mozart Variations on "Ah, vous dirais-je maman." Beethoven's Sonata in E Minor, Op. 90, will follow.

Two Choplin etudes, G-flat Major, Op. 10, No. 5 and A-flat Major, posthumous, are grouped with the Chopin "Polonaise," Op. 53.

The Mouvments Perpetules of Poulenc, composed in 1918, will be followed by the final group, five of the Piano Miniatures composed by Thomas N. Rice, University graduate student in music.

Person Gallery Exhibition Set To Open Today

Person Hall Art Gallery will start a showing today through Saturday of the exhibition, "Contemporary Theatre in the United States."

The showing will be held in conjunction with the South Eastern Theatre Conference which will be underway at UNC, with the Carolina Playmakers as hosts.

The "Contemporary Theatre" exhibit may be seen next Thursday and Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p. m.; Thursday night from 7:30 to 9 o'clock and Saturday from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p. m. and 1:30 to 5 p.m.

Anyone with more than a passing curiosity for the workings of the dramatic medium will be amply rewarded in the back-stage and front-stage views to be seen in the collection of 150 large photographs.

The exhibit was organized by the American National Theatre and Academy with headquarters in New York City.

Stage settings and changes of scene are shown along with costuming and make-up in dramatic picturizations from professional stage, children's theater, summer stock, high school and university productions.

KING'S CORNER

By BILL KING

DTH Sports Editor

Students Should Support Baseball Team

This afternoon, weather permitting, Walter Rabb's 1958 Carolina baseball team will go on display for the first time before the homefolks against VPI. The contest is scheduled to start at 3:30 in Emerson Stadium.

Last year this corner did everything but start a crusade to better attendance at Carolina's home baseball games. The response seemed to be almost negative. The Tar Heels had one of their finest clubs in many years, still the student support left much to be desired.

It is amazing to us just how much interest declines from basektball to baseball season. Surely, there is more interest in the National Pastime on campus than is indicated in the attendance figures.

True, the concrete stands in Emerson are not very comfortable. Likewise, 3:30 is a bad starting time due to lab conflicts, etc. It is the latter problem, we feel, that hampers attendance so greatly. Many people also feel that the games are entirely too long, that a great deal of time is wasted—this is also true. But this year some new collegiate rule changes will be in effect and they should help cut the length of the games considerably.

Still, we are not satisfied that poor student support can be attributed completely to the above problems. Perhaps television has had an indirect effect on the reluctance of Tar Heel students to support their club. The fact that major league games come right into the living room every Saturday afternoon has evolved an attitude of "why should we go down to Emerson to watch a college game when we see the best games without even going out of the house or dorm?"

There is a lot of reality in that attitude. But it must be remembered that this is "our" team. It seems to us that Carolina students should have enough pride in their own baseball team to go out and back it. Players cannot be expected to have their heart in it when they are greeted with such an indifferent attitude by their fellow students.

At the risk of being repetitious, we would once again like to urge Carolina students to give some support to their baseball team. Your cheers can mean a great deal to the boys—at least show them you appreciate what they are doing as representatives of "your" school. And above all, enjoy yourselves.

Rule Changes Should Speed Things Up

The rule changes which we mentioned should help considerably to speed up the games and eliminate a lot of criticism from the fans. Here are the new rules:

1—A ball (or balk with runners on base) will be called if the pitcher takes more than two pumps before his delivery.

2—Pitchers must deliver ball to batter within 20 seconds after receiving the ball if bases are empty; and can throw no more than five preparatory tosses, except in emergency situations. For each violation a ball will be called.

3—A batter who fails to appear at the plate within 30 seconds after the umpire calls for the batsman will be ruled out.

4—A strike will be called on a batter who steps out of the box unless there is bonafide reason in the umpire's judgment.

5—When a coach makes the second trip to the mound in one inning to talk with the pitcher, or third trip during a game (except in cases of obvious injury), the pitcher must be removed from the game.

A great many previous weaknesses in collegiate ball should be cleared up by these new rules and better college baseball is to be expected.

Tar Heels To Face VPI Here Today At 3:30

Aycock On Mound In Debut

By RUSTY HAMMOND

The Carolina Tar Heels, just back from a three-day stand in sunny Florida, open the home season and a three-game series here today against VPI's Gobblers in Emerson Field at 3:30. The Tar Heels face VPI today and tomorrow, and they go against Rhaca College of New York on Saturday.

The weather, which has been a hampering factor so far in all of the spring sports, may prevent playing of the game. Rain was the forecast for today.

Rain Hurts Practice

Carolina has had a rough time in getting any outside practice at all here in Chapel Hill because of the weather. The Tar Heels' trip to Florida was their only opportunity thus far to perform in real spring weather.

Carolina split its four game series in the Rollins College baseball week, taking two from host Rollins and dropping a pair to the University of Georgia. The Heels beat Rollins 8-3 in the opener, with Rollins and Georgia, Dave Floyd getting the Rollins victory in relief. Georgia whipped the Tar Heels in the tournament finale with a surge in the disastrous eighth.

Sharp On Defense

The defense looked good in Florida, according to Coach Walt Rabb, and they handled all double play situations well. Dave Floyd, a reliefer, got credit for one win and saved both of Carolina's victories. Bruce Crump looks good behind the plate, and the infield seems solid. The outfield spots are still more or less open to several contenders.

Starting on the mound today for Carolina will be vet Charlie Aycock, who received credit for one of the Heels' wins at Rollins. In his Florida performance, Aycock pitched seven innings, giving up only five hits.

The probable starting lineup for Carolina today is: Bruce Crump, c; Vaughn Bryson, 1b; Carson Oldham, 2b; Roger Hunneycutt, ss; Harold Workman, 3b; Gerald Griffin, lf; Tommy Saintsing, cf; and Al Pons, rf.

Track Meet

The varsity and freshmen dual track meets with State in Raleigh were rained out for the second time yesterday.

It has not yet been determined when the meets will be rescheduled.

Carolina Team Scoring Champ

GREENSBORO, N. C. (AP) —Maryland's Terps and Carolina's Tar Heels topped the Atlantic Coast Conference in team scoring defense and offense during the 1957-58 season, but State came off with three of the six team efficiency crowns.

Final ACC Service Bureau compilations showed Carolina to be the scoring champion at 71.8 points a game and Maryland the defensive king with an average yield of only 57.6 points.

State, meantime, led in field goal accuracy at 43.1 per cent, in rebounding with 46.4 recoveries a game and in personal foul avoidance with only 18.4 infractions per contest. Wake Forest had the highest fouling average with 19.5 personals per game. And Virginia posted the best free throw accuracy mark, 73.2 per cent.

Final figures also show ACC scoring averages down 5.6 points from a year ago and defensive marks improved 4.7 points a game.

Boxing Babies

TRYON, N. C., (AP) — Dr. George C. Vosburgh is an enthusiatic fight fan.

But just before the start of the Carmen Basilio-Sugar Ray Robinson championship middleweight fight Tuesday, Dr. Vosburgh was called to attend a patient in labor.

In the delivery room, Dr. Vosburgh rigged up earphones so he could listen to the fight.

During the eighth round, Mrs. Noble Lee Allen give birth to a daughter and just as Sugar Ray was announced the winner, Mrs. Allen gave birth to a boy.

The Allens named the girl Carmen and the boy Ray.

Robinson Is Tentative On Basilio Rematch

CHICAGO (AP) — Once again Sugar Ray Robinson, "acting in every home," but laughably, Wednesday left his lucky fight city the conquering hero.

Middleweight champion for the fifth time, a quarter of a million dollars richer, Robinson entrained for New York hinting a third match with Carmen Basilio may develop next September.

Slouched in a chair in his hotel suite, Robinson held his second news conference within 12 hours after dethroning a half-blinded Basilio in a fierce Chicago Stadium title bout Tuesday night.

Sugar Ray, who Tuesday night was extremely vague about his future plans, Wednesday left the door a jar to a rematch with Basilio. He said he wouldn't consider a June bout suggested by Jim Norris, International Boxing Club president, but will take to Norris later about a possible September match.

Robinson earlier had said of a June rematch, "I don't know whether there will be anything. By anything, I mean I'm seriously considering the advice of a couple of good friends."

Was this a hint of retirement from the ring?. "I didn't say that," Robinson quickly added.

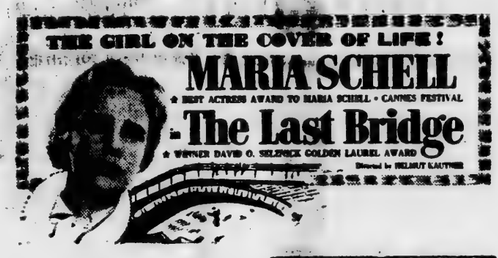
Rained Out Tennis Match Rescheduled For Today

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., (AP) —With weather permitting, the Carolina tennis team will meet Williams University in the opening match of the season here this afternoon.

Matches between the two teams here yesterday were called off because of wet courts.

Carolina embarks on a 16-match schedule against hte Williamburg, Mass., team with seven lettermen returning. The lettermen are Steve Bank, Geoffrey Black, Bobby Bortter, Canie Smith, Pawling Stewart and John Walker.

Assistant coach Ham Strayhorn is directing the team until the arrival of coach Vladimar Cernik from Tampa, Fla., April 1.



The Tar Heels won eight and lost nine in Cernik's first year in 1957.

Winston Champs

In a desperate last minute rally, Winston Dorm won the intramural All-Campus basketball crown defeating the fraternity champs, SAE, 46-42.

The contest was close all the way with neither team getting a spread. In the final two minutes Winston grabbed the lead, and held it until the final gun.

The scoring: Winston — Ron Marquette 15, Al Resch 9, Don Redding 8, Winky McDavid 7, Frank Berry 5, and Bill Edison 2. SAE—Sandy Ainslee 14, Buddy Sasser 12, Jim Kelley 9, Mike Haley 2, Jay Walker 4, and Ben Keys 1.

Welcome Decoys

When it gets along toward the end of the month, and folks are broke, when you could turn the first six guys you see upside down and shake them without getting change for a quarter, then we thank whatever gods there be for our perennial browsers.

For one thing, as the heading on this advertisment suggests, they act as decoys. Who knows when some lucky guy with a buck or so left may pass by and be moved to join the contented group?

For another, they are a comfort to us. A customer in a lonely vacant shop can move on, but the crew has to remain among the echoes and brood. It's nice to know that what we have to sell still has appeal, even though the customers are too broke to buy!

But most of all we take your visit as a compliment. There are so few places in this sputnick-circled world where intelligent men and women can gather without feeling pushed around and grafted on!

When you come calling at the month's end, we hope it means that our venerable joint is such as oasis.

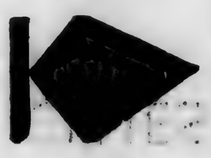
CAMPUS CLUES

By CAROLYN

Your shopper has been vacationing in the hills of West Virginia for the past few weeks, but we're back in town ready to help you with tips on your Easter buying.

Put Your Pretty Foot Forward



Easter really isn't Easter to a gal if she can't sport a new pair of shoes to church or just down the avenue on Easter morning.

Alexander's Shoe Store has an exciting collection of the latest styles and colors—but with red and black patent the real favorites this spring.

Here is the oldtime friend—the plain pump-dressed up in the needle heel and tapered toe—just begging to be accented with some of the bright buckles and bows that you can find only at ALEXANDERS.

Listen To This!

One of our first stops when we got back home was at KEMP'S to find out about any new and hot deals. And here's a good one for sure.

London 12" L.P.'s—virgin, new, the latest and best (including operas)—in a Back Room Deal—just $1.50.

Get over to KEMP's while the selection is still great.

Here's Something Smooth . . .

From JULIAN'S COLLEGE SHOP. These imported lisle sport shirts are really honeys. They're sharp looking—and easy to take care of.

They come in ten virile colors, and feature ribbed collar and cuffs that stay fresh looking after dozens of washings—and an extra long shirt tail that really stays in.

Give the gals a treat and get some of these Lacoste shirts. The lisle shirts are $8.50 and the same shirt in hand washable wool jersey is $11.50 and $12.95 in short or long sleeves.

ELECTIONS BOARD

It has erred in serving students, editor says on page 2.

Books Found At Lenoir Hall

Books and notebooks left by students in Lenoir Hall may be picked up now, according to John Winkler, student manager.

The books will be on a desk in the office on the right side of the south entrance to Lenoir Hall.

The names that were written in some of the books include: John Ragland, Don Douglas, Tom Guerrant, Margaret Starnes, Page Bernstein, Grayson H Walker, Hobart Steele, James L. Phillips, Rick Barrett, John F. Bost, Joe Clemmens, Ernest Webster, J. C. Hoerston, Bill Bailey, Rudolf Zarzai, Joe Denfell, Phil Edwards, George Manasse, George W. Sutton, Townsend; A. R. Whitile and Elenor Baker.

Other books without any names have been found and may be claimed. In addition, library books will be left in the office for several days so that student may pick them up and straighten out any fees with the library as soon as possible.

IFC Meeting

The Inter-Fraternity Council in a meeting Monday decided not to endorse a candidate for editor of The Daily Tar Heel and to leave the matter to the discretion of each fraternity.

All five editorial candidates spoke before the meeting, expressing their views on the student newspaper post.

In other action the IFC voted a contribution of $100 to the Campus Chest in a move to bring the drive up to its fund goal.

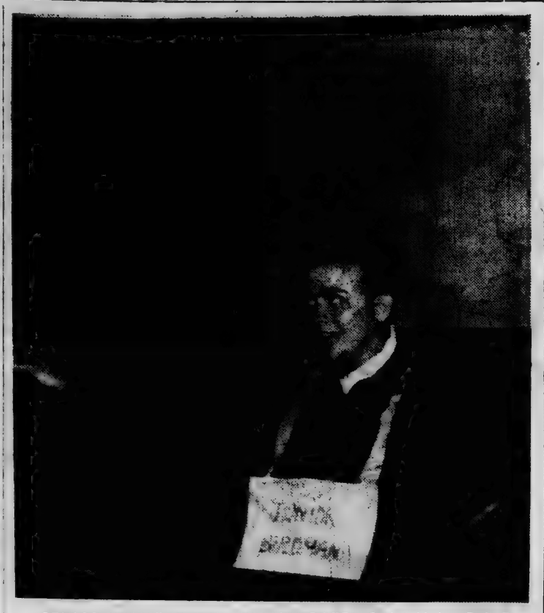
NROTC Leaves Today For Fete

For the third consecutive year the Naval ROTC unit at Carolina will be represented in the Azalea Festival at Wilmington. The NROTC precision drill team, drum and bugle corps, and color guard will travel to Wilmington, this weekend to participate in the Azalea Festival parade.

The group will leave Chapel Hill at noon today and travel to Camp Lejeune, where it will be billeted with the Eighth Regiment, Second Marine Division. The Eighth Regiment is presently under the command of Col. R. C. Burns, USMC, former professor of naval science at UNC.

Lt (jg) James G. Abert, USN, is officer-in-charge of the drill team and drum and bugle corps, assisted by Midshipman Capt. Maurice Glatzer and Midshipman Lt. Cmdr. Henry J. Sommer.

Midshipman Lt. Donald H. Miller, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, will command the drill team and the drum and bugle corps will be led by Midshipman William A. McGee of Charleston, S. C.



Hallford Gives Interpretation About Funds

Sonny Hallford, Attorney-General, has issued a statement in regard to the funds received by campus organizations.

Hallford has been requested to give an interpretation of campus organizations who receive the majority of their funds from other sources, exclusive of the funds received from student government.

Hallford said, "The organizations who receive the majority to their funds from other sources shall be allowed to retain these funds which are not received from student government."

"In other words, these funds will not revert back to the general surplus. It is suggested that these funds not be distinguished between by the Student Audit Board. It shall be the duty and responsibility of the Student Audit Board to determine which organizations shall be allowed to do this."

SENIOR CADET READY FOR TAKEOFF—Cadet Major Bob Barber of Durham, is demonstrating to fellow Air Force ROTC cadets how he manipulated his plane on his first solo flight here last week. Barber was the second cadet to solo, the first being Cadet Captain Gerry Mayo who is shown in the background.

NAN SCHEAFFER:

Busy Days, Fun Ahead For Carolina's Azalea

By DOREEN GREENFIELD

Nan Scheaffer will be a very busy young lady this weekend amid all the parties and special events in Wilmington.

She is the lucky coed who left yesterday with her escort, Buddy Baarcke, to represent Carolina at the 11th annual Azalea Festival.

The lovely senior from Talahassee, Fla., started her exciting weekend last night with a dinner, fireworks and street dance, followed by a party for the queen and her court at the ballroom of the Cape Fear Hotel.

Friday the queen, movie star Esther Williams, and her court will attend the dedication of a bridge at Greenfield Lake. After an art show and a rehearsal at Airlie Plantation, the court, consisting of Nan and nine other lovely girls representing leading colleges in the state, will go to the king's coronation by motorcade.

The king is to be Scott Brady, movie and television star.

The big day is Saturday when the famous parade of pretty girls amid flowered floats will be a spectacular sight for thousands of people present.

At 1 p.m. the girls will attend the City-County Luncheon at the Surf Club, following which there will be a coronation practice.

The climax of the weekend will be Saturday evening when Miss Williams is crowned queen of the Festival. Her court has been given evening dresses in the range of azalea colors, white, pink, watermelon and lavendar.

Theatre Conference Slate

FRIDAY, MARCH 28

Senior Class Nominees For SP List Platform

A platform calling for "Ingenuity in the senior class" was released yesterday by Tom Long, senior presidential candidate for the Student Party.

"The senior class is the one class which not only has the right and means to act, but also has the obligation to climax four year of college with positive actions," said Long. Among these are Barefoot Day and graduation functions. The SP candidates Jim Pittman, vice-president, Sue Camubell, secretary; Betty Kay Johnson, social chairman and Tom Long, president, feel that these functions may be best at-

Student Council Upholds Board Decision; John Brooks Ruled Ineligible For Race

Ralph Cummings Moves Into Political Spotlight

By DOUG EISELE

Ralph Cummings definitely moved into the Carolina political spotlight early Thursday morning following a ruling by Student Council that SP vice presidential nominee John Brooks is ineligible to run for office.

The Council, meeting in a special session that lasted early into the morning Thursday, upheld a former decision by the Elections Board which keeps Brooks out of the vice presidential race.

With that ruling came assurance from the Student Party that Cummings, chosen by the party's advisory board after Brooks first had been ruled ineligible, definitely will run on the SP ticket with Don Furtado, presidential candidate.

Council Chairman Mac Patton said his body based the inelegibility ruling on grounds that (1) the Elections Board did not overstep its constitutional power in handing down the initial judgment and (2) the law used for that decision was not in conflict with the constitution.

"Any other interpretation would have to follow changes in the elections law as it is now written," Patton said. "As a judicial body, the Student Council felt it had no other alternative than to abide by the law, created by legislative action, which we did not bind in violation of the constitution."

It was on grounds of unconstitutionality of the election laws, coupled with a claim of unequal consideration, by the Selection Board that Brooks appealed the Elections Board decision of Monday to the Student Council on Wednesday.

Following the Student Council's ruling, Brooks made a statement thanking those who worked on his much-publicized case and called for legislative action "to correct the flaws in the elections laws and the judicial system . . ."

His full statement follows:

"I am not a candidate for the vice presidency of the student body. I encourage everyone to consider the candidates now in the race and to vote for the man who is best qualified to hold the position.

"I extend my sincere appreciation to Bob Furtado and the Elections Board, Mac Patton and the Student Council, and Ray Long and other members of my counsel for their time and energy in helping student government solve this unique problem.

"It is the hope of all of us that the Student Legislature will take steps to correct the flaws in the tem after the spring elections when election laws and the judicial sys- a normal pace of activity is resumed."

Matrix Society Elects Officers

New officers of the Matrix Society, honorary journalistic sorority, were named Wednesday afternoon in Bynum Hall.

Jackie Haithcock is president of the group. Others who will head the organization for the spring semester are Joan Brock, vice president; Ruth Whitley, recording secretary; Gail Godwin, corresponding secretary; Ann Frye, treasurer; and Mary Moore Mason, keeper of the archives.

Only recently the group held its initiation and pledge ceremonies at the home of Mrs. Ross Scroggs, at which time senior coed Mary Moore Mason was initiated and four junior coeds were pledged.

The pledges are Joan Brock, Ann Frye, Gail Godwin and Ruth Whitley.

UNC Solons Compromise On Clauses

By DAVE JONES

A compromise between two divergent groups was effected last night in the Student Legislature. Representative Roger Foushee (SP) moved that his bill on the NSA Basic Policy Declaration on Academic Freedom be reconsidered. It was. Then he moved the Racial clause amendment written by the Ways and Means committee last week be deleted.

The ways and means Amendment read: "However recognition (of student organizations) may not be denied because of racial clauses in national charters."

After it was made clear to the body that there was a substitute amendment ready for presentation by Representative Charlie Gray (UP) Foushee's motion passed.

Gray then offered the following substitute amendment: "However the Student Legislature of the University of North Carolina would possibly like to see the removal of Discriminatory Clauses. We do not recommend the denial of recognition to organizations whose national charters include such clauses."

Representative Connie Bernstein voiced the only opposition to the compromise amendment. Her opposition was based primarily on the existance of the word "Possibly" in the first sentence.

The amendment and the bill were passed giving them the force of a resolution.

Further business for the evening included the unanimous passage of a resolution by Representative Erwin Fuller (SP), praising the work done by Symposium faculty advisor William Geer, Chairman Sonny Hallford, and the staff.

A bill by Student Party Floor Leader Pat Adams to provide for the purchase of an accounting machine for the student activities fund office was passed after Adams explained the financial provisions of the bill to the body. (the office will be loaned 3,087.50 dollars over a period of ten years.)

Speaker Don Furtado turned the last regular session of the legislature over to the Speaker Pro Tempore Leo Wardrup, in accordance with established custom. Wardrup handled all business conducted including the swearing in of a new member, Dorothy Doug Kellam.

Appointments approved by the body included that of Mary Anne Hofler to be editor of the Yack for the remainder of the school year.

There will be one more meeting of the 24th session of the Student Legislature.

IDC Elects Rudy Edwards President

By STAN BLACK

Rudy Edwards, a junior from Rutherfordton, was elected president of the Interdormitory Council in its meeting Wednesday night. Edwards has been on the IDC for two years and has served as social chairman this last semester.

He declared in a speech before the election his intentions of working closely with student government to eliminate injustices such as the current plan to pay for new dormitories through self-liquidating bonds supported by increased room rents.

Edwards further wishes to revise the Interdormitory Court, which he cites as in "bad need of reorganization." He would like to change the impression that most dorm men have of the IDC as a policeman. Edwards feels that if the IDC were to develop itself as a social coordinator for all the dormitories it could sreve the students better.

Doug Bayliff was elected vice president, Foy Bradshaw, the new secretary, and Paul Woodard the new treasurer in other elections of IDC officers. Bayliff, a junior from Graham, has previously been co-chairman of the social committee and is at present the president of Mangum Dormitory.

Bradshaw is a sophomore in the pharmacy school from Rocky Mount. He has been a member of the IDC for one year. Paul Woodard is a junior journalism major from Bayboro and has served as president of Lewis Dormitory this year.

Court Officers

Elections were also held for officers of the Interdormitory Court. Otto Funderburk, sophomore from Spray and president of Manley Dormitory, was elected chairman of the Court. Walt Poole, a sophomore from Kinston, is the new clerk of the Interdormitory Court.

In other action Wednesday night it was announced that the IDC banquet at which the presentation of the "best dorm" awards will be made will be held April 16 at Brady's. Also sometime in May the IDC and GMAB will jointly sponsor a dance on the tennis courts for the dormitories. Dates will come from WC for the dance.

GMAB Officers To Be Selected

Applications for officers, committee chairmen and committee members for the Graham Memorial Activities Board for 1958-59 are available at the information desk at Graham Memorial.

The offices to be filled on GMAB for this coming year are: president, vice-president and secretary. The committee chairmen to be selected are: chairmen of the calendar, current affairs, dance, drama, films, music, office, polls, publicity, receptions and decorations, special events, Sound and Fury and tournaments committees. There will also be about 200 committee members appointed to these committees, according to GMAB President Benny Thomas.

In regard to the applications, Benny Thomas has invited anyone who has questions about the positions open and filling out applications to come by his office any afternoon.

Lost Book Drive Ends Here Today

The Student Committee drive to get books which are illegally held has netted 17 books so far.

The drive will end today in the late afternoon. Any book which has been illegally held can be brought to the Student Government Office on the second floor of Graham Memorial and no questions will be asked.

The library loses around 200 volumes during the course of the year. This drive is an effort to get some of those books back in circulation.

The student committee will return the books to the library.

Tri Delt Scholarship Competition To Begin

The 1958 scholarship competition of Delta Delta Delta Sorority begins today. All women students at UNC are eligible to apply for the award. Application blanks may be obtained from the Dean of Women's Office.

The sorority's scholarship program is an international service, irrespective of fraternity affiliation.

The deadline for applications will be Thursday, April 17. Judges will be announced later.

Delta Delta Delta awarded three scholarships last year totaling $500.

Premiership Places Nikita Khrushchev In Stalin-Like Position

MOSCOW, March 27 (AP)—Communist boss Nikita S. Khrushchev took over today as premier of the Soviet Union, replacing Nikolai A. Bulganin. The unexpected switch placed Khrushchev in a position comparable to Stalin.

Diplomats in the galleries gasped with astonishment when aged Marshal Klementi Voroshilov anounced to an eagerly expectant Supreme Soviet (parliament) that the Communist chief would be the next chairman of the Council of Ministers. But the 1,378 deputies at the joint session of the two houses burst into a storm of applause.

Khrushchev took it modestly. Contrary to the normal practice for a Soviet leader, he did not join in the applause for himself, but stood by with bowed head until it subsided. Then he clenched his hands above his head in a salute to the deputies.

Bulganin's resignation had been expected. As the joint session opened, he surrendered the post he had held since February, 1955, when Georgi M. Malenkov lost it.

As premier, Khrushchev would sit across the table from President Eisenhower, should there be agreement on a summit conference. The possibility of such a meeting, therefore, might have been a factor in Khrushchev's decision to assume the premiership.

Some sort of Supreme Soviet action also had been expected on foreign policy, dealing with the question of a ban on thermonuclear weapons, and Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko had been scheduled to make a statement on it. But the joint session which made Khrushchev head of the Soviet Union in name as well as in fact ended after three hours and 28 minutes with no further action.

It seemed likely Bulganin, now 63, would be given a job in Khrushchev's cabinet possibly that of deputy premier. A veteran Communist leader, Bulganin held many important posts in his long career

How Does Elections Board Get Its Judicial Authority?

The Student Legislature should get busy at once, as ousted vice presidential nominee John Brooks has urged, setting straight the flaws in election laws and the student judicial system.

Brooks' unique case, finally settled by a Student Council ruling early Thursday morning, only points out conflicting definitions and mandates within the student laws which should corrected before another election in Chapel Hill.

Our biggest surprise came when the Student Council, first approached by Brooks for appeal of an Elections Board decision, said the council could not hear Brooks' case on grounds which he was arguing—an adverse ruling by the Elections Board.

Apparently, no one was quite sure whether the Council, in view of the grounds on which Brooks based his appeal, could hear the case or not. And the student constitution and other provisions of the election laws didn't help answer the question.

Let's look at what the constitution says about the Student Council's relationship to the election laws: "The Student Council shall have original jurisdiction in all cases involving the constitutionality of any legislative or judicial action, and appeals concerning the election laws."

Yet here's what Section 6 of Article II, General Election Law, says about that same relationship: "Appeals from DECISIONS of the Elections Board shall be made to the Student Council."

"Decisions," mind you, and "appeals concerning ELECTION LAWS," are two quite different things. One, the constitutional definition, would prohibit the Student Council from hearing appeals based solely on "DECISIONS," allowing it to consider only cases of constitutionality.

But the other, the General Election Law definition, seemingly would permit any defendant before the Elections Board to make an appeal to the Student Council solely on basis of decision rendered by the Elections Board, and not on questions of constitutionality.

That fiasco is what produced the confusion in the Brooks case. In fact, it never would have gotten to the Student Council had Brooks' second appeal not raised a question of constitutionality of laws used to disqualify him from the vice presidential race.

This brief explanation of the constitutional and election law contradictions brings us to our key question: does the Student Council have the authority to refuse to hear an appeal from the Elections Board, and does that board, in the first place, have the authority to give a judicial ruling on any of the election laws which it administers?

To the latter part of the question, we would answer, probably not. The Elections Board is appointed by the executive, can be controlled by the executive, and can include, at the executive's discretion, a partisan majority sympathetic with the executive.

Furthermore, the Elections Board is defined in the constitution under the executive branch of student government while all other bodies with judicial authority—and the Elections Board definitely has practiced that authority—are placed under "Judiciary" in Article II.

For those reasons we cannot see where the Elections Board got its judicial power on Monday to rule against the candidacy of John Brooks and we cannot understand why it should be allowed to retain that authority if it now has it.

A county sheriff's office has certain state and county laws to uphold. It does not, however, try violators of those laws within the structure of its own office. That function is performed by the judicial branch of county government, and it alone can determine the guilt or innocence of a defendant.

The Elections Board, it seems to us, is about like a sheriff's office. It has laws to administer and it can apprehend a person who allegedly violates those laws, but it should not be permitted to try those same persons when judicial powers are completely absent from its authority.

We still raise the question, however, of what right the Student Council has to refuse an appeal from the Elections Board—regardless of the grounds for the appeal—if the Elections Board does, in fact possess judicial powers.

Surely, the Student Council is not the Supreme Court of student government. Rather, it is more like Superior Courts in our state judicial structure and for that reason should be constituted some what along the same lines.

No Superior Court now has the privilege of refusing an appeal from a lower court, i.e. Recorder's Court, regardless of grounds on which that appeal is made. The appeal can be filed either on grounds of verdict or on a question of law. And the Superior Court can refuse none.

We feel that the Student Council should likewise be designed — that it must hear all appeals made to it and within its constitutional jurisdictions, as opposed to the Men's or Women's Honor Councils and the cases they are constituted to hear.

This is the individual's only assurance of justice and equality in the law. It is needed even if judicial powers are taken away from the executive-tinted Elections Board. It is woefully imperative if the Elections Board is permitted to continue in the practice of judicial authority.

We hope the board won't be allowed to continue practicing that authority. Because, if it does, it shouldn't be long before the legislature is penning bills and the president is presiding over meetings of the Women's Honor Council.

TV Is Answer For The 'Lost Generation'

By WHIT WHITFIELD

(Editor's Note: Due to popular demand, the title of this column has been changed from "Wise and Otherwise" to just "Otherwise." It is perfectly obvious to anyone who reads it that the remarks contained herein bear no resemblance to wisdom by any stretch of the imagination.)

If you have read any magazines during the past year or so you have undoubtedly noticed that the college students of today are known as the lost generation. (Which presupposes that at one time we were not lost but are so now.)

We are not able to take issue with the fact that we are a lost generation, and not having any idea exactly what we are supposed to be lost from, we can only offer a conjecture as to the reason we are so considered.

Possibly it is because we are being deprived of a liberal education. And where does a liberal education come from? Certainly not from dull classes in subjects which do not interest us in the least. We submit that our liberal education is derived from our daily experiences, living with depth and meaning from day to day.

And what facet of modern living offers more experiences, although most of them are vicarious, than any other? Television of course. Where else but in television can a person be exposed to drama, science, history, athletics, and incidental intelligence in such a short time with so little effort? What other form of education is as inexpensive as this? There are no matriculation fees (whatever they are), athletic fees, tuition fees, and fee fees (fees for the paying of late fees), and there are no textbooks to be bought.

The only hindrances to students who are desirous of this type education are the faculty and administration, who insist upon class attendance, hours, and quality points. This is their conception of a liberal education, but then it necessarily has to be for them since their jobs are at stake.

So, then, it is the fault of the student. That he is not receiving his liberal education is due to his humanitarian nature, for how many of us could stand to see our instructors in bread lines? Not us.

But the answer is not all gloom and doom, for as long as the humanitarian instinct is alive in each of us we can know for ourselves that we are not the "lost generation."

* * *

For what it's worth, we understand that Veep candidate John Brooks is in hiding since Attorney-general Sonny Hallford has threatened to put him in a "cell." Hallford did not specify what type cell he had in mind.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

Reader Says U.S. Selfish, Too

To the editor:

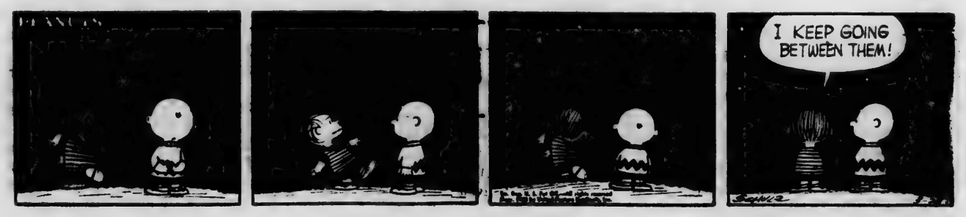
I am prone to laugh when I see such random flinging of irrelevant facts such as Mr. Scott has presented to us in supposedly answering Mr. Hamad's letter on refugee aid, I am sorry to say that the average American thinks as Mr. Scott, and this is anything but laughable.

Mr. Hamad wrote a letter asking why the U. S. does not have any posters urging us to send CARE packages to the Arab refugees, as they do to other areas. In reply he gets a tirade of "facts" such as anyone might find in any current Reader's Digest article. Furthermore, these facts are not even concerned with the subject of refugee aid. If Mr. Scott is trying to give us a pedantic show of his knowledge of Middle Eastern affairs, he has not succeeded with me.

This gentleman speaks the thoughts of most Americans when he pictures the British and the U. S. as the big, brave protectors of liberty and justice. Why did the British "create" Jordan? It was for purely selfish reasons. The British and the French divided the Middle East (one of the reasons for Jordan's existence) and caused Ill-will between the nations. This was necessary if they were to keep a strangle hold on the M. E. for the last 30 years. As long as the Arabs were divided, hence weak, the British and French could drain off the billions of dollars worth of oil. Witnes the French in Algeria. Are they advancing democracy? Foolish boy! Algeria has oil, man, OIL, billions of dollars worth of oil. Witness the French in be damned.

The British and French had paid puppets in every Middle East government possible for the last 30 years. King Farouk is a typical example. Of course the British were furious when men like Nassar came into power. The British realized that their interests would no longer be first, as they had been when Farouk was in control. The British made a desperate, and we hope the last, attempt to wreck Nassar's government during the Suez fiasco.

It is interesting to learn that the U. S. was the big, brave protector of liberty when we rushed our Sixth Fleet into the Mediterranean during the Jordanian unrest. Uncle Sam was also acting for purely selfish reasons. We have a vital stake in maintaining air bases in the Middle East. This is why we, the big preachers of democracy, are coddling such absolute dictators as Kings Hussein, SAUD and the like. What we preach and what we do is another matter.



These poor Arab countries, i.e. the people, are fighting for their freedom. They have been ruthlessly exploited by the West for the last 30 years. When the people try to rebel we send more arms to the dictators and/or rush the Sixth Fleet into the area. Big Deal! Many of these Arabs hate these kings and will one day overthrow them.

No, Mr. Scott has tried to defend actions that can not be defended except by the arguement that all nations are selfish and we are merely protecting our interests. We cant use all of those pious phrases about furthering democracy.

Mr. Scott gives me the impression of a man who upon seeing a starving child would first investigate it's father. If the child's father and uncle were rich, druken gamblers who had thrown the child out into the world, he would then point out this fact to the child and leave him to starve.

Law Students Clarify Rules They 'Violated'

IN RE PYRRHIC VICTORY

To the editor:

You may not recognize the word appearing in the heading of this column. It first came to our attention last Tuesday, March 25th, on the sports page of the Daily Tar Heel in reference to the campus basketball championship play-off game between Winston-Dorm and the Law School.

In that game the Law School won 45-37 but the playing decision was reversed by the omnipotent, omniscient intramural department for the use of two ex-lettermen on the team. Herein lies the justification for the use of "Pyrrhic Victory" which according to Webster is "a victory on success gained at too great cost."

A logical conclusion to the above fact situation would seem to be that the Law School had knowingly used ineligible men in order to gain the victory. Such was NOT the case.

According to the Handbook for Intramurals, page 51, varsity men are allowed to participate in the graduate division. Also at page 43 it states Division Champions shall meet for the campus championship. It says nothing about the use of varsity men. These men had played in every game to date.

The forfeit was thus ordered not pursuant to any action of the Protest Committee but upon independent action of the intramural department.

Coach Rabb has stated that the matter was discussed earlier in the year and it was then decided that the campus championship should be held without varsity participants. This "rule" is not promulgated in the minutes of the meetings nor was it brought to the attention of the Law School intramural manager by the intramural department. It was later learned from June Stallings, who manages the Dental School athletics, that he knew nothing of any such rule. Whether such a decision was made and rule established is not within our province to say. Discussion does not equal establishment; nor notice.

Be all this as it may the further negotiations on the matter have caused some concern. The intramural department became rather indignant when asked about the forfeiture action. We wholeheartedly agree with them that varsity athletes should not participate in sports in which they have earned a letter. But that is not the question presented.

Some of us talked with Coach Rabb personally about the situation and asked that the game be replayed rather than a forfeit declared because we had not notice of the "rule" propounded. This question was posed as to what would be lost by re-playing the game? Answer: We won't wind-up basketball this week. We are unable to think of another reason. Taking the case before the Protest Committee was deemed useless by the Intramural department which assumed the task of arbitrarily deciding the issue.

It was suggested by the department that the whole matter be dropped because what does it matter anyway. It is true that the championship doesn't mean a whole lot in the physical sense but the principle upon which the matter was decided is rather important. The handling of the situation just shocks our sense of justice.

The purpose of this letter is to clarify the situation and rebut the conclusion which would inevitably be reached from the facts set forth in the Tuesday DTH account. Pyrrhic victory indeed—WHOSE?

Golden Offers 'Carry-The-Books' Proposal

This may help toward the final solution of the "integration" problem of the South, implementing the several Supreme Court decisions to end racial segregation in the public schools.

There is no vertical segregation. But neither is there "45-degree-angle" segregation if the "sitting" or "leaning" Negro is a servant, a domestic, or a chore-boy of some kind.

Therefore the Negro parents of the South should make this proposition to their local school boards: that they will allow their children to carry the books for their "white" class mates. A system can easily be worked out whereby the Negro boy, (going to an integrated school), can meet a "white" classmate at a convenient corner, a block or so away from the school, and carry the "white" boy's books into the school building. And if there are sixteen Negro students in a school of four hundred "whites", an alternating system can be worked out so that by the end of the semester, each "white" boy will have had his books carried into the school building by a Negro student, at least once.

The Negro girls would not have to participate in this "Golden Carry-the-Books Plan." The girls should wear a sort of miniature apron over their street dresses, and this would settle everything once and for all. Everybody would be satisfied. Eventually, I suspect, the "white" girls may even adopt those cute little aprons themselves, but they will have served their purpose.

I know I am calling on the Negroes to make a considerable sacrifice, but it is worth it because this would settle the matter even for the most outspoken "white supremacists." If it became known throughout the South that the Negro boys were toting books for the whites," and that Negro girls were wearing aprons to school, all the school kids could go on with their work without any further disturbance from segregationist mobs, National Guardsmen, or Federal troops.—Harry Golden in The Carolina Israelite

Furtado Discusses New Student Union Plans

Student Party presidential candidate Don Furtado in a statement yesterday shed new light on a current subject being used in all the presidential platforms— the student union building.

Furtado said, "It has been evident for several years that the student union building which we now have is quite inadequate to meet the needs of an ever-growing student body of 7,000 students.

"Besides being out-of-the-way, it is unequipped to provide recreation for the 2,000 students who enter its doors weekly. In a city the size of Raleigh or Durham, a new union might not be essential, but Chapel Hill is a small college town, and other than two theaters and several traditional meeting places, it offers no recreational facilities of any nature.

Officers Crowded

"In addition, the offices of The Daily Tar Heel, Student Government, the audit office the Carolina Forum, the honor councils and other student organizations are extremely crowded.

"It is obvious then, that we need a new union building with bowling alleys, ping-pong tables, TV lounges, billiard tables, a central post office, offices, legislative halls, etc. It will not be an easy task to gain these facilities, but it can be done.

"In June, Howard Heary, assistant director at the huge University of Wisconsin college union, will arrive in Chapel Hill to assume the post of permanent director of Graham Memorial. Henry must be educated as to the needs of the Carolina students in order that he may capably assist in our fight for the new union before the Advisory Budget Commission and State Legislature meet next February.

Must Be Educated

"Henry must also be educated to understand the Carolina concept of a union, for he is coming to us from a college union, where all activities are performed by professionals rather than students.

It will take the determined efforts of people who are familiar with the needs and past policies of the union to gain the needed appropriation.

"For the past three years, I have served on the Graham Memorial Board of Directors, the policy making body of the union. This summer as a member of the Personnel-Policy Committee, I was one of the three students who interviewed Henry in Milwaukee.

Evans Congratulates Carolina Symposium

Sonny Evans, president of the student body, congratulated the Carolina Symposium Tuesday on the job they did last week.

Evans, said, "I should like to offer our sincerest congratulations and thanks to the members of the Carolina Symposium for the outstanding event of the year. The student body owes a great debt of thanks to Sonny Hallford, chairman of the Symposium, and Mrs. William Geer, faculty adviser, without whom it could not have taken place.

"The enthusiasm and participation by the University community in the week was as great a tribute to the success of the Symposium as anything else could be. It is at times like this that one can feel proud of this University as a place where ideals and ideologies of all sorts can be discussed in an atmosphere of free expression and thought."

Carter Gives Views On Fraternity Rush

Bob Carter, independent candidate for president of the student body, gave his views on the subject of fraternity rush in a statement released yesterday.

"Over the past few weeks the issue of fraternity rush has been debated and discussed with no absolute answer resulting. I feel that the issue should be solved once and for all. I do not feel that rushing in this campus is wrong as it now is and I cannit say that a system of delayed rushing would be best. Before anyone can really look objectively at the situation it seems necessary to me to look at the facts.

"I would propose that a committee be set up which would have equal fraternity and independent men on it. This committee would then contact all students who were rushed this past year, asking them the questions we want to know about rush and also their opinion on when rush should be.

"On the other side of the question, all the fraternities would be questioned concerning all phases of rushing as it affects them. After getting all this information ,the entire rush question can be evaluated to see if there is a problem. If any problem exists then the IFC should consider it and take the appropriate action."

Phi Passes Educational Proposal

The Phi Society, debating at Women's College Tuesday night, passed a bill calling for testing of school children at age 12 to determine if they would be placed in an academic high school, sent to a trade school or relieved of further educational work.

The society's hosts, the WC Debating Society, joined hands with the bill's opponents to defeat the measure, 17-6.

Representative Don Jacobs, selected the evening's outstanding speaker, charged that passage of this bill would destroy the freedom our forefathers fought for. He asked, "What would our mothers think of this?"

Representative Warren Coolidge, who introduced the bill, said America's present educational system is turning out "mental midgets" that put us at a disadvantage in competition with the Russians for world control. He said we need to imitate the European system to successfully with them.

The Phi president. Jess Stribling, thanked the hostesses for having the society over and extended the regrets of the Dialectic Senate for being unable to attend. He invited the girls to UNC any time.

tempted with a fresh and ingenious outlook in order to have the most outstanding class which has ever graduated from UNC.

Tom Long is experienced in the field of class government, having served as treasurer of the freshman class and as secretary of the sophomore class. He is a member of the Carolina debating team and has served in legislature both as representative and as floor leader of the SP.

Law Library Training To Be Offered Here

A new program in law librarianship has been inaugurated within the School of Library Science, in cooperation with the School of Law.

Dean Lucile Kelling Henderson of the Library Science School announced the program, which is designed to meet the demands of the library and law professions for training personnel for professional positions in law libraries. It is being offered within the graduate curriculum of the School of Library Science and leads to the degree of Master of Science in Library Science with a minor in law.

The program consists of 30 semester hours of graduate work nine of which consist of courses offered in the School of Law. The thesis, for which three semester hours credit is earned, may relate to law librarianship.

You May Steal A Kiss, But Leave The Posies!

"Let's keep our cotton-pickin' mitts off the posies!"

In case you're wondering, the "cotton-pickin' mitts" refer to the hands of UNC students and the "posies" refer to those green-stemmed ornaments that are beginning to decorate the Arboretum.

The above statement was made by C. R. Bell, acting diretcor of the Arboretum, concerning a flower-picking problem that has arisen this spring.

Bell explained that several beds of daffodils have been completely stripped of their blooms and that azaleas have been picked also. "I haven't even seen some of them bloom," he said. "They are picking the buds."

He added that the problem should come under the Honor System and that unless it was solved, the police would have to patrol the area.

"If the students want to steal a kiss down in the Arboretum that's fine with me, but tell them to leave the posies alone!" he said.

Di Senate Votes Down Foreign Aid Increase Bill

The Dialectic Senate voted Tuesday night three to two against a bill which advocated a substantial increase in all foreign aid and favored President Eisenhower's recommendations for a extension of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act for an indefinite period.

Introducing the bill affirmatively, Senator Andy Canoutas said, "Cutting down on foreign aid will also cut down on home employment. I advocate foreign aid for several reasons. The main one is that we are trying to keep ahead of Russia, and this is the best way to do it."

Sen. Rick Wolfer, arguing against increased aid, said that some foreign aid is good, but some is nebulous and of doubtful good. "We're actually bleeding our own economy with foreign aid."

He went on to say that some countries, notably Nationalist China, have continued for a long period of time to bleed the American pocketbook. Japan was said to be a good example, Britain another. "If we don't continue to bribe imperialistic Britain, then Britain will not accept our programs."

Senator Rudy Alberts took up this train of thought for the negative side by saying that most of the money poured by the United States into foreign aid has gone into the wrong hands. He added that we run into special trouble in Nationalist China mainly because the money was handled by corrupt members of the Nationalist government.

Alberts, indirectly quoting labor leader Victor Reuther, added that in the present cold war, Russia has a step against us; They not only send in materials to foreign countries, but they also send in men to handle these materials and explain their use.

Russian Culture

More often than not, the Russians also send their language and their customs into foreign countries along with the actual money and materials, he said.

Dialectic President Gary Greer, speaking for the negative side, said that foreign aid is an old story which has only changed slightly. It is a mad trade cycle in which no one ever gets anywhere, he said.

Greer, on the idea that foreign aid will help to stamp out Communism is just another whim, not lasting. We can't feed the world until we feed ourselves. Foreign aid has built more Taj Mahals than it has fed people."

Goldsmith Seeks Better Dorm Social Facilities

Al Goldsmith, candidate for president of the student body on the University Party ticket, in a statement issued Thursday pointed out the need for better dormitory social facilities and pledged himself to work for dormitory improvement.

"One of the first things the next president of the student body should do is institute a broad program of dormitory improvement and a reexamination of certain university policies concerning dormitories.

Social Needs

"Better dormitory social facilities are a definite need on our campus today. The lack of adequate social rooms in most dorms, the lack of an arrangement whereby females can visit these dorms with acceptable social rooms, coupled with the lack of an adequate student union makes it difficult for a non-fraternity man to entertain his date and other guests. I believe this a situation which demands immediate attention, and I pledge to work vigorously towards a solution if elected president.

"I believe social rooms can be expanded by taking several adjacent rooms in the dorm an removing the walls between them. With the new dorms scheduled for use next September I feel that perhaps each dorm can sacrifice a room or two to social room expansion. I pledge to work to bring this expansion about.

Vending Machines

"Also in the line of dormitory improvements is the subject of vending machines. The absense of some types of vending machines in many dorms and the absence of machines that work in others is a problem. I pledge to all within my power to provide workable and adequate vending machines in all dormitories.

"Feel that the new president should work closely and persistently with the administration in South Building to find a better solution for payment of the new dormitories. To hike dorm rent in order to pay for new dormitories is imposing a hardship on many students. I pledge to work if elected to seek a better solution to this problem.

Tennis Team Blanks Williams In Opener

The Tar Heel tennis team opened their season here yesterday afternoon with a 13-0 skunking over the net men of Williams College.

Predicted to be much stronger than last year's team, the Tar Heels won 10 single matches and followed up with three doubles victories.

Led by number one man Bob Bortner, the Tar Heels showed no mercy on their cold and wet green courts. Bortner stepped off on the wrong foot and went down 6-0 in the first set before coming back to win the next two 7-5, 6-1.

Number two man Steve Bank, number four man Tom Clark shut out their opponents 6-0, 6-0.

Originally the teams were scheduled to meet yesterday, but the meet was called because of wet courts. Coach Ham Strayhorn, said that they might play again today if the weather is suitable.

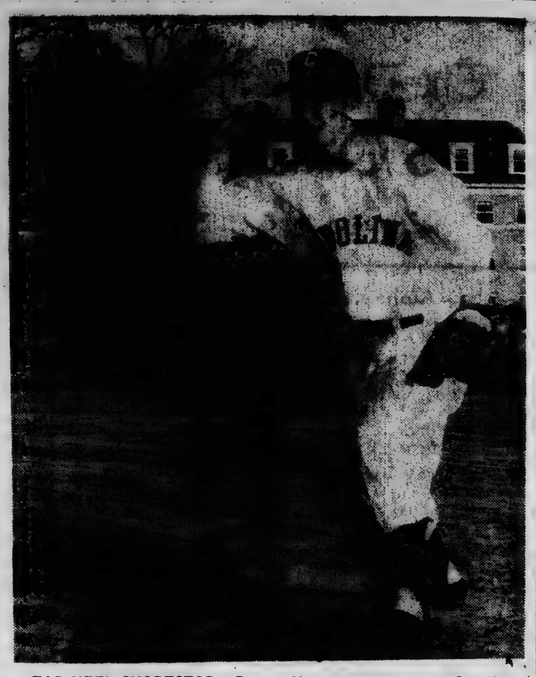
THE SUMMARY

Singles: Bortner (C) defeated Hirshman 0-6, 7-5, 6-1; Bank (C) defeated Shulman 6-0, 6-0; Black (C) defeated Turner 6-1, 2-6, 6-3; Clark (C) defeated Fleishman 6-0, 6-0; Keys (C) defeated Davidson 6-2, 6-3; Makpeice (C) defeated Tobin 6-2, 6-2; Lockett (C) defeated Pyle 6-2, 6-1; Mallins defeated Deckel 7-5, 6-3; Myers (C) defeated Devereaux 4-6, 6-2, 6-0; Straus (C) defeated Breck with 7-5, 7-5.

Doubles: Bortner-Bank (C) defeated Hirshman-Tobin 6-3, 6-4; Black-Clark (C) defeated Fleishman-Shulman 6-3, 6-4; Keys-Makpeice defeated Turner-Devereaux 6-1, 6-1.

Fencers Place In Top Twenty At NCAA Meet

Paced by sabreman Bill Mudd's six victories and epeeist Carroll Raver's five conquests, the University of North Carolina Fencing Club contingent tied with Fenn College of Cleveland, Ohio for 17th place in last Friday and Saturday's NCAA Championships at Texas Tech in Lubbock, Texas.



The total of eleven victories was good enough to place them ahead of Princeton, Texas, Kansas, Houston, Chicago, Arizona and Nebraska. Twenty five colleges and universities were represented in these national individual finals.

Carolina's number one epee man Bob Clay was unable to make the trip but Coach Barrow was very pleased by the showing made by alternate Carroll Raver who made the trip in Clay's place. "He had an exceptionally good day on Saturday—winning four out of six of his bouts. I feel he shows great promise and with added experience will be a real threat for top honors in future years. He did an outstanding job in spite of his lack of experience, handing defeats to two All-Americans — Bob Peterson of Buffalo (sixth place) and Paul Levy of Princeton. The All-American rating is for those fencers who finish within the top six and the top three receive a trophy. Each man in the course of the tournament meets all others in his weapon and the first, second, third, etc. are determined by the total number of victories by each fencer. Raver was sixteenth in the standings."

Sabreman Bill Mudd defeated All-American Bill Grovan of Detroit and five others to make a total of six victories to his credit against his 21 opponents. He tied with Len Layne of Texas A&M for 18th place in the sabre standings. The top 10 schools in the team (3-weapon) standings were, in order: Illinois, Columbia, Yale, Navy, N.Y.U., Wayne State, Notre Dame, Wisconsin, Buffalo and Iowa. The next ten were: Detroit, Texas A&M, Texas Tech, Oklahoma, Michigan State, Rice, Univ. of N.C., Fenn, Princeton and Texas.

The national collegiate foil champion for 1958 as determined at the meet was Bruce Davis of Wayne State who won 14 of 16 bouts. The collegiate sabre champ was Art Schankin of Ilinois who was undefeated in 21 bouts. In epee, R. R. Womack of Navy took top honors by winning 16 of his 18 bouts for first place.

Next year's finals will be in Cleveland, O. or Cambridge, Mass.

TAR HEEL SHORTSTOP: Roger Honeycutt, veteran Carolina shortstop will be one of the starters in today's game with VPI. The game will get under way at 3:30 on Emerson Field.

Frosh Open Season At Oak Ridge Today

By RUSTY HAMMOND

The Carolina baseball Tar Babies open their 1958 spring season today as they journey to Oak Ridge Military Academy for the season lid-lifter.

Coach Pat Earey, who guided the swimming team to an undefeated season, has also taken the reins in freshman baseball. Because of the inclement weather, Earey has had his troubles in trying to get a really good look at his players.

Two-deep Line-up

Starting positions are as yet uncertain, but a tentative two-deep lineup shows these as the leading contenders: Angus Duff and Carol Bolic, c; John Strott and George Boss, 1b; Fred Norton and John Blackwell, 2b; Tommy Kemp and Bud Ellerbe, ss; Clark Smith and Bob Wilson, 3b; Bob Chapman and Buck Morris, rf; Dee Fraly and Dick Hord, cf; and Jim Grimsley and Ski Olzewski, lf. First baseman Mike Widoff is lost through a broken leg sustained while sliding.

The team has a number of top-notch pitchers, perhaps the strongest part of the team. They include Jerry McNeil, Hennie Seippley, Bob Stokes, Russ Hoke, Tom Gizzard, Wayne Allen, Phil Rigdon, and Bob Deaton.

Tar Heels Set For VMI Today

By RUSTY HAMMOND

The only competition that most of the spring sports have faced so far has been old man weather, and the athletes have yet to win. Yesterday it was the same story as the varsity baseball game between Carolina and VPI was cancelled by a combination of low temperature and a wet field.

Another game with VPI is slated for today at 3:30, weather permitting.

So far, the only place that has been good to the Tar Heel's weather-wise is Florida, where they participate in the Rollins Baseball Week last week-end. The Heels split their four games in the Sunshine State, as they dropped two to the Georgia Bulldogs but snapped back to whip the host team, Rollins, twice.

Reliefer Dave Floyd saved both contests for the Chapel Hillians, getting credit for a victory against Rollins in the second game. Charlie Aycock, who went seven innings and gave up only five hits, won the opener for Carolina.

Coach Walt Rabb commented that he was pleased with the overall performance of the team in Florida. He stated that the defenses, especially the infield and catching, looked good. Rabb added that his biggest problem is still the relative inexperience of most of his players.

The probable starting line-up for today's game: Bruce Crump, C; Vaughn Bryson, 1b; Carson Oldham, 2b; Roger Hunneycutt, ss; Harold Workman, 3b; Gerald Griffin, lf; Tommy Saintsing, cf; and Al Pons, rf.

Veteran Charlie Aycock is scheduled to start on the hill for the Heels, and Rabb announced yesterday that the two upcoming games, today with VPI and tomorrow with Ithaca, will be split up among his four starters Aycock, Ben Harding, Ben Hammet, and Wayne Young. The game marks the first home appearance of the baseball Tar Heels SWIMMER CONFERENCE: Carolina freshman swimmer Harry Bloom confers with his coach Buddy Baarcke over some of the fine points. Bloom will compete in the National AAU meet at Yale April 3-5.

★ ★ ★ ★ • ★ ★

Frosh Swimmer Bloom To Compete In AAU Meet

CHAPEL HILL—An 18-year old redhead who has virtually revamped the freshman swimming record books at Carolina will swim in the National AAU meet at Yale University, April 3-5.

Harry Bloom of Baltimore, rated by his coach, Buddy Baarcke, a former Carolina great, as the "finest freshman swimmer we've ever had at Carolina", is expected to participate in at least three events.

Bloom, a powerfully-built lad who works exhaustively, will compete in the 100 yard freestyle, 100 butterfly, and swim on at least one relay team in the National meet.

At Carolina this year, Bloom set two new National Collegiate Freshman records and six new Carolina frosh marks. He broke National times in the 100 butterfly at 58.6 and in the medley relay at 4:06.5, swimming the breastroke in competition for the first time. Teammate Vinnie Simonton of Baltimore was also on the relay team.

Paul Wachendorfer of UNC held the old record in the 100 fly and Columbia University's team held the old mark of 4:18.3 in the medley relay.

School records scrapped by Bloom include the 100 butterfly, 150 individual medley at 1:32.4, the medley relay, 100 freestyle at 51.4, the 200 freestyle at 1:57.9 and 220 freestyle at 2:12.

Says Coach Baarcke of the University's newest aquatic star; "obviously, as his records show, Bloom is the best freshman swimmer we've ever had at Carolina. I think he should be a national champion by his Junior year and he should make the 1960 Olympic team."

Bloom is not only resourceful, but is depicted by his coaches as the hardest working swimmer at Carolina.

NCAA MEET

Wire news of the NCAA meet in Ann Arbor, Mich., reveals that Billy Steuart of Michigan State won the 100-meter freestyle. No news was received of Carolina's entry in the event, Tony Schiffman.

Sound & Fury Tryouts

DISTINGUISHED EDUCATORS—A group of four distinguished educators who have been closely connected with the history of the School of Medicine has been unveiled at the school. The presentation was made by Dr. Francis M. Clarke of Brunswick, N. J., a member of the class of 1920. The four men shown in the painting are, left to right, the late Dr. C. S Mangum, the late Dr. I. H. Manning, Dr. James B. Bullitt, now professor emeritus of pathology and the late Dr. William deB. MacNider. Shown here, back to camera, is Miss Mittie Pickard who unveiled the portrait. Miss Pickard and Miss Sarah Virginia Dunlap, both veteran staff members of the School of Medicine, were recently named honorary members of the UNC Medical Alumni Association. This is the fi st time that such action has ever been taken by the organization.

4 Plays Highlight Final Drama Day

Today ends the ninth annual meeting of the Southeastern Theatre Conference in Chapel Hill. The last four of Paul Green's plays are to be presented tonight in Memorial Hall at 8:30.

These plays include "The Last of the Loweries," produced by Catawba College; "Quare Medicine," by the University of Alabama; "Fixin's" by the Chattanooga Little Theatre; and "The No-Count Boy" by Tennessee A. and I. University.

Tickets are on sale in the Playmakers Business Office and Ledbetter-Pickard.

The Carolina Playmakers, celebrating their 40th year of successful play production, have been sponsors for the conference.

Keep Student In Mind In DTH Says Whitley

John Whitley, candidate for the editorship of The Daily Tar Heel said Friday that "The Daily Tar Heel should be published with the student in mind, and strive for the good of the students and the welfare of the University."

Continuing his statement, Whitley said:

"I believe in basically a conservative editorial plicy, but one which will take a definite stand on issues. The editor should have first-hand knowledge about issues before writing; he should not be too liberal, not too extreme.

"The editorial page should devote itself primarily to local issues. I see the need, however, to keep the student body up-to-date on the most important world news.

"More interpretative editorial columns are needed to acquaint the average student with his University. Letters to the editor are a vital part of the editorial page. I would encourage all constructive criticism.

"All campus organizations should be covered as thoroughly as possbile. To accomplish this, I will strive to institute a larger staff and bring the Tar Heel to a closer working association with the News Bureau and the Sports Publicity Office.

"Very important world news should be published, but only the most important. National news could be condensed by rewriting the articles into short briefs.

"I believe in big-time athletics as long as they do not interfere with scholastics. I think all University programs should be top-notch.

"I would strive to improve the appearance of the paper. Photography could be improved, and the quality of the pictures appearing in the paper could be made better with slight changes in the present system.

"I think the advertising radius could be expanded to enable the staff to publish more six-page issues.

"The editor should be a good organizer. He should be energetic, know the system from top to bottom, place his personnel where they are most efficient, and maintain harmony in the front office.

"Although the last stage in the process, circulation is all-important. I plan to revamp the circulation department so that papers will be placed before each individual dormitory door every day.

"I plan to work with the Greek-letter societies, as I will all groups, in as fair a way as possible. I will see that they receive all the publicity they deserve concerning their positive and constructive activities.

"The Daily Tar Heel needs to be more lively. During this campaign, I have learned that a large percentage of the students do not even read their newspaper.

"I think interest can be revived by the use of stimulating editorials, original features, and humor. The students deserve a newspaper of which they can be proud. I will strive to give them that type of paper."

"I feel I am well qualified for the position. Other than being editor of my high school newspaper at Thomasville, N. C., I worked as a part-time rewrite man for the High Point Enterprise for one year, where I became familiar with all phases of newspaper work and the city daily system.

"In addition I was a sports correspondent for the Thomasville Tribune and the High Point enterprise for three years, during which time I also served as a special writer for the Greensboro Daily News, the Winston-Salem Journal and the Charlotte Observer.

"Add four years experience as a printer, and you have a candidate who has been from one end of the newspaper industry to the other," Whitely concluded.

MISS SYLVIA CAREWE—This celebrated painter will exhibit her work Tuesday in the Morehead Building. She will speak Monday in Room 210 Gardner Hall under the sponsorship of the University Art League.

Death Claims Rev. Stratton, Former Rector

By The Associated Press

The Rev. Alfred Stratton Lawrence, 76, rector emeritus of the Episcopal Chapel of the Cross since 1943, died at his home here today after a long illness.

Funeral services will be conducted at the Chapel of the Cross at 4 p.m. Saturday with interment in the Chapel Hill Cemetery. The family requests no flowers, but contributions may be sent to the church building fund.

Mr. Lawrence was rector of the church from 1921 to 1943, was examining chaplain and secretary and registrar for the Episcopal Diocese of North Carolina for many years.

Student Council Picks Jim Long

Jim Long, a junior from Yanceyville, was elected chairman of the Student Council Wednesday night.

Long, a Morehead Scholar, was appointed to the Council in his freshman year when a revision of the Student Constitution called for an extra seat in the body. Since then he has been re-elected each successive year.

In additoin to his Council work Long is secretary of Chi Psi fraternity, second vice-president of the Wesley Foundation and co-head manager of the Carolina football team.

In a statement to The Daily Tar Heel Friday Long said, "Our Student Council as set forth in the revised Student Constitution of 1957, is still a relatively new judicial body. Since the ratification of that constitution, however, the council has taken many strides toward the development of a sound and consistent policy to aid in its operation under new judicial limitations. I feel the council has used intelligent discretion in mendering recent decisions involving both Campus Code violators and constitutional questions. It is my hope that we shall continue to grow and to contribute a just decision at the trial of every case."

Candidate Gans Calls For Livelier Paper

Curtis Gans, candidate for editor of The Daily Tar Heel summed up his program calling for a larger, more lively, educational and responsible Daily Tar Heel Friday.

"In the past two weeks, I have presented a program which would lead to a financial sound, provocative, journalistically honest and technically competent paper.

"I'm exceedingly gratified at the support given me by the majority of the staff of The Daily Tar Heel and by the Student Party. This represents a ratification of a sound program for newspaper improvement by both journalists and student leaders.

"My program calls for a provocative editorial page utilizing both divergent opinions as well as the resources of the university faculty.

"The paper should include features on all walks of campus life not only the student government beat. Moreover, the paper should undertake studies and investigations into various aspects of campus life, utilizing the GMAB Polls Committee to sample student opinion on the various issues that the Daily Tar Heel is studying.

"The Daily Tar Heel can more fully cover the campus by utilizing a stringer and news tip system which I have advocated in the past. A more full coverage of intramural sports, minor sports and women's athletics is included in this program.

"The Daily Tar Heel can be a larger paper if it wants to, by putting advertising men on a commisson basis to give them some incentive to get ads.

"The paper can become more financially sound by tapping on the resources of the 40,000 living alumni and 7,000 parents, who represent a potential revenue to the paper of $200,000.

"Many of these parents and alumni cannot be reached on a daily basis, but if The Daily Tar Heel had a large Sunday paper with a news of the week in review section and perhaps a people in the news feature, the paper might be able to sell subscriptions on a weekly basis, which in itself would raise advertising rates and add extra revenue.

"A training system must be established for the staff to both create and perpetuate good journalism on the paper.

"Editorials dealing at least 50 per cent with campus events will provide a proper balance, so that the editor realizes his responsibility to the campus as well as placing the campus within the world scope.

'I feel that with over six years newspaper experience affiliated in various capacities with such papers as the Asheville Citizen-Times, Sylva Herald, New York Times, New York Herald-Tribune and many others, as well as over two years of experience in all phases of The Daily Tar Heel operation, I will be able to put out the most journalistically competent newspaper.

"The participation in student activities for a period of almost three years on this campus, has given me knowledge of the entire campus.

"I hope the student body will take into consideration, my experience, ability and program for newspaper improvement before they vote."

Prime Consideration Is News States Frye

Ann Frye, candidate for editor of The Daily Tar Heel, stated Friday that news is fundamental to the Tar Heel and should be the main consideration of the editor.

"Any person on this campus can mimeograph his opinions (and the editorials are one person's opinion, after all), but publication of news is the main function of a newspaper and should be treated as such.

"The Tar Heel needs better campus news coverage, better written stories and a better selection of the news that appears. To accomplish this basic and necessary news project, the editor must provide the incentive and work with the news editor and reporters for betterment of the news pages.

"Students on this campus, from my discussions with many of them, form their opinions from reading the facts in news stories in the Tar Heel. The editorial serves as a place when they can compare their opinions with that of the editor.

"In the past, editors of the Tar Heel have over-evaluated the importance and influence of their editorials and grossly under-emphasized the news. On a college newspaper where the editor is limited in the time he can spend, the decision must be made as to which aspect of the paper will be considered most important.

"I maintain that the campus news must be given priority above all else. Only if this basic function of the newspaper is given the importance it deserves by the editor, can the Tar Heel ever hope for improvements along other lines.

"The editor can improve the news that appears in the Tar Heel, but only if he is willingly to work with news himself and willingly to understand and solve the problems connected with a non-salaried, student staff.'

Interfraternity Court Selects New Officers

The Interfraternity Court, meeting Monday afternoon, chose Dennis McCoy as chairman and Wayne Venters as clerk of court.

McCoy, a sophomore Sigma Chi from Upper Montclair, N. J., has been on the Court for almost two years and has previously served in the capacity of clerk.

In his new office McCoy will preside over trials of offenders brought before the Court on violations of IFC rules. He is also in charge of the investigation of cases.

The new clerk, Waye Venters, is a sophomore Phi Gamma Delta from Jacksonville. Venters was first elected to the Court last year and will keep minutes, send out summonses and do all paperwork for the body.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Nancy Grubb, Donna Kelly, Phillis Jones, Mary Ann Stamper, Anita Edwards, Jean Gorwill, Jean Culbreath, Carolina Richards, Kenny Graham, Hilda Holt, Sally Armfield, Roberta Williams, Susan Inman and Catherine Bolton and Barton Kaplan, Will Ferguson, Jim Ruse, David Parish, Johnny Smallwood, Joe Ferrell, Khalil Mancy, Herb Sanman, Ed Goodman, John Claire, Chris Jones, Jerry Witmire, Henry Caldwell, Don McGregor, Cecil Garrett, Frank Kalil, John Reeder, Carl Capps, Paul Russel, Herb Wilson, William Lewis, Wayne Houser and John Alexander.

BLOSSOMS

The cherry trees with their white flowers are usually the first great group of trees on campus that will blossom forth in the next few days of Spring.

Inside The Infirmary, Or Behind The Measley Curtain

By MARY MOORE MASON

It is late at night. The hospital corridors are ghostly, and nothing is heard but the screams of those patients with laryngitis and the Academy Awards on television.

Here in the heart of the UNC Infirmary is entombed your brave reporter—victim of that fatal but romantic disease—spotticus pokidotticus—better known as German Measles.

Upon first arising the other morning ,this brave reporter found that she had a slight rash but attributed it to too many Hershey Bars and kumquat sandwiches. Then when people began to look askance and move away from her in classes she began to wonder, Could it be—could it possibly be?

But it was, it was! she was rushed to the infirmary in a black Jaguar, surrounded by four state policemen on English bicycles.

Nurse Moans

"Alas, another case of spotticus pokidotticus, , "moaned the nurse at the admission desk. "The 12th case of such admitted in the last couple of days."

There in the ward were eight symmetrical white hospital beds, containing five unsymmetrical white hospital patients. Alas—too many to play bridge and not enough for Red Rover, What a measley room this was!

Another German Measles patient struggled in. "I was put in the room with a pregnant women," she said sadly, "and was asked to leave."

Still Not Enough

Our number was now six. Still not enough for Red Rover!

Where were those handsome interns we had heard about? The only males we saw in the halls were unfortunate enough not to have the measles. One of these dashing young six feet, four inches specimens strolled by adorned in white bucks aid horn-rimmed glasses, with a brair pipe and his white "angel Robe" flapping around his knees. No buckle?, The infirmary should provide more Ivy League raiment for the patients.

At last—young Dr. Malone came in, only he said his name was Lindsay. "How are you fixed for rash?" he shouted congenially.

Upon proving that our backs all looked like a Sunday School picnic for red bugs, he asked, "What other complaints do you have besides having to be here?"

Screamed

There were screams of mid-terms that had to be taken, SAE pledge weekend, and Azalea Festival, all of which the good doctor, now joined by several of his colleagues, was oblivious to.

Candidate Sloan Lists 6 Proposed Programs

Charlie Sloan, candidate for Daily Tar Heel editor, has summarized six major programs he will carry out if he is elected.

Sloan pointed out that every one of his plans can be well on the way to being accomplished by April 11, one school week after the elections.

"Charlie," observed Mike Simpson, Sloan's campaign manager, a retiring fellow, who is more given to working than to talking, has a program."

The program includes:

"1. A MORE ATTRACTIVE PAGE TWO—remember the lively editorial pages when I was associate editor? More pictures, varied makeup and more lively writing invite more readers.

"2. DORMITORY STRINGERS—for recognition of activities in the dorms. A reporter in every dorm means complete campus coverage.

3. EDITORIAL WRITERS—a permanent staff of good writers means better editorials—and gives the editor more time to spend as head of the entire Tar Heel organization. This plan assures each writer time to gather facts and rewrite awkward phrases, resulting in more interesting and thought provoking editorials.

"4. WORLD NEWS-WITH LOCAL INTEREST—experts in every field are to be found right here in Chapel Hill—their comments put the world at Silent Sam's feet.

"5. DAILY EDITORIAL STAFF MEETINGS—for a better coordinated newspaper and pooling of ideas among the news and business staffs.

6. STAFF TRAINING—a night staff increased in size and improved in quality, recruited from the present staff for immediate improvement in the paper."

The editor of The Daily Tar Heel has to be editor of the entire paper, not just page two, Sloan explained. He listed the positions of reporter, night editor, proof reader, associate edtor and managing edtor, as well as acting editor news editor, sports editor and photographers all of which he has held on The Daily Tar Heel, as being necesary if an editor expects to turn out a top quality news paper.

A top quality newspaper, Sloan said, should be the editor's first target. When this is accompished, then thought can be turned to expansion of the staff, advertising and circulation.

Pringle Pipkin Urges Thought Before Action

Pringle Pipkin, Daily Tar Heel Editorial candidate, in a statement Friday stressed the importance of careful consideration of all problems by the editor before launching into controversial issues.

"The editor should think first of the good of the campus and its students before he worries about trying to provide some provocative controversy.

"There are many problems on this campus which need intelligent investigation and consideration, and the editor should confer with student and University officials to learn more about these problems.

Dissension

"But the editor should never stoop to stirring up dissension for the purpose of assuring that he will be able to stimulate and excite the students every day.

"The editor must remember that what he will write will probably influence the public one way or the other, and consequently, his criticism should be constructive and his ideas should be practical.

"The editorials should relate primarily to the campus or events of campus. During the past two years I have covered the news of the campus, and I feel I am fit to express intelligent views on these matters.

Aware Of Problems

"My approach to the campus will be dual, for I am in a fraternity and I also live in a dormitory. I am aware of the problems facing both groups of students, and I will deal sympathetically with both groups.

"I do not intend to avoid controversy; I will face every issue squarely. However, my chief aim is not to create controversy, but rather to urge reform when it is for the good of the students and the University.

"My basic beliefs, I feel, are those held by the majority of the students. While the editor should be willing to urge worthwhile reform, he also has a responsibility to student opinion.

Will Take Stands

"I will take definite stands on various issues after I have considered the facts involved. Unless the editor knows the facts, his stand can hardly be wise regardless of his high flown phrases.

"Speaking of the news aspect of the paper, I intend to increase the staff by instituting an organized recruiting and training program next year.

"The campus news must cover a wider range of activities. The newspaper should make the students aware of the many worthwhile, though small, organizations which exist on this campus.

"On the business side of the paper, the circulation can be improved and the paper should work to get more advertising."

Students Being Bleeded By Library Pay Phones

We thought when we came to the University of North Carolina that it was a state-owned, state-operated institution located in Chapel Hill to serve the students.

Apparently we were wrong.

At every turn it looms over us like a giant vending machine ready to take our nickels and dimes for this thing and that. Now it has entered the telephone business.

What we refer to, of course, is the much-resented placement of pay telephone stations in Wilson Library—an action which should at once be rescinded by the powers that be.

The matter first came to our attention early this week, but we hesitated to comment before a little investigation of our own. That investigation has been completed and it gives substance to the many complaints which have been heard.

It should be made clear that administrative officials at the library are as opposed to the pay stations as the many students from whom they have received complaints. Yet still the phones keep bleeding students of their precious nickels and dimes.

When additions to the library were made, two booths were placed on the main floor but only one was equipped with a telephone—a phone free for local calls but a pay station for long-distance use.

In a building the size of Wilson Library, one telephone was found hardly adequate for the number of students who wished to use it. Proverbial lines would form as students awaited their turn to call a roommate, home, a professor—or even a date.

So a number of students then petitioned the library to equip the other booth—still vacant—with a telephone. The telephone company said business did not justify two telephones—that one was enough for the income from student calls.

Finally J. S. Bennett, superintendent of auxiliary enterprises of the University, was contacted. Action was taken to provide the other telephone. But then both phones—the old and the new—were converted to pay stations for local calls as well as for long distance.

Now, we appreciate the University's interest in bleeding the student body to cover expenses of its operation. But we do not believe the University should go so far as to charge its students a dime to make a local telephone call.

The library is as important an edifice as any other building on this campus—probably more so. And surely its role and use are equal to if not greater than the dormitories which house the students who use the library.

Why, then, not place pay telephones in all campus dormitories? Why not put pay stations in the offices which house our English professors, our History instructors, our teachers in the education department and in the sciences?

We'll tell you why: because it's such a foolish proposal that not even Mr. Bennett would come up with the idea to do so. No one would tolerate the practice and no faculty member would cash his dollars for dimes to use the telephones.

Students at UNC deserve the same consideration. We deserve the privilege of making local calls from any student-public buildings on the campus, without a ten-cent tax to do so. We should be given free telephones in Wilson Library.

We are not here to support and supply profits for a telephone company—whether it be owned by private interests or the University. And we resent the actions which have forced that purpose upon us.

For those reasons the powers that be should see at once to the restoration of free telephone service for local calls at Wilson Library.

Student Union's Problem

Graham Memorial has gotten nothing but the run-around on a very minor request to have a "no parking" zone blocked off for its truck in the GM parking lot.

GM Building Supervisor Rand Bailey has approached South Building, the Morehead Planetarium officials and others to secure a single "no parking" zone for use by the GM utilities truck. But he has consistently been referred to another official.

That kind of action is ridiculous. Of the numerous spaces in the lot adjacent to Graham Memorial—a University-owned lot donated by John Motley Morehead—surely there is a single space which could be reserved for GM use.

It's one thing when the student union requests a zoned space solely for purposes of parking its vehicle near the building for convenience sake. But it's another when that request is based on problems of loading and unloading which confront Mr. Bailey.

Illustrating those problems, Mr. Bailey wrote a letter to a University official which got no response. We feel that letter, printed below, will explain the reasons why prompt action should be taken to provide the single parking space.

The letter:

"We would certainly appreciate your help in negotiating with the proper authorities to have a loading zone reserved in front of the steps leading to our basement door. It has always been difficult for the Coca-Cola Bottling Co., the Pepsi-Cola, and other vending machine companies to service our machines. Their habit of double parking is a source of extreme annoyance to many people who park and find themselves blocked when ready to depart.

"My main purpose in the request, however, is the fact that we rent two or three pianos every weekend. The parking lot is particularly crowded on weekends, and maneuvering a piano between parked cars and onto the truck is extremely difficult. We have damaged both the pianos and a few cars in so doing. Therefore, we feel that our need is urgent and hope that such a "no parking" area can be established at a very early date."

Well, that was over two weeks ago. We wonder just what meaning some officials give to the stipulation, "very early date." Obviously, not a very timely one.

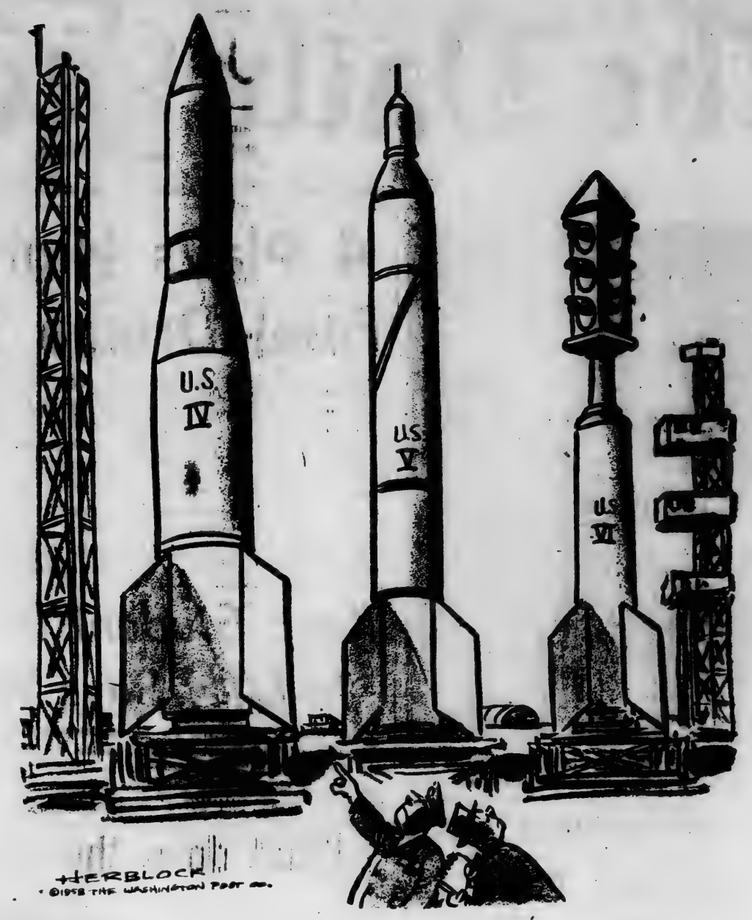
'Nation' Says Parties Ought Fight Faubus

Faubus Once Again



In the opinion of reliable political reporters, Orval E. Faubus is a shoo-in to win the Democratic nomination, and therefore re-election, as Governor of Arkansas. In this one-party state it will be a victory almost by default. Not so very many years ago, this curious character was accurately described as "a match-chewing hillbilly"; today, according to the Gallup Poll, his name is known to 58,000,000 Americans. And yet there are still those who insist that, in politics, decency is the best policy!

But there is no reason why the Governor should win by defaulte. Both major parties have responsibilities in the matter; they are, after all, national parties, responsible to a national electorate, concerned with national issues. By his action in calling out the National Guard in Little Rock, Faubus greatly damaged the international prestige of the United States, gave encouragement to forces of racial bigotry and intolerance, and cast discredit on American institutions. Surely both parties have an obligation to afford the voters of Arkansas a chance to repudiate his actions. The Republican Party should comb its ranks in Arkansas, therefore, to select an outstanding nominee who, among other qualifications, is ready to take a stand on issues in such a way as to give voters a genuine choice. And the Democratic Party, speaking through its national leaders, should make it clear that the party repudiates the actions of Faubus and would, if it had the power, spurn him as a candidate. National organizations such as AFL-CIO and the NAACP should insist that both parties honor this limited responsibility. It may be that, along with the people of Arkansas, the rest of us must suffer the humilation of seeing Faubus rewarded for his shameful conduct; but there is no reason why he should be permitted to win without a protest or, worse, without a serious effort being made to afford the voters a chance to turn him out of office. The Nation pointed out at the time (The Faubus Insurrection, September 14, 1957), that the only explanation for the Governors action was that he acted from base political motives, and we expressed the belief that decent opinion in Arkansas would, if given a chance, repudiate his actions. We would hate to be proven wrong. — The Nation.

Cummings Eligibility Questioned

By WHIT WHITFIELD

Today's column should properly be entitled "The Art Of Positive Student Government" or alternately, "How To Confuse the Constituency With No Effort.'

From time to time people whose only connection with student government is The Daily Tar Heel ask us, after reading confusing and conflicting accounts of the machinations of that group known as campus politicians, just what is going on in Graham Memorial. We are flattered by the questions; however, we are as mystified as the rest of you.

Instance these:

The Honor Council controversy earlier this month. After months of preparation a bill to consolidate the Men's and Women's Councils passed the legislature only to be vetoed by its proponent, the student body president. The issues were so clouded that few people other than the principals involved could comment intelligently on the problem. The mass of students had little or no idea what was going on.

More recently, John Brooks, the SP nominee for vice-president, was informed that he was ineligible to run because he had not taken the requisite number of hours during the past two semesters. He was two short it seems, and the reason he gave was that his doctor advised it. This would seem to be a reasonable excuse, but the Elections Board declared him ineligible, over his protest, in accordance with a strict interpretation of the elections law which states that a student must have passed 27 hours during the previous two semester, and poor Brooks had passed only 25.

As long as we are to abide by the letter of the law, this is acceptable. However, at the next session of the Elections Board, the members violated that section of the elections law which stipulates that a candidate must notify the board of his intent to run at least nine days previous to the day of elections. This law, the board temporarily rescinded in order to let the Student Party Advisory Board select another candidate to replace Brooks. This action, taken by the body designated to UPHOLD the letter of the law was clearly violated, and was a dramatic reversal of the attitude of the body the previous day when it refused to let Brooks run. We hope we have made this clear.

Brooks did not give up. He appealed to Mac Patton, Chairman of the Student Council. In a statement to the Tar Heel, Chairman Patton denied Brooks a hearing before the Student Council. Promptly, the Student Party, assuming that they had no candidate, selected Ralph Cummings to replace Brooks, whose candidacy was recognized extra-legally by the Elections Board.

Then, the Student Council changed its mind and granted Brooks a hearing. This unexpected move left the Student Party with two candidates for the same office at least temporarily. One of these is, by law, ineligible and the other is likewise ineligible according to the law, but has been approved by the Elections Board. The latest word is that Brooks is ineligible (according to the Student Council) but The Student Council failed to rule in Cummings' case and he is likewise ineligible.

It would seem to us that if the law were to be violated for the sake of Cummings then it could just as easily be violated for Brooks, the original choice of the Student Party. According to law, they are both ineligible.

Another bit of confusion has hit the pages of the Tar Heel in connection with the forthcoming election. Unless some reporter has copied the same source inadvertantly for both political parties' platforms, then some one is well nigh guilty of plagiarism. The planks are virtually the same in all respects: (i.e. working towards a new student union building, clarification of the cut system, reorganization of the student body president's cabinet, women's visiting agreement for mens' dorms, resolving the parking problem, etc.)

This can mean two things:

Some one has no imagination, and

Regardless of which party wins, the reforms will be the same, or so they say.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

Dorm Manager Hit

To The Editor:

After reading Mr. Robert M. Scott's letter I felt I should make some comments to give him some information about this part of the world—the Arab countries—which he proved he is not familiar with.

Mr. Scott said that Britain created this artificial country of Jordan. I would like to ask him: Since when does Britain create countries?

Did she create the people that have been living over there, even before Christianity, and who have always been Arabs? He could rather say that they created the artificial king Abdallah, who was a toy for colonialism. If there is any artificially created country, it is ISRAEL which was created by the West.

I am certainly glad that Mr. Scott mentioned General John Glubb, whom he said, "had founded in 1956 the Arab Legion which was supposed to be the best army in the Middle East." I would like to throw some light on this Arab Legion that General Glubb founded.

This Legion was intentionally formed of all the illiterate persons that General Glubb gathered in Jordan. His idea was to build an army that can obey all the colonialistic orders given to them by England, through this general, without realizing what they were doing.

An example for that was the order given to the Arab Legion, by this General, to withdraw from Leo and Ramleh—two towns in Palestine—exposing the back of the Egyptian army to direct fire in the 1948 Israeli-Arab war.

This is the type of plans General Glubb was carrying in Jordan.

Mr. Scott gave an example for the efforts that the U. S. made to stop the uncivilized attack on Egypt in the fall of 1956. If the U. S. was willing to stop this British-French attack why didn't she try to stop from the first day it occurred, instead of letting them go on for a week. These British-French forces were almost sure to hold the Suez Zone in six hours; this was their plan.

They forgot that the people over there promised to defend their country to the last person. Besides, my people still wonder why the U. S. gave orders to all American citizens, in Egypt, to leave the country immediately within 24 hours. These orders were given a week before the attack. Wouldn't it have been better to prevent your allies from carrying this brutal action instead of withdrawing your citizens? Moreover, we believe that the important factor that stopped the attack, beside the resistance of my people, was the Russian threat to attack London and Paris with guided missiles. I don't believe that any Western country was behind what he called "saving Nasser's neck" because none of these countries would really care for doing that.

Now I have a few questions for Mr. Scott. Did the American Sixth Fleet really preserve the independence of Jordan last spring? Which independence did he mean? And preserving it from whom? Did he mean by this preservation keeping Jordan's government tied completely to the West by war pacts, even if it is against the people wishes?

Something that proved that Mr. Scott is really a movie fan, is his talk about the "harem" in this part of the world. Well, sir, this "harem" is only found in your broad imagination, and in American movies. I don't blame you; I blame the lack of information and international news you have in this country. It is true that the U. S. is a great country, as it is true that whenever the words Arab countries are brought to discussion your imaginations provide you with pictures of deserts, harems, camels and swords, ignoring that this part of the world was one time a leading force in civilization, and still tries to keep up.

Finally, and this is personally addressed to Mr. Scott, who asked Mr. Hamad to reconsider his viewpoint before criticising the country whose hospitality he is enjoying?

Well, thank you, sir, for this hospitality you are giving foreign students. I understand that criticism is one of the rights you enjoy in a free country like the U. S., and that it has nothing to do with hospitality.

In our countries, too, we have many Americans whose criticism interests us, without reminding them with our hospitality.

More On Middle East

To The Editor:

For the first time in three years I feel obligated to write and publicly complain about a condition on the UNC campus: the dormitory manager system.

In my dorm, where I have lived for three years, the manager seems to be rapidly losing the confidence and respect of the residents. The position, which is worth rent-free room and the dry-cleaning concession, demands men of high caliber and integrity.

This spring the manager, in reprimanding a resident for unseemly behavior in the hall, lost his temper and said, "If I want anything out of you I'll knock it out of you." The statement was witnessed by half-a-dozen boys.

Wednesday night this week, while he sat in the back of the social room watching the Academy Award presentations along with some 30 students, he was asked to make a little less noise so others could hear. He responded, "——— ———. If you think you can make me, come back here and try it."

Throughout the year the manager has disrupted the traditional congeniality of the dorm that had prevailed in previous years.

If the University is not aware of the system which gives such persons positions of responsibility, let this letter serve as a warning. If they are aware of it, then I'm moving into a private home uptown.

Phi Gams Hold Fiji Festivities

Last weekend the Phi Gams held their annual Fiji pledge weekend with a series of festivities. On Friday afternoon they held a formal party at the house at which time the Pledge Class officers were formally presented to the group.

On Friday night the Fijis and their dates donned sarongs to attend a Fiji Island party at the house. A south-sea island atmosphere prevailed—complete with sand and tropical flowers. Sam Atwater's combo. The Atomic Five, of Chapel Hill provided music for the occasion.

Saturday afternoon the Phi Gams held their annual Pledge-Active baseball game and Saturday night they traveled to the Little Red School House to continue festivities. Less Sutorius' combo from Chapel Hill was on hand to liven up the event.

Chi Psi Pledge Weekend

The Chi Psis celebrated their annual pledge weekend beginning last Friday. Friday night the pledges were entertained at a formal dance at the American Legion Hut on the Durham highway, where they danced to the music of The Embers, a Greensboro orchestra.

Following the dance, a number of the brothers, pledges, and their dates returned to the Chi Psi Lodge for a Pizza party.

Saturday night a semi-formal party at the Lodge was the event of the evening, and everyone enjoyed dancing to the latest hit tunes, furnished by Frank Wilson's combo.

Saturday afternoon the Chi Psis and their dates attended the Blue and White football game together in a group.

ATOs Party

Friday afternoon the ATOs began their pledge weekend with an informal party at the house. Friday night they donned tuxedoes for their formal pledge dance at the Elks Club in Durham. During the evening the Pledge Class officers and their dates were presented in a figure after which they enjoyed an evening of dancing to the music of Jack Victor's orchestra from Duke.

Saturday night the ATOs held an Egyptian party at Smith's Lake in Durham. The ballroom was divided into two halves—one side depicting a temporary Egyptian court and the other giving the illusion of a lake surrounded by shrubbery and bull-rushes. The outside area also depicted a desert scene accented with a 15-foot Sphinx.

The inside court area featured colorful, painted and decorated mummies and The Tops provided music for the Egyptian affair.

Student Conference Slated For August

The 11th National Student Congress and Student Body Presidents Conference will be held at Ohio Wesleyan University in Delaware, Ohio, August 19-29.

The theme for the Congress is "Student Responsibility in an Age of Challenge."

Delegates will be appointed after elections by the new student body president announced Sonny Evans, retiring president.

Appointment In Education Is Announced

Miss Annie Lee Jones, former supervisor of the Pitt County Public Schools, has been appointed to the faculty of the School of Education to work in the field of elementary education. Her appointment was announced by Chancellor William B. Aycock following approval by President William C. Friday and the Board of Trustees.

Miss Jones is currently a teaching fellow at Boston University and is completing graduate work leading to the doctor's degree. She will undertake her new duties at UNC on Sept. 1.

In the School of Education Miss Jones will work as an assistant professor with an assignment to assist in the education of teachers for the elementary schools.

Miss Jones received the bachelor's and master's degrees from East Carolina College and has taught in the public elementary schools of Chocowinity, Farmville and Raleigh. From 1949 to 1956 she was supervisor of the Pitt County Schools with headquarters in Greenville. Her graduate study at Boston University has been centered in the field of elementary education where she has worked intensively on problems of teaching reading under the direction of Dr. Donald Durrell.

Measles

"Well,' one of the other doctors said kindly in a post-mortem voice, "We'll be expecting most of your friends up here in about two weeks."

"They say," whispered one of the nurses furtively. "that this whole epidemic started at the Duke-Carolina game. The Duke students had the measles then." Wait till McGuire and the ACC officials hear about this?

Looking Smug

So—you are sitting out there looking smug! Do you have a rash, a temperature, swollen lymph nodes, a sore throat? Do your eyes itch, and do you sem to have a cold? Ah, ha—you must have gone to the Duke game, or maybe the girl or the boy who lives down the hall from you did. Eh?

If so—hurry up—in time for lunch if possible. We are having egg plant and ravioli today.

Now if I only can get this story smuggled out of the infirmary in a medicine bottle, disguished as a new miracle drug. Maybe there will be time to warn you all: spotticus pukidotticus is on the march! Each issue of The Daily Tar Heel that comes out this time has the added attraction of one free measles germ which ish glued onto the editoral page.

Tar Heels Tie VPI 7-7 On Late Rally; Meet Ithaca Today

By RUSTY HAMMOND

The Carolina Tar Heels pushed three runs across the plate in the bottom of the ninth inning here yesterday to gain a 7-7 tie with the Virginia Tech Gobblers. Umpire Joe Mills called the game at the end of the tenth because of darkness.

Carolina drew first blood in the first stanza when lead-off man Carson Oldman smacked a single to right and trotted home on Johnny Burgwyn's ringing triple.

VPI got the run back in the second as Dave Kuhn smacked a triple, then tagged up on Al Sebset's fly to deep right and scored.

The Tar Heels jumped ahead 4-1 in the fifth. Back to back doubles by Al Baldwin and Carson Oldham, a triple by Burgwyn, and a single by All Pons accounted for the three runs.

Rough Ninth

The Gobblers scored two in the seventh and one in the eighth to tie the count at 4 apiece. In the disatrous ninth, VPI scored three times without the benefit of a single base knock. Six walks and a Carolina error provided Tech with a 7-4 lead. Dave Floyd, who had come on in relief of Charlie Aycock for Carolina in the fifth had smooth sailing through the fifth and sixth until the VPI bats started connecting. Dough Stimson relived Floyd in the ninth after the first two walks.

The Tar Heels rallied to tie it up in the do or die ninth. Jerry Nestor singled and Burgwyn walked. Then Al Pons cleared the sacks with a blow to deep center field, good for three bases. Catcher Bruce Crump folowed with a long double, Pons scored from third, and the ball game was all tied up.

Heels Almost Win

Ben Harding came on to pitch in the tenth, and set the gobblers down 1-2-3. Harold Workman singled and scurried to third on Nestor's double. But Workman was thrown out at home on a fielder's choice while attempting to score on Harding's ground ball to the second baseman.

The tie brings the Carolina record to 2-2-1. VPI had a 0-2 record coming into yesterday's contest, as they lost their first two games of the season to Big Four brother Wake Forest. Carolina goes against Itchaca College of New York here today at 3:00 this afternoon.

Azalea Open

By KEN ALYTA

WILMINGTON (AP)—Dave Ragan of Orlando, Fla., led the first round of the $15,000 Azalea Open golf tournament here today with a 2 under par 70.

About half the field of 116 was still on the course as Ragan put together two nine-hole scores of 35.

Sharing second place one stroke behind Ragan were Bob Hill of Rochester, N. Y., who shot 34-37 and Jay Hebert of Sanford, Fla., who carded 36-35.

Mike Souchak of Grossingers, N. Y., and Walter Romans of Baltimore each had a par 72.

Arnold Palmer, the defending champion from Latrobe, Pa., was a late starter.

Carolina Qualifies

By JERRY GREEN

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP)—Michigan's Tony Tashnick sped to a brace of new records Friday night and defeated defending champion Tim Jecko of Yale by 12 feet in the 200-yard butterfly of the NCAA swimming championships.

Tashnick cleared the record book of all existing marks but one for the event he was clocked in 2:04.2.

Michigan State topped the qualifiers in the 400-yard freestyle relay trials in 3:28.6. North Carolina was among the qualifiers.

Tar Heels Second Best In Every Sport Last Spring

Statistics from the new Altantic Coast Conference Spring Sports Yearbook reveal that Carolina teams last year fitted into the category of "Often a bridesmaid, never a bride". The Tar Heels finished second in the conference in every single spring sport.

The baseball team had a 9-5 conference record and a 15-10 overall mark, good for a tie for second place with Wake Forest. The Duke Blue Devils won the Conference crown with a 10-4 season record. Carolina may not have won the title, but the roster included a fellow named Jim Raugh who was nemed as All-America and is currently a farm-hand of the Detroit Tigers.

The netters, taken over in midseason by Vladmir Cernik, had a much better conference record than they did overall. The tennis team was 5-1 in the conference, but only 8-9 overall. Carolina lost only one match in the league, but finished second behind the Maryland Terps, who compiled a 7-0 slate.

The golfers also had to be satisfied with runner-up, as they finished second in the league to the Deacons from Baptist Hollow, losing out in the ACC Championships by two strokes.

Altough the track team's Dave Scurlock was ACC champ in two events, the Tar Heels once again finished second in this sport. Maryland ran away with the conference championsip, ending up with nearly twice as many points as the next best team.

This year maybe the story will change, and maybe we'll find out if the weather will ever break so things can bet started.

Tatum Recruits Top Virginia Football Preps

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—Four of Virginia's top schoolboy football stars of 1957 have announced acceptance of athletic scholarships at out-of-state colleges.

Three of the four were snared by Carolina Coach Jim Tatum.

The trio heading for Carolina, where Tatum is busily rebuilding the Tar Heels, football fortunes, are Chandler Van Orman, George Washington of Alexandria, tackle; Milt Saffelle, Hammond of Alexandria halfback; and Joe Davies, Annandale fullback-quarterback.

Saffelle was an all-state selection at Hammond last fall, scoring 72 points for the Admirals, gaining 592 yards in 72 carries. Davies was on the second team all-state.

Carlton V. Waskey, all-state center in 1957 and a fine linebacker at Roanoke's Jefferson Senior High, announced he will attend Georgia Tech this fall. Waskey was recruited by Tech's assistant coach, Carl Wise, former head coach at Washington and Lee.

Fireball Logan Ready

By JACK HAND

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP)—I'm going to be a traffic cop at second base until somebody violates the rules."

That is the 1958 platform of Johnny Logan, fiery Milwaukee shortstop who indulged in two ball park scuffles last season.

One of the best sports pictures of 1957 caught Johnny with right fist cocked, ready to throw a punch at Manager Walter Alston of the Dodgers during an uprising at Brooklyn.

"I wasn't going to throw the punch,' he explained. "Not unless he did something. Anyhow they broke it up."

The incident at Ebbets Field boiled into a free-swinging battle among the players after Don Drysdale hit Logan with a pitched ball.

This is Logan's story. "I told him, "You'd better watch out when you come into second base."

"And he said, "If you have a beef, come on out right now." I did. It cost me $100."

ORIOLES' DEFENSE

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Much to the pleasure of Baltimore Supporters, there are at least three lively fights going on for regular work with the Orioles.

Shortstop, first base and infield utility are the positions involved and the hotter the competition, the better for the club.

Astute manager Paul Richards invariably fashions a streng defensive team — the 1957 Orioles set a record of 80 errorless games —and this club looks no different.

Richards current target is more offense and he believes he may have it with the acquisition of Larry Doby and the expected development of two youngsters in particular, infielder Brooks Robinson and outfielder Al Pilarcik.

All in all, Richards thinks the 1958 Oriole is a better bird, on paper at least. Whether it will perch again in fifth place in the American League is something Richards is reluctant to predict.

"Our strong points are defense and pitching," Richards noted, singling out such throwers as regulars Connie Johnson, Billy Loes and Hal Brown, and two returnees who had good seasons with Vancouver, Don Ferrarese and Charlie Beamon.

Track Team Sends Squad To Florida

By DAVE WIBLE

A lucky squad of 13 Tar Heel trackmen packed up their spikes, and flew to sunny Florida where they will compete in the Florida Relays being held today on the University of Florida campus at Gainsville.

Track teams from all over the Southeast will be present competiting for the individual trophies and medals. There will be no team competition.

First Competition

It will be the first outside competition for the Tar Heels this spring. Rain and mud forced the postponement of the scheduled duel meet with State twice this week.

Three Carolina relay teams are entered along with the individual conpetators, 2-mile, high hurdles, 100, javelin broad jump and pole vault.

Dave Scurlock, one of the nation's top middle distance men is still recovering from a sprained ankle and did not make the trip. He is expected to be back on the cinders within the next few days.

Relay Teams

In the 2-mile relay, the Tar Heels will field Neil Chappell, Cowles Liipfert, Wayne Bishop, and Everett Whatley. All four will run a half mile.

In the distance medley relay, John Fox will carry the batton for the first 440, Liipfert will run an 880, Whatley will go 3 quarters of a mile, and Bishop will finish up with a mile.

The sprint medley team will consist of Charlie Sowers and Jim Varnum each running a 220. Chappell striding an 880, and Fox anchoring with a 440.

SP Officials Praise Current Candidates

Leaders of the Student Party issued statements Saturday in support of their candidates for Student Government positions in Tuesday's election.

Student body President Sonny Evans, in endorsing the candidacy of Don Furtado for the top student position said:

"I have had the pleasure to work with all of the candidates this past year and have observed them closely and feel as competent a judge as any of their talents. In all sincerity, I am endorsing the candidacy of Don Furtado for president of the Student Body, because I know him to be a person of highest abilities and one who will be a courageous and outspoken spokesman for all the students.

"His experience in so many fields of student government has given him an insight into problems which will serve him well next year.

"As one individual, I support Don Furtado as the next president of the student body."

Pat Adams, floor leader of the Student Party, said that the Student Party has done a "commendable" job this year.

Speaking for the party and Don Furtado, Adams said:

"During the 24th session of the Student Legislature the Student Party has done a commendable job. As SP Floorleader I have noticed the excellent work that SP legislators have done. The record I believe speaks for itself. The SP members had 15 bills passed in the Legislature in which the UP had a majority of two. The UP had two bills passed. The SP and UP have co-introduced four bills that were of major importance. I feel that this good work by the SP legislators is to be commended."

"Don Furtado, as speaker of the Legislature has been an excellent leader. He has skillfully guided the body during many important decisions. He has also taken an active part in the Honor Council Bill which I believe was the session's most important piece of legislation."

Sonny Hallford, attorney general of the student body, added to comments on Don Furtado by saying:

"I am happy to support Don Furtado for president of the student body. For in Don, I feel that we have the most qualified and experienced candidate. His integrity and conscientiousness are above approach.

"I have a great deal of respect and admiration for the work that Don has done in the many areas of campus activities which he has belonged and participated. I feel confident that he will do an outstanding job if he should be elected president of the student body of th University of North Carolina. I think his record of experience speaks for itself. At present he is doing an excellent job as vice-president of the student body and as a member of the Board of Directors of Graham Memorial.

"He has been a member of legislature and a class officer. His academic achievements are in themselves a record to be proud of. Don's service to the campus has been recognized by the Order of the Grail of which he is currently a member.

"I would like to take this opportunity to encourage the campus to support Don Furtado for president of the student body.

Prexy Should Be Versatile - Furtado

Don Furtado, Student Party candidate for president of the student body, said in a statement Saturday that the student body presidency is not a job which a student can fill adequately without an understanding of many student areas.

He added:

"On Tuesday, the students of UNC will go to the polls to choose the president of the student body for the coming year.

"It is essential that everyone carefully and objectively consider the presidential candidates, for our campus has many obvious needs, and the person who assumes the presidency simultaneously assumes a tremendous responsibility.

"In the past two weeks, I have presented some of my plans and

Musicales Will Feature Ethel Casey

Graham Memorial Activities Board presents the sixth Petite Musicale for the spring semester in the lounge of Graham Memorial, tonight at 8 p.m.

Featured in this recital will be Ethel Casey, soprano from Raleigh. Petites Musicales are open to the public free of charge.

Mrs. Casey is well known to concert goers in Chapel Hill, Durham and Raleigh. Recently she performed in a recital sponsored by the Raleigh State Art Museum. She assisted Walter Golde, Chapel Hill teacher and composer, in a recital of his compositions. She will include one of Golde's songs on her program Sunday. "The Song of the Sea." She also has performed on several Petites Musicales.

Last February she assisted Suzann Davids and Emily Kellam on their harp recital. This program was also the first program given in the above mentioned State Museum recitals.

Included in Mrs. Casey's program will be songs by Brahms, Poulenc, Gluck, de Falla, Thomas Arne, Michael Head, Marcello and Falconieri.

Following the individual discussions Martha Parshley will conclude the meeting.

The Conference is being held for all old and new dorm officers and sorority house managers. Al who are interested in the training program are invited to attend the meeting.

Work Of UP Solons Noted By Chairman

Syd Shuford, University Party chairman, praised UP Student Legislature candidates for an effective campaign in a statement Saturday. Shuford said that the candidates show "deep interest" in the legislature and "want to continue to uphold the Carolina tradition of good efficient government."

In connection with this Shuford made the following statement:

"University Party candidates for Student Legislature have initiated an extensive campaign this week all over the Carolina campus. For several years the University Party has held a majority, and has been in control of the Student Legislature. The views and programs expressed by the legislators representing the UP have been conservative and have embraced the interests of the students on our campus at Carolina. Various committees in the legislature under the leadership of competent UP legislators have performed efficiently, and have organized excellent projects for the welfare of the Carolina students.

"The UP candidates for Student Legislature want to continue to uphold the Carolina tradition of good, effective government and ask for your earnest support on April 1. These candidates have shown their deep interest in the legislature by the effective campaign that is now in progress, and have pledged their services to give the students at Carolina an efficient Student Legislature."

Al Goldsmith Asks More Moderation

Al Goldsmith, University Party candidate for president of the student body, urged a more moderate form of student government in his final campaign statement Saturday.

Goldsmith said:

"For the past two years I have been deeply concerned over what has been happening in Student Government. It seems to me that dynamic leadership has often been lacking in many vital areas and in its place has been too much attention devoted to the passage of more or less radical measures. I would like to see a return to a moderate form of student government. I wish to see the campus progress, but progress in areas which desperately need attention.

"As this will be my final statement before Tuesday's election, I would like to summarize my stand on various problems and issues which the campus is faced with today. If elected I will work unceasingly for:

"1. Improved dormitory social facilities. I believe that dorm social rooms can and should be improved and I want to work to bring this about. With better dorm social rooms I feel that some visiting agreement can be worked out by which females will be allowed to visit dorms.

"2. An immediate attempt to solve the parking problem. I feel that the present administration has been unduly slow in working out a plan as to who will use the new Bell Tower parking lot. I favor the eventual restoration of freshman parking privileges and will work towards that end.

"3. A clarification of the new cut system. I feel that the present cut system is basically good, but that it needs some clarification as there are many professors and students alike who do not understand it.

"4. An improved president's cabinet. I will work to install a new cabinet which, instead of being composed of ten members at large, will include, the presidents of the IFC, the IDC, the WRC, the Pan hellenic Council, the chairmen of the Honor Councils and the Student Council, a representative from Legislature, and at least four members at large.

"5. Cooperation with the Interfraternity Council. I feel that it is up to the President of the student body to cooperate with the IFC and not try to run it. I feel that by including the IFC president on the Cabinet, Student Government and fraternities can work closely together. I oppose any attempt of Student Government to run fraternities unless these organizations request help or become incapable of handling their own affairs through the IFC.

"6. A strengthening of the dormitory adviser system. I feel most dorm advisers are not doing their job. I do not think they should attempt to run dorms but they should advise and make them-

Radio Club Completes Writing Of Constitution

At an organizational meeting Friday night the UNC Amateur Radio Club completed the writing of its constitution. This is a major step in the direction of setting up a club radio station on campus.

Soon after the spring holidays the constitution will be presented to the Student Legislature for approval. At the same time, a proposal for appropriation of funds for the club will be presented.

A report was given on the preliminary results of letters of inquiry which were sent to more than 70 college and univehsity Amateur Radio Club stations. From the replies which have been received thus far, it has been noted that the majority of the stations are supported by the Student Union (or its equivalent), and many of these have the club stations located in the Student Union Building.

Jimmy Scott, W4GHQ, who moderated the meeting, announced that radiotelegraph code instruction will begin as soon as some code practice tapes have been made. These tapes will be available in the language lab at certain times for anyone to use.

The use of the language lab facilities has been made available to use through the cooperation of L. A. Sharpe, who is head of the lab. It was also announced that radio theory classes would start soon, and that anyone who is interested may attend. These classes are to be free of charge.

The next meeting will be held in Room 250 Phillips Hall April 12 at 7:30 p.m.

Band Concert Tuesday Night In Hill Hall

The UNC Concert Band, under the batons of Herbert W. Fred, director, and Calvin Huber, assistant director, will present a concert in Hill Music Hall on Tuesday at 8:00 p.m.

Sponsored by the Department of Music, the program is open to the public at no charge.

The University Concert Band has recently completed a tour of many North Carolina schools. Under the direction of Herbert Fred, whom Percy Grainger recently acknowledged as the best of all the many band directors with whom he had worked, the 60-piece band has been noted for its high calibre of musicianship.

Kelly Enters Senior Prexy Post Election

Jim Kelly, from Flemingsburg, Ky., announced Saturday that he is an independent candidate for president of the senior class.

Kelly, at UNC on a NROTC scholarship, was a member of the freshman basketball team. Last year he traveled with the varsity as a substitute during the drive for the NCAA championship.

In a statement to The Daily Tar Heel Kelly said, "I am not a member of a political party, but as an independent I will be working for the senior class as a whole and will not have to cater to a political organization.

"I have several ideas concerning the improvement of the unity of the senior class—one of which is to establish a permanent student alumni secretary. The office of president, as it stands, is little more than an honorary position and I feel that it should entail more responsibility with the senior class and wield more influence in campus activities."

Grail Order - 38 Years Of Service

Friendship, truth, courage, and service are the watchwords of a 38-year old campus organization that was born to build better relations between fraternity and non-fraternity men at Carolina. To serve the UNC campus is the foremost objective of the Knights of the Order of the Grail.

In 1920 the social conditions existant on the campus were very poor, and the student body was divided by antagonism between the fraternity and non-fraternity men. The ideals of the University had been subordinated to conflicts between the factions within the University. Of necessity, the objectives, policies, and methods of the Grail were made wholly unselfish.

The Grail first instituted a series of dances with the dual purpose of improving social life and obtaining a firmer unification of the student body. From providing for the first time in many years a successful social program, it next originated games and for providing the athletes with better equipment.

The Grail also established an intra-mural program for campus participation, carefully including fraternity and non-fraternity groups. The Knights sponsored a song contest that resulted in the adoption of "Here Comes Carolina."

The Order was extremely active in the establishment of the first student government association. Through the years its many projects and activities have been turned over to responsible students groups, but the Order of the Grail has continued to serve its foundling aims by a free exchange of ideas among its members.

The Knights consider service the most important of their watchwords. The Order performs many services for the campus. It annually sponsors a series of informal dances when it feels there is a need for social activity, manages the sale of class rings, and composes, sells and distributes graduation invitations. Its regards itself as a trustee of the funds it realizes through these activities and returns them to the campus through Grail Scholarships and contributions to worthy causes.

The Order of the Grail stands ready to offer its help to any individual or group that needs its assistance in the form of ideas, financial aid, or physical labor. Grail members work always to "help the campus in every possible way in making it a better place in which to live and to work."

Candidate Carter Stresses His Qualifications For Post

Bob Carter, independent candidate for president of the student body, relased his final campaign statement to The Daily Tar Heel Saturday.

In his statement Carter said:

"For the past two weeks almost everyone on campus has had the opportunity to either meet the candidates running for president of the student body or to read their statements in The Daily Tar Heel concerning their stands and platforms. On Tuesday many of these students will take advantage of the opportunity to vote and we hope that everyone has evaluated the candidates and their qualifications before voting.

" I have been running on the qualifications of experience, knowledge, interest, service and leadership, and I feel that everyone will agree that these are characteristics a president needs. My work as treasurer of the student body, vice president of the IDC, member of the legislature, and the many other phases of student government in which I have worked have given me the experience and knowledge for the job of president.

"I foresee a great year in student government next year and I feel that an independent president could carry out the job well. I do not plan to let any job go undone and shall work to see that every phase of student government functions completely and thoroughly.

"We will have a dynamic year and the whole campus will be working for the good of student welfare. Action and efficiency will be my policy while in office and the coordination of all areas of campus will be one of my primary concerns.

"It is my desire to make student government continue to grow and remain one of the best in the United States. I sincerely urge everyone to vote on Tuesday and vote for the candidate whom you feel will serve you best.

'Possible' Clause Possibly Doesn't Mean A Darn Thing

After reading news accounts of the student legislature meeting Thursday night, we would like to ask our solons one question:

Do you, or don't you, want to see the removal of discriminatory clauses from the charters of national fraternity chapters on the UNC campus?

Worded like it is, we were left to wonder just what it meant when the legislature passed an amendment saying the legislature "would possibly like to see the removal of "discriminatory clauses (from the national fraternity charters)."

That is a pretty vague amendment, to say the least. The impossibility of its forcefulness is highly possible when you consider that, possibly, it doesn't mean a darn thing.

Juries Unable To Answer Delicate Cancer Question

Down in New Orleans another damage suit has been filed against cigarette manufacturing interests in the controversy over the link between cancer and smoking.

The plaintiff, Lawler D. Sharp, charges three tobacco companies with "negligence" in cigarette manufacture and advertising that led to cancer in his vocal chords.

It seems to us pretty obvious that Mr. Sharp is barking up the wrong tree in his charges that the firms were "willfully wanton and grossly negligent by totally disregarding the health of the public in giving assurances of safety in advertising and selling their cigarettes."

Unless we've missed a big discovery lately, the medical world itself has never proved beyond a doubt that cancer is, after all, sometimes produced by smoking. All kinds of conflicting testimony have been given by authorities well-versed in the problems of cancer.

So when even the medical world is unable to agree on its causes, how could a civil court jury of plumbers and businessmen and painters and machine shop workers put the blame, in a court decision, on the cigarette manufacturing firms?

But even if smoking did unquestionably cause cancer, we are left to wonder how a jury could determine whether a particular case were produced by a pack of cigarettes a day or by some other factor which even the doctors are unable to define.

Obviously, it could not place that blame on cigarette manufacturers "beyond the shadow of doubt." And for that reason no jury should render a decision of guilt against cigarettes as the cause for throat cancer.

What Mr. Sharp should have done was to conduct his own laboratory tests before he began smoking to see if elements in tobacco do produce malignancies. Then he could have adopted or refused the habit on the basis of his findings.

Who knows, he could have saved in the course of a lifetime a noteworthy percentage of the money which he is now asking in his damage suits against the companies.

THE GREENSBORO DAILY NEWS

Belling The Toll Cat Or From Whom The Tolls Bill?

North Carolina, headed by Governor Hodges and its congressional delegation, has won what appears to be a decisive victory in persuading the Interior Department to rescind toll charges, ranging from 50 cents to $10, on the Blue Ridge Parkway, which under previous announcement would have gone into effect June 1.

Along with this state's persuasiveness, there was strong likelihood that congressional action might be taken against the toll. Regardless of whatever may have led to the Interior Department's revearsal, the news is welcome and Secretary Seaton is to be commended for taking it.

The secretary gave two sound reasons, both of which should have been recognized and thought through before the Park Service's edict, for the altered position. In the first place, he decided "that charging fees on the Blue Ridge Parkway was an impractical proposition." Many small roads have access to the parkway and "even with 20 stations," to quote Secretary Seaton again, "it would be difficult . . . A person driving the parkway would have to stop one to 20 times, depending on how far he was going."

The second reason involved an even more fundamental contention which was at the heart of North Carolina's protest. Let Secretary Seaton pose that too: "There is an honest debate as to whether it is a national park or parkway, but I concluded that it is a parkway covering the distance between national parks." Tolls are not charged on other parkways. Thus their imposition in North Carolina would have set a precedent and have aroused far more than Tar Heel opposition in Congress.

So far as the present secretary of the interior is concerned, the tolls issue is dead. Naturally he cannot say what other secretaries and administrations will do. For that matter, no one could say what another Congress, or even the present, would do.

To the Daily News it does not seem that congressional action is necessary now. The existing precedent and its strengthening by Secretary Seaton should have a lasting effect upon National Parkway Service policy.—Greensboro Daily News.

The Machine Age

J. Y.'S JAZZ

What Is Jazz? - No One Answer

Ever since that fateful day when a New Orleans boy named Buddy Bolden raised his horn and blew clear across the Mississippi River and back, countless critics, poets, song writers, dilettantes, and writers have attempted to define jazz —what it is, how it came into being, and most of all what is behind it. Most of these efforts, though sincere, have been greatly misguided.

The first question—what is jazz?—can be answered simply and directly. Despite the protestations of a great many misinformed and provincial classicists, jazz is unmistakeably music. If one more competent than your reviewer wishes to dispute this contention, and feels that he can prove him erroneous on strictly technological terms, he would be more than delighted to accept the challenge. I feel quite confident, however, of an easy victory.

Of course the problem comes when one asks what kind of music this is. Surely it is not the strict, regimentalized music of Bach, Beethoven, or Brahms, nor at the same time is it the rather confused sound of Arnold Schoemberg. The best definition that I can give of jazz is that it is an improvised, free-wheeling, happy, sad, profound, superficial, thing. Jazz has never really been bounded by any strict form; true, the twelve bar blues has long been considered the ideal jazz setting, yet many great works have been written or recorded or improvised which do not fit this pattern. The truth is that jazz cannot be defined save in terms of its history.

And the history of jazz is a vague matter too, because though we have ample documentation of the days since Buddy Bolden, no one dares to venture a positive statement about the roots of jazz. They say that jazz arose from the Negro chants of the Africans who were driven from their native land by the cruel white traders. Granted that the white traders were cruel, but no one is going to grant that these Negroes brought the roots of jazz with them. It is probable that they brought something else, however—a rhythm.

This rhythm that the Negro brought with him was something strange, something heathen and un-Godly to the America living under the Protestant Ethic. It was a rhythm of the soul, unfettered by pretension or civilization. This, then, was the gift of the Negro.

It was the white man's America, however, that fostered jazz. It did not want to, and for a long time resisted it strongly, but the essence was there and could not be defeated by lack of understanding or musical pretense. The white man placed the Negro in the fields and tobacco shacks and cotton mills and made him work till his blood and bones could no more support him.

The Negro could not dispell the frustration and pent-up emotion caused by this suffering in physical manners, because the white man was too strong and too cruel. So he sang—he sang in the fields and tobacco shacks and cotton mills ;he sang in the dusk and at daybreak. Soon all were singing, and soon some were playing this music on brass instruments, and then the reeds were found. And then came the men—Buddy Bolden, a legend of immense proportions, and Joe Oliver, and Alphonse Piceau, and countless others—black, mulatto, brown, finally white. And they called these field songs the blues. Then someone, for no apparent or logical reason, called all this music jazz.

Soon, as this infectious music began to grip the land with its infectious spirit, people began to wonder, and to theorize—what is jazz, they asked. And no one could answer them.

There is no ready answer to this question, because jazz is a lot of things. Jazz is the sound of a train racing between New York and Boston, it is the white steps in Baltimore, it is smog in Los Angeles. Jazz is Buffalo Bill, jazz is P. T. Barnum and Alexander Hamilton.

Jazz is Newport, Jazz is Chapel Hill. It is a Coca Cola ad and Life magazine. Jazz is the sound of thirty thousand throats in Yankee Stadium, it is ten boys on a dusty field in Nebraska playing ball. Jazz is Washington, D. C., jazz is Little Rock. Jazz is all these things, and many more, for jazz is America.

NATIONAL LIBRARY WEEK

'Wake Up And Read!' Use Leisure Time Wisely

Our nation could not exist without reading or the written word. Take it away and the country could not operate. Very little work could be carried on or knowledge transmitted, and the civilization we know would grind to a halt.

Nor can the United States exist without readers. We live in a complicated and difficult time, when we must be well informed if we are to survive. And as a democratic nation, we depend on knowledge as we never have before.

Yet as a nation, we have not formed the habit of reading. A Gallup poll of 1955 showed that 61 percent of the adults in America had not read any book except the Bible the previous year. Another survey showed that half the nation's adults live within a mile of a library, but only one-fifth of them go inside. Reading has increased in recent years as measured in newspaper, magazine and book sales and in the use of public libraries, but the increase has not been as great as it has been in many other uses of leisure time.

The opportunity exists, and the leisure, but the American people have not yet learned what can be done with it.

It is to help them that National Library Week has come into being. Its purpose is to encourage the people of the United States to do more reading, and its theme for the first year is "Wake Up and Read!" We cannot afford a nation of lazy minds and the boredom that comes from knowing little and caring less. We cannot afford a nation of non-readers.

Moreover, the habit of reading is not only vital to a democratic society, but a source of enrichment to the individual himself. It is the people who read who have the most successful careers, for business and industry have never been able to find as many educated and intelligent people as they need.

Any reader has in his hands one of the world's great sources of entertainment, an activity that can be practiced almost anywhere and at any age. A child can read under an apple tree, a traveller in an airplane, a housewife shelling peas, an old man bound to the immobility of a hospital bed; each of them will be released into a world of delight that could have never existed for them otherwise. —The Clemson Tiger.

U.N.'s Mister Fixit Faces Big Job Again

Dag Hammarskjold has already proved that he can shoulder impossible tasks and survive. But it is difficult to pass judgment on achievements that literally have no precedents. Did it ever happen, for instance, that an international civil servant—and a foreigner—was put in charge of American foreign policy? At the time of the Suez crisis, an administration that had assiduously cultivated the art of buck passing gently passed the buck to Dag Hammarskjold.

This extraordinary resilience Hammarskjold shares with the U.N., and the U.N. owes much of its resilience to Hammarskjold. It is amazing how the U.N. has managed to survive contempt from some quarters and pietistic hypocrisy from some others.

Lately our government has been using the U.N. as its favorite alibi for turning down a number of suggestions for negotiations with Soviet Russia. Everything that is needed to have peace is in the Charter, our leaders have said over and over again. It must be added here that our leaders have a point, for nearly everything is in the Charter, though blissfully unenforced. Then there are those ever-repeated cliches about the U.N.—which is, of course, a forum, man's best hope for peace, while the General Assembly is the Town Meeting of the world.

Hammarskjold has said it over and over again, ever since he took office: the U.N. is not a world government. In our opinion, it will never become one. The world desperately needs a supranational structure, but we don't see any reason why the structure should be built according to that pattern of government, federal or otherwise, which is proving to be less and less workable in so many parts of the world.

Nobody can yet foresee the pattern of supranational organization that will emerge. What is really important is to be aware of its compelling need, and on any given occasion to meet it, humbly and persistently. This Hammarskjold is doing, without making pronouncements or giving sermons. Only a real intellectual with a good knowledge of law can refrain, when the time for action comes, from intemperate theorizing and law drafting.

There is not much in common among the major achievements that can be credited to the U.N. The Korean War was fought under the U.N. banner by an army considerably different from the one now stationed in the Sinai Peninsula. The day is coming fast when this still so frail organization in the making will concern itself with weapons of total destruction and vehicles of outer space. With the cooperation and, to a certain extent, under the control of the rest of mankind, the two super-powers must learn to work together. The whole thing, so appallingly new, is going to be given that by now old name: U.N.

This is the right time for Dag Hammarskjold to travel to Moscow, to London, and then back to the East River. Once again he has been entrusted with an unprecedented, crushing task. —The Reporter.

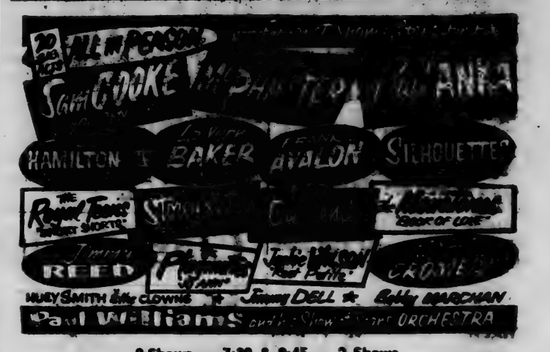
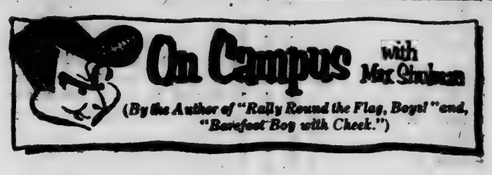
RICHARD MONTMEAT is a 1947 Industrial Design Graduate of Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, New York. He joined General Electric's Television Receiver Department in 1948.

"A company that plans far ahead gives me the chance to work out my future"



"Pleasing design is no accident," says 32-year-old TV set designer Richard Montmeat. "It takes creative planning. At General Electric, we're constantly developing new product designs — including some for products which won't be on the market for several years. Ever since joining General Electric, I've had the opportunity and challenge of working toward the designs of the future. As I see it, a company which plans ahead gives me the chance to work out my own future, too."

The creative accomplishments of Richard Montmeat have already brought him widespread recognition. He was awarded design patents in 1950 and 1955; he won the Industrial Designers Institute Award in 1955; and his design for the 1958 General Electric 17-inch portable television receiver was selected for showing in an international design exposition in Milan, Italy.



Progress in pleasing design — making appliances more enjoyable to own and use — is an important factor in our nation's growing use of electricity and in our constantly rising level of living. Planning now to satisfy future customers is important not only to the continued growth of the electrical industry, but to individual progress as well. Opportunity for long-range planning is part of the climate for self-development which is provided for General Electric's more than 29,000 college-graduate employees.

A FRAT TO REMEMBER

Every year, as we all know, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Collegiate Fraternities awards a highly coveted prize to the fraternity house which, in its judgment, has done the most to promote and enhance the fraternity way of life. The prize this year—eight hundred pounds of putty—goes to the Alpha Hernia chapter of the South Dakota College of Dentistry and Renaissance Art.

The award this year is exceptionally richly deserved, for the Alpha Hernia house is the very model of all a fraternity should be. It is, first of all, a most attractive house physically. The outside walls are tastefully covered with sequins. Running along the upper story is a widow's walk, with a widow stationed every three feet. Moored to the chimneypot is the Graf Zeppelin.

A widow's walk, with a widow stationed every three feet...

Indoors the house gives an impression of simple, casual charm. The chapter room is furnished in honey maple and chintz, with a dash of verve provided by a carp pool three hundred feet in diameter. A waterspout rises from the center of the pool with the housemother bouncing on the top.

Members' rooms are gracious and airy and are provided with beds which fold into the wall and are never seen again. Each room also has a desk, a comfortable chair, a good reading lamp, and a catapult for skeet-shooting. Kidney-shaped desks are available for kidney-shaped members.

Perhaps the most fetching feature of the house are the packs of Marlboros stacked in heaps wherever one goes. If one wishes to enjoy a fine filtered cigarette in any room of the house, all one need do is reach out one's hand in any direction and pick up a Marlboro. Then one rubs two pledges together, lights one's Marlboro, and puffs with robust content the tastiest smoke the mind of man has yet devised.

The decor, the grace, the Marlboros, all combine to make Alpha Hernia a real gasser of a fraternity. But a fraternity is more than things; it is also people. And it is in the people department that Alpha Hernia really shines.

Alpha Hernia has among its members the biggest BMOCs on the entire campus of the South Dakota College of Dentistry and Renaissance Art. There is, for instance, William Makepeace Sigafoos, charcoal and bun chairman of the annual Stamp Club outing. Then there is Dun Rovin, winner of last year's All-South Dakota State Monopoly Championship, 135 Pound Class. Then there is Rock Schwartz, who can sleep standing up. Then there is Tremblant Placebo, who can crack pecans in his armpits. Then there is Ralph Tungsten, who went bald at eight.

But why go on? One can see what a splendid bunch of chaps there is in Alpha Hernia, and when one sees them at the house in the cool of the evening, all busy with their tasks—some picking locks, some playing Jacks-or-Better, some clipping Playboy—one's heart fills up and one's eyes grow misty, and one cannot but give three cheers and a tiger for Alpha Hernia, fraternity of the year!

Harding, Oldham Star As Tar Heels Defeat Ithaca By 2-1

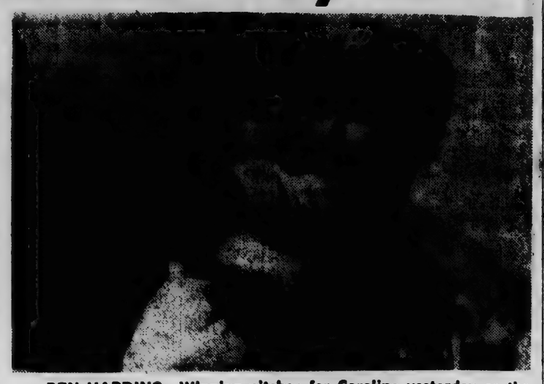
By RUSTY HAMMOND

Pitcher Ben Harding threw out Ithaca center-fielder Perry Noun in the ninth inning when Noun attempted to steal home with two outs giving Carolina a 2-1 victory over scrappy Ithaca College.

Noun had led off the inning with a double and gone to third after tagging up on Mel Giarolo's fly to deep center. Bill Schnellenbacher then walked. The count was 2-2 on catcher Bruce Proper when Noun dashed for home a perfect throw into the waiting hands of Tar Heel backstop Al Baldwin nipped the tying run for Ithaca.

Heels Score First

Carolina struck first in the third inning when two errors put Carson Oldham on third and John Burgwyn on first. Al Pons lashed a single to center, pushing Oldham across.



The Tar Heels scored what proved to be the winning run in the fourth when Vaughn Bryson walked, then hustled home on Oldhams double to deep center.

Ithaca got its only run in the fifth when Andy Scerbo singled, reached third on an error, and tagged up and scored on Joe Matereli's long fly.

Harding Pockets Win

Carolina starter Wayne Young gave way to winner Harding in the fifth, after giving up only one hit. Ithaca scored on Harding in the fifth, but never threatened again until the ninth as Harding limited the Itha to three hits the rest of the way.

The victory brought the Tar Heel's record to 3-2. They play Princeton here Thursday in the opening round of the Dixie Classic.

BEN HARDING—Winning pitcher for Carolina yesterday as the Heels beat Ithaca 2-1. Harding gave up only three hits in his 5-inning stretch on the mound.

Deacs Top 5-1

WINSTON-SALEM—(AP)—Ben Tench, Wake Forest senior right-hander, held Delaware to five safeties to lead the Deacons to their third straight triumph 5-1 here Saturday.

Tench, after giving up two walks and a single to load the bases in the ninth inning gave way to lefty Jimmy Harrell. A sacrifice fly by Jim Smith scored Lee Elia for Delaware's only run and then Harrell put down the late uprising.

Tench permitted only one Delaware runner to reach second base safely until the ninth inning. He fanned nine batters.

Fred Walters went the distance for the visitors and after two rocky early innings did a fine job. A wild pitch with the bases loaded in the first inning gave the Deacons a run.

A single by Bill Barr, John Tyner's double and a walk to Tench loaded the bases in the second inning and two sacrifice flies and Rex McMillan's single produced three runs.

A fielder's choice, a walk and Buster Ledford's single plated a run for Wake Forest in the eighth inning.

Wake Forest will play Massachusetts in the first round of the Dixie Classic here Monday.

Classic Opener Here Monday For Princeton

Carolina will be one of eight schools competing in the third annual Dixie Classic baseball Tournament beginning Monday, with the first game being played here and the rest in Winston-Salem.

The Tar Heels will face Princeton of the Ivy League in Emerson Field Monday afternoon in the tourney opener. The scene then shifts to Winston-Salem for two days of four games each on Tuesday and Wednesday. There will be a double header each night and afternoon on both days. Other opening round games feature Lafayette at State, Connecticut at Duke, and Massachusetts at Wake Forest.

Carolina carries a 3-2 record into the tourney, having beaten Ithaca and Rollins (twice) and losing to Georgia (twice).

The idea of the tournament was originated by Carolina baseball coach Walter Rabb, and it is built along the same lines as the Dixie Classic basketball tournament. The first event was held in Durham with Rollins, Ohio University, Notre Dame, and Yale as the four visiting schools. The 1956 tourney also was staged at Durham with Loyola of the South, Amherst, Colgate and Michigan as the outside clubs.

No tourney was held last spring, but the Big Four school baseball coaches decided to try it this year with Winston-Salem as the site.

In both of the previous events Wake Forest has walked off with the championship laurels. The tourney shapes up as a wide-open affair. The four visiting schools ranked among the powers in their respective leagues last season while the Big Four schools comprised the top four finishers in the ACC race last year.

Runners In Florida

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — (AP)—University of North Carolina runners in the Florida relays finished second to winner Florida State here yesterday in the 2-mile relay. Wally Graham of Carolina was fourth in the high jump. The runners were participating without injured Dave Scurlock, who is out with a sprained ankle.

Duke sprinter Dave Sime won the 100-yard dash.

Blue Devils Win

COLUMBIA—(AP)—Duke edged South Carolina 3-2 here Saturday in the opening Atlantic Coast Conference baseball game for both teams.

Lefthander Dick Burton, who was 6-1 last season, notched the win. Duke now is 1-3 in all games, South Carolina 0-1.

South Carolina first baseman Ken Rosefield was caught at home plate with the tying run in the eighth on a perfect throw by centerfielder Pete Maynard of Bunky Shore's single.

Two singles, a double and a walk gave Duke two runs in the fourth.

Leftfielder Bill Dumhoff scored the winning run in the seventh on a single, a steal of second and a single by shortstop Lon Bonczek.

Two singles, a double and a walk gave Duke two runs in the fourth.

Leftfielder Bill Dumhoff scored the winning run in the seventh on a single, a steal of second and a single by shortstop Lon Bonczek.

It was Dumhoff's single that scored both of Duke's fourth inning runs.

Carolina Netters Meet Harvard Here Tomorrow

Carolina's crack tennis team, fresh from a smashing victory over Williams College, takes on Harvard of the Ivy League here Monday in its second match of the season.

The Tar Heels ran wild over Williams, scoring a complete shutout by sweeping every event. Predicted to be much stronger than last year's team, the Tar Heels won 10 single matches and followed up with three doubles victories.

Led by number one man Bob Bortner, the Tar Heels showed no mercy on their wet and cold green courts. Number two man Steve Bank and number four man Tom Clark scored complete shutouts, each winning 6-0, 6-0.

It would seem that the early optimism exhibited by assistant coach Hammond Strayhorn is no fluke of the imagination.

The match will get under way at 3:30, and Tar Heel fans will see the team face its first real test of the season.

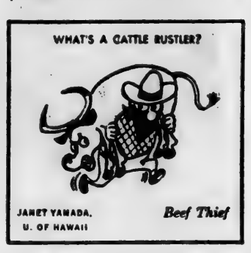
Sticklers!



SMOKE RINGS come in all shapes and sizes. Like 4-sided smoke rings for squares. Sturdy smoke rings for windy days. Even invisible smoke rings for people who aren't ostentatious. As any competent smoke ringer (Vapor Shaper in Sticklese!) will tell you, the best way to start one is to light up a Lucky. It's best mostly because a Lucky tastes best. A Lucky gives you naturally light, wonderfully good-tasting tobacco, toasted to taste even better. Why settle for less? You'll say a light smoke's the right smoke for you!

WHAT TO WEAR ON THE SATELLITE

SCENE: It is almost zero hour at Los Bismuth. On stage are Capt. Carruthers, the man in charge of the launching of the satellite, and Manfred Faustus Sport, the man who will ride the satellite.

Carr: Well, Sport, this is it.

Sport: Real gas, Cap. I'm almost flying already. How do I look?

Carr: You could wear cat-gut and lemon-peels, and who would be the wiser?

Sport: Wake up, Cap. What about that crowd at Mt. Palomar with that big, spooky telescope? Got to look spiffy for them.

Carr: That shirt's a beaut. But, where's the rest of your luggage?

Sport: Who needs more? This shirt is a Van Heusen Vantage shirt. It's one of those all cotton, drip-dry numbers that never needs ironing.

Carr: What a discovery! But how will you wash it up there?

Sport: In the rain, man, in the rain.

Carr: And how will you dry it?

Sport: In the sun, man, in the sun.

Carr: Well, it's sure mighty one, Sport, you'll be gone forever. (SOUNDOFWHOOSHING). He's gone.

EPILOGUE: The scene is the observatory at Mt. Palomar.

Scientist: Man, he's real gone. Just look at that Van Heusen Vantage shirt.

ELECTIONS

Wouldn't it be nice if . . . everyone participated in campus political affairs, editor asks on page 2.

118 CANDIDATES SEEK OFFICE IN TODAY'S VOTE

Party Heads Urge Students To Vote

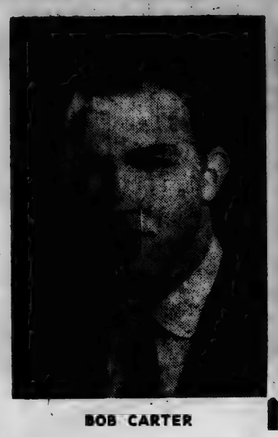
An open letter to the student body, aimed at increasing voting in today's election, was issued Monday by Fat Adams, chairman of the Student Party, and Syd Shuford, chairman of the University Party.

The letter read as follows:

"Today you will vote for your Student Government leaders for the coming school year. We have fought hard for our side, and we have differed on many things, but we cannot differ in urging each or you to exercise your privilege today and cast your ballot for the candidates of your choice.

Can Express Opinions

"It is hard for many of us to realize just how lucky we are to be able to hold opinions of our own and to express these opinions through the ballot box.

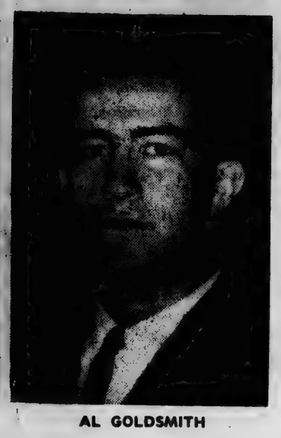


"Mr. Striganov, charge d'affairs of the Soviet Union, said when he was down here for the Carolina Symposium a couple of weeks ago that Russians can have opinions opposed to the Kremlin, but when they try to influence others with these, they are guilty of treason.

"Of course, this is impossible here in America, but it could very well become a reality if each and everyone of us fails to do his part in preserving our free democratic system. The roots of our democracy lie in the ballot box. If we preserve the roots the tree will flourish.

Self Government

"Student government was established here nearly a century ago by students and administrators who recognized the value of democratic rule. With the active encouragement of the University, we students have raised our self-government to a place of respect here and throughout the state and nation in the country, and students from tion. We are now among the finest everywhere come to Chapel Hill to study our system.



"Be thankful that you are able to vote. Walk downstairs to the ballot box and cast your ballot for student self-government."

Polls To Open At 8 Today; GM To Post Election Results

Campus politicians finished putting their plans and aims on the line last night and their fate is in the hands of the student body today.

Polling places are open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. today, with the results of the election to be posted in Graham Memorial tonight as the votes are counted. All the candidates and Bob Furtado, chairman of the Elections Board, urged students to exercise their voting responsibility.

This spring 60 offices are being contested for by 118 candidates.

Heading the list are the three candidates for president of the student body, Bob Carter, Don Furtado and Al Goldsmith.

Goldsmith, nominated by the University Party, is a junior from Lincolnton. He has been active in student politics during his three years here and was floor leader of the party in the Student Legislature this session.

Bob Carter is running independent of party endorsement, although he has been active in the Student Party for three years. He has been treasurer of the student body and vice-president of the IDC in addition to serving in the Legislature.

The third candidate, Don Furtado, is the Student Party standard-bearer. He is trying for the post after being vice president of the student body for a year. He won the SP nomination after a spirited fight with the Carter supporters.

The vice president of the student body's post is being fought for by Ralph Cummings (SP) and Jack Lawing (UP). Cummings won the SP bid after the original candidate, John Brooks, was disqualified by the Elections Board. Brooks did not have enough hours in the past two semesters to run and the Board allowed the party to select Cummings after the deadline for entries.

Two coeds Paddy Wall (SP) and Martha "Map" Wilkinson (UP), are running for secretary of the student body.

Charlie Gray (UP) and Everette James (SP) are candidates for treasurer of student government.

Three students are in the race for president of the senior class, two with party endorsement and one independent. Jim Kelly entered the race late as the independent, running against UP nominee Jeff Hare and SP man Tom Long.

The parties canditates have the field to themselves in the vice presidential contest, the UP supporting Hamp Lefler and the SP backing James Pittman.

Two girls hold part nominations for senior class secretary: Susan Campbell (SP) and Betty Root (UP). The UP has entered the only candidate for senior treasurer, John Whitaker.

The social chairman of the class is a race between Sarah Arnold and Betty Kaye Johnson, UP and SP respectively.

Three seats on the Student Council are up for grabs between six senior candidates: Bob Bordon, Craven Brewer, Don Millen, John Owens, Eric Roper and Walt Wilson.

The field running for three seats on the Men's Honor Council is even more crowded with 12 students in the race. They are Dick Cashwell, Francis Craighill, Bob Cunningham, Bob Mathews, Tom Rand, Jack Raper and Jimmy Smalley.

A similar situation exists in the race for Women's Honor Council where 11 girls are running for three seats. In the field are Mary Cabell Carlan, Lynne Courtney, Louise Crumbley, Mailly Davis, Sue Donisthorpe, Lucy Forsythe, Mary Ann Keith, Ginny Pierce, Susan Purser, Jean Syer and Mary Taylor.

Running for head cheerleader are two boys nominated by the parties, each with previous experience. They are Carter Jones (UP) and John Whitty (SP).

One candidate only is running for positions of National Student Association co-ordinator (Ed Levy) Yackety-Yack Editor (Robert Coke), and president of the Carolina Athletic Association (Wayne Bishop).

The position of president of the Women's Athletic Association is up between two candidates: Jo Carpenter and Ju Ju Stokes. Sue Donisthorpe, Marion Eells, and Martha

Artist Will Show Work Here Soon

Miss Sylvia Carewe, celebrated painter, is exhibiting her work today through April 30 in the Morehead Building. She spoke yesterday, under the sponsorships of the University Art League.

Her work is being brought to UNC through the interest of Ola Maie Foushee, resident of Chapel Hill who met teh artist in New York in January and persuaded her to exhibit her work in North Carolina.

She is also planning to exhibit her work at Salem College and in the Student N. C. State College. Her work, described by Time magazine as "visual excitment transposed into semiabstract scenes done with splash and sparkle," has previously been exhibited in Paris, New York, Tel Aviv and Richmond.

Playmaker Tryouts Scheduled Here Today

The Carolina Playmakers have announced that tryouts for three new one-act plays by student playwrights will be held in The Playmakers Theatre at 4 p. m. today. The plays are to be directed by Page Willams, Lucy Ann Dunlap and Lew Goldstein, graduate students in the Department of Dramatic Art. Everyone interested in reading for the plays has been invited to attend the open tryouts.

Five Candidates Seek Editorship Of The Tar Heel

By DAVIS YOUNG

Today, five candidates will vie for the editorship of The Daily Tar Heel in what campus political speculators say will be one of the day's most exciting contests.

Ann Frye, Curtis Gans, Pringle Pipkin, Charlie Sloan and John Whitley are all seeking the highest newspaper post. Unlike most major elections, the editorship is decided by a simple plurality rather than a majority. There will be no runoff except in the case of a tie.

Four of the five, Frye, Gans, Pipkin and Sloan have all been endorsed by the Bi-Partisan Selections Board. The fifth candidate, Whitley, failed to gain endorsement from the group. Sloan is the only repeater from last year when he ran a losing race against former editor Neil Bass.

Miss Frye is a junior journalism major from Hickory. After transferring from Women's College in Greensboro this fall, she worked as a reporter on The Daily Tar Heel. She was promoted to assistant news editor when Doug Eisele succeeded Bass in the recall.

Gans is a junior English major from Waynesville and has worked on the paper for nearly three years. He has served in the capacity of reporter, night editor, proof reader and columnist during this time. He has also been employed by the Asheville Citizens Times in their advertising department and as a sports correspondent for several New York papers. Gans is endorsed by the Student Party.

Pipkin is from Reidsville and has worked for two years as a political reporter and columnist on The Daily Tar Heel. He is a former editor of his high school paper which won a Columbia University Scholastic Press Award and will be employed by The Charleston News Courier in Charleston, S. C. this summer. He is a member of the Beta Theta Pi Fraternity.

Sloan is from Arlington, Va. and has worked here on the campus paper as managing editor, associate editor and news editor. He also substituted as editor for Fred Powledge during his term of office in 1956-56. Sloan has also worked as night editor, proof reader, reporter and columnist. He is a member of Delta Upsilon Fraternity.

Whitley is a sophomore from Thomasville and has not had previous connection with The Daily Tar Heel. However, he has worked for the Thomasville Tribune, High Point Enterprise and as a special writer for Greensboro Daily News, Winston-Salem Journal and The Charlette Observer. He edited his high school paper and has four years experience as a printer. He is a member of Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity

UNC Officials Hear IFC Plan At Cabinet Meet

University officials listened with interest and apparent approval yesterday as IFC President Tucker Yates outlined a plan for improving fraternity responsibility on the UNC campus.

Joining other student leaders at a regular Chancellor's Cabinet meeting, Yates traced actions of the IFC since the much publicized "pajama party" a month ago and said steps are being taken to avert a recurrence of such social activity.

"We want most to impress upon every fraternity member the importance of thinking before taking any action as an individual or as a member of the organization to which he belongs," Yates asserted.

That, he said, is the major plan of the IFC in its approach to social problems of fraternities at UNC—problems which, he said, "are reflective of the University."

"Fraternity men are all aware of whats going on," Yates told the Cabinet session, adding that some houses recently have changed long-made plans indicating they will cooperate with the IFC in eliminating their own problems.

Chancellor William B. Aycock was the first to applaud the IFC for its progress in social reform. "I know you're proceeding in the right direction," he said.

The student leaders and administrative officials also talked about improving fraternity-dormitory and fraternity-faculty relations on campus, though no definite steps were taken.

NROTC Group Sees Landing At Lejeune

Twenty-three Carolina midshipmen were on hand to oppose the landing of 12,000 Marines at Camp Lejeune last weekend.

The group, consisting of the senior and junior classes of Marine Option NROTC students, flew by Navy plane to observe the beginning of the Second Marine Division war games which will continue through March.

The midshipmen were able to observe closely the landing of the division and all phases of the drive across the beach. A interesting part of the trip was the bridge built by Marine bridgemen in six hours at night.

A platoon of tanks was taken over by the middies and every man climbed all over them so as not to miss anything. The tankmen answered hundreds of questions for the knowledge hungry mids.

Minter Reminds Ballot Tenders Of Duties

John Minter, UNC Elections Board member, reminded ballot box tenders Monday that the last person tending each ballot box today is supposed to stay with the box until someone picks the boxes up.

Failure to do this can result in the votes in that box not being counted.

Polling places will be open from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m. In order to vote each person must show his identification card and have it stamped .

Minter listed the following places as voting sites for the different University districts:

Town Men's I, Carolina Inn; Town Men's II, Scuttlebutt; Town Men's III, including Glen Lennox, Graham Memorial; Town Men's IV, the office at Victory Village; Town Women, Gerrard Hall.

All dormitory women may vote in their dorms except those in Kenan. Kenan residents may vote in McIver. Residents of Connor will vote in Winston, and Emerson in Ruffin. Other men's dorms will have polling places in them.

Ballot boxes wil be placed in the nurses dorms, and all other people living in University owned buildings, such as Memorial Hall, will vote in Old East.

Orientation Application Blanks Due

"Get those counselor applications in as soon as possible." That was word from Men's Orientation chairman Herman Godwin yesterday.

Said Godwin: "Thus far we have received only a small number of applications. We are trying this year to avoid a last minute influx of applications as has been the case in the past.

"I would like to urge all men who are planning to apply for counselorship to fill out and return their applications as soon as possible."

"This year the need for good men to carry the Orientation Program is greater than ever due to the many new changes which have evolved here in the past year," he said.

"Anyone who has worked with Orientation previously will tell you that it is not only is a service to the University but a rewarding experience for the counselor."

Godwin and his committee will exercise a two-part program for the counselor selections. There will be a general test for all applicants at 7 p.m. April 15 in room 268 Venable.

April 16-23 the committee will hold individual interviews with each applicant. Applicants will be notified by campus mail as to the time of their interviews.

Application blanks and study manuals are now available at the Y.M.-C.A., Lenoir Hall, the Library and Graham Memorial. They may also be turned in at these places. The test will come almost directly from the study manual.

ON ELECTION DAY

Wouldn't It Be Nice If...

Wouldn't it be nice if:

ON ELECTION DAY you didn't have to read those same old, stale editorials about casting your ballot at the polls.

NO ONE REMINDED YOU that participation in elecaions is a privilege which determines the course of a democracy.

EVERYONE REALIZED THAT voting is a public duty — something you must do as an expression of your obligation to citizenship,

GOOD GOVERNMENT could be selected without the ten minutes it takes every student to vote for the candidate of his choice.

DEMOCRACY COULD EXIST without the imposition of politicians who seek office and thereby work to "get out the vote."

Yes, it would be nice if, in a democracy, no one had to take ten minutes of an entire year to determine the leadership of government for the coming annum.

But without that ten minutes—without the time necessary for any UNC student to cast his ballot in elections — democracy and all it means could not long exist on this campus or anywhere else in the United States.

We will not harbor long on the importance of your participation in spring elections today. Suffice it to say that, through your ballot, the student freedoms you save may be your own.

They are freedoms, rights and privileges which, when lost, are not easily again recovered at the polls.

Why All The Worry About Dorm-Frat Relationships?

We never have been as concerned about fraternity-dormitory relations at UNC as leaders in the executive branch of student government.

This relationship — or problem, as some choose to call it — is supposed to stem from the isolationist attitude of fraternities in their approach to affairs of the dormitories. That is, fraternity men don't have anything to do with dormitory men, and vice versa.

We would, first, question the correctness of this so-called "isolationism." And, secondly, if it does exist, we still have been unable to determine what's unusual or wrong about it.

If we admit that there is little to do between fraternity men and dormitory men, we must at the same time realize that there is little to do between dormitory men and fraternity men. The question is: who's to blame.

Furthermore, if we say that fraternity I does not associate with Aycock Dormitory, we also can say that Aycock Dormitory does not associate with Battle Dorm, and so on. For dorms, for all practical purposes, are fraternal institutions.

It does not appear wrong to us that members of a particular fraternity should associate more — exclusively, if you wish — with their own brothers than with members of other houses or dormitories. It follows that members of a given family will be close to one another.

And for the same reason, it does not seem strange that, generally, those who live in the same building, or identify themselves with "groups" of associates which surely are as large membership-wise as some fraternities on campus.

Stated differently, dormitory men have their own little groups, just like the fraternity men, from which they seldom wander. We do not feel that is wrong. And probably the dormitory men would have it no other way.

It's not that we have a dislike for dormitory men. We did, in fact, use to be one ourselves. And during that period in which we were not adjoined to a Greek society, we held no contempt for nor were we jealous of fraternity men.

Surely the student-at-large feels the same way, for we all have our own friends for our own reasons and within our own groups. It's just that everybody doesn't want to be a member of the same clique.

Conformity A Threat? Or Is It Conformity

By HACK HACKFIELD

It has come to my attention, through usually unimpeachable sources, that one of the favorite topics of conversation around campii is conformity. I wouldn't know, myself, since I'm a commuter, but that is the word that I get from my sources. Not only, I am told, is it a favorite topic of conversation, but it is also a favorite topic of discussion for the columnists of the Daily Tar Heel. I wouldn't know about that, either, since I make it a point never to read the Tar Heel. But that is what my sources tell me.

The people seem to be divided into two camps: those who are for conformity, and those who are against it; or those who conform, and those who do not. There seems to be little room for fence-sitting. Either you're In, or you're Out.

The non-conformers say the conformers don't know how to do anything but conform, and the conformers say that the non-conformers don't know how to do anything but non-conform, which is the same thing as conforming.

They argue about whether one should wear his buckle in the back or not. Some of the more intellectual ones argue about whether or not reading and raving about The Organization Man makes one an Organization Man.

And all the columnists write about fraternities, the Honor Council, or other columnists. And they all either agree or disagree.

By way of solution to all this helter-skelter confusion and conflict, I would like to propose a system. I call this system Anomie. (I lifted the name from a sociology course I took, once, and it means a state of nothiingness, r something like that.) The system is simplicity itself. All you have to do is just have no opinion on anything. That way you cannot be accused of being either a conformer or a non-conformer. With a little bit of practice, you will be able to befuddle and dispatch even the sharpest critics of either camp. All you have to remember is "We don't believe in anything—We believe in everything." That's our motto. Confusing, isn't it? That's just the purpose of the whole thing. If you refuse to voice an opinion on any subject, how can anyone possibly accuse you of being anything? It's fool-proof. And if everyone adopts this system, in a few years we can do away with all this conformist-nonconformist idiocy, and get down to the serious business of earning a living.

Good Photography Earns Profits

To the editor:

I have just finished reading an editorial in The Daily Tar Heel about the lousy quality of the work turned out by the lab photographers. The same might be said of our own lab photographers. The only photography course offered at A & M is under the Journalism Dept. The students are supposed to learn the fundamentals of news photography. I sometimes wonder. Right now the course hasn't progressed far enough to tell much. I am taking the course, and I can't say that I have learned anything. But I have had some previous newspaper experience.

At the present the Battalion employs two student photographers who do all of the picture taking—another boy and myself. We have a very well equipped darkroom to work in and two Speed Graphics and a 35mm camera to shoot with. The standard price for all pics is 90 cents. We don't exactly get rich, but we make out. Both the other photographer and I have sold several pictures to AP, UP, and the three Houston papers. Last week I sold a picture to Life Magazine. The Department of Student Publications also publishes four magazines and a yearbook. We do a lot of work for all of the other publications too. Last month I managed to clear $120 off my picture taking.

Perhaps if these lab photographers knew that they could make some money from taking pictures they would take a little more interest. If they don't already know it, I would suggest that they get in touch with the enearest wire service and ask them what type pics they want. Around here the going rate for pics sold to the wire services and the Houston papers is $5 a picture. Life pays considerably more. Someone from the Dallas office of Life called me the other day to get a pic for them. They got my name from AP. Maybe the photogs at UNC will never have such an opportunity, but you never know.

I would like to hear from you to find out what kind of setup your paper has.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

On Buying Values

During the past few years we have spent more than $40 billion trying to purchase loyalty abroad, with the net result that today our motives are suspect and our foreign friends limited to those still covered by the dollar sign.

Now, at home, it looks as if we are ready to coin[illegible] more in an attempt to buy patriotism, not through sacrifice, but through our government's continuing effort to [illegible] men, boys and women into military service [illegible] more money and softer duties.

It is true that you can catch more flies with sugar than vinegar. But it is not flies we are after. We need men—men with a sense of obligation and duty, with a feeling for home and country; men who know the meaning of liberty and the value of freedom, who are not ashamed to stand when the band strikes up "Dixie" or "Yankee Doodle."

We will not get that kind of soldier, sailor or airman with the promise of more money. In fact, we stand to lose them under the type of bill now being considered in Congress.

This measure, which is almost certain to pass, will prove a boon to goldbricking to an establishment where it is already a fine art. The bill not only proposes to increase pay in all grades and create some new ones; but it sets up increments beyond the grade scale for special skills and abilities and permits each service to determine which skills it wants to reward.

With such a system, it won't be long before the corporal in the colonel's office will be drawing more than the sergeant in the field; and the master's yeoman more than the ship's gunnery officer. For those "specialists" know the ropes and how to manipulate them.

We do not sympathize with the defense department in its quest for men. If this nation can draft fathers and sons during wartime and send them to the front as cannon fodder, with no liberties and precious little pay, it can draft young men in peacetime and require them to stay hitched as long as needed. We shall never be able to purchase patriotism nor silence gripes with greenbacks.

Right now 60 cents out of every dollar the federal government collects is being spent for national security. Eleven cents more is being spent for interest on the national debt and seven cents for veterans' benefits and services. That leaves only 22 cents for all other government operations, including debt retirement. Somehow, out of that large slice of our national income the armed services ought to be able to man the ramparts.

But we would not have you believe we have reserved our fire for the armed services. We note that, with revenue declining and hard times spreading, wages are being increased and appropriations boosted throughout the government. By far the largest portion of the income from the five-cent stamp, which is being pushed as a means of cutting down the postal deficit, will go to increase the pay of postal workers; and, when another year rolls around, the deficit will still be with us, bigger than ever.

Somehow, we must realize in this country that we cannot continue to have our cake and eat the other fellow's, too. There must be a renaissance of responsibility, and if nothing more than that comes out of this recession, it will not have been a total loss.

We must, as individuals, face up to our own problems. We can create more and we can live on less. This involves simplication in many aspects of life, but requires no sacrifice of dignity or political freedom.

We must quit blaming "society" for our failures and relying on others for our success; for the more we depend on others, the less secure we feel. We must get across to our young people, who have never really known freedom, that the only real, permanent, lasting security is that which an individual creates for himself. And it is also the most satisfying. A bank account is the best security against the breadline.—Statesville (N.C.) Record & Landmark

About Library Pay

To The Editor:

In letters to the Editor on March 27, paragraph 5, there is a statement on payment on student assistants in the Library which is in error. Perhaps you can correct this statement for us .The Library has a classification and pay scale for student assistants in which the lowest rate is seventy-five cents. No student working in the Library makes less than this amount per hour.

We will appreciate it if you are able to clear this up for your readers. As you probably know, we are very much interested in our student assistants, and if you wish to know more about our pay plan, I will be glad to discuss it further with you.

Abusing The Language

To The Editor:

I certainly hope that our new Daily Tar Heel editor, whoever he may be, will restore to the printed page a high regard for the principles of the English language. This is something not only lacking in our paper but in major and minor newspapers throughout the country. It appears so ludicrous for an institution which earns its very existence employing the English language to so neglect and abuse it editorially.

If the Journalism school utilizes the Daily Tar Heel to a certain extent for practical training, it is my suggestion that the English Department be allowed the same opportunity. Certainly, if the editor cannot personally edit our paper for relative readability, perhaps English majors can.

NSA Plans Assembly In Virginia

By WESTBROOK FOWLER

The Spring Regional Assembly of the Carolina-Virginia Regional of the United States National Student Association (USNSA) will be held at Randolph-Macon Woman's College in Lynchburg, Va. on April 10, 11, and 12.

The Assembly will be on "Student Responsibility." The program is designed to set plans for carrying out the recommendations made by the President's Committee on Education Beyond the High School.

The three areas of discussion will include the acquiring of new teachers, improving the effectiveness of curriculum and instruction, and student contributions to counseling.

Specific programs and projects which each school can use and develop will be discussed. Discussion of the administration of the project for the rest of this year and next year will be the most important part of the assembly.

Many well-known speakers will participate in the assembly. Among them are Dr. A. H. Edens, president of Duke University; Harry Luna, past president of USNSA; Dr. William F. Quillian Jr., president of Randolph-Macon; and Harold Bell president of the Virginia National Educational Association.

Any UNC student who would like to attend the assembly should see Whit Whitfield or Sonny Evans in the Student Government office.

Religious Faith Reviving At UNC

A revival in religious faith at UNC and on other college campuses is reported in the current issue of The Saturday Evening Post.

The report is made by the Rev. Jones B. Shannon, former chaplain to Episcopal students at Pennsylvania State University and now executive director of the Church Society of College Work, an assignment which keeps him in touch with many schools around the country.

Shannon's article, "Religious Revolution on the Campus," tells that the upswing has been an evolutionary process which began during World War II and that state universities as well as private colleges have become increasingly aware that a knowledge of religion is a necessary part of a balanced education.

The resurgence is found to have occurred amid less emphasis upon the social aspects of church attendance than heretofore and student demand for a more mature approach in religious matters is said to have called for a new type of college chaplain or pastor.

UNC Among Colleges

The Shannon article pinpoints developments at a number of colleges, including Carolina, Johns Hopkins University, the University of Texas, Cornell University, Montana State University, Columbia University and the University of Iowa.

A Purdue University official reports, for instance, that student religious groups are more active than at any time in his nearly 40 years there. A midwestern university chaplain increased the number of Sunday services from two to six and still had standees.

At the student level, one Ivy Leaguer told Shannon that it is now a "done thing" to take a date to church on Sunday. A coed related that it was the simple witness of faculty members which led her to a mature acceptance of God.

Tar Heel Swimmers Make Great Finish

By DAVE WIBLE

Take seven Tar Heel swimmers to the NCAA championships at Ann Arbor and what do you get?

Carolina's coach Pat Earey tried it this weekend, and he came home with four All-Americans, and three near misses.

"The boys outdid themselves," commented Coach Earey as he reviewed the meet which brought his first season at Carolina to a close. "They were competing against the best swimming I have ever seen anywhere. There were some terrific boys there, especially from the Big Ten. Reaching the finals in that meet is an accomplishment in any book."

Any finalist in the NCAA championship is automatically named an All-American. In this meet there were 6 finalists in each event.

Relay Team Makes All-American

The Carolina quartet of Walt Rose, Bill Zickgraf, Bill Roth and Bret Nash made the grade together, by placing fifth in the freestyle relay. Rose, Zickgraf, and Roth are all seniors and hold All-American honors from last season. Nash, a junior, received the honor for the first time.

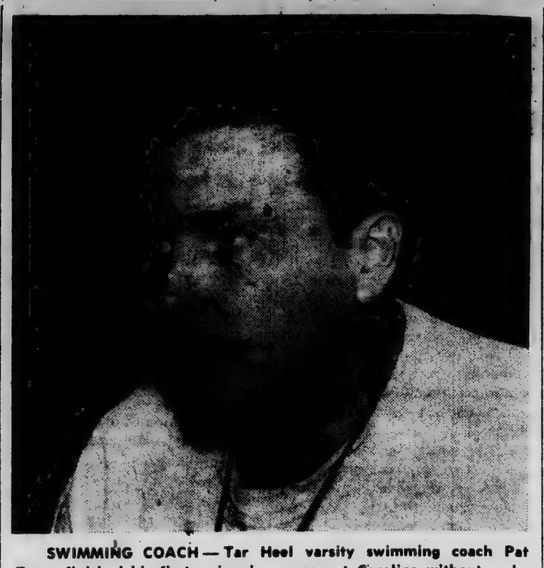
Zickgraf, making doubly sure, got in the 100-yd. butterfly finals, and finished fifth. He swam the best time he has ever clocked, a great way to finish his college career.

Roth Swims Best Time

Roth, swimming in the 50-yard freestyle, was nosed out of the finals. He had tied with three other swimmers for sixth place, but was defeated in the swim off. Still, like Zickgraf, he swam the best time and defeated all the boys who had beat him in the Easterns earlier this month. Add the fact that Coach Earey swears he got a bad start, and you have another great finish to a brilliant college career.

Mac Mahaffy, another Senior, and All-American, had the luck of being entered in the outstanding race of the meet, the 200-yard butterfly. He didn't qualify, but its undertsandable looking over the field. In this event, there were four seconds difference in the qualifying time compared to last year.

Shiffman's Time In Top Ten



Tony Shiffman had the same trouble in the 1500-meter, and 440-freestyle. Named All-American last year, the junior met some great competition. 45 seconds were knocked off the 1500 time compared to last year. Holding one of the ten best times for the season another method of getting All-American and most folks thing that Shiffman's second place time for the 1500 at the Easterns will be in the top ten for the season.

Carolina's top diver, Ned Meekins, a senior from Raleigh, made it into the low-board semi-finals against the top college divers in the nation. He proved himself top in the conference by winning both the low and high diving.

A Fine Season For The Tar Heels

A quick check in the record books, and you'll find that Carolina swimming '57-'58 is about the best ever. His first year with the Tar Heels, Pat Earey finished with a perfect 11-0 record, the ACC championship, 11 of the 16 first places in the ACC individual championships, and five All-Americans.

So to the Tar Heels, their coach, but especially the graduating seniors, The Daily Tar Heel representing the student body would like to say "Well Done."

SWIMMING COACH — Tar Heel varsity swimming coach Pat Earey finished his first swimming season at Carolina without a defeat. Coach Earey was named runner-up Coach of the Year by the Monogram Club.

Johnson Takes Palmer By One Stroke To Win Azalea Open

By KEN ALYTA

WILMINGTON —(AP)— Howie Johnson, aided by a penalty stroke Arnold Palmer called against himself, gained the first major tournament of his professional golfing career Monday, winning the Azalea Open playoff by one stroke.

Johnson, who turned pro in January, 1956, after selling insurance for six years, shot a 37-40-77, five over par for the 6,651-yard Cape Fear Country Club course. Palmer had a pair of 39s.

Victory was worth $2,000 to the 32-year-old Johnson, who plays out of Glenwoodie, Ill. Prior to today he had won only $1,578 in official money this year.

Palmer's $1,500 runnerup check brought this year's total to $8,600.

Palmer, 28-year-old defending Azalea champion from Latrobe, Pa., charged himself with an extra stroke on the 14th green. He said his ball moved as he was preparing to putt it the first time. The penalty gave the 1954 National Amateur champion a five on the par-four hole. Johnson took a six on the same hole, using two shots to get out of a trap. That reduced his lead to two shots.

Palmer shaved one stroke off the lead with a par three on the 16th, but he lost two great stretch chances when he missed short putts. He three-putted No. 15, missing from two feet, and he missed from three feet on 17.

Johnson said later he "appreciated Arnie missing those putts."

Each had a par-four on the 18th hole, Johnson making a fine shot to the green from the rough. Palmer's second hit the edge of the green then rolled back, down below the putting surface.

The 6-foot-2, 210-pound Johnson, outwardly calm, betrayed nervousness when he hit first off the 18th tee although the honor actually was Palmer's. Johnson didn't know of his breach of golfing etiquette until advised of it a half-hour later.

"I guess that shows how shook up I was," he commented.

Palmer had taken a two-stroke lead when he birdied the par-four second hole from seven feet. Johnson missed his six-footer for a par. But Johnson picked up a stroke on each of the next three holes to take a lead he never lost.

Johnson birdied the long third hole and parred the fourth and fifth to quickly take charge.

Palmer's putter again did him wrong when he took a five on the short eighth, three-putting after exploding from a trap. Johnson made his par and went three-up.

Johnson parred the ninth as Johnson went one over, cutting the lead to two strokes.

Johnson again went three ahead on the 12th, getting down in two from 20 feet for a birdie-four. Johnson was even par at that stage of the match, then finished the last six holes five over par, but he managed to hang on with the help of Palmer's troublesome putter.

With Palmer anxious to get started for Augusta, Ga., where the Masters tournament opens Thursday, the players hustled through the 18 holes in five minutes under three hours.

A heavy, night-long rain was followed by a brilliant morning sunshine, but the course played very heavy and was water-logged in several spots. Both players were allowed to lift the ball on occasion.

They had tied Sunday after 72 holes with 282 totals in the $15,000 tournament.

UNC-Harvard Tennis Today, Yesterday's Match Halted

By ELLIOTT-COOPER

With the outcome of the match hanging in the balance, darkness halted the completion of the deciding two doubles matches, and the Carolina tennis team found itself holding the short end of a 6-5 score with the Harvard net team yesterday.

Due to a late start and an overcast sky, the match ends with an incomplete score. The Harvard squad racked up all their points in the nine singles matches. The Tar Heels won three singles matches and copped both of the doubles matches that were completed. Both teams go at each other again today with a desire to determine who actually should have won yesterday.

In the first six singles matches the two teams split the outcome. Steve Bank, Jeff Black, and Dick Makepeace won the three singles matches for the Tar Heels. Carolina fell in straight sets to Larry Sears. Harvard's Ned Weld and Fred Vinton each scored three set wins over Malcolm Clark and Ken Keys.

In the doubles matches that were finished Carolina teams of Bortner, Bank and Clerk, Keys were both victorious.

The marathon of yesterday's play was put on by Carolina's Jeff Black and his opponent Al Goldman. Both boys played tennis for better than two hours before Black won the third and deciding set by a 14-12 count.

Tomorrow the tennis team will wind up its pre-vacation schedule by tangling with a strong Illini squad from Champaign-Urbana, Illinois.

THE SUMMARY

Singles: Sears (H) defeated Bortner 6-4, 6-4. Bank (C) defeated Gallwey 6-3, 6-1. Black (C) defeated Goldman 4-6, 6-4, 14-12. Weld (H) defeated Clark 9-11, 6-3, 6-4. Vinton (H) defeated Keys 7-9, 6-2, 7-5. Makepeace (C) defeated Pratt 5-7, 6-0, 6-0. Cameron (H) defeated Lockett 6-3, 2-6, 6-3. Wood (H) defeated Mallins 6-1, 6-2. Chute (H) defeated Myres 6-4, 8-6.

Doubles: Bortner-Bank (C) defeated Gallwey-Vinton 6-1, 6-3. Clark-Keys (C) defeated Wood-Weld 6-4, 6-3. Black-Makepeace (C) vs Pratt-Cameron, and Myres-Mallins (C)vs Chute-Briggs called because of darkness.

Snead Has Edge In Masters Golf

AUGUSTA, Ga.—(AP)—A warm-up round of 67 stirred new interest yesterday in the "I Like Sam Snead" Club, but Sambo himself is playing it modest. He picks young Ken Venturi as the next Masters Golf champion.

"I've been having trouble with my irons for about five weeks," said the drawling slugger from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., "I can't get the ball close enough to the hole, and I can't buy a putt for love or money."

The man who can't approach or putt whipped around Augusta National's picturesque acres in 32-35-67, five under par, and sent a chilling wave through the ranks of the world's best golfers, who tee off in the 22nd Masters Tournament Thursday.

"I don't care what tournament it is, if you don't pick Snead you have got rocks in the head," said Jimmy Demaret, the only man besides Snead to win three Masters crowns.

"Don't worry, he will have his game collected by this weekend. He will take a lot of beating."

"I have to buy that," said Ed Furgol, the lane-armed former National Open champion. "You can never pick against Snead."

JONES GOES HOME

Atlanta (AP)-Former golfing champion Bob Jones went home form the hospital today after weekend treatment for what was described as a circulatory collapse.

His doctor said he expected that Jones would be able to go to Augusta for the Masters tournament which he helped found. The tournament starts Thursady.

The doctor recommended a couple of quiet days at home but saw no reason why Jones should not be able to resume his normal activities after that.

Dixie Classic Baseball Postponed, Carolina Plays Princeton Here Today

By RUSTY HAMMOND

The forces that be where the weather is made once again played havoc with sports in the Carolina's yesterday, as the opening day of the Dixie Classic baseball tourney featured wet grounds, rain, low temperatures and other assorted items causing the entire opening round slate to be moved back one day.

Carolina, who was to meet Princeton here yesterday in its initial bout of the affair, had to cancel the game and reschedule it for today at 3:30 on Emerson Field.

Other Games

Other games today around the state feature Lafayette at State, Connecticutt at Duke, and Massachusetts at Wake Forest. Tomorrow the scene shifts to Winston-Salem where all the rest of the games will be played on Ernie Shore Field, with two double headers Wednesday and Thursday.

The Tar Heels carry a 3-2 record into the tournament today, not counting a 7-7 tie with VPI last week which was called off after 10 innings because of darkness. The Heels squeaked by Ithaca College Saturday in their last outing.

Saturday's standouts were pitchers Ben Harding and Wayne Young who gave up only four hits between them, and second sacker Carson Oldham who scored one run and drove in another.

Coach Walter Rabb commented on the game thus. "I was very pleased with the pitching, and very disappointed in the hitting and men left on base. (The Tar Heels left ten stranded). I am satisfied with our defense which handled all situations well. The reason I took Young out when he had given up only one hit was to save him for the Classic; the same reason I took Charlie Aycock out against UPI."

This tourney is the third of a series which began in 1935, and was originated by Carolina's own Walter Rabb. No tournament was held last year so the Deacs from Baptist Hollow rank as the defending champions since they won the only two previous events. The will rank as co-favorites with Duke, last year's conference cropwholder.

The tourney shapes up as a wide-open affair. The four visiting schools ranked among the powers in their respective leagures last season while the Big Four schools comprised the top four finishers in the ACC race last year.

Trackmen Look Good In Florida

By DAVE WIBLE

Track moved to Florida this weekend where a squad of 13 Tar Heels participated in the Florida Relays with schools from all over the Southeast.

The competition was stiff, but the Heels made a good showing considering the rough luck they have had with the weather since moving outside.

The two-mile relay team placed second behind Florida State. The Carolina team clocked 7:57 which is considered very good. On the team were Everett Whatley, Neil Chappel, Wayne, Bishop and Cowles Llipfert. Coach Joe Holton who made the trip with the squad was very pleased with their running.

Carolina high jumper Wally Graham made some points for the squad when he tied for forth. Basketball star Ray Stanley broad jumped 22 feet 1 inch to gain fifth place in the meet.

Although they didn't place, Coach Hilton was pleased with the running of Lyndon Deborde in the high hurdler, and javlin man Clete Oakley. Debordet clocked 14.8 while Oakley threw 178 feet. Ward Sims made a fine 21 feet 1 inch broad jump which deserves attention.

Dave Scurlock is still recovering from a sprained ankle he suffered right after the indoor seson was closed. He is expected to be ready for the dual meet with South Carolina which will be next week.

The stranger running around the track in the UCLA uniform is Bob Seaman, one of the nations finest collegiate milers. Seaman has run the distance in 4:01.5, twice, both times at the Compton Relays in California.

He graduated at mid-term and decided to spend a few days working out here before he has to report to the service, at Norfolk.

'Pajama Party' Publicity Backfires; $1 Million Libel Suits Filed

By MARY ALYS VOORHEES

Carolina's widely-publicized fraternity "pajama party" at a Durham night spot, which was subject to an ABC raid, backfired on one of North Carolina's leading daily newspapers and the ABC inspector when slander and libel suits aggregating $1,000,000 were filed in Durham Superior Court yesterday.

Charging that his business and reputation had been greatly injured by "false, defamatory, libelous, slanderous and insinuating" statements, John (Jack) S. Hopkins, owner-operator of Jack's, popular nightery on the old Chapel Hill Road, filed for damages through his attorney, Daniel M. Williams Jr.

Named as defendants in separate suits were the Durham Herald Company, Inc., (publishers of the Durham Morning Herald and The Durham Sun) and John N. Buck, the ABC officer.

Each of the two suits asked for $250,000 actual damages and $250,000 punitive damages.

In a statement to The Daily Tar Heel, Lambda Chi President Curtis Fields explained that couples were dressed in Bermuda shorts with the girls wearing (over their clothes) night shirts which were given as favors at the pledge dance and that the boys were wearing pajamas over their clothes.

In the suit against Buck, the court was asked for execution against the person if punitive damages were not paid.

The litigation had its outgrowth when the Carolina chapter of Lambda Chi Alpha held an early morning breakfast party at Jack's in conjunction with their pledge weekend. Fraternity officials denied statements of any misconduct shortly after the first stories of the alleged raid were printed.

In each of the suits, Hopkins set forth the allegation that the statements made by Buck and printed by the Durham Herald Co. had ruined his business.

The suit against Buck charged him with the "slanderous" statements "made to a newspaper reporter when he knew or had reason to know, that they would be published in the newspapers owned and published by the Durham Herald Company."

Curtis Gans Wins Editorship Of The Daily Tar Heel

Don Furtado, Al Goldsmith In Runoff For Presidency

CURTIS GANS
New Editor Of The Daily Tar Heel

Waynesville Junior Cops 5-Way Newspaper Race

Curtis Gans from Waynesville was elected editor of The Daily Tar Heel in a five-way race here yesterday.

With returns still not complete at press time, Gans had pulled sufficiently ahead of the four other editorial candidates to assure his victory in the plurality contest.

He thus won one of the most important contests in spring elections in defeating Ann Frye, Pringle Pipkin, John Whitley and Charlie Sloan for the top newspaper post.

Running second to Gans was Pringle Pipkin, a Reidsville sophomore, whose lead in Town Men's II was not sufficient to combat the strength of Gans in most of the other precincts.

Gans will assume editorship of The Daily Tar Heel, replacing Doug Eisele from Statesville, immediately after spring holidays. Eisele will continue in the post until that time.

When returns first began to roll in at Graham Memorial elections headquarters, it looked like a nip and tuck battle all the way between Gans and Pipkin, but the Waynesville sophomore gradually pulled ahead as returns continued to pour in from the 11 precincts.

The winner was ahead in eight of 11 total precincts by press time, while still incomplete returns showed at least a majority support for Gans over Pipkins in two of the other three voting areas.

Gans' campagin called for "a provocative editorial page utilizing both divergent opinions as well as resources of the University faculty" in providing what he called the finest college newspaper in the nation.

"Editorials dealing at least 50 per cent with campus events will provide a proper balance, so that the editor realizes his responsibility to the campus as well as placing the campus within the world scope," he said.

Gans was the only one of the five candidates to be endorsed by a campus political party for the editorship race. Of the five, all but Whitley had won the endorsement of the Bi-Partisan Sslections Board.

The new editor, who this year had served as columnist for the Tar Heel, has spent a total three years on the campus newspaper and has other experience on the Asheville Citizen-Times and several metropolitan publications.

Carter Edged Out For Office Cummings Is Vice President

Al Goldsmith (UP) and Don Furtado (SP) were thrown into a runoff elections for president of the student body yesterday as neither gained a majority vote in the three-way race for the post.

Eliminated from the runoff contest — planned now to be held April 15 — was Bob Carter.

Unofficial returns from the total 11 precints showed Goldsmith with 1,189 votes against 959 for Furtado. Carter polled a total of 803 votes from the overall turnout of 2,951.

Ralph Cummings, last-minute Student Party candidate for vice president of the student body, walked away with not a decisive victory in that race in defeating his opponent, Jack Lawing.

Unofficial but complete returns also showed Paddy Wall as new student body secretary. There was no definite decision at press time as to whether Everett James or Charlie Gary would be the new student body treasurer.

Results of Tuesday's election promise another spirited campaign two weeks from now when Goldsmith and Furtado meet in the runoff election for student body president.

Political prognosticators had foretold before elections Tuesday that a runoff election as has now developed would pit the University and Student Party candidates. There was no speculation, however, as to who will claim victory in the runoff contest.

Victories of Cummings and Miss Wall gave the Student Party two key posts in next year's student government administrative offices, with the winner of the presidency still anybody's guess.

Following are the unofficial returns of voting in the presidential race:

Election Returns

Honor Council

At press time last night with the returns from the district unreported, Bob Cunningham (733), Hamp Lefler (697), and Jimmy Smalley (585) were ahead in the race for the three vacant Men's Honor Council seats.

The race for posts on the important campus judiciary body was hotly contested with twelve students vying for the vacant positions. Bob Matthews and Tom Rand were next in highest number of votes as of press time.

Head Cheerleader

Carter Jones, sophomore from Durham, was leading in the race for head cheerleader at 1:30 this morning.

Jones was leading his opponent, John Whitty, 1155 to 769. Votes from all districts except one had been counted up till this time.

Jones was running with University Party endorsement, and Whitty was supported by the Student Party.

NSA Co-Ordinator

Ed Levy, a junior from New Orleans, La., was elected National Student Association co-ordinator, to succeed Whit Whitfield, in yesterday's election. Levy ran for the post unopposed.

WAA Officers

At press time last night the following candidates were ahead in the election for posts on the Women's Athletic Association:

President, Miss Jo Carpenter; vice-president, Miss Martha Wilkinson; secretary, Miss Faye Williams; treasurer, Miss Lucy Pesgate; and Miss Ginny Pierce, awards chairman.

Results in this election from dorm women's district were unreported.

Women's Council

At press time last night with the returns from Dorm women's unreported, Misses Mary Cabell Carlan, Louise Crumbley, and Ginny Pearce were ahead in the race for three vacant seats on the Women's Honor Council.

As in the race for seats on the Men's Honor Council, this was a hotly contested election with eleven coeds running for the posts.

Misses Carlan and Pearce were tied for highest number of votes with 39 each.

Seniors Seem Near Tie Vote

The three-way race for president of the senior class seemed nearly a tie eaorly this morning. With nine of eleven districts reporting, Jeff Hare, UP candidate ,held a slim lead with an unofficial 203 votes. Jim Kelly, independent entry was running a close second with 191, followed by Tom Long, Student Party, who had 188.

Races for other senior class posts were similarly close, with counting yet to begin in two districts at press time.

UP Retains Solon Lead

The University Party gained the majority of seats in the Student Legislature as a result of yesterday's voting. One section, Dorm Men IV is to be recounted today.

The recount will not affect the University Party's majority as there are only four seats left in the balance. The UP had a 15 to 10 lead over the Student Party when the results were tallied last night.

Following is a list of the winning candidates. Town Men I, Joseph Warner (UP); Town Men II, Peyton Hawes (UP), Jimmy Williams (UP); Town Men III, Bill Crutchfield (UP), Tom Kenan (UP), Buddy Spoon (UP), Gordon Street (UP). Town Men IV, Bill Williams (UP).

Town Women, Margaret Boaz (UP Six Month Seat), Arnold Garvin (UP), Mary Hartzog (UP), Doug Kellam (UP).

Dorm Men I, Charlie Gray (UP), John Shinn (SP).

Dorm Men II, Dudy Edwards (SP), Walt Keck (SP), Paul Woodard (SP).

Dorm Men III, Davis Young (SP), Harold O'Tuel (SP).

Dorm Men IV, No returns.

Dorm Men V, Bill Porter (SP), Norman Smith (SP).

Dorm Women, Betty Kaye Johnson (SP), Holly Deifel (UP), Joyce Strickland (UP), Betty Zeh (SP six month seat).

Student Council

Eric Roper, Bob Bordon and Craven Brewer were elected to seats on the Student Council yesterday. Roper received 1386 votes, Bordon 1194 and Brewer 1071.

The race between Brewer and Don Millen was close, with Millen receiving 1037 votes to Brewers 1071.

Other candidates in the race were John Owens, with 948 and Walt Wilson with 951.

GM Full Of Smoke And Election Talk

BY PAUL RULE

"I don't see what good it does to stand there and stare at that blackboard. Nobody has written anything on it for a half-hour."

"Quiet," replied the harried looking candidate. "Something just moved."

"You're right. Somebody almost kicked the board over," returned his friend who was standing there to help carry him out of the room in case the next district reporting was as disaster.

Slowly faces, formerly distinct, faded from view as cigarette smoke began to swirl in heavier clouds.

Outside the small room of the fascinating blackboard, a multitude of curious onlookers milled about, seeming to have a purpose other than to complain as to how late the returns were coming in, how the rest of the crowd got in the way and how the smoke was so thick they could hardly see to light their cigarettes.

A few paces down the hall the Rendezvous Room, nerve center of this modern version of the burning of Rome, buzzed with activity. It was here that the real work was being done, the counting of ballots. Election officials scurried about, attempting frantically to regain order in a situation where any bystander was ready to admit all hope was lost.

While it could plainly be seen that if even a small fraction of the kibitzers were to help count, the returns would come in in record time, of course those pleading this cause had no chance of being heard above the din or being seen through the smoke.

Finally, a miracle: the last tally was rapidly scribbled on the blackboard. Candidates erupted from the smokey little room shouting, "I won it," while others lagged behind a moment, torn between a fast poison or running again next year.

Slowly the candidates, supporters, onlookers, babbling voices and smoke faded away. An attendant locked the door of Graham Memorial and the 1958 spring election came to an end.

Applications Invited For GMAB Posts

Application blanks for positions on the 1958-59 Graham Memorial Activities Board are available at the information office in Graham Memorial.

Positions open include officers, committee chairmen and committee members. Interviews will begin immediately after Easter vacation.

GMAB is the programming arm of Graham Memorial responsbile for co-sponsoring the Carolina Talent Show, Carolina Mardi Gras, Sound and Fury, Free Flicks, the Campus Calendar, the Petite Dramatiques, the Petite Musicals, the GMAB polls, dances, receptions and forums.

GMAB, which is operated entirely by students, has the sole responsibility to provide programs for the student body. With a budget of approximately $11,000, students have the opportunity to develop and present new and better ideas.

Legislature Meets Tonight

The Student Legislature will hold a special session today at 7 p.m. to discuss the student budget for 1958-59 Around $120,000 is expected to be appropriated for next year.

Don Furtado, vice president of the student body, said, "I urge all legislators to attend for this is certainly one of the most important sessions of the year. It is mandatory that we carefully appraise the financial needs of the various student organizations."

The meeting, to take place on the fourth floor of New East, will count as a regular session. All interested students have been invited to attend.

Musicale Set Sun., April 13

GMAB will present its seventh Petite Musicale of the spring semester, Sunday, April 13, in the main lounge of Graham Memorial.

The recital will begin at 8 p.m. and will feature William Leland, pianist from Jacksonville, Fla. Petites Musicales are free of charge and the public has been invited.

Leland is a native of Pennsylvania and studied at the Philadelphia Conservatory of Music on a scholarship and received a Bachelor of Music Degree. During a two-year term = the Army he did organ work and choral studies at the National Cathedral in Washington.

He then went to Jacksonville, Fla, where he continued his piano study with the late Hans Barth, distinguished pianist, pedagogue and composer.

At his recital Leland will feature Barth's Ninth Sonata, composed in 1956. He will also perform the Beethoven "Waldstein" Sonata, in C major, Op. 53; two sonatas, in E major and D major, of Domenico Scarlatti; Chopin's Waltz in E minor; Debussy's Claire de Lune; and Schumann's Toccata in C major.

Leland is at present organist and choir director of St. John's Cathedral in Jacksonville. He has concertized widely in New Jersey and has given recitals in Philadelphia and in Jacksonville.

Business And Law Students Aid Available

Dean Fred Weaver announced Friday that he has scholarship information for prospective law school students and graduate business school students.

He has one $900 scholarship available for a UNC student at the University of Chicago Law School.

Students who are planning to attend graduate business school at Harvard and are interested in scholarships are also urged to contact Weaver.

He said he also has information on New York University Law School and other law schools in the country.

When We've Helped Man, Only Then Have We Lived

By now a new editor has been elected for The Daily Tar Heel. We wish him the best of luck and good hopes for the future in a job which will repay him a thousand times over.

It's a position hard to define, this job as editor of a campus newspaper, because it entails so much which hardly is included in the six-lettered title which the editor wears. You can try, but you cannot succeed in defining the editorship.

With the post come meetings to attend, banquets at which to be present: committees which include your membership and participation in sundry campus affairs. There are columns to write, letters to answer, and the daily task of seeing to the publication of a newspaper.

But greater than all these experiences combined and more fruitful to the editor than any other of his many considerations are the contacts which he has with people—all kinds of people—with whom he is acquainted through his position.

There are angered campus leaders and offended University officials who come to defend their policies, their practices, and their institutions.

There are once young, still kindly ladies and middle-aged gentlemen who come to bring you letters, to ask advice from one who is less tempered, yet, he thinks, more informed about the ways of life.

There are friends unknown 'til now, who invite you out to dinner where you talk of campus affairs and worldly problems—but mostly where you eat tasty foods and drink hot coffee and enjoy the hospitality of your new-made acquaintance.

There are newly-discovered faculty members who work dilligently and closely with you in student-University projects which contribute so much to the minds of the young, which bolster democracy through free thought and free expression.

There are fraternity men and dormitory men, rich and poor, people of different races and varying creeds, coeds and visitors, high school students and old alumni—all of these come to see the editor.

You cannot, in a column, measure or define the many whom the editor comes to know in his brief tenure as head of a campus newspaper. Nor can you give justice to those people and the effect they have on one who sees the world slip by on yellow paper and dirty printer's ink.

You only can define these things in terms of the future, in terms of how they will help to mold the character of a struggling college boy who stops long enough to give a second of his life to his heart and to his campus, hoping that the world will be a little better for his efforts.

Somehow, that is all that matters anyway—using all we know and all we are and all we learn to make life a little more enjoyable, somewhat fairer, for those whose footsteps shall erase our own at some hour yet to come.

When we have done this—when we have used our talents to help the less endowed—then we have lived as we were meant to live. And people, we will find, shall have played the greatest role of all.

J.Y.'S JAZZ

Jazz World Mourns Loss Of W. C. Handy

W. C. Handy, who gained world renown through his compositions among which were the "St. Louis Blues" and the "Memphis Blues," died last Friday morning. He was eighty-four years old, and could not withstand the pressures of acute bronchial pneumonia.

The loss of W. C. Handy is more than the loss of a man; it is the loss of something very American, for W. C. Handy was the spirit of jazz. His music has been played by countless musicians, good and bad, and loved by millions more.

He was blind during the last years of his life, but this did not stop the boundless energy, the boundless kindness that was so much a part of his being. He radiated a spirit that few have been able to equal, a spirit that can only be described as the spirit of jazz.

In 1954 Louis Armstrong recorded a number of Handy's most beloved tunes for Columbia Records. The record sold extremely well, and it is said that, when the master tapes were played for him, Handy cried. So much did he love this music, and those who played it, that he cried.

How many people will cry upon learning of this man's death? I venture that the number is small. For W. C. Handy lapsed into obscurity during the last few years of his life. Occasionally he would return to the bright lights which had brought him fame and fortune, but most of the time he spent in his modest home in Yonkers living the quiet life of a happy man.

Audio Archives released a record called "The Father of the Blues" a few years ago. It was not a great record, but it was a moving personal document. For one hour Handy talked of his life, his songs, his music. His daughter sang the "St. Louis Blues," and he played the other songs on his beloved trumpet. The record is now very difficult to obtain. Perhaps his death will bring about a reissue; the record companies are always quick to hop on events of this character.

Though W. C. Handy is dead, his music and his spirit will long live. On stands in San Francisco, in Chicago, in Atlanta, in New York, in every town in the country, his music is played. It is played by Dave Brubeck and Louis Armstrong, by Miles Davis and Kid Ory, by Dizzy Gillespie and Bob Crosby. His is a music of America, a music that can only be described by the adjective American.

It has been a long time since W. C. Handy was born. In that time jazz has come a long way, as has American. W. C. Handy has died—may he rest in peace.

What Will New Editor Discuss

By WHIT WHITFIELD

At the time of this writing the editorship of the Tar Heel has not been decided, which means that we can feel reasonably safe, at least for the time being, in giving you some idea of what the new editorial page will be like.

In order to do this we will attempt to write as synopsis of the lead editorial as written by each of the candidates following the election.

By the time that you read this the issue will have been decided, and it will be too late to change your minds, and, if it makes any difference, this may be our last column, depending upon the sense of humor of our newly elected boss. (In order to circumvent this probability we organized a write-in campaign for ourselves on Tuesday noon, but to little avail.)

So, here they are:

Candidate No. 1: As we see it, the fluctuating economic crisis in Afghanistan has left indelible impressions on the Far Eastern market, causing gold bullion reserves, which, before the crisis were at a premium, are now directly affecting the educational system of the United States. In order to combat this, all schools, by act of Congress, will remain open 24 hours per day.

Candidate No. 2: We understand that the Japanese silk worm has undergone an exasperating experience this past winter, thereby causing the price of imported women's unmentionables and negligees to rise to unprecedented heights. New York buyers and designers are uniting to combat the rising prices by substituting woolen garments (those scratchy old things) for the finer silks.

Candidate No. 3: We are thinking about instituting a series of changes in the mechanics of this newspaper. However, we cannot quite ascertain what the basic problems are. As a matter of fact, we have lost our typewriters. As soon as we understand the problems we will pass them on to you.

Candidate No. 4: Our stringer system is working fine. After only one day, we have uncovered attempts to have a beer party in one of the dorm social rooms, have found out that one of the dorm presidents is engaged, and uncovered a plot to assassinate Grover Cleveland. Very fine work, boys.

Candidate No. 5: As I said before the election, the editor should think first of the students and their problems. There are many problems which need investigation and consideration, and as soon as I become aware of these problems I will exert every effort to provide provocative controversy. If any one knows of any problems, please notify me at the Tar Heel office. Thank you.

Editor Airs Need For Teachers' Pay Raises

"There is nothing wrong with American education that substantial raises in teachers' pay would not correct." So stated Cal Tech Professor Harrison Brown on February 23, 1958, on the television program, "The Great Challenge."

On the next day, February 24, the Visiting Committee of the Consolidated University of North Carolina reported to the Board of Trustees: "Over the last 50 years, salaries of professors in large universities have increased, in relation to purchasing power, less than two per cent, while the wages of coal miners, automobile workers, electric machinery workers, and telephone operators have increased more than 100 per cent. Fifty years ago an assistant professor earned 15 per cent more than railroad conductors and 77 per cent more than firemen. Today, an assistant professor is 20 per cent behind conductors and 10 per cent behind firemen."

The above comparison should show that, even with the small increase granted by the 1957 Legislature, teachers' salaries offer little encouragement to a man to enter the teaching profession.

Dr. R. J. Monroe, a member of the Faculty Senate at State, has stated that there is "an increasing tendency in North Carolina to identify efficient education as low-cost education."

And Dr. W. W. Austin, Jr., Faculty Senate Chairman, referring to the fact that many highly trained persons elect to teach at salaries substantially less than they could command in business and industry said, "The biggest scholarship program of all is underwritten by faculty members all over the United States."

Speaking of the rising pay schedules for faculty personnel in other colleges and universities in the nation and the resulting loss of North Carolina professors, the Visiting Committee told the Board of Trustees that the Consolidated University "has made some gains, but continues to suffer a long-run loss." "Our position," they continue, 'in 1959 could be worse than it was for 1957."

When professors see railroad conductors drawing a better salary than they draw, when they see some of their students offered starting salaries higher than their present salary, and when they receive offers from industry to work for two-three, or four times as much as they are now receiving in the teaching profession, it is easy to see why we continue to suffer "a long-run loss' in the quality of instruction.

With the Russian threat slowly turning from a nuclear attack to an attack on the economic and capitalistic system which has made our country great, are we to let the Russians beat us at our own game? They are rapidly doing so by employing capitalistic principles in their teaching profession.

As most of us plan to live and work in North Carolina and thus have a vital interest in its growth and prosperity, are we going to sit back and watch colleges in other states slowly steal our best teaching brains? Higher salaries in other states are doing exactly that right now.

Will the proposed "Research Triangle" be able to offer the high quality of "brainpower" that will attract industry to our state, or will there be another "research triangle" in some other state by then that has, by offering higher salaries, attracted better brains than are available in North Carolina?

Are we, as individuals, content with knowing that other college students are receiving a higher quality of education than we are, just because we live in North Carolina?

These questions are important to you and to me—they must be answered . . . soon . . . and with action.

Governor Hodges recently said that North Carolina must be ready to spend "more than it can afford" for education.

It is becoming alarmingly apparent that the time to do this is now, and that, for the sake of the state and the individuals who make up the state, we simply cannot afford not to do so.—The Technician.

SOUNDS PRETTY, BUT—

'Ban' Is Only Propaganda

Mr. Durham called it phony,
And surely Ike agreed.
We would call it rubbish
And hope the leaders heed.

The Red 'test' proposal's dandy,
But it's merely propagandy.

First they met at London,
To air the arming race.
Talks balked, they came to us,
But failed the second place.

The Russians, they did shout,
But they kept on walking out.

Now they're in the light again,
This time the A-bomb test.
"We'll stop ours, you stop yours"
(You fools from nations west).

We would do it by and by
If the Russians didn't lie.

Turn your head and show your face,
You Russian hypocrites.
Let us see behind the mask
Where contemptuous planning sits.

Let us see the smile
That us would soon beguile.

The proposal's surely dandy,
But it's merely propagandy.

You Can Assist Orientation Unit

If you want to make a significant contribution to the campus, sign up for counselor on the orientation groups which will indoctrinate freshmen at UNC in the fall.

Here is an opportunity for every student—coed and Carolina gentleman—who will have a few extra days before classes start in the fall, to make a small but important contribution to a most important segment of campus life.

So if you have the time, add your name to the list of those who already have illustrated their interest in the counseling program. You'll be glad you did.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The Case For Pay TV

In the current session of Congress, hearings have been going on to determine whether the lawmakers should recommend subscription television. The ludicrous thing about these hearings is that they are being held at all. Why must it be left to Congress to determine whether free enterprise shall be allowed to function in the United States?

At the core of the hearing are vested interests in communications, who have presented voluminous testimony against pay TV, a plan under which one or more broadcasting stations could be set up, their programs to be paid for by viewers.

In the name of free enterprise, we see no reason why pay TV should not be allowed to try its wings. Let the public decide after fair trial whether one system is better than the other. If by any remote chance pay TV became so much more desired as to cause sponsored TV to founder, wouldn't that be a natural consequence of fair competition?

Nobody now is lamenting the demise of the horse and buggy. But if some federal edict, made at the behest of the horse and buggy industry, had prevented the development of the automobile, what would have happened to American progress?

The auto won out over old Dobbin by the judgment of the public. Pay TV might or might not win out over sponsored TV under public judgment. That remains to be seen. But it's a pretty sure thing that the quality of the TV menu would be improved. As horse and buggy transportation lost the race to the auto, perhaps horse-opera TV will risk losing the home entertainment race, unless it can give the public the quality it wants, deserves, and is willing to pay for.—Boulder, Colo. Camera

Desegregation At UNC Is Topic For Meeting

A growing tendency to regard students as students regardless of race, creed or color at UNC was claimed by a student panel which evaluated five years of desegregation on the Chapel Hill campus last Thursday.

The panel discussion was held at the meeting of the Chapel Hill Fellowship for School Integration and was chaired by Professor Lee Brooks.

One panel member underlined this conclusion when he said that he has been treated like and feels like "any other student on the campus." He is Thal Elliott, a Negro enrolled here as a pre-medical student.

While Martha Richardson, graduate student in religion pointed out that there still seemed some reluctance on the part of Negro women to apply for admission to the University—or on the part of the Admissions Office to accept their applications—Sonny Evans, president of the student body, gave several examples of acceptance of Negro students by their fellows on the campus.

The rights of Negro students to sit in the student section at ball games, to use the gym and pool facilities and to eat in Lenoir Hall have been staunchly and successfully upheld by the student body, Evans said. Recently, Evans stated, there have been conferences with fraternities and sororities aimed at persuading them to remove discriminatory clauses in their membership rules.

Evans reported that the results of a student committee study on what it is like to be a Negro at UNC will be published soon and will contain a cross-section of opinion obtained by many interviews with students, faculty members and townspeople. Other areas where much improvement remains to be accomplished, according to the panel are in admissions procedure and the use of downtown facilities, such as movies and restaurants.

S. P. Ponnampalam, a graduate student in public health from Ceylon, made the point that it is a shock to foreign students to find so much racial discrimination in democratic America.

He referred to the caste system which prevails in many parts of the world as affecting a person's choice of companions whom he would invite to his home, but as being of no consequence in public matters such as transportation, eating establishments, theaters, etc. He said that finding segregated facilities in Memorial Hospital had astonished him.

Students Hurt In Wreck Here

Robert Moseley, senior from Greensboro, and James Thomas Madison, junior from Statesville, are in Memorial Hospital as a result of wreck early Tuesday morning.

Both are reported to be in "fair condition" by the hospital. They have lacerations about the face and head.

The wreck occurred when their car, a 1957 Chevrolet driven by Madison, failed to make a curve on East Cameron Street behind the Forest Theatre. The car hit a tree on the opposite side of the street.

The time of the accident was about 1:30 a.m.

Police investigation is incomplete at this time. No charges have been made.

Madison's father said that the car was a complete loss.

Petites Dramatiques Schedules Anouilh's 'Antigone' April 12-13

The "Antigone" of Jean Anouilh will be presented Saturday and Sunday night, April 12 and 13 at 8 o'clock in Gerrard Hall.

This play will be the third presentation of Les Petites Dramatiques this year. Taken from the classical tragedy of Sophocles, this play tells the story of a girl who rebels against the edict of her uncle, the king, and buries her traiterous brother.

From this act there develops a series of tragic incidents, which affect the lives of all the characters.

Starring as Antigone, the rebellious princess, will be Amanda Meiggs, who played the role of St. Jean earlier this year in "The Lark," another play by Jean Anouilh. Creon, the king, who has been trapped by his duty, will be William Dixon, seen earlier in "These Cornfields."

Taylor Williams will portray the cynical Chorus, and Harold Williamson will be Haemon, Antigone's fiancee.

Others in the cast are Beau Ryan as Ismene, Lucy Ann Dunlap as the nurse, Ken Callendar as Captain Jonas, John Whitty as the messenger, Barbara Dixon as Queen Euridice, and John Steed and William Pfefferkorn as the guards.

No admission will be charged.

Orientation Counselors

Orientation blanks are now available for men students who wish to apply for fall Orientation counselorship. The applications along with study manuals may be secured and turned in at any of the following places: Lenoir Hall, the Y-MCA, Graham Memorial and the Library.

The Orientation Committee will begin selecting approximately 150 counselors on April 15 at 7 p. m. when a test to all applicants will be administered in room 203 Venable. Individual interviews will be held April 16-23. Applicants will be notified by campus mail when their interview is scheduled.

'We Like Sack Sacks'

NEW STYLE?—Some of the girls in Miller Hall decided to kill two birds with one stone this week—step the new styles and turn out Easter finery. The girls recommend the feed sacks, available at the Farmers' Cooperative Exchange, as being the best material for sack dresses. Some of the girls complain that burlap is scratchy though, and seems permeated with an odor that can only be described as "eau de barn." The trio is, from left to right, Mary Nies, Delores Edwards and Hazel Logan.

A Very Special Easter Egg . . .

If you have to leave your love behind when you head home tomorrow—here's a gift that will soothe and please her before you leave. SUTTON'S DRUG STORE has pink or blue Easter Eggs by Elizabeth Arden. They're soft and fuzzy to feel with a delicate spray of flowers on top of the egg, and inside is a bottle of her favorite Elizabeth Arden cologne.

They're pretty, feminine and not at all expensive.

Shoes, Shoes And More Shoes

For most of the gals, Easter just wouldn't be Easter without at least one pair of new shoes. For my money there is only one place to go for shoes—and that's to ALEXANDER'S SHOE STORE.

ALEXANDER'S has the latest styles in more varieties and sizes than you can find elsewhere.

Go over before you start home and then you'll know that you will be set in a good-looking shoe for Easter Sunday.

Don't overlook the selection of bright new bows and flowers that will add zest to your new shoes or can rejuvenate last year's tired ones.

Heels Tame Tigers; Advance In Classic

By RUSTY HAMMOND

The Carolina Tar Heels advanced to the winners bracket of the second round of the Dixie Classic here yesterday by taming the Princeton Tigers 9-4 on a 13-hit attack and 1-hit pitching by Wayne Young.

The Tar Heels will face Connecticutt, who beat Duke yesterday 3-2, tonight at 8:15 on Ernie Shore Field in Winston- Salem.

Young Pockets Win

Carolina experimented with three different pitchers before hitting on the right combination in the fourth inning. Wayne Young came on with 2 out and the bases loaded to strike out Princeton's Garrett Thrasher and quell the uprising. Young gave up only one hit, a scratch single in the eighth, the rest of the way. When Young entered the fray, the score was knotted at four apiece, so he gains credit for the win.

Carolina struck first in the game with three counters in the home half of the first. Four straight singles by Carson Oldham, John Burgwyn, Al Poss, and Bruce Crump accounted for the runs.

Princeton came right back in its portion of the second with two of its own. Thrasher lashed a triple and scored on Dale Casto's single, then stroked a single and scored on a fielder's choice.

Griffin Homers

The Heels picked up another in the third when center fielder Gerald Griffin crashed a long shot into deep left-center for a home run. Griffin went 3 for 4 in a good day's work. The Tigers tied all up in the fourth on three walks, two sacrifices and an error, before Young came in to stop the presses. Carolina hit for three more in the fifth on two singles, two walks and two errors. The Tar Heels clinched it in the seventh with two insurance runs.

Netters Take 8-7 Win Over Harvard Squad

By ELLIOTT COOPER

The Carolina and Harvard tennis teams played it right down to the wire again yesterday before the Tar Heels won the final doubles match and took an 8-7 victory over the visitors from Cambridge, Massachusetts.

The deciding match yesterday was the doubles contest between the Tar Heel team of Malcolm Clark and Ben Keys and the Harvard twosome of Tim Gallwey and Fred Vinton. After spliting the first two sets, the Carolina pair rallied to pull out a 6-4 win in the third set and gave the Tar Heels their second win of the season.

The feature of the single matches yesterday was Dale Junta's come-from-behind victory over Tar Heel captain Bob Bortner. Bortner took the first set from the Harvard star 10-8 and then lost the next set by a 6-4 count. In the final set Junta was down 5-3 before he rallied and took four straight games and the match. Junta was bothered during the entire match by a bad back which had kept him out of Monday's lineup.

Carolina number two man Steve Bank lost his first match of the year to Larry Sears who took the match in straight sets 6-3, 6-1. Tar Heel Jeff Black won his second match in as many days by taking Tim Gallwey 3-6, 6-3, 6-2. Malcolm Clark and Ben Keys, both losers Monday, came back yesterday to win their matches. In the sixth singles match, Harvard's Fred Vinton overpowered Dick Makepeace in two sets.

In the doubles matches the Tar Heels copped the necessary three out of four required for victory in the overall score. Singles losers Bortner and Bank combined to win their doubles match in straight sets.

Ham Strayhorn's netters go after win number three this afternoon when the team entertains Illinois on the home courts at 3 'oclock.

THE SUMMARY

Singles: Junta (H) defeated Bortner 8-10, 6-4, 7-5. Sears (H) defeated Bank 6-3, 6-1. Black (C) defeated Gallwey 3-6, 6-3, 6-2. Clark (C) defeated Goldman 6-1, 2-6, 7-5. Keys (C) defeated Weld 6-4, 6-4. Vinton (H) defeated Makepeace 6-3, 6-3. Happer (C) defeated Pratt 6-2, 6-2. Cameron (H) defeated Myers 6-3, 6-1. Wood (H) defeated Lockett 6-3, 6-1. Mallins (C) defeated Chute 6-4, 2-6, 6-3. Briggs (H) defeated Steward 6-3, 6-2.

Doubles: Bortner-Bank (C) defeated Goldman-Sears 6-2, 6-3. Clark-Keys (C) defeated Gallwey-Vinton 6-3, 2-6, 6-4. Black-Makepeace (C) defeated Wood-Weld 6-4, 7-5. Cameron-Pratt (H) defeated Lockett-Happer 6-4, 6-3.

Golfers Tackle Virginia Today

The Carolina varsity golf team swings into action this afternoon when it plays host to the Cavaliers club-swingers from Virginia.

This will be second match for the Tar Heels who opened their season by defeating Princeton 20-16 Monday at Fayetteville. The match was scheduled to be played here but moved to the Highland Country Club in Fayetteville because of a wet course.

Today's match will probably feature the same Carolina men that met Princeton. Lettermen Bill Thornton, Tom Langley, Gene Lookabill, and Bob Ruffin played in that order followed by newcomers John McKee, Joe Callicott, Charlie Erdman, and Charlie Grey.

Tom Langley had the right touch against Princeton and finished low for the afternoon with a two under par 70. His opponent, Goring was low for Princeton with 71.

THE SUMMARY

Thornton (C) defeated Long 3-0, Langley (C) defeated Goring 2-1. Princeton 2½, Carolina ½.

Lookabill (C) defeated Kunz 2-1. Kern (P) defeated Ruffin 2½-½. Princeton 2, Carolina 1.

McKee (C) defeated Johnson 3-0, Callicott (C) defeated Molloy 2½-½. Carolina 3, Princeton 0.

Erdman (C) defeated Fanburg 2-1. Angus (P) defeated Grey 3-0. Princeton 2½, Carolina ½.

Medalist: Carolina, Langley 70; Princeton, Goring 71.

Final Score: Carolina 20, Princeton 16.

Carolina Track Team Invades Clemson College For Meet Today

By DAVE WIBLE

Just returned from a trip to Florida, the Carolina track team moves south again, this time to Clemson College where it will have a dual meet with the Clemson Tigers this afternoon.

The meet was scheduled for tomorrow, but was moved up because of the holidays. It will be the first dual meet of the season for the Tar Heels. Twice last week they were rained out of a meet with State.

Clemson Tough

It will be the first time these two teams have met in dual competition for several years. Clemson is sporting a strong squad this year and should make it tough on the Heels especially since Carolina's star Dave Scurlock will be out of the running. Scurlock is sitting out a sprained ankle but hopes to be ready for the South Carolina meet which will be a week from Saturday.

The Tar Heels still have plenty of power left, especially in the distance running events. Milers Everett Whatley and Cowles Llipfert, and 2-milers Wayne Bishop and Fick Arthur are among the best in the conference.

In the dashes, the Heels are not hurting with footballers Jim Varnum and Emil Decastis. In the hurdle events, Lyndon Debord, Charlie Sowers, Lou Glascock and Ward Sims can make it tough for any team.

With Scurlock out of the 440 and 880 Carolina will be depending on John Fox, Joe Friedberg and Doug Henderson for the 440, and Howard Kahn, Neil Chappell, and Frank Siriani in the 880.

High Jumpers Look Good

Basketball players Wally Graham and Ray Stanley have been looking good in the high jump this season. Graham placed fifth in the Florida Relays Saturdays. Stanley goes for length too and broad jumps. He made a fine 22 feet 1 inch jump Saturday.

Rounding out the field events will be pole vaulter Ward Sims, discus man Frazier Smith, and javelin man Clete Oakley. Footballer Don Kemper will throw the shot.

The freshman are staying home and will have a triangular meet with Chowan Junior College and Cranbrook Prep School here today.

Like the varsity, they too have power in the distance events. Worth Sweet and Harry Miller have looked very good for the Tar Babies all through cross-country and indoor track. Both double up on the 2-mile.

Freshman Play Opener Today

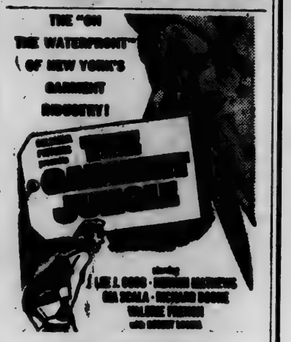
Carolina's freshman baseball squad, the Tar Babies, will play their first game of the season today when they meet Presbyterian Junior College here on Emerson Field at 3:30.

It will be the first chance coach Pat Earey will have to take a good look at his squad which has been hit hard by the weather for the past three weeks.

Coach Earey said that he will probably use two pitchers today, freshman basketball star Bob Deaton and Russ Hoke. Catching will be Carol Bolick.

Going around the horn will be John Stott at first, Ferg Norton at second, Bud Ellerby at shortstop, and Tommy Camp at third.

In the outfield will be Dee Frady in left, Dickie Hord in center, and Joe Grimsley in right.



Tomorrow, the Tar Babies will return the favor and travel to Presbyterian for a game there. Friday Chowan College will play the yearlings here.

Dixie Classic Results

Duke was the only Big Four team who didn't come through with a win yesterday in the opening round of the Dixie Baseball Classic. Carolina beat Princeton 9-4; State overwhelmed Lafayette 13-7; Wake Forest whipped Massachusetts 5-1; and Connecticut edged Duke, 3-2. Carolina faces Connecticut in the winners bracket tonight at 8:15 in Winston-Salem.

Clemson Names Brennan To All-Opponent Team

Clemson, S. C. (AP) — Pete Brennan of North Carolina was the only unanimous selection on Clemson's all-opponent basketball team. Others on the team were Lou Pucillo, South Carolina guard; Bob Vernon, Duke; Dick Hemric, Duke; and Paul Atkins, Virginia and Jack Kvancyz, Alabama, tied for the fifth place.

Sticklers!

BON VOYAGE presents? You might give a substantial checking account in the Left Bank of Paris. A deck of cards for playing London Bridge. Or walking shoes in which to Rome Italy. Better yet, give Luckies—and make your present a Partin' Carton! A Lucky, after all, is the best-tasting cigarette anywhere. In Paris you hear, "Un Luckee? C'est merveilleux!" (That's French!) Roughly translated, it means: it's all fine, light, good-tasting tobacco, toasted to taste even better. (That's advertising!) Just light up a Lucky and see for yourself! (Now, that's smart!)

Stuck for dough? START STICKLING! MAKE $25

We'll pay $25 for every Stickler we print—and for hundreds more that never get used! So start Stickling—they're so easy you can think of dozens in seconds! Sticklers are simple riddles with two-word rhyming answers. Both words must have the same number of syllables. (Don't do drawings.) Send 'em all with your name, address, college and class to Happy-Joe-Lucky, Box 67A, Mount Vernon, N. Y.

Student Solons Pass Budget For Next Year

By PRINGLE PIPKIN

A special session of the 24th assembly of the Student Legislature devoted a majority of its time last night to take action on a $121,000 budget for the coming school year.

The mony for the budget is provided for by part of the student block fees paid at the beginning of each semester. The budget was figured on anticipated enrollment of 5,400 undergraduates and 1,925 graduates and professional school students.

An appropriation of $200 to the University Club for confetti raised some questions. Al Goldsmith (UP) amended the appropriation to read $125 for this item.

At the suggestion of Dave Jones, president of the University Club, Goldsmith added a $75 president's discretionary fund and $50 to cover the rent of office space.

This amendment was passed to give the University Club a budget of $725. The function of this club is to provide pep rallys, bonfires and other spirit raising measures.

Quarterly Budget Attacked

A grant of $1,900 to the Carolina Quarterly was attacked by Ralph Cummings (SP) on the grounds that student participation on the magazine did not justify such a large amount.

Harold O'Tuel (SP), chairman of the Publications Board, defended this appropriation and said that it was widely read off campus and was among the top three magazines of its type in this country. The appropriation was not changed.

Graham Memorial Student Union got $41,752, the largest amount of student fees received by any one organziation.

The Daily Tar Heel will operate on a budget of $43.306.70, of which $20,306.70 will be student fees. The Yackety Yack will get $29,095 from the Student Legislature.

Some of the other organizations to get student fees were: the executive branch of the student government, $9.342; the Carolina Forum, $1,875; the Forensic Council $1,945; And the exchange scholarship program, $1,700 the IDC, $1,500; the Carolina Handbook, $2,380; the Rani and Ewe, $750, the band, $1,025; the Men's Glee Club, $1,000; the legislative branch of the student government, $610;

Also the Carolina Symposium, $300; the Graduate Club, $180; the student government self-help scholarship, $200; and the Independent Women's Council, $295.

And the Consolidated University Student Council, $260; the UNC State Student Legislature, $170; and the Campus Chest, $125.

UP Controls Legislature & Class Officer Voting

By JOHN WHITLEY

Final balloting returns today revealed an almost complete victory for the University Party in this year's spring elections. Official tallies by the election board gave the political party a majority in the student legislature, a clean sweep of the senior class officers, head cheerleaders and student body treasurer.

Only one office—president of the student body—hung in the balance, and there too, UP's candidate led the voting.

Final results today gave Jeff Hare (UP), 387, the senior class presidency over Tom Long (SP), 265, and Independent Jim Kelly, 235.

"I am very happy and proud to have been chosen president of senior class," asserted Hare. "I think we have a fine slate of officers, and I am sure that we will serve the class to the best of our abilities."

Hamp Lefler defeated James Pittman 589 to 289 for vice president. Betty Root edged out Susan Campbell 469 to 401 for secretary. Only candidate for treasurer was John Whitaker. Susan Arnold will be social chairman of next year's class, winning over Betty Kaye Johnson by 476 to 410.

Official returns regarding the student body officers showed that Al Goldsmith (UP) held a slight plurality, 1182 to 976, over Don Furtado (SP) for the presidency. The runoff contest is slated for April 15.

Vice-President Ralph Cummings (SP) gained his office by claiming 1632 votes to (UP) Jack Lawing's 1252. New student body secretary is Paddy Wall (SP) who defeated Martha Wilkinson (UP) by 1747 to 1084.

Treasurer of the student body is Charlie Gray (UP) 1448, who won over Everette James (SP), 1424.

Student Council

Bob Bordon 1194, Don Miller 1137, and Eric Roper 1296 filled the three vacant Student Council seats, defeating Craven Brewer 1081, John Ownes 948, and Walt Wilson 930.

Men's Honor Council

Three posts on the Men's Honor Council were filled by Bob Cunningham, Hamp Lefler and Jimmy Smalley, with 866, 746, and 618 votes, respectively.

Nine others defeated were Dick Cashwell (443), Francis Craighil (245), Billy Dunlap (289), Paul Fuller (404), Louis Gump (281) Jim Jordan (340), Bob Mathews (533), Tom Rand (498), and Jack Raper (447).

Women's Honor Council

Of eleven girls running for three seats in the Women's Honor Council, the winners were Louise Crumbbley (187), Lucy Forsyth (179), and Ginny Pearce (192). Mary Cabell Carlan (171), Lynne Courtney (140), Mailly Davis (140), Sue Donisthorpe (137), Mary Ann Keith (123), Susan Purser (133), Jean Syer (79), and Marty Taylor (128) were their opponents.

Head Cheerleader

Carter Jones (UP) will be head cheerleader next year. Jones defeated John Whitty (SP) by 1469 to 937. Single candidates ran for the positions of National Student Association co-ordinator, Yackety-Yack Editor, and Carolina Athletic Association President; Ed Levy, Robert Cooke, and Wayne Bishop, respectively.

WAA Officers

New president of the Women's Athletic Assoc. is Jo Carpenter winning over Ju Ju Stokes by 336 to 176. Vice president is Martha Wilkinson who collected 280 votes to Sue Donisthorpe's 234. Secretary of WAA is Ka Smith (222), who led Sara Owen (136).

WAA treasurer is Lucy Posgate, Pearce, who overcame Pat Jones, 379 to 115.

Women's Residence Council

Heading the Women's Residence Council for next year will be Lillian Shannonhouse who won with 179 voes. Her opponents were Ann Harvey (157), Allene Keith (77) and Cynthia Thompson (120).

Legislature

University Party Candidates captured the majority of vacant legislature seats in Tuesday's election, filling 16 of 29 possible positions.

In Dorm Men's IV, which was recounted today, Donald Rowe (SP) Otto Funderburk (SP) and David Grigg (UP) were elected.

Bob Carter Releases Statement On Election

Bob Carter, who was eliminated from the runoff contest for president of the student body, released the following statement to the Daily Tar Heel Wednesday.

"I would like to take the opportunity to thank from the bottom of my heart all the students who voted for me in Tuesday's election. It is most gratifying to know that so many people felt as they did toward me and would have wanted me to be president.

"The campaign was a most wonderful experience for me and I feel that I gained many friends and much knowledge from it.

"I also think more people are aware of our student government problems and issues because of such a spirited campaign. This was one thing I hoped to do as an independent candidate and I feel I succeeded.

"Student Government is going to face a big year ahead and it is going to have a big year. We still have two very good candidates from which to choose. We who are interested in student government will be backing the president, no matter who he is, to see that is done.

"Again I say thanks to all my supporters for the faith you had and expressed for me."

ALMA GRAHAM, a UNC senior from Raleigh, has won the coveted Woodrow Wilson Fellowship for a year's graduate study at Columbia University. The overall stipend of $1,400, supplied by the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation, will be further bolstered by tuition and dependency allowances from the foundation. The Wilson awards are made to students who plan to teach in college.

UNC Testing Service To Offer Proficiency Tests In English

The University Testing Service is again giving sophomore English proficiency tests.

Last semester the proficiency tests were offered free to all sophomore, in a choice of four evenings. People who didn't take the test were given the test later at a cost of $2.

The tests are being offered again at the same price. The tests will be offered at this price until April 9. Those failing to take the test by them will be charged $4.

If students were unable to take the test before and have a good excuse, they are to contact Dean Johnson's office room 308 South Building.

Also, if any have not received notice to take the test and think they should, they are to contact Dean Johnson's office.

It is necessary to complete the test before transfering to upper college or before pre-registering for the summer or fall semester. The pre-registration dates will be May 7-14.

Tar Heel Staff Meet

Current staff members and those interested in joining The Daily Tar Heel are urged to be present at a staff meeting in the paper's Graham Memorial offices Tuesday afternoon.

Curtis Gans, new editor, said the meeting will begin at 4 p. m. He particularly urged the presence of those currently associated with the newspaper.

Monday Bridge Game Winners Are Named

A pre-Easter crowd of nine tables showed up for Monday night's duplicate bridge game at Graham Memorial.

Jap Memory and Dick Potthoff paced the student winners. They won second place East-West. In the same direction Leonard Sacks and Peter Marks won third place, and Deane Coats and Bill Uzzle won fourth place.

Joe Converse and Richard Hicks were the only students placing among the North-South winners. They won fourth place.

Director Dan Duke announced that no game will be played next Monday but that regular play will resume Monday, April 12.

Berry Wins Marshall Fellowship

Lloyd E. Berry, a student in the Department of English, has been awarded a Marshall Fellowship for two years of study at Magdalene College of Cambridge University.

While at Cambridge, Berry will continue important and original scholarship on unpublished manuscripts of Gile Fletcher, the elder. This project relates to Berry's current work as a candidate for the M. A. degree at UNC.

Berry and his wife, both from Houston, Tex., will leave for England in mid-September. The Marshall grant will provide annually some 700 pounds sterling in addition to funds for tuition, fees and traveling expenses.

In addition to studying Fletcher's work in hopes of publishing manuscripts, Berry will pursue the doctorate degree at Cambridge. His UNC study on Fletcher began in a Renaissance literature course under Prof. Peter G. Phialas.

Discovers Poems

Berry, through a search of catlogues in the UNC library, discovered 18 unpublished manuscript poems, the unpublished manuscript for "Of The Russe Common Wealth," Fletcher's most important prose work, and 32 letters, 26 of them previously unpublished, of the elder Fletcher. He plans, eventually, to complete a biography and a critical edition of Fletcher.

Music Clinic Slated Here This Summer

The eighth annual Clinic for Piano Teachers and Students will be held here June 30 through July 3, according to Prof. William S. Newman of the Music Department, who will direct the clinic.

The clinic, sponsored by the Extension Division, is designed to help teachers and students who wish to keep up to date in the piano world.

Dr. Newman commented, "As in the past, the clinic will provide a rich refresher course with outstanding recitalists ,guest speakers, demonstrations, music exhibits and opportunities for recreation,

ABC Board To Study Hopkins Case Appeal

RALEIGH, April 2 (AP)-The State ABC Board took under advisement Wednesday a request by the proprietor of a Durham County drive-in that it reverse its decision suspending his retail beer permit for 120 days.

The board held a brief hearing on the request by John S. (Jack) Hopkins whose place was raided early in the morning of Feb. 9.

At an earlier hearing, the board found that Hopkins had not given his place proper supervision and had permitted the consumption of liquor during a breakfast party given by a University of North Carolina fraternity at the time of the raid.

Apparently clearing the way for an appeal to the courts, Hopkins' attorney, Dan Williams Jr. of Durham, contended that the board's hearing examiner, Earl Weathersby, had erred in admitting certain evidence into the record.

He argued Weathersby should have stricken testimony given by ABC Inspector John Buck and Durham County Deputy Sheriff Bruce Lawson because, he said, their evidence was obtained with neither a search warrant nor Hopkins's permission.

Williams contended a state law which allows ABC inspectors to inspect a beer dealer's premises at any time is unconstitutional.

Williams also said the board's findings were not supported by the evidence in the case.

Edward Fowlkes Wins $500 Scholarship Award

The Westinghouse Achievement Scholarship for 1958-59 at UNC has been awarded to Edward Bynum Fowlkes, a rising senior from Tarboro.

Dean Maurice W. Lee of the BusinessA dministration School School announced the selection of Fowlkes, an accounting major, to receive the $500 grant, given by Westinghouse Educational Foundation of Pittsburg, Pa.

Vic Huggins Addresses UNC Club

Vic Huggins, head cheerleader at UNC in 1924, addressed the University Club Tuesday evening at its organizational meeting. He explained its responsibility to the students and to the University in the realm of promoting sportsmanship.

"There are many wonderful opportunities for the student body to demonstrate sportsmanship and leadership, all that is needed is someone to show them the way," he said.

He offered several suggestions to the organization for better student participation in activities during the 1958 football season, such as more effective cooperation between the club and Pi Kappa Alpha in connection with the "Beat Dook" parade.

Huggins also related some of he accomplishments of his term as head cheerleader. They included the importation of Rameses I as UNC mascot and the inclusion of coeds as the cheering squad.

Mary Hartzog, Bill Porter and Bill Franklin were elected secretary, vice president and treasurer, respectively. In organizing the club for its 1958 season, President Dave Jones set up several committees.

They include a correspondence committee to be chaired by Miss Hartzog, a pep rally committee to be chaired by Porter a finance committee to be chaired by Franklin, an awards committee to be chaired by the president.

Grad Student Selected For Library Program

Dean Lucile Kelling Henderson of the School of Library Science has announced that Rodney Grant Sarle, a candidate for the degree of Master of Science in Library Science, has been selected by the Library of Congress to participate in its 10th annual Recruiting Program for Outstanding Graduates of Library Schools.

Sarle, a native of Rumford, Maine, is a graduate of Brown University and Harvard Business School. He first came to UNC in 1951 to accept a teaching position as lecturer in the School of Business Administration.

Sarle was selected from among candidates submitted by accredited library schools in this country and will be joined in the program by five other library school graduates from the Universities of California, Illinois, Michigan, Washington, and Western Reserve University.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the University Infirmary yesterday included: Misses Phyllis Jones, Juanita Love, Sarah Nicholson, Frances Gilchrist Margaret Jackson, Daryl Ferrington, Carolyn Donnelly, Sally Robeson, Elizabeth Oliver and Sandra Regenie and Philip Adams, Abner Withers, Ronald Bull, Bill Hamilton, Don Shaw, Bill Nebel, Ronald Kennis, Eddie Roberts, George Morgan, Billy Eddins and Frank Slusser.

Order Of Grail History Dates Back To 1920 And Includes 481 Initiates

By JOHN KERR

The Order of the Grail was established at UNC in 1920—in the first student generation of a post-war period. As World-War I closed, hundreds of students released from the armed forces came back to the University to prepare for civilian careers. Others, of course, continued to come direct from preparatory schools. The campus population in Chapel Hill increased by leaps and bounds. Campus unity was a perplexing problem that challenged the best student minds of the day.

Student activities and student government—retarded in the 19 war months of 1917-18 were seeking to regain pre-war strength. Fraternities were looking to larger memberships and new houses. Naturally a student body that included students ranging in experience from war veterans to green freshmen, needed a basis of unity and understanding.

Groups that stood apart could not contribute to campus unity. There were few all-campus social occasions, dances for instance being restricted by tradition and expense very largely to members of the exclusive German Club.

To Bring Leaders Together

The Grail was conceived to fit the needs of the time. Teh idea of its founders was to bring student leaders together in an organization that would serve the entire campus, promoting fellowship not only among its members, but throughout the campus community as well.

For 38 years the Order of the Grail has existed at the University as a self-perpetuating student organization. The Grail has no formal charter granted it by the University. It has no written constitution and by-laws to exhibit. The organization however through long campus service has evolved a very definite and fixed role in the life of the University.

This year the Order has sponsored all-campus dances ,handled the sale of class rings and graduation invitations, given recognition to deserving individuals who have performed an outstanding service to the campus, awarded several hundred dollars of scholarships, and took the lead in an effort to strengthen the Intramural program and advance dormitory-fraternity relations by inauguration of the first annual Grail-Mural Sports Jamboree.

13 Members

The basis tenet of the Grail is that its membership should always be equally divided between the dormitory and fraternity sections of the campus, and the traditional number of new members taken each year is 13. In the selection of its members the Grail looks for students who already bear the evidence of leadership and unselfish service.

Public recognition, skill, and social prominence are not considered qualifications for membership in the Grail. To be a Knight is indicative not only of high recognition for achievement and unselfish devotion to altruistic endeavours, but also of the willingness to serve to exhibit these qualities in the interest of the student body.

Present officers are John Kerr, Delegata, Herman Godwin, Scribe, Benny Thomas, Exchequer, and Mac Paton, Vice-Exchequer. Active members are Eddie Bass, Neil Bass, John Brooks, Bob Carter, Sonny Evans, Joel Fleishman, Don Furtado, Sonny Hallford, Ray Jefferies, Tom Lambeth, Danny Lotz, Jerry Oppenheimer, George Ragsdale, Bill Redding, Sandy Sanders and Tom Walters.

481 Initiates

There are 481 initiates listed on the handsome Grail plaque that hangs in the Grail Room in the Graham Memorial building The names represent all classes from 1921 to date.

In the University faculty, in North Carolina, and throughout the nation Grail alumni occupy places of trust and leadership. One Grail alumnus has served as speaker of the North Carolina House of Representatives. Others are leading profesional and business men in their communities.

The Grail's long record of campus service thus has won it recognition and approval both by students and by the University. In its 38th year of the organization enjoys a maturity of character.

Its student members continue to show enthusiasm, zeal and talented leadership in making the Grail even richer in campus community service and highly respected as the highest undergraduate honorary at UNC.

FROM ROCK HILL, S. C., HERALD

What's Wrong With Puples

The president of Cleveland's school board is upset. He wants to know why some high school pupils can't spell.

What got him into a stew was a recent letter addressed to the "Cleveland School Board" from 122 "puples."

He says "pupils" was spelled "puple" throughout the letter "Where" was spelled "wair" and "feel" was spelled "fill." One long sentence contained at least 20 commas.

The letter made an amusing little story. A wire service picked up the item and carried it on a national news wire.

Behind the chuckles in the story lies a sorry fact. The fact is that far too many high school "puples" can't spell their way out of a paper bag. The same can be said of many college students.

Why?

Is it because "puples" can be taught to use their own language correctly? Is it because they don't realize how important it is to learn how to spell and how to write simple, understandable sentences?

Is it because, somehow, we have made it seem more important to learn other things, such as math and chemistry, or typing and bookkeeping?

Is it because we don't teach "puples" how to listen to the sound of words? Or how to break words down into syllables?

Frankly, we don't know the answers. All we know is that one of the most important things that can be taught is the ability to speak and to write correctly and understandably. Every person in this country is directly affected by his or her ability to use the English language.

FROM THE NATION

The Recession Will Educate

Of a sudden the recession has become the dominant preoccupation in Washington. Only a few months back, defense was being billed as the key issue in the 1958 Congressional election, but by last week both parties were locked in a feverish competition to see which could establish the clearer public image of itself as the party more concerned with unemployment and better equipped to cope with it. In a month's time, the first phase of the recession has ended not with a whimper but a bang: suddenly the mood has shifted from "wait and see" to "let's get going." On February 12, the President announced that we had heard about the last of the "bad news;" March, he thought, would see "the start of the pick-up." But even before the February figures were released, showing that unemployment had risen by nearly 700,000, the Administration was singing a different tune. As eight Eisenhower Republicans joined with the Democratic leadership in the Senate to demand prompt action, the President released his "Dear Joe, Dear Bill" letter with its seven-point program. Since then Washington has churned with anti-recession proposals; nearly every Senator has his own program. In some quarters the promptness, volume and violence of this reaction has been deplored; "Recession Panics Politicians," reads an editorial caption in the Christian Science Monitor. For our part, we are delighted to see that Washington's bipartisan reflexes are in such a good shape after a decade of prosperity and full employment. Not only does this promise to be the most copiously reported recession in history, but the educational content should assay fairly high. Unlike 1929, the principle of federal responsibility has been established; both parties, as their actions clearly indicate, now accept it. This time the public can concentrate on the mechanics and judge the results as each remedy is in turn presented, debated and applied. In short, the stage has been set for a promising experiment in mass education.—THE NATION.

Moscow Misleads World, As Usual

Moscow has made the great gesture. Its bombshell proved a dud. Its monumental step was nothing mor than its customary misleading propaganda effort.

It is discontinuing nuclear weapon tests—but temporarily. It is halting the tests now but leaves itself free to resume them anytime it desires.

It will abandon tests—if the powers of the West will abandon theirs. That means, if the West will abandon its hopes and defenses and surrender to the demands and rules laid down by the Soviet Union.

The Soviet Union insists that the rest of the world take Russia's word for its good intentions. In the fields of pledges, good intentions and good faith, the Soviet Union has absolutely no standing. Moscow's word is not worth a mutilated kopeck.

The United States, at the moment, probably is not engaged in and nuclear weapon tests. It, to as great a degree as the Soviet Union, has suspended such tests.

The Soviet Union merely asserts that it will make no more tests if other powers accept the Russian terms which are: no inspections, no supervision, no guarantees. The rest of the world probably will prefer guarantees.—THE DURHAM SUN.

Advice Given To Disturbed By Columnist

(Editor's note: Because we occasionally receive letters from students asking advice, we feel perhaps we owe it to our readers to print a couple which we think represent problems which concern a great number of students. We have submitted these letters to a woman long acquainted with student problems. She has chosen to answer the letters under the assumed name of Arleen Allswell. Miss Allswell's refreshing optimism (she is the only person on campus who claims never to have laughed at a "sick" joke), her sparkling enthusiasm, her kindly sympathy and understanding and her penetrating insight qualify her to give advice.)

Dear Arleen: My problem may seem insignificant to you, but I am a very unhappy freshman. When I came to college, I believed that I would meet new people and have lots of friends. How wrong I was! All I do is go to classes and return to my dorm to study. I am reasonably pretty and would like to have dates with boys, but boys frighten me. I feel frustrated because I can't compel myself to start conversations with students in my classes. I am afraid others won't like me. Please help me.

Love-Hungry Coed

Dear Love-hungry Coed: Get on a committee. This will help you to overcome your basic problem—shyness. You just imagine that others don't like you. If you make a concentrated effort, such as signing up for a committee, you will have made a good start. Then you will be obligated to go to the meetings. There you will meet other nice students. This will give you social contacts. Being on a committee also will help you combat a side-problem—the frustration of having nothing to do. Committee work is a good, wholesome, worthwhile channel for the energy you now are wasting on unhappy, wrong thinking. Happy hunting!

Dear Miss Allswell: I need help desperately. About two months ago I broke up with my steady girl friend because she decided she liked someone else. Now I feel completely lost. I don't enjoy dates with other girls. I spend all of my time thinking of my old steady. But she told me we are through for good, and now she is engaged to marry her new boy friend. I am an irritable wreck, taking my unpleasantness out on my friends.

Deeply Hurt

Dear Deeply Hurt: Take a trip. What you need is a change of scenery. Perhaps during the spring vacation you could go to Acapulco, or maybe a trip abroad next summer appeals to you. Unless you take steps to get away from the source of your trouble—the girl who rejected you—your personality may be permanently scarred. Take a trip and see how easy it is to re-orient yourself to new surroundings, people and situations. Remember, "out of sight, out of mind."—THE OKLAHOMA DAILY

LETTERS TO EDITOR

More About Student Cafeteria

To the Editor:

This letter is in response to the letter of March 27th (by an anonymous author) which was in response to two letters that appeared in the DTH the 22nd of March of which this writer was the author of one of them.

I am a student at this University for the main purpose of getting an education. By virtue of being here on a limited budget, I am forced by necessity to work, not because of some innate desire to do so. I (like many others) entered this institution knowing I would have to work to get through. I made application for a self-help job and was elected or selected, (take your choice of words), to receive a student self-help job.

The acceptance of this job at Lenoir Hall required me to work a certain number of hours a day and in return I was to be compensated by receipt of meal tickets. This was a contract between Lenoir Hall and me. I feel that no "infrigement of" my "human rights" has occured. I am free to enter a contract; if it could be done and I wished it so, I could enter a contract stating that I would receive nothing but cake and pie for services rendered at Lenoir Hall.

The fact remains that I am getting three meals a day and I am satisfied. I didn't come to this institution to get rich.

While on the subject of Lenoir Hall, I would like to sound off to those who see so many things wrong with the place. First I would like to say that I am no relation to the management there, and I am not a roof top advocate of "Long Live Lenoir Hall."

It is to be recognized that LH is one place on this campus that almost every student comes in contact, therefore it is a good topic for any convesation. But before trodding the place down, can you not see anything good about it? There are the small upstairs dining rooms that are offered free to any group wishing to use these facilities. Coffee and cookies were recently given free by LH to the students who listened and danced to the combo that GM sponsored in the Pine Room; more of the same is tentatively planned for the future. I for one, think a damn good job is done at LH by the management considering the amount of business carried on there.

My letter was not written for revenge or personal satisfaction. It was written in the hope that a dead issue be left in its grave. My letter was taken as a political blast by those who construed it as such, but it was not meant that way and I wish to stand corrected on that matter.

In respect to the pay at LH, I feel much like a past President when he said that he could defend himself against his enemies, but he needed help against his so-called friends.

LaFontine Odom

(Ed Note.—We don't know who "you" is in the last sentence of the above letter except that it isn't us, although Mr. Odom's correspondence is addressed "To the editor." In fact, we can't even remember reading his first treatise to The Daily Tar Heel.

OFFICE CAT

Dayton's C. F. Kettering, father of the automobile's self-starter, has a prize story upholding the theory that "Ignorance is bliss."

"We had a convention of household electric plant distributors in Dayton some years ago," he relates. "Each man was required to tell how much it cost him to wire a room. Finally one big breezy fellow named Bill, from Texas, got up and said, 'Why I can wire a room for half of what these fellows are talking about.' "

"The next day we took him to a room and told him to wire it his way. To our amazement he merely fastened the wire to the walls with staples.

"But you can't put up electric wiring that way, I said to him when he was done. 'It's against the fire underwriters' code.'

" 'What that?' asked Bill.

"I gave him the code book of the underwriters and told him to study it overnight. he next morning he laid the book on my desk.

" 'Don't that beat hell? he more a fellow knows in this country, the less liberty he's got.' "

BOTH WAYS.....

By Lawrence Salem

During the past few years that I have been writing this column for The Daily Tar Heel many people (my wife, mother, and younger brother) have asked me why my tripe is entitled "BOTH WAYS."

It would be easier to reply that I have no idea and let it go at that. However, it is not so simple as that.

In the first place, "BOTH WAYS" would imply that I am two-faced, or in other words, that I have the ability to transcend this mundane society and think in retrospect, without losing the proper prospective of the future. This gift is a Godsend.

Secondly, "BOTH WAYS" would imply that I am versatile as a writer and thinker. I am not bound by tradition—accepted ways of acting; I am able to sit on the fence, so to speak, and jump in either direction as it proves to my benefit. I am not to be caught going one way at any cost.

Some other people (my father and one of my former roommates) have asked me why I did not utilize my talents and run for editor of The Daily Tar Heel. This was my original intention; however, one of my supporters dropped out of school and the other was in the infirmary, so I decided not to risk it.

Contrary to my usual format, I am not going to make this column long and cumbersome,, and as you can see, it has not been in my usual heavy handed and pseudo-intellectual manner. This my readers (mom, pop, little brother) is especially for you.

CAMPUS POLITICIANS

In A Class All Alone

Class election campaigning on this campus is funny. Almost nobody—not even the candidates themselves—can be caught in the position of taking the speechmaking or poster gimmicking very seriously.

This is enjoyable in a way; everybody has a good healthy topic of amusing conversation. And it probably can't be called tragic on this college level, since the affairs of each class are not likely to be world-shaking. The University won't close down, even if another stone bench is designated as the only proper graduating class gift.

But even recognizing the obvious fact that these students are seeking personal prestige, the outside chance that they might have some desires to improve our campus community should be examined.

We believe that at least a few of the class candidates do have this desire. It is well-intentioned and sincere.

But the desire has not been crystalized to the stage where any of the "platform points" they so glibly describe while visiting bored dormitory residents are logically potent.

The point is that these students, for the most part, have had no experience with the inner workings of University policy. When they declare staunchly: "If elected, we will see to it that there is no ban on cars for sophomores!" it is as if a local dogcatcher candidate were running on a foreign policy platform.

Class officers don't have a heck of a lot to say about administrative actions of the University. But they could exert influence to a greater degree if they would recognize where their authority ends, and then use what little they do have in an intelligent and positive manner.

If and when half of these candidates do take office with an open mind, they will realize that there are more points of view to an issue than those represented by a self-centered student segment.

We object to class candidates' misrepresenting their roles to the student body, even though they probably know no better.

And even though nobody takes them every seriously.—Syracuse Daily Orange

FROM THE NATION

He Ignored Count Down

Major General John B. Medaris, the Army's missile chief, brusquely informed newsmen the other day that only the military is equipped to explore outer space. One notes appreciatively the use of the broad term "military"; apparently the General is generously prepared to share the wide blue yonder with the Navy and the Air Force. A little more of this kind of interservice noblesse oblige and we poor civilians will be altogether undone. Hard Lines, indeed, on those who designed the Army's Jupiter-C (civilian scientists, mostly imported), on those who built it (the civilian Chrysler Corporation) and on those who paid for it (the civilian taxpayers).

All arrogance is ill-timed, but General Medaris' is especially so. Only a few days before this Army spokesman claimed the extraterrestial universe as a military reservation, President Eisenhower had sent his plea to Moscow for agreement on the development of outer space for peace.

Although something was obviously wrong with the count-down, the General shot off his mouth anyway.—The Nation

THE POWER OF POSITIVE WRINKLING

While everybody knows that the soft collar on Van Heusen Century Shirts won't wrinkle, ever, a Van Heusen survey among college students has revealed that precious few know why. Here are some of the responses:

J. L.—sophomore at the Psychodynamic Institute for Arts, Crafts, and Number Painting—"Obviously, the collar won't wrinkle, because it's afraid to wrinkle. It may have been threatened by some surly Van Heusen vice-president. Ergo, it exhibits the Cavandish anti-wrinkle syndrome."

G. F.—junior at Usury School of Advertising—"Collarwise, there's no demand for wrinkles. No customer benefit. Now, this is strictly off the top of my cranium, but the statement, 'the soft collar that won't wrinkle, ever,' is too negative. Substitute 'never' for 'ever' and you not only have a positive statement—but—as demonstrated by that famous cigarette, this ungrammatical concept will be attention-getting."

L. V.—senior quarterback at Milltown College—"I wouldn't be without a Van Heusen. Look here . . . under my pleatless shoulder pads. See? Out of simple decency, the collar refrains from wrinkling. It's this kind of restraint that recently led to our glorious victory over Birdbrain U. Not a man was scathed. Huzzah for the collar—and fight furiously, fellows."

Yes, this is the kind of ignorance we run across. Actually, while other collars are made of 3 pieces of material, the secret of this soft collar with its wrinkle-shunning qualities is one-piece construction. Van Heusen Century shirts come in 5 collar styles. $4 and $5.

Frosh Baseball Team Defeats Presbyterian

By RUSTY HAMMOND

Left-fielder Dee Frady smacked a single to center with two men on in the bottom of the seventh inning to give Carolina's Tar Babies a hard-fought 9-7 win over Presbyterian Junior College in their first official game of the year.

The Tar Babies took a 6-2 lead after five innings on the no-hit pitching of starter Bob Deaton. Two runs scored off Deaton in the third were accomplished without benefit of a hit, and both were unearned.

Russ Hoke, who later got credit for the win, came on in the fifth inning. Presbyterain immediately teed off on Hoke, scoring five runs in their biggest inning. Hoke held Presbyterian scoreless the rest of the way.

Carolina scored in every inning from the third on, hitting for three in the third. Fraly also poked a long triple to deep center field in the sixth. Deaton, in going his five innings of perfect ball, struck out six along the route.

The Tar Babies play Presbyterian again today, this time away.

Tar Heels Blast Connecticut 12-3 In Classic Semi-Finals

Winston-Salem, (AP) Carolina's Tar Heels sent 14 men to the plate in the first inning to score eight runs to defeat Connecticut in the last of four Dixie Baseball Classic games here last night, 12 to 3.

The Tar Heels collected seven walks, an infield single by Carson Oldham and were aided by two Connecticut errors in the wild scoring first inning.

The game was called at the end of the seventh inning because of a two hours and 15 minutes time limit on all classic games.

Ben Harding, Carolina southpaw, gave Connecticut six hits but scattered the blows well.

The victory gave Carolina a 4-2 record for the season. The Tar Heels clipped Princeton in the Classic opener while Connecticut defeated Duke Tuesday.

CLASSIC WRAPUP

Winston-Salem, April 2—(AP)—Carolina and State will meet in the championship game of the third annual Baseball Dixie Classic at Ernie Shore Field Thursday Night.

The Tar Heels advanced into the finals with a wild 12-3 victory over Connecticut in the final of four games Wednesday while Dan Casteen tossed two-hit to pace State to a 5-1 victory over Wake Forest in an earlier semifinal game.

The four game final day schedule for Thursday follows: 12:30 P. M.—Lafayette vs. Princeton (seventh place): 3 p.m.—Massachusetts vs. Duke (fifth place): 5:30 p. m.—Wake Forest vs. Connecticut (third place); 8:15 p. m.—State vs. Carolina (championship).

Casteen, Wolfpack sophmore from Wilmington, gave Wake Forest only two hits, both in the fourth inning, in taming the previously undefeated deacons. Wake Forest had won four in a row.

The Wolfpack touched starter Ben Tench for three runs in the fifth inning and clinched the game by tapping lefty James Harrell for two in the eighth inning.

In two afternoon games in the consolation bracket Massachusetts defeated Lafayette, 8-3 ,and Duke licked Princeton, 9-6.

Top Field Ready For Masters

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)-Doug Ford, a not-quite-forgotten man of golf, starts his defense of the coveted Masters title Thursday against an international field which includes some top players of five continents.

Ford won't be entirely forgotten as long as there are fans around to recall his whirlwind finish last year when he holed out from a trap at the 72nd for a winning final round of 66.

But so far this year only Doug, himself, and possibly a very few others have paid much attention to the possibility of his becoming the first player ever to win the Masters two years in succession. Ford picks himself to win just as he did a year ago.

Ken Venturi, the brash young man from San Francisco, is the favorite-and properly. Ken nearly walked off with the tournament two years ago, when he still was an amateur, then blew it on the final round.

Ever since, winning the Masters has been Venturi's biggest objective and his remarkably consistent play on the winter tour indicate this may be his year to do it. He has won three open tournaments and finished second twice.

The 1958 Master field, smallest in recent years, numbers about 90 players who fill the right and reduced qualifying standards. After 101 players teed off for the opening round last year, the qualifying regulations were tightened a bit to keep the size of the tournament in hand.

As always, the field includes virtually all past winners of the Masters, most of the National Open and amateur champions of the past 10 years or so and the leading players on the pro circuit.

The foreign list, larger and stronger than usual, is headed by a pair of Japanese stars, Torakichi Nakamura and Koichi Ono, whose amazing putting and consistently low scores have made them the No. 1 attraction during practice rounds. It also takes in four Australians and star players from South Africa, Belgium and France.

No foreign player has won the Masters since its inception in 1934.

First round play starts Thursday at 9:30 a.m. EST. After the second round Friday, the field will be cut to the 40 low scorers and ties for 40th. If there are no ties for 40th, players with the next highest score will continue to play.

Frosh Win Track Meet

Carolina's freshman track team won its first meet of the season when it defeated Chowan Junior College, and Cranbrook Prep School in a triangular meet here on Fetzer Field yesterday.

The Tar Babies scored 77 points against 45 for Chowan, and 37 for Cranbrook. The yearlings gained first places in five events.

Ben Seagle took the first victory by winning the 440. Worth Sweet continued with a win in the mile while Harry Miller won the 2-mile. Miller also placed second in the mile. Other Carolina firsts were in the field events. Bob Eubanks won the broad jump, and Don White won the shot.

The Winners

Braves Cut Squad

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — The Milwaukee Braves trimmed their roster to 31 players Wednesday by sending Bob Taylor, $117,000 bonus catcher, and Juan Pizarro, Rarl Hersh and Al Spangler to minor league affiliates.

Taylor was optioned to the Braves' Jacksonville farm team in the Class A Sally League.

Pizarro, a lefthanded pitcher who failed to round into the form expected of him, and Hersh, an outfielder-first baseman, were shipped to Wichita, Kan., in the Class AAA American Assn. on 24-hour recall.

Spangler, a rookie who had been trying out for the Braves' centerfield job, was returned to Wichita. The optioning of Taylor left the Braves with only one bonus player, pitcher Joey Jay.

Pizarro, 21-year-old Puerto Rican fast ball pitcher, won 5 and lost 6 for the Braves last season. Hersh batted .269 for Wichita and Spangler was in service in 1957.

Tigers Nip Heels In Contest

CLEMSON, (AP) — Sophmore John Dunkelburg led Clemson's young track squad to a 68 2-3 to 62 1-3 victory over Carolina here yesterday in a match which saw two school records broken by Tiger runners.

Dunkelburg ran the 440-yard dash in 48 seconds flat which bettered the 49.2 of Wallace Roy in the 1926 Southern Conference meet. and tied the existing Altantic Coast Conference mark of Dave Leas of Maryland, set in 1956.

Clemson's mile relay team bettered a school mark of 3:28.0 made in the 1939 state meet with a 3:25.4 effort.

North Carolina grabbed eight first places to six for the Tigers.

Carolina Tennis Team Beats Illinois 5-4, Scores Third Victory Of Season

By ELLIOTT COOPER

A doubles victory by the Carolina twosome of Jeff Black and Dick Makepeace gave the Tar Heel tennis team a 5-4 win over Illinois yesterday and preserved the net team's undefeated record.

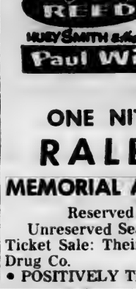
Down by a 4-2 count at the end of the six singles matches the Illini squad made a determined bid to capture all of the doubles matches and thereby defeat the Tar Heels. The visitors from Champaign-Urbana got two of the three doubles matches, but Black and Makepeace turned back Illinois' Bob Breckenridge and Roger Bielefeld 12-10, 6-3 to give the Tar Heels their third win of the season.

Bank Wins

Coach Ham Strayhorn's varsity took four of the singles matches, and this gave the Carolina squad a decided advantage going into the doubles play. Steve Bank recovered from his loss to Harvard's Larry Sears on Tuesday and edged out a 6-4, 13-11 win over Carl Noble in the number two singles match. Jeff Black, Malcolm Clark, and Dick Makepeace won the other singles matches for the Tar Heels.

In the doubles competition Al Holtman and Carl Noble handed Bob Bortner and Bank their first loss of the year. The Carolina pair won the first set 6-4 but lost the next two 7-5 and 6-3 on service brakes. In the second doubles match the Illini twosome of George Gilmore and Joe Epkins lost the first set only to come back and take the next two from Clark and Ben Keys.

THE SUMMARY



Singles: Holtman (Ill) defeated Bortner 6-1, 6-3. Bank (C) defeated Noble 6-4, 13-11. Black (C) defeated Breckenridge 7-5, 6-4. Clark (C) defeated Bielefeld 2-6, 6-2, 6-3. Gilmore (Ill) defeated Keys 8-6, 6-4. Makepeace (C) defeated Epkins 7-5, 5-7, 7-5.

SCIENCE MADE SIMPLE: No. 3

Once again the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes, bless their tattooed hearts, have consented to let me use this space, normally intended for levity, to bring you a brief lesson in science.

They are generous, openhanded men, the makers of Marlboro, hearty, ruddy, and full of the joy of living, as anyone can tell who has sampled their wares. In Marlboro you will find no stinting, no stinginess. Marlboro's pleasures are rich, manifold, and bountiful. You get a lot to like with a Marlboro—filter, flavor, flip-top box, and, in some models, power steering.

The science that we take up today is called astronomy, from the Greek words astro meaning "sore" and nomy meaning "back". Sore backs were the occupational disease of the early Greek astronomers, and no wonder! They used to spend every blessed night lying on the damp ground and looking up at the sky, and if there's a better way to get a sore back, I'd like to hear about it. Especially in the moist Mediterranean area, where Greece is generally considered to be.

Lumbago and related disorders kept astronomy from becoming very popular until Galileo, an unemployed muleteer of Pamplona, fashioned a homemade telescope in 1924 out of three Social Security cards and an ordinary ice cube. What schoolboy does not know that stirring story—how Galileo stepped up to his telescope, how he looked heavenward, how his face filled with wonder, how he stepped back and whispered the words heard round the world: "Let them eat cake!"

Well sir, you can imagine what happened then! William Jennings Bryan snatched Nell Gwynne from the shadow of the guillotine at Oslo; Chancellor Bismarck brought in four gushers in a single afternoon; Enos Slaughter was signed by the Hanseatic League; Crete was declared off limits to Wellington's army; and William Faulkner won the Davis Cup for his immortal Penrod and Sam.

But after a while things calmed down and astronomers began the staggering task of naming all the heavenly bodies. First man to name a star was Sigafoos of Mt. Wilson, and the name he chose was Betelgeuse, after his dear wife, Betelgeuse Sigafoos, prom queen at Michigan State from 1919 to 1931.

Then the Major Brothers of Yerkes Observatory named stars after their wives, Urna and Canis, and Witnick of Harvard named one after his wife, Big Dipper, and soon all the stars were named.

Astronomers then turned to the question: is there life on other planets? The answer was a flat, unequivocal no. Spectroscopic studies proved without a doubt that the atmosphere on the other planets was far too harsh to permit the culture of the fine tobaccos that go into Marlboro Cigarettes . . . And who can live without Marlboro?

Orientation Chairman Sets Deadline To Apply

The deadline for orientation counselor applications is Monday, April 14, according to Orientation chairman Herman Godwin.

A large number of applications have already been submitted but "we still need qualified men to carry out the program," Godwin stressed.

Godwin said the he and his committee will select approximately 150 men to participate in the fall program, September 11-18. "I am happy that so many have already turned in their application, but I would like to urge anyone else interested to submit their applications before 6 o'clock deadline on Monday," Godwin said.

Application blanks and study manuals are available at the YMCA, Lenoir Hall, Graham Memorial and the Library.

The committee will carry out its selections in a two-part program. On April 15 at 7:00 p. m. there will be a general test given all applicants in room 268 Venable. Godwin emphasized that knowledge of the study manuals will be invaluable for the test. Individual interviews with all applicants will be held April 16-23. Students will be notified by campus mail as to the time of their interview.

Godwin reiterated the importance of good counselors to carry out the program. "Last year we had a good program," he said. "We would like to improve it this year. I again urge everyone interested to get an application blank, fill it out and turn it in at the same place."

Editorial Applicants Get April 16 Deadline

The deadline to submit applications for the editorship of the Carolina Quarterly is Wednesday April 16.

Address letters to: Miss Jessie Rehder, chairman of the advisory board, Bingham Hall.

For any question concerning applications, please contact Miss Rehder at her office in Bingham Hall. Phone: 83151.

Rules Stop Legislature From Meeting

In accordance with Student Government by-laws there will be no meeting of the Student Legislature this week .The provision which governs this requires that there be no meeting of the Legislature within one week of a University recess.

The 25th assembly of the UNC Student Legislature will meet for the first time Thursday, April 17. It will be presided over by incumbent Speaker Don Furtado.

Thursday, April 24, is the date set for the installation of new student body officers. Ralph Cummings will take over as speaker at that time.

Trip Abroad Planned For Debutantes

American debutantes and post debutantes have been invited to participate in a grand tour of Vienna, Brussels, London and Paris under the auspices of the International Debutante Ball Committee.

Many private parties have been planned by European post debutantes who have been presented in New ork by the International Debutante Ball Committee.

The Hon. Miranda Maxwell Fyfe, daughter of Viscount and Viscountess Kilmuir, lord chancellor of England who was presented in 1956 and Susan Douglas, presented in 1957, are arranging gala parties. Miss Douglas is the daughter of Lord and Lady Cecil Douglas.

DTH Staff Shuffled

Charlie Sloan, junior journalism major from Arlington, Va., was appointed managing editor of The Daily Tar Heel for the 1958-1959 academic year, by editor Curtis Gans.

"I am very pleased to have Charlie as my managing editor. I feel he is the person who can make the news operation of the paper function as it ought to," Gans said.

Gans appointed Paul Rule to be news editor for the coming year.

Other appointments included Bill Kincaid as assistant news editor, Davis Young as feature editor, Dave Wible as sports editor, Rusty Hammond as assistant sports editor, Anthony Wolff as arts editor and Barry Winston, Whit Whitfield and Ed Rowland as editorial staff assistants.

John Whitaker and Fred Katzin will stay on as business manager and advertising manager respectively.

GMAB, Largest Extra-Curricular Group, Employs More Than 200

By DAVIS YOUNG

"We are the largest student extra-curricular organization on campus," says Benny Thomas, president of Graham Memorial Activities Board, in reference to the organization which he heads. "We have over 200 students working on our many committees. Students can be proud of the fact that we function entirely on our own and are truely a student union and not a college union. We are currently working on a budget of $10,900 which has been set aside for us out of the $41,000 given by the Student Legislature to Graham Memorial itself. We have compete freedom with this money and use it to complete our many projects."

"The many projects" referred to by Thomas include such widely diversified activities as the Mardi Gras, free flicks and receptions following fall football games. These and others fall under the dominion of the 13 standing committees and the 6 executive officers.

One of the biggest projects that GMAB undertakes is sponsored by the Polls Committee, the organization which tests campus opinion on current topics. It is currently headed by Janet Cobbs and sends out periodic questionaries to the student body asking such questions as "do yo favor a change in the editor ship of The Daily Tar Heel" and "What brand of cigarettes do you smoke?"

The Calendar Committee under the direction of Lloyd Shaw plans and compiles the Graham Memorial Calendar of campus events for the fall and spring semesters as well as preparing a monthly and weekly calendar for the use of the student body.

Next year the Current Affairs Committee will replace the Forum Committee. This group has been under the leadership of Lewis May

NSA Slates Meeting At Virginia College

Thursday marks the start of the Spring Regional Assembly of the Carolina-Virginia Region of the United States National Student Association whch will continue through Saturday at Randolph-Macon Woman's College in Lynchburg, Va.

Students from both Carolinas and Virginia will participate in a program on the topic of "Student Responsibility."

All students at UNC who would like to attend the conference should see either Ed Levy or Sonny Evans today in the Student Government Office.

The purpose of the program is to set plans for carrying out the recommendations made by the President's Committee on Education Beyond the High School.

Many noted speakers will participate in the assembly including: Dr. A. H. Edens, president of Duke University; Harry Lunn, past president of USNSA; Dr. William F. Quillian Jr., president of Randolph-Macon; and Harold Bell, president of the Virginia National Educational Association.

The three areas of discussion will include the acquiring of new teachers, improving the effectiveness of curriculum and instruction and student contributions to counseling.

Editorial Staff Meeting For Old, New Staffers

All current columnists and all those who are interested in doing columns for The Daily Tar Heel are asked to attend a meeting today at 4 p. m. in the editor's office in Graham Memorial.

Editor Curtis Gans also asked for applicants for the job of editorial secretary.

According to Gans, the position calls for a person with a knowledge of typing and will demand about two hours work a day.

Executive Hopefuls Review Vote Issues

Candidates Sum Up Programs

Don Furtado and Al Goldsmith, candidates for president of the student body released their first run-off campaign statements to The Daily Tar Heel Tuesday.

The runoff election for the presidential post, scheduled for April 15, was necessitated when neither candidate received a majority of the votes cast in the three candidate race.

Furtado, the Student Party candidate, said:

"Here at Carolina, the position of president of the student body is a job, not merely an honor. For several reasons, it cannot be suddenly assumed and capably performed without a comprehensive understanding of the varied tasks and many student government operations which the president must carry out.

"The many student and campus problems which are presently so obvious, (such as the need for a men's dormitory visiting agreement, liberalization of the present cut system, etc.) demand the Presidents immediate attention and action. At least the ground work for next year's programs must be laid now, if we hope to accomplish anything worthwhile in the near future.

Goldsmith, the University Party standard-bearer, said in his statement:

"I was most deeply honored and pleased with the results of Tuesday's election. Although I cannot deny that I would have liked to have been elected at that time, I was happy to have led the ticket. I wish to thank the many students on campus who supported me and I sincerely hope that they will stick by my side in the coming runoff.

'As I have told many students during these past weeks, I am running for president not because I feel this position is an honor which is owed me, or because I am seeking glory, but rather I am seeking this office because I feel there is a job to be done which has not been done in the past.

"I am one of many students who is not pleased with how student government has been run. I feel that many pressing issues have been neglected or made secondary in the rush to establish a single honor council, to institute delayed rush and to abolish discriminatory clauses in fraternity charters. I do not feel that proper attention has been devoted to improving dormitory social facilities, to solving the parking problem, to clarifying the cut system and to solving other issues.

"I think what the campus needs is a change. For two years we have had a Student Party controlled student government and it has left a lot to be desired. I think most highly of the present student body president, but at times I have wondered whether or not he is his own boss. I fear there has been excessive control of student government in the past by non-undergraduates, and I believe it most essential that student government be undergraduate controlled.

"I think the only solution to many problems on campus and to improve student government is a change in administration, and I would like to head this new organization in student government. I believe myself quite ably prepared for this position. I have not been

Dorm IV Seat Conceded To Jackson

A tie vote for Student Legislative candidates in Dorm Men's IV district was resolved yesterday when John Raper conceded the seat to Warren Jackson. Both men are SP members.

Raper and Jackson had placed fourth in the voting for four seats, each with 223 votes. Two other SP candidates, Ronald Rowe and Otto Funderburk, were elected in last Tuesday's balloting.

One UP candidate, David Grigg, pulled a surprising upset in the Upper Squad-Joyner district by winning a seat .Al Goldsmith, UP presidential aspirant, said the Albemarle ferhsman did a fine job of campaigning and added that Grigg would make a good legislator.

Final returns in the voting announced by the Elections Board show the UP retained its slim (26-24) majority in the Legislature. The party swept 16 of 29 seats in the election.

A situation similar to one last semester, in which an SP vice president presided over a UP-dominated Legislature, will be repeated this term. Jack Cummings, acting as speaker, will bang the gravel Thursday night in the first meeting.

Run-Off Set For Tuesday

By BILL KINCAID

The run-off election for president of the student body will be held Tuesday, April 15.

The second vote resulted when neither candidate in last week's presidential race received a majority of all votes cast. In Tuesday's contest will be student party candidate Don Furtado and Al Goldsmith, the University Party candidate.

Tuesday's election will be carried out like all regularly scheduled elections. Polling places will be in the same places they were in last week's voting.

Article XI of the election laws states that a run-off shall be held when no student government candidate has received a majority of the votes cast for that office. The two candidates with the highest votes shall be eligible for the run-off.

Article V states that any run-offs required shall be held on the Tuesday following the election. Since the week after election was vacation time election officials have scheduled the run-off next Tuesday.

THURSDAY THROUGH SUNDAY

Arts Festival Offers Full Schedule

By MARY MOORE MASON

UNC's first Fine Arts Festival will begin this Thursday and last through Sunday night.

The Festival will include a Beaux Arts Ball fashioned on the Artist's and Model's Ball in Greenwich Village; a sidewalk art exhibit; a performance by the Naval Air Cadet Choir and of "Antigone," the adaptation by Jean Anouilh of Socrates' tragedy; a panel on "Fine Arts and Science in Modern Education," a concert by William Leland, pianist and a foreign film.

All of the events of the long weekend are being sponsored by various committees of GMAB except the Sidewalk Art Exhibit and the Beaux Arts Ball which are being co-sponsored by the Recreation Committee of GMAB and the University Art League. Mary Moore Mason is the coordinator of the Festival for GMAB and Chuck Hoskins is the adviser for the Art League.

The Festival will begin with the panel on "Fine Arts and Science in Education" this Thursday night at 8 o'clock in the Main Lounge of Graham Memorial and will feature three authorities as speakers: Noel Housten, visiting professor of radio-TV-motion pictures at UNC and well-known TV and magazine writer; Dr. Gregory Ivey, head of the art department at WC and Dr. Warner Wells, translator of "Hiroshima Diary" and member of the UNC medical school faculty. The panel will be moderated by Curtis Gans, editor of The Daily Tar Heel.

There will also be a foreign film that evening, a Russian film "Ten Days That Shook the World," directed by Sergei Eisenstein, considered by many the greatest film director. The film which is a pictoral portrayal of the first days of the Russian revolution in which art rises above propaganda will be shown at 7:30 p.m. in Carroll Hall.

Starting Friday morning at 10 o'clock and lasting until 5 p.m. there will be a sidewalk art show in the vacant lot on Franklin St. next to the Methodist Church.

Friday evening the highlight of the Festival will take place. This is the Beaux Arts Ball. UNC's first costume ball which will have as its theme "A Trip to Outer Space." The tickets for the ball, which will take place at Carolina Inn from 9 to 12 p.m., will be on sale in Graham Memorial for $1.50 a couple. "The Embers" will play for the dance.

Saturday evening the famous Naval Air Cadet Choir from Florida, who have appeared on many TV shows, among them the "Ed Sullivan Show," will perform twice, at 4 p.m. and 8 p.m., in Hill Hall.

There will also be the first performance of "Antigone" given by the Petites Dramatiques, in Gerrard Hall at 8 p.m. on Saturday.

The art exhibit will continue on Saturday also, from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m.

The Festival ends Sunday with the performance at 8 p.m. in the main lounge of G.M. of William Leland, pianist, under the sponsorship of the Petite Musicales committee and the second performance of Antigone at 8 p.m. in Gerrard Hall.

A New Daily Tar Heel

A year has past, and a new year has begun. A new editor has taken over the reins of a newspaper.

In one sense, "View From The Hill" has moved over two columns, and in a larger sense, there is more to the change than just simply the shift from one column to another.

The Daily Tar Heel is going to be different from its predecessor, last year's paper, or its successor, next year's paper.

The change will not be immediate. Indeed, the only indication of any change is the lack of comics on the editorial page and the addition of comics on page three.

Yet, with each new editor there comes a different philosophy of what a newspaper ought to be, and whether a college newspaper is any different from any other newspaper.

It is this editor's belief that a college newspaper is more than a newspaper. It has more function than just to cover the campus news adequately and to give place for as many commentaries on campus events as can be fit within eight columns over a period of 180 days. It has more function than just to give a brief view, with appropriate criticism, of the world's happenings.

The primary purpose of a newspaper is to stimulate thought. This is perhaps also the fundamental purpose of education. Hence, for the coming year The Daily Tar Heel will be devoted to the stimulation of individual thought.

It will be done by utilizing, as nearly as possible the full resources of the University community. It will be done by presenting all the news that is possible to fit into the limited space that this newspaper possesses. It will be done in presenting as many views as possible on as many problems as face the university, the state, the nation, and the world.

The start will be slow, for there needs to be an organization to cover both the news and comment on it. There also needs to be some strength injected into the financial situation of the paper.

There will not be for the next year an emphasis on regular columnists, but rather on the quality of work produced, regardless of view point.

There will be an emphasis on people as individuals rather than on people as groups, for in the university community there are many individuals with much to offer to the community as a whole.

There is no doubt that there will be a certain amount of controversy associated with the paper, for there should be a certain amount of controversy associated with any thinking enterprise. Yet, controversy can be interesting, stimulating, and responsible if the facts are presented accurately and room is given for all views within the paper. This will be done.

The Daily Tar Heel for the next year can be an experience for all students to appreciate. This is the goal of the new editor.

Conservative Wanted

Whereas: The liberal point of view has often been the point of view of the editor of The Daily Tar Heel; and

Whereas: The liberal point of view will be presented in the editorial columns of The Daily Tar Heel for the next year; and

Whereas: To stimulate thought, there needs to be more than one opinion presented on the editorial page.

Therefore be it enacted by the student body of the University of North Carolina that:

Article 1: One or more conservative columnists be appropriated to The Daily Tar Heel.

Article 2: That these columnists be appropriated by the process of volunteering.

Article 3: That this appropriation take place soon, before the editor's liberal views are accepted unopposed.

Dual Problem Of Education: School And Home

ADLAI STEVENSON

(The following is a reprint from the Magazine Section of The New York Times of April 6, 1958. This will be run in two sections beginning today and concluding tomorrow.)

Our national self esteem has recently received [illegible] rude shocks. We had been [illegible] in what has been called a [illegible] sion of American [illegible]." Suddenly realizing that it may not after all be universally true that "my pop can lick your pop," we are reacting now with a mixture of pride, jittery apprehension and frenzied determination to disprove the illusion.

Part of this determination centers on the launching pads at Cape Canaveral. There has been a sudden decision that our missile development is inadequate.

Part of it centers in the classrooms of our schools. There has been a sudden decision that our educational system is inadequate.

It is obvious, and not very gratifying, that these decisions result not from self-examination and self-criticism but from what has happened in Russia.

It is fashionable to say that the Russian educational system is better than ours. But is it true? They set out to do one job. They have done it. But education has for us a fundamentally different purpose and obligation, an infinitely harder task. Keeping up with the Russians would be for us the worst form of defeatism, of false emphasis, of idolatrous worship of irrelevant standards.

Russian sputniks will not help us answer the question of the quality of education we should seek. That kind of stimulus could at most spur us to an unbalanced effort to produce scientists and scientists alone. It would not give us either the sustained popular pressure we need to secure educational progress or the basis for the judgments we must make about the quality of our teachig.

There is a much more searching set of questions we must ask ourselves.

Why is it that we only become fully aware of our schools' shortcomings when we were compelled to compare them with the educational system of a totalitarian dictatorship? What became of our own standards?

What standards have led us to put the glossy frills and extras of our abundant way of lite ahead of our children's education? And why have we put the no-shift automobile ahead of abolishing the two-shift school?

Why is it that today, with more than 5,000,000 men and women unemployed, with slack resources in steel, and with a crying need for tens of thousands of new schoolrooms, we aren't moving immediately to use these resources to fill these needs?

We don't lack the means. What's the matter?

There have been, I think, two difficulties.

One is that here has been no mobilization, no resounding, irresistible affirmation of our heartfelt desire for a better education for our children. This is the difficulty democracy faces while a dictatorship does not, and it is the difficulty that consumers who are essentially unorganized, always face in their competition with producers. We cannot easily translate into group action our decision to have the educational system we want and can pay for.

And the impact of the Soviet challenge may wear off, I fear. An upswing in our economy will return, and consumer pressures for a myriad of things, useful, useless urgent, trivial, will return, too. Without profound change in national attitude schools and their needs will slide away again, down our national scale of priorities, behind the automobile and the refrigerator, recreation and travel, liquor and cosmetics, and behind even the recent horror in women's styles. We shall be back in the fantasy world spending more on advertising to the American people than on trying to educate them.

But the second difficulty is in a sense more basic, and one we must charge squarely to ourselves. The softness which has crept into our educational system is a reflection of something much broader, of a national complacency if you will, of a confusion of the priorities of the body, the mind and the spirit.

The imperative today, in my judgment, is that we reassert — so that every person in this country is not left in any doubt about it — every man and every woman, every politician, yes, and every teacher and every child — our conviction that children's needs have first priority over all other civilian wants.

We have lacked, I fear, the deep inner conviction that education in its broadest sense unlocks the door of our future, and that it gives us the tools without which "the pursuit of happiness" becomes a hollow chasing after triviality, a mind less boredom relieved only by the stimulus of sensationalism or quenched with a tranquiliser pill.

A British writer recently defined this fragmented mass mind as one of "sensation without commitment." And this, behind the problems of school building and equipment, of classrooms and laboratories of staffs adequately recruited and paid — this seems to me to be the deepest educational challenge of all.

In fact, I doubt whether we shall ever lick the physical problems of education until we have, as a nation, recovered our sense of what the educational process has to be, and our respect for the disciplines and ardors which it entails. We need more than sputniks without and recessions within to provide a steady, enlightened pressure for better education.

So we must reassert our respect for the disciplines and ardors that are part of what education really means.

And we must make it clear that the goal of education is to teach Western man not just to survive but to triumph, not just to defend himself but to make man and the world what God intended them to be.

What are the elements of the dedicated purpose and the wise and searching faith which are essential to restore the true meaning of education in America?

I believe, in the first place, that we must recover the element of quality in our traditional pursuit of equality. We must not, in opening our schools to everyone, confuse the idea that all should have equal chance with the notion that all have equal endowments.

Nor is it healthy to discern a hint of privilege and pretension in those whose intellectual abilities are outstanding. Ideals of excellence are not unknown to us. Those who excell in sports, in the arts, in adventure, are accorded that rare pleasure of the human mind — the pleasure of admiration. We must now, I believe, extend this ideal of excellence and teach our young people, indeed sometimes ourselves, to respect, to relish what is in fact the rarest of all our national resources — mental capacity and intellectual grasp.

And pray let there be no more derision of the noncomformists; rather let them be encouraged to speak their minds, to criticize and question. The deprecation of intelligence, the ridicule of the intellectual, has been too often the stock in trade of demagogues and the easy fashion of our times. If the sputniks have helped in any measure toward change in this respect, we may yet live to hail Khrushchev as an educational reformer. But the change will not last if it is merely external. Respect we must learn for ourselves.

The next confusion I wou'd point to is the confusion of "the free" with "the free and easy." The men who founded this Republic sought to do away with the external disciplines of oppression. They did not for one moment believe in doing away with discipline as such. They believed rather in the power of inner discipline, of conscience and of rational restraint to replace the constraints of royal or class goverament.

It is dangerously easy to move imperceptibly from the ideal of free choice to the tyranny of the easy way out. "Let the child set his own pace" has a delusively democratic swing to it.

And too often, I think, the elective system permits the student to evade the subjects which will tax his powers. Those who would dedicate their choice to harder, tougher studies find themselves cut off from a gay, care-free group who are likely to regard the working student as "different." The pressures around him won't sustain his decision to work. He is made to feel an outsider.

The tragedy of this lies precisely in its misunderstanding of true human fulfillment. There can be no real happiness without full commitment, no tasting of the deepest pleasures without the effort and the training needed to make one's self responsive to the higher delights. Students glimpse these truths in certain fields. No one makes the team wthout hard training. Yet often there is no steady pressure of conviction to show our students that, in every field of endeavor if is effort, responsibility, the commitment of mind and energy that bring with them comparable achievement and satisfactions.

Letters

The editor of The Daily Tar Heel encourages letters from the student body.

The signed letters will be published with the exception of those times when the controversy get so great as to have such an overabundance of letters that there is not enough space.

At such times all letters will be acknowledged in the paper, and a proportional number to the number of letters pro and con will be published.

"What Kind Of Beeps Are You Picking Up?"

Gullibility Of Humans Shown

Jonathan Yardley

Abraham Lincoln once said that "You can fool some of the people some of the time, some of the people all of the time, but you can never fool all of the people all of the time." The wisdom of this statement was demonstrated recently at a performance by a renowned hypnotist, in front of a largely female audience.

The man knew his hypnotism, but he insisted on taking a large portion of his time demonstrating tricks which he attributes to the all powerful powers of memory and mental telepathy. By extremely clever showmanship, and the fact that he performs the same act three hundred and sixty five times a year, he soon had the majority of the audience beliveing that his little game was guided by extraordinary, if not God-given, powers.

A moment's look at two of these tricks might give insight into the stimulating question of gullibility, individual and group. In the first demonstration the performer divided blackboard into sixteen squares, and then asked the audience to call out names of objects, which he told a girl in the audience to write in the boxes in no special order, mind you.

When all sixteen boxes had characterizations, he turned his back to the board and told the audience that, if they would suggest a number between fifty and one hundred, he would fill in the boxes with numbers in such a way that vertically, horizontally, diagonally, and so forth, every combination would add up to that number. A'l this would be done with his back to the blackboard. He asked a girl to call out the boxes and write the numbers he called in them—he asked her to call the boxes by number, not by name. He called this a demonstration of his fantastic memory powers, yet never used the names, which were the only trick aspects of the game. All he did was plug in a formula, developed very cleverly through many years experience. The audience loved it.

His other trick is world famous. He tells the proprietor to hide his check and he will give a free performance if he cannot find it. He leaves the room while it is hidden, then returns and asks a girl to accompany him while he looks—she is supposed to send him "mental messages." However, just to be on the safe side, he holds a handkerchief in one hand and she holds it by the other end. He found the check, of course.

It never occurred to the delighted audience that the girl's natural reaction is to pull on the handerchief when he goes the wrong direction. In all probability he would never find his check if the girl was smart enough to follow him around without pulling the handkerchief. The audience, of course, was fooled.

The twentieth century is in extremely interesting one in which to study gullibility, because there are two opposing aspects to the problem. To a certain extent the people want to be fooled, and at the same time they are wary, suspicious, and untrusting.

The people of the twentieth are rather used to being fooled—Hitler, Mussolini, the Communists, the Republicans, the Democrats, all have fooled them again and again. They have been fooled because they are human; this is a disturbed world, and they want to find the mythical "good life." In their search they are willing to try anything, and will allow themselves to be fooled. At the same time they are amazingly skeptical. After years of being fooled, all schemes, all idealistic ideas seem to them just more steps in the same direction, and their natural reaction is one of hesitance.

The hypnotist's audience was both skeptical and willing; while entering the auditorium one could hear countless statements of disbelief in the man's powers, yet once the show was under way the audience was putty in his hands.

It is not easy to explain this, but a brief suggestion can be made—people as a group are extremely different from people as individuals. They sacrifice powers of discretion for the momentary sway of emotions. When they leave the auditorium and become once more individuals, they are again skeptics. They may only have been fooled for a while, but they were fooled.

Barry Winston

There used to be a slogan lying around the Office that read "Write it for the guy in the lower Quad." For that matter it may still be here, somewhere. Anyhoo, that's who this is for—so all you squares can go back to your copies of the Saturday Review.

My own personal tastes lean more toward Bach or Shearing than Presley or Little Richard, but I'm still going to Raleigh tonight. "What!" you say, "Is Elvis taking his first leave in Raleigh?" Fortunately for my nervous system, that is not the case. But the old Auditorium is going to rock, nonetheless. And that is the subject of this column, more or less: rock. And roll.

Specifically, the blast that is being held tonight in Memorial Auditorium.

Now I've always had a pretty low opinion of such forms of entertainment, but the other day a friend of mine (a real rock 'n roller if ever there was one) told me that the only reason I didn't appreciate it was that I had never heard any of it first hand. He was right, too. The radio has always been plenty close enough for me to get to any of it. But now my curiosity's gotten the best of me—that, and what I love to think is my outstanding ability to be completely open minded about things I know I'm going to hate. So I'm going to Raleigh tonight with a completely open mind and a good set of ear plugs.

By now (at least if you're a rock 'n roller) I'm sure there is one question that is burning a hole in your head: Who's going to be there? Patience, friend. I'm getting to that. In fact, that comes next.

There will be at least one familiar face on the stage tonight: George Hamilton IV (KA's take notice) will be there, with his Rose and a Baby Ruth. Most of the rest of the performers are complete strangers to me, but it will be worth the trip over there just to see George again. Maybe he'll even sing 'I've Got A Secret."

In addition to good old George, there'll be LaVerne Baker, who, if I recall correctly, is the one that does that bit about "'Jim Dandy"; Sam Cooke of "You Send Me" fame; Paul Anka and that Chick "Diana"; Clyde McPhatter singing "That's Enough"; Frankie Avalon, the Silhouettes, the Royal Teens with that "Short Shorts" thing, and the Storey Sisters, I mean. They're the ones that do "Bad Motorcycle," which I think (to borrow an expression from our emminent jazz columnist) Swings. Well, maybe not quite swings, but it's a good little tune.

And there are more, yet. More, in fact, than I have room to list. But more there are. So if you're a real fan, $3.50 shouldn't be too much to pay. And if, like me, you're not quite what could be called a fan, the prices run on down the scale at half-buck intervals all the way to $2.00, which even I can afford.

Not only that, but for the benefit of those of you who have labs 'til seven in the evening, the Management has gone to the trouble of scheduling two shows: The first at 7:30, and the second at 9:45. The tickets you can get at Thiem's Record Shop, Hamlin Drug Co., or (if there are any left by then) at the door.

At this point, I would like to express my thanks to that friend I mentioned earlier. Without his help, I'd never have been able to keep all those singers straight. But he asked me not to print his name because his fiance thinks that the only thing he ever listens to is Stravinsky, and she might not understand. Okay, Al, she'll never know.

Groundwork Important Says SP Candidate

"To plan the initial steps will require the president's co-ordinated work with the proper student government, faculty and administrative officials.

"Normally the president of the student body has the period from the latter part of March until the beginning of examinations in which to hold interviews for the many student government positions, make his appointments, select the summer school president, lay the groundwork for his programs, complete the past year's activities, and mold the four executive positions into a working team.

"This year, because of the run-off and the spring vacation, the president will find himself with barely a month in which to perform the necessary duties. He will not be able to spend valuable time in acquainting himself with his tasks and with the means by which he must solve his problems.

"I believe that the opportunities that I have had to serve in various phases of student government during the past three years in the student legislature, on the Graham Memorial Board of Directors, on the Honor System Commission, on the Consolidated University Student Council and especially this past year as vice president of the student body, has enabled me to gain the administrative knowledge which will make it possible for me to begin immediate work on our many student problems."

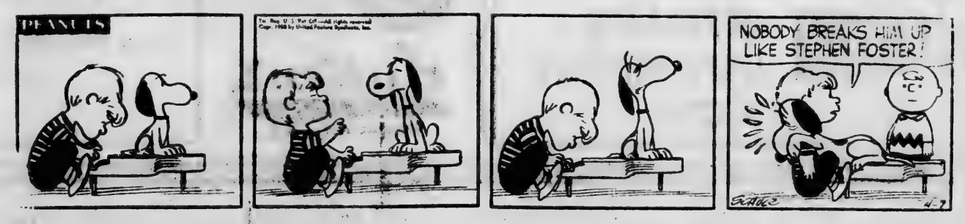
Gay Cowan's Dance Committee is charged with the coordination of all GMAB dances including such annual social highlights as the Homecoming Dance. This group is entirely responsible for all phases of these dances and as such it constantly planning for bigger and better "hops." Next year the Mardi Gras which has been under the direction of Gerry Boudreau, will also come under the jurisdiction of the Dance Committee.

The Drama Committee under the able direction of Scamon Gottlieb has sponsored all presentations of the Petite Dramatiques. This group has given "The Cocktail Party" and "Judith" to the campus this year. Gottleib has also headed the Foreign Flims Committee.

President Thomas announced yesterday that in the future, both the Foreign Films Committee will fall under the direction of one chairman. Curtis Gans has headed the Free Flicks this year which has brought at least one free movie to Carolina every week all year.



The Music Committee, with Russ Link as chairman, has continually brought to this campus outstanding entertainers in the field of music. This group's activities are sponsored under the name of Petite Musicales.

Mrs. Douglas Fambrough is in charge of the office staff downstairs in GM which performs a wide variety of tasks each day. There is also an active group of students who share the office of GMAB.

Mike Strong has served as chairman of the Publicity Committee which has headed all publicity for GMAB. This group has been visibly active throughout this year with posters and displays featured around campus.

The Receptions and Decorations Committee has been headed by Betty Carolyn Huffman this year. This committee has ordered refreshments for any organizations on campus that wish them to and sponsors a great many receptions.

handpicked and groomed for the job, but I do not feel we should have a dynasty system in student government.

"As for my qualifications I have served two years in legislature, holding such positions as speaker pro tempore, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, and University Party floorleader. I have served as treasurer and a member of the Program Committee of the Carolina Symposium. I am at present treasurer of the Orientation Committee, I am a member of the NSA Committee, I am a fraternity officer, I have been a dormitory officer, and I have been a member of various committees working with student government. Even more important I have been close to student government without being swallowed up in it so as not to be able to see the many faults of the past two administrations.

Georgia Bulldogs Defeat Carolina 10-5; Gain Series Split

ATHENS, Ga. (AP)—The Georgia Bulldogs scored five runs with but one hit in the seventh inning Tuesday to whip North Carolina's Tar Heels 10-5 in an intersectional baseball game.

Carolina beat Georgia Monday.

The Tar Heels had matched runs with the Bulldogs until the fatal seventh when the visitors fell apart at the seams, five runs pouring across the plate on three errors, three walks, a sacrifice fly and a single.

The visitors scored two runs in the first, matched in the bottom of the same inning by Georgia, on an error and singles by Johnny Pons and Vaughan Bryson. They got two more in the 6th on Lindsay Frost's triple with two men aboard. Carolina's Gerald Griffin hit a 375-foot homer in the 7th to end the scoring.

Georgia countered with two runs in the first, one in the fourth and two in the fifth, before wrapping it up in the big seventh.

The Bulldogs had three men to get two hits in three trips. No Carolina player got more than one hit.

Unbeaten Golfers Meet Tough Indiana Today

By ELLIOT COOPER

With victories over Princeton and Virginia, the varsity golf team goes after win number three this afternoon at Finley Golf Course against a visiting Indiana squad from Bloomington, Indiana.

In last Wednesday's match against the Cavaliers, Tar Heel golfer Bill Thornton established a new course record with a seven-under-par 65. Carolina's Tom Langley also broke par with a one-under 71. In addition to Thornton and Langley, Carolina coach Chuck Erickson will send Gene Lookabill, Bob Ruffin, John McKee, Joe Callicott, Charlie Erdman and Charlie Gray against the Hoosiers in this afternoon's play.

Last year Bob Fitch's Hoosiers compiled a 3-9 season mark and finished tenth in the Big Ten Meet at Iowa City. Fitch lost three lettermen from last year's squad but has four returning to play again this season. Returnees Darl Kriete, Ron Tererll, Bart Spillman, and Leon Favede will probably occupy the top spots in the Indiana lineup.

Seven Sophs

Over half of the Indiana rosters is made up of Sophomores. Seven of the team's twelve members are sophs, four are Juniors, and Terrrell is the lone Senior on the squad. The soph contingent is led by Ron Royner, who qualified for the National Amateur last fall and holds the I.U. course record with a 65. Jon Sommer, another soph, tied for first place in last year's Tri-State Open held at Evansville.

Philley Gives Batting Views

By JOE REICHLER

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave Philley, handyman of the Philadelphia Phillies, who is equally at home in the outfield at first and at third base, has a unique distinction.

He is the only player—at least until it is proven otherwise—ever to enjoy a hot batting streak and suffer a wretched batting slump simultaneously.

Philley, it should be explained, is a switch hitter, a specie almost extinct in the major leagues. He is also a pinch hit specialist and a good one. His .414 average in that capacity was the highest in both leagues last year.

So where does that Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde stuff come in?

"It's no mystery" explained the 37-year-old Texan who is starting his 14th year in the big leagues. "I've been a switch hitter throughou my baseball career and it is not unusual for me to enjoy greater success batting from one side of the plate than from the other.

"There was a spell last year, though, when the pitchers couldn't get me out when I was hitting left handed. On the other hand, when switched over to the right side—against lefthanded pitching—I couldn't buy a base hit."

An American Leaguer throughout his entire big league career until he was sold by Detroit to the Phillies last December ,Philley appeared in 30 games as a pitch hitter last year. He collected 12 hits in 29 official times at bat.

University Officials Mourn Death Of Trainer Doc White

Richard A. (Doc) White, 47, for 19 years in athletic trainer here at Carolina, died last Thursday of cancer. The much beloved man was active until several days ago when he entered a Durham hospital, where he died.

His associates in university athletics paid tribute to him as "one of the most able and popular members of the staff."

Athletic director Chuck Erickson said "his los will be great . . . he had an unusual understanding of college athletes and a rare touch with them."

White was honored March 22 at halftime ceremonies of the annual Blue-White football game. He recieved a trophy awarded by the NCAA, District 3 chapter of the National Athletic Trainers Assn. for his "longtime and unselfish service" in his profession.

Carolina sports publicity director Jake Wade commented thus in his column, Carolina Caravan:

"Call the roll of all the members of the University of North Carolina athletic family, and every vote would say that Doc was one of the best liked members of our team. He just happened to be one of those occasional people in this orbit of too often strife and distrust whom everyone liked.

"It was for a good reason, too. The long time UNC athletic trainer simply was a grand fellow with no ill will to any of his fellow men.

"Richard Arnold White did not have an easy life. He was troubled much, with assorted cares, during the years that I knew him much of this centered around his own health.

"But he was such a good and unselfish fellow that he never burdened you with his troubles. He minded his own business and did his job, always well. He was shy, almost to the point of timidity, never coveted the limelight. He seemed too often occupied with the troubles of others, solicitous of their health and welfare, brushing aside his own and accepting the latter philosophically.

"During his last year on this earth, in the wonderful world of sports which he loved, he suffered much. There were times, during his lingering illness, when he must have felt deep inside that he had just as soon for it to be the last inning. He was, indeed, that sick and uncomfortable.

"Your worthy associates leave you from time to time, and sometimes, alas, it seems before their time."

Netters Face Wake Forest Here Today

Sporting a 3-0 season record, the varsity tennis team goes after its fourth win of the campaign this afternoon when it entertains Al DePorter's Wake Forest net squad at 3 o'clock on the home courts.

For the Tar Heels this match marks the opening of the regular ACC season play and begins their guests to dethrone Maryland as the conference champion. Thus far this season the Carolina netters have achieved victories over Williams, Harvard, adn Illinois in non-conference competition.

Carolina coach Ham Strayhorn will probably send the same lineup against the Deacons that he used in the last two matches. Tar Heel captain Bobby Bortner, playing in the number one position, will be gunning for his second win of the year. Steve Bank will play in the second slot followed by Junior Geoff Black at three. Malcolm Clark, Ben Keys, and Dick Makepeace will play the four, five, and six singles.

In his freshman year as varsity tennis coach Deporter compiled a 3-7 season mark. This year, however, the Wake Forest coach will have four lettermen returning from last year's squad which lost to the Tar Heels. Today's match will also mark the beginning of the ACC flag chase for the Deacons who have only one match against M.I.T. under their belts to date.

TRIP TO EUROPE

UNC students who plan to go on the UNC trip to Europe this summer will meet today at 4:30 p.m. in the Library Assembly Room. John Caspagis, a Swiss student from Churwalden ,Switzerland, will speak informally about Switzerland.

Cage Banquet This Saturday

The annual University of North Carolina basketball banquet, at which the Chapel Hill Athletic Club will be host, will be held Saturday at 6:45 p.m. at Lenoir Hall, Vic Huggins, club president, has announced.

Both varsity and freshman squads will be honored.

Coach Frank McGuire will be the chief speaker, with Roy Armstrong, University Dean of Admissions, master of ceremonies.

Monograms will be presented by Athletic Director Chuck Erickson and Chapel Hill Athletic Club plaques will be presented by Huggins to the seniors.

The seniors receiving 1957-58 monograms are All-America Pete Brennan, Tommy Kearns, Bob Cunningham and Roy Searcey.

The Tar Heels this past season failed to repeat as national and Atlantic Coast Conference champions, but won the Dixie Classic and had a fine conference record of 10-4 and overall of 19-7.

Members of the Chapel Hill Athletic Club have been invited to bring guests, including their wives, and Huggins expects a large attendance.

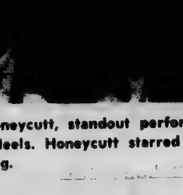
The Club now has a total membership of 141, an increase of 75 during the past year.

Tar Heels Runner-Up In Dixie Classic Action

By RUSTY HAMMOND

Carolina's Tar Heels rolled over two straight foes in the Dixie Baseball Classic before bowing to N. C. State in the finals last Thursday night at Winston-Salem.

The Heels bounced all touring eastern teams they have met, obtained a tie with Virginia Tech and then met their downfall in their own Atlantic Coast Conference against State.



The table fans saw the Heels tame Princeton's Tigers last week. Carolina then rolled over Connecticut 12-3 to reach the finals against the crack Wolfpack nine.

The Tar Heels ran into a pitcher who just wasn't to be hit Thursday night in Joe Jones of the Pack. Jones blazed a one-hit shut-out over Carolina in leading his State teammates to a 4-0 win and the Classic crown.

Carolina's only base hit came when Carson Oldham smacked a grasscutter to left in the sixth inning.

The Wolfpack got all of its runs off starter Charlie Aycock, one in the first and three in the third, before reliefer Johnny Johnson came on to silence the State bats for the remainder of the contest. But the Chapel Hillians just couldn't find the range against Jones, who pitched a masterful game and won honors as the tournament's best hurler.

The Tar Heels came out of the tourney with not only the runner-up team, but the tournament's top outfielder, Gerald Griffin, sophomore from Williamston, N. C., who was voted the honor by coaches and reporters and awarded a trophy. Griffin was narrowly nosed out by State's Danny Casteen as the leading hitter in the series.

THE CASE OF THE CURIOUS CAPER

By HACK HACKFIELD

It was 4:27 A.M. In the morning. It was dark outside. It was raining. The streets were wet. We were working the night watch out of the Game Warden's Office.

I'm Clyde Smith. My partner's name is Smith. Clyde Smith. Sometimes it's very confusing. But we manage. Somehow.

We were walking down a dark, deserted street this particular morning. As we walked along, we talked. "How's your wife, Clyde?"

"O.K., I guess, Clyde. How's yours?"

"O.K. Have a cigarette?"

"Naw. Tryin' to quit."

"Oh."

Suddenly, out of the darkness, we heard a noise.

"You hear that, Clyde?"

"Yeah. We better check it."

We checked it. Caught the guy, too. He got twenty years, for shooting pool out of season.

Furtado Calls Charge Of Non-Undergraduate' Control Too Trivial For Comment

By ED GOODMAN

...tudent Party presidential candi... Don Furtado today issued a ...ly to his opponent's charges of ...dent government control by "non-...dergraduates".

...epudiating a statement yesterday ... UP candidate Al Goldsmith, he ...d: "I believe that those people ...o understand and know the opera...ns of the student government will ...alize the triviality of such a state...nt. It doesn't even deserve com...nt."

Asked his opinion on Goldsmith's ...tement, Student Body President ...ny Evans had no comment.

Goldsmith had said yesterday that ... think most highly of the present student body president, but at times I have wondered whether he is his own boss. I fear that there has been excessive control of student government in the past by non-undergraduates, and I believe it most essential that student government be under-graduate controlled.

In a separate on the honor system issue, Furtado said:

"A month ago, the Student Legislature approved a bill which provided

Fine Arts Festival Begins This Evening

A panel discussion on "Fine Arts and Science in Eduaction," to be held this evening at 8 o'clock in Graham Memorial Main Lounge, will begin a series of important art events of UNC's first Fine arts Festival.

Doctor Noel Housten, Doctor Warner Wells, and Doctor Gregory Ivey will act as the panel with Curtis Gans moderating.

Doctor Housten is currently a visiting professor of Radio, Television and Motion Pictures. He has written a best seller, two broadway plays and many magazine articles, including Fortune's recent series on Billy Graham.

Doctor Warner Wells, is a surgeon at Memorial Hopital and holder of the O. Max Gardner award for humanitarian service. He was a member of the Atomic Bomb Commisson, and while in Japan he translated "Hiroshima Diary."

Doctor Gregory Ivey is the head of the Art Department at Women's College and a member of the staff of WC since 1935. He is the author of "approach to Design" and has directed fine arts summer sessions. He has paintings exhibited at the Metropolitan Museum and other galleries.

Curtis Gans, a UNC student from Statesville was recently elected editor of The Daily Tar Heel.

This panel is the first in a series of events scheduled for UNC's First Fine Arts Festival. Other events this week include a Beaux Arts Ball, with theme, "A Trip to Outer Space," scheduled for 9 p.m. Friday in Carolina Inn, a sidewalk art exhibit, a performance of "Antigone" by the Petite Dramatique group, a performance by the Naval Air Cadet Choir and a concert by William Leland, pianist, plus a showing of the film "Ten Days that Shook the Earth."

Scabbard And Blade Plans Full Weekend

A full round of social events is in store for Carolina midshipmen and cadets this weekend.

Scabbard and Blade has announced final plans for the Military Ball and the appearance of the Naval Air Cadet Choir.

First event of the weekend will be the Scabbard and Blade Officer's Reception for the 1958 Military Ball Beauty Court Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Naval Armory. Officers of the local company will entertain the members of the court and their dates.

At 4 p.m. the Air Cadet Choir will present their first of two concerts in Hill Hall. The choir is making its annual tour of the eastern United States with its appearance here sponsored jointly by the Naval ROTC and Graham Memorial Activities Board. The choir will be in concert in Hill Hall again at 8. Both concerts are open to the public without charge.

Highlight of the weekend, the 1958 Military Ball, will be from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight in the Naval Armory. Theme of this year's ball will be "The Twin Services."

During intermission at the dance, presentation of the 1958 Military Ball Beauty Court will take place. Barry Clark, well known radio personality, will emcee the elaborate ceremonies and announce the 1958 Military Ball queen. She will be crowned by John Alexander, president of the local chapter of Scabbard and Blade.

UNC midshipmen and cadets can look forward to a full social weekend to top off the year of unit activities.

'Spring Swing' Street Dancing Starts Friday

Carolina students will be treated to the second annual "Spring Swing" on Friday and Saturday of this week.

Sponsored by the Chapel Hill merchants, these two days will be a real "swinging session" according to Ty Boyd of the WCHL staff.

The merchants have just received permission from the State to rope off Franklin St. on Friday night so students will be able to dance in the street to the sounds of Sam Atwater's rock n' roll combo.

All local stores will feature "Spring Swing Special" expressly for the students. Many will be staying open until 9 p. m.

Boyd called Atwater's group the "hottest rock n' roll band in the South" and predicted a "real swinging session with the Swinging Shephards." The combo is known as the Swinging Shephards and all are students at North Carolina College in Durham.

There is some possibility that either or both of the movie houses will have a free flick for their late show. This is now being considered in their respective regional offices in Charlotte.

Grail Taps 13 New Men In Pre-Dawn Ceremonies

Thirteen students were initiated into the Order of the Grail in predawn ceremonies this morning. The number of new members has been set at 13 by tradition.

Admitted to the Grail this morning were Neil Carmichael Bender, Pollocksville; Wayne Staton Bishop, Greenville; Ralph Waldo Cummings, Jr., Raleigh; Rudolph Lee Edwards, Rutherfordton; Douglas George Eisele, Statesville; Albert Lewis Goldsmith Jr., Lincolnton.

Leonidas Causey Holt, Julian; Charles Riddell Huntington, Spartanburg, S. C.; Alvin Larkin Kirkman, High Point; Denton Lotz, Northport, N. Y.; Richard Hill Robinson Jr., Greensboro; Johnny Clarke Whitaker, Winston-Salem and Paul Lindsey Woodard, Bayboro.

In the selection of its members, Grail Delegate John Kerr said last week, the Grail looks for students who already bear the evidence of leadership and unselfish service.

"To be a Knight is indicative not only of high recognition for achievement and unselfish devotion to altruistic endeavors, but also of the willingness to serve to exhibit these qualities in the interest of the student body," he added.

The Grail was established in 1920 to bring student leaders together in an organization that would serve the entire campus, promoting fellowship throughout the campus community as well as among its members.

According to Kerr the basic tenet of the Grail is that its membership should always be equally divided between the dormitory and fraternity sections of the campus.

The group's present officers are John Kerr, Delegata, Herman Godwin, Scribe; Benny Thomas, Exchequer, and Mac Paton, Vice-Exchequer. Active members are Eddie Bass, Neil Bass, John Brooks, Bob Carter, Sonny Evans, Joel Fleishman, Don Furtado, Sonny Hallford, Ray Jefferies, Tom Lambeth, Danny Lotz, Jerry Oppenheimer, George Ragsdale, Bill Redding, Sandy Sanders and Tom Walters.

GMAB Cuts Officials From Six To Three

The number of executive officers of the Graham Memorial Activities Board has been reduced from six to three. According to a report from Benny Thomas, president of GMAB, it will have one vice president next year instead of three. The office of treasurer has been eliminated.

The executive organization for the 1958-1959 session will consist of a president, a vice president and a secretary. The Graham Memorial Board of Directors will begin interviewing applicants for these positions next week.

Thomas said that this change greatly reduces the number of officers of GMAB, but the Board feels that it will make the programming of Graham Memorial easier.

"Through experience this past year," Thomas said, "we learned that the responsibilities of the various officers were spread too thin and that there was too much duplication of work. By reducing the number of officers the work load and responsibility of each will be increased; however, we feel that the program will be greatly aided and that, in the long run, the work will be easier and much more exciting."

Applications for executive posts and other GMAB positions are available at the information desk in Graham Memorial. "I encourage each and every interested student who wishes to participate in a very worthwhile and exciting extra-curricular activity next year to fill out one of these applications," Thomas said.

The Daily Tar Heel Has Staff Openings

The Daily Tar Heel presently has several positions open for writers and reporters in the News and Feature departments. A large amount of experience is not necessary, and the Tar Heel is prepared to provide excellent training in various phases of newspaper work for those interested in journalism.

Interested persons may stop by the offices of The Daily Tar Heel in Graham Memorial anytime during the next few days between 1 p.m. and 5 p.m. for complete information.

Air ROTC Honor Clubs Will Combine

The Arnold Air Society and the Sabre Air Command of the 590th AFROTC Group (cadet) in accordance with a resolution passed at a recent national convention held in San Francisco, have begun preceedings for a merger of the two Air Force honorary societies.

The name of the Combined units will be the Arnold Air Society Inc. and it will become a year organization.

Previously, members from the freshmen and sophomore classes who had shown outstanding military characteristics were chosen for membership in the Sabre Air Command. Upon reaching advanced standing in the air science program, cadets became eligible for membership in the Arnold Air Society.

The merger of these two organizations was brought about in an effort to further the objectives of the two units which were to foster leadership training in the crops of cadets and to recognize outstanding military students.

The newly elected officers of the Arnold Air Society will hold the same positions in the new organization. In the UNC unit they are: William S. Godwin, commander, from Erwin; David A. Ellis, executive officer, from Gamboa, Canal Zone; Bogdan M. Zlotnicki, operations officer, from Colon, N. C.; William F. Parker, adjutant-recorder, from Statesville; Phillip T. Williams, comptroller, from Charlotte and Carey W. Daniel, information service officer, from Durham.

All of these officers are juniors and are members of the advanced group in the Air Science Program.

Bell Tower Parking Lot Opens Today

Relief is in sight for the parking problem.

It was announced yesterday by J. Arthur Branch, business manager of the University that the new Bell Tower parking lot will be opened today.

The new parking lot will make room for over 500 cars. There are no restrictions as to whose car can be parked there. It will be open to everyone. The lot will be convenient for people with business in the hospital vicinity as well as the regular class buildings and library.

There will be signs in the lot today for the regulation of traffic.

It has been requested that no one park in the drive leading from the entrance to the lot. Signs have been erected to show the no parking areas.

The lot will remain open at night. It has been lighted and the paths leading to and from the lot have also been lighted.

It has been noted that there are over two miles of paved curbing already installed. The lot itself has not yet been paved. The cars parking on it will help to pack the dirt down and prepare the lot for paving.

It was also announced that a traffic light will be put up at the entrance of the lot. There will be a new exit cut from the library lot to come out at the traffic light. The new library exit will be combined with the exit of the chemistry building parking lot, thus making all of the exists come out at the light. This is to relieve the present hazard of coming out of those lots.

Parking in the lot will be observed by a parking committee for the rest of the school year and during summer school. If any regulations are needed for restricting parking they will be made next fall.

Run-Off Vote Demands Careful Thought'—UP

Syd Shuford, chairman of the University Party, and John Kerr, UP official, issued a joint statement Wednesday in support of Al Goldsmith, candidate for president of the student body which said:

"The presidential election Tuesday must will demand careful thought by every voter. We would like to suggest the following ideas which show Al Goldsmith to be the more desirable candidate.

"First, he has assumed leadership in Student Government thru the Student Legislature, Orientation Committee, NSA, and other organizations. In other student activities, he has held responsible posts in his dormitory, fraternity, NROTC and the Carolina Symposium. This shows wide and varied experience—a compelling requirement for president of the Student Body.

Secondly, we feel that Al is the natural leader of his party and will therefore coordinate his many duties and responsibilities to best serve the students and their needs. No cliques or extraneous groups will exist to confuse us by promulgating policy in the name of the University party or in the name of Student Government.

"Today, Student Government is facing several crises, not the least of which are student parking, fraternity relations and University expansion. Active forceful leadership is needed to resolve these problems. We do not feel a multifactional party is qualified for such a task. Al and the University party are united, they have been united for three years. Give them the chance to show what a united effort can produce and bring student government back to all the students.

Orientation Group Applications Due

Men applying for orientation counselorship have been urged to turn in their applications as soon as possible. Application blanks and study manuals are now available at the YMCA, Lenoir Hall, Graham Memorial and the library. The deadline is Monday.

A general test on the study manual will be given to all applicants on April 15 at 7 p.m. in Room 248 Venable. Individual interviews will be held April 16-23. Applicants will be notified by campus mail as to the time of their interviews.

Southern Press Photo Course Scheduled Here

The annual Southern Short Course in Press Photography will be held at Carolina Inn with UNC cooperating April 17, 18 and 19, featuring a large number of distinguished speakers, exhibits and contests, it was announced today by Hugh Morton of Wilmington, chairman for the short course.

Among the faculty will be Philippe Halsman, "one of the world's top greatest photographers"; Charles T. Haun, picture editor of hte Detroit Free Press; Joseph Costa of King Features; William A. Emerson Jr., of Newsweek; Jack Perry of CBS TV; Gray Villet of Life Magazine; O. C. Holland of Interchemical Corporation; Dick Pope of Florida's Cypress Gardens; Joseph Foldes, columnist for U. S. Camera magazine; Ellis Binkley of Kingsport, Tenn., Times-News; Gordon Kuster Jr. Columbus, Ohio prize winner and George Tames of the New York Times.

GM SLATE

The following activities are scheduled for today at Graham Memorial:

Forum Committee, 8-10 p. m., Main Lounge; Student Council, 7-11 p.m., Grail Room; Rules Committee, 4-5 p. m., Roland Parker Lounge I; Chess Club, 6:30-11 p. m., Roland Parker Lounge II; University Party, 6:30-7:30 p. m., Playhouse Conference Room; Student Caucus, 7-7:30 p. m., Roland Parker Lounge I; Women Honor Council, 6:45-10 p. m., Council Room; Dance Lessons, 7-8 p. m., Old Cafeteria Room.

Di Says Summit Meet Not Needed At Moment

A resolution urging the State Department to arrange for a summit meeting with Russia and other major powers in the near future was defeated 3-2, by the Di last night. A combined vote of both Di members and visitars brought the same results.

The bill was introduced by Senator Andy Canoutas.

Speaking aganist the bill, Conoutas said the failure of previous summit meets were not caused by Dulles, but by Russia's propaganda aims. He stated the reason Dulles has been hesitant in answering Russian invitations for a meeting is that he "is waiting to see whether the Russians are sincere this time or not."

"We don't need a summit meeting and the proposed disarmament talks," said Senator Pat Adams, "because this is what has kept us united in surging forward with our missiles program."

An affirmative position was taken by Senator Garner. "Disarm is a big word," he said. "Nuclear bomb reduction, yes, but not outer space programs."

He said in order for the country to progress, these programs could not be limited.

"This program cannot die," he maintained," nor can we change an age. We need a summit meeting to settle this issue between powers."

Another affirmatvie speaker, Senator Gary Greer, said the nuclear bomb problem should "be solved "Just because no problems have yet over tables instead of battlefields." been solved," he said," there is no reason to say we won't or can't solve them."

Empnasizing the dangers of the uncrear race, he added that "we must avert disaster today. Russia is doing something about this by requesting a meeting."

Visitor Don Jacobs, of the Phi, spoke against the bill. He claimed that past summit meetings "had been of no benefit" to the United States.

Tar Heels Win Awards Here

Three North Carolinians were among the 40 educators, newspapermen and broadcasters named Monday as winners of the Fund for Adult Education's 1958-59 scholarships.

They were John S. Clayton, assistant professor in the Department of Radio, Television and motion pictures at Carolina: Roland Giduz, managing editor of the Chapel Hill News Leader; and Mrs. Callie C. Hardwicke of Raleigh, home development specialist with the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service.

The Fund for Adult Education was established as an independent organization in 1951 by the Ford Foundation. This year's winners come from 21 states and will study at 17 universities.

Clayton will use his fellowship to continue his work toward a doctor of fine arts degree at Yale University.

Giduz plans to spend the year studying social and politicial science at Harvard University.

Mrs. Hardwicke will study at Columbia University Teachers College.

Another Tar Heel, Walter Spearman, professor of journalism at UNC, currently is on a leave of absence studying social and political science at Harvard under a similar fellowship.

Mangum Dorm Leading Way To More Pleasant Living

By DAVIS YOUNG

Mangum Dormitory might aptly be referred to as a "citadel of progressiveness," for the residents of this building have successful undertaken a vast program to improve their dorm.

In the past three years under the leadership of dorm officers, students residing here have brought Mangum near the top in every phase of dorm life.

Art Shields, outgoing secretary-treasurer, talked with great pride about the recent accomplishments of Mangum. He mentioned that Mangum now has an Election's Board similar to the campus Election's Board which interviews all candidates interested in seeking a dorm office and has the power to endorse or not endorse depending on the individual's qualifications.

Each floor at Mangum now has a floor representative who is responsible to the dorm president. These four people, along with the official dorm officers, meet once every week and carry on many of the governmental functions envolving dorm life.

During the course of the year, social life is not neglected, as four to six parties are sponsored by the dorm residents. Present plans call for a "blast" to be held at The Elbow Room in conjunction with Manly Dorm and Averett College of Danville, Va.

Perhaps the highpoint of a trip to Mangum is a tour of their beautifully decorated social room. Photographs and paintings are liberally hung on the wall about the room. Each window has a set of curtains and in the middle of the room is a well-filled trophy case.

Contained in this case are intramural athletic plaques and trophies.

Mangum Dorm has now won the Valkyries trophy for two years and hopes to retire it with a third victory next week. If this is accomplished, it too will be added to the already swelling ranks of the trophy case.

Mangum is also famous for producing campus leaders. Shields said, "We like to think of ourselves as a training ground for campus politicians.' He was referring to the fact that Student Party candidates Don Furtado, Ralph Cummings and Everett James are now or have been residents of this dorm. Doug Bayliff, new IDC vice president, is also living in Mangum.

Plans for the future call for rugs to be put in the social room, a glassed-in bulletin board and another trophy case. There is also hope that a vacant room on the fourth floor can be converted into a study room and that some space can be allotted in the basement for a recreation center.

We left Mangum on our way back to The Daily Tar Heel just as a group of boys were going to practice for the Valkyrie Sing. Yes, you guessed it, the music and script were written by Mangumites.

Alpha Kappa Psi Picks New Officers

Alpha Kappa Psi, professional fraternity in business administration, recently installed new officers for the coming year.

The new officers installed were: Laurence G. Wilson, Mt. Olive, president; Gerald D. Suddreth, Granite Falls, vice-president; Robert S. Drye, Oakboro, secretary; Garner R. Smith, Harmony, treasurer; Wilmor H. Wray, Reidsville, house manager and William T. Williams III, Ellerbe, master of rituals.

4 Winners Of Awards Announced

Three sons of UNC faculty members and a High Point native have won Woodrow Wilson fellowships for graduate work.

The fellowships, given for first-year graduate work leading to a career in college teaching, are awarded for students to use at the school of their choice.

Eugene Lane, son of Kenan Professor George S. Lane of Germanic and comparative linguistics, will come back to UNC from Princeton University and will do graduate study in the classics.

Kier Nash, son of Professor Arnold S. Nash, of the Department of Religion, will come to UNC from Harvard and will study Southern history.

Allen Williams, son of James A. Williams, UNC director of personnel, will go to Cornell where he will major in sociology.

Roger Jones from High Point was initiated into Phi Eta Sigma, freshman scholastic fraternity, in his freshman year and into Phi Beta Kappa in his junior year.

Eugene Lane was elected to Phi Beta Kappa at Princeton during his junior year.

Kier Nash has studied at Groton and at Harvard.

Allen Williams is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and a member of Delta Psi Fraternity.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Judith Mayfield, Alayne Garton, Thelma Vaughn, Elizabeth McKinnon, Nan Schaefer and Martha Griffin and Hugh Clark, Charles Howerton, Phillip Davis, Jerry Oakley, William Davis, Edwin Wilkerson, John Belmont, Patrick Smith, Wilham Lewis, Joseph Suggs and Charles Whedbee.

Block Vote, Apathy

From the election returns of last Tuesday came two very striking pictures. The first is of general student apathy and the second is of block voting.

Only 40% of the student body took the trouble to cast a ballot in Tuesday's election, although student government represents and exercises a certain amount of control over 100% of the campus.

A majority of the male students can be radically affected by the person whom they have elected to the Council or Student Council.

The women as a group can be strongly affected by the person who is elected to Women's Residence Council.

The President of the Student Body can lead the legislature to pass laws that will affect the entire campus, while the editors of campus publications are charged with the responsibility of presenting the campus to the state, the nation, and the world.

Any one of these officials can have an affect upon students. Any one deserves the interest, the attention, and the trouble of a vote in an election.

In Russia recently, 99.47% of the electorate voted in a one party election, in a country which is far from a democracy. The students of Carolina who have a democracy do not seem to cherish it enough to exercise their privilege of voting, as well as their responsibility to the democratic community.

In one woman's dorm only three students voted, and yet more than three students come under the province of student government. Each student, whether graduate or undergraduate is represented by his payment of $15 at registration time. If he does not choose to feel responsible for the way that money is being spent, then he negates his responsibility as a part of the university community and indeed as a thinking individual.

To the graduate student, undergraduate politics may seem like a lot of fuss over nothing. Yet, instead of exercizing the mature leadership that graduate students should possess by virtue of either their age or their intellectual capabilities, they choose to neglect their responsibility to the community in which they reside. The day may come when these same intelligent individuals negate their responsibility in the larger realm—the nation.

The second factor of block voting was evident in Town Mens II District, when between 261-277 students cost votes straight down the University Party ticket, with the highes opposition candidate totaling a little over 60.

In no other district on campus was this pattern or ally similar pattern followed.

There seems in this area little consideration of an individual's merits, but rather only a perfunctory consideration of the supposed fact that the particular party represents the interests of that area.

In no place such as the limited scope of a college community is the opportunity offered for a student to be treated on his individual merits at the polls, and this opportunity is being flouted.

The time has come for students in all walks of campus life to take stock of candidates in all areas as individuals and to do some individual thinking, rather than being led to the polls by the ideas of others.

It was rather gratifying to note that in one traditionally Student Party District, a University Party man was elected. It was not gratifying to note this because the editor is pro-UP or against the SP candidate who lost. It was gratifying to note because the people in this district considered a candidate as an individual rather than his party affiliation.

The people in Town Men's II might bear this example in mind in the future.

Education: Two Views On A Grave Problem

Individuality And The Child

ADLAI STEVENSON

(This is the last of a series of two articles by Mr. Stevenson, printed previously, Sunday, April 6, 1958 in the Magazine Section of The New York Times)

There is much talk in the world today of the uncommitted peoples—meaning the masses of Asia and Africa who will not take sides. I sometimes wonder whether there are not more uncommitted people here in our very midst — people bound by no ideal, warmed by no vision, impelled by no ambition, strengthened by no discipline, and, alas, unlit by any joy.

If once more we could restore the link in our children's minds bewteen the happiness that is their birthright and the ardor, discipline, and responsibility that must lie in its pursuit, I feel we should have remade the foundations upon which all true education rests. I do not believe all our physical programs for education, however essential, will have their true effect without this underlying change of heart.

We hear about "adjusting to life." Of course. But what is life today? If this means a child's learning to live easily with the other members of his family and the rest of the people in the block, fitting smoothly into his evironment, his church, feeling at ease with the people he sees from day to day, then I think we have drawn the circle dangerously small. For distance and time and space have shrunk, "life" is never again going to be a local island for any man or woman in the world.

Looking ahead for the long pull—not just to missiles and rockets—the American problem in education is to prepare citizens not merely to live in American society, but to live in an America caught up inextricably in an evolving world community, which, in turn, is seized by both technological and political revolution.

This means new dimensions for education. It means the training of innovators, not organization men, in both science and humanities. It means the understanding of other societies. And it means a deeper understanding of American history and society, not merely as a unique and treasured saga, but as part of universal experience. Instinctive knowledge of the round of American life as it is lived at home is not enough.

Yes, adjust children to life—to life in the world in which they live—a world where, among other things, the vast majority who are poor, the vast majority who are not white, the vast majority who are uneducated, are now demanding their birthrights as children equal in the sight of God.

The schools can't teach children all there is to know about the relationships of nations, about the intricacies of hard and easy money policies, about parity prices for farmers, and about the lethal mists that have been loosed upon the world. But the schools can do a great deal to teach children that their own ideas are good and worth having and expressing, even in the face of disagreement.

Francis Bacon said a long time ago: "What man will not alter for the better, time, the great innovator, will alter for the worse."

A society whose survival depends on innovation cannot rely on interdepartment committees and consensus. It must train men and women to be able to formulate, privately and painfully, new ways of looking at things, who are also capable of standing by their insights, if necesary, against the current consensus.

Perhaps it is the easiest part of the problem to say what the ideals of education are or ought to be. There remains of course the obligation to implement them, to make it possible for the schools to try to live up to them.

I have not discussed here the new dimension of difficulty which is added by the current crisis of numbers in the schools. And yet I would insist a little that there is nothing here that we are not in a position to meet.

The urgency of our desire to export an article of American manufacture to the moon—important as that is— is no excuse for deleting and drastically reducing provisions in the national budget for support of education. The need has not diminished. It has grown.

It should be added that another and very different point of ways and means has come into recent prominence, partly because of its promise for meeting the problem of the overloaded teacher in the overcrowded classroom— the fuller use of our teachnig resources by means of the new audio visual aids to education.

We are still in the infancy of the development of educational films, television, and the like. Badly used, even over-used, they could result in the sterilization of education. But already there has been much progress made along these and related lines that the discriminating administrator and the resourceful teacher can now do a better job for more children in less time and at less cost than ever before.

There is no substitute, of course, for a good teacher. Yet it is already clear that intelligent use of these remarkable visual materials in the classroom can greatly enrich and enliven instruction, and also release the teacher's fuller energies for the essential part of the teaching job.

I suggest, too, in connection with this problem, that we can make a virtue of necessity by relieving the tecahers of some of the jobs they have taken over from the parents, and which parents could do.

I taught my three boys to drive a car. I think they can do as much for my grandsons—and let their high school teachers concentrate on some things that are more important, or at least harder to teach.

If our educational purposes are unclear, if the curriculum is chaotic and cluttered with distractions, if the teaching staffs are overburdened with indiscriminate responsibilities well beyond their reasonable capacities to carry, we must expect that our children will be educated for mediocrity instead of for something better.

What does it add up to? Basically it is a matter, it seems to me, of redefinding and of reasserting the fundamentals of our educational faith. Respect for intellectual excellence, the restoration of vigor and discipline to our ideas of study, curricula which aim at strengthening intellectual fiber and stretching the powers of young minds, personal commitment and responsibility—these are the preconditions of educational recovery in America today; and I believe, they have always been the preconditions of happiness and sanity for the human race.

And just because this is so, I do not regard the task ahead of us as one confined to leaders and educators to influential men and women in the public eye. It is in the home that children first learn what to want and respect; what is important, what trivial, what worthy to be imitated and loved and admired. In the homes of all of us, then, let the recovery begin —in simple respect for work and effort, in delight in all manner of excellence, in trust and love of truth. These are the roots of education. Thy can grow in every home.

Scientific Training Not Primary Purpose

By HENRY COMMAGER

(This is the first of a series of two articles printed as one article in the Hadassah Newsletter of March 1958. Dr. Commager is professor of American History at Amherst College.)

It is a familiar observation that schools—at every level—are a function of society. Just as American society differed profoundly from European in the 18th and 19th centuries, so the functions imposed on American schools differed from those which older societies imposed upon their schools. Those are responsible both for the achievements and for the inadequacies of much of our educational system.

What are some of these differences? First, American schools were expected to educate not an elite but the mass of the people. Second, American education was predominantly secular, rather than religious. Third, it was pluralistic and local rather than uniform and centralized, and thus produced varied Fourth, it was called upon to perform a great many non-academic duties such as absorption of new immigrants, the teaching of citizenship, democracy and tolerance, and the development of useful skills. That meant that American schools, even though the college and the university, have been concerned with practical and utilitarian rather than with cultural subjects and interests.

No one who looks objectively at the problem that American education has faced—a problem far more difficult than that faced by older countries like Britain or France or Germany—can fail to be impressed with its achievements.

It provided education to a larger proportion of the population than did any other country in history. It built a splendid physical plant, superior to that of any other country. It provided common denominators of language, history, literature, and non-academic interests to a heterogeneous body of young people. It produced a people well enough educated to perform the exacting tasks of self-government, and at a higher level, to make contributions to science, scholarship, arts and letters of value to all mankind.

Almost every institution has the defects of its virtues. The defects, or inadequacies that were associated with these particular virtues have come to loom very large in our time. The first, and most obvious, is that the effort to educate everybody has been accompanied by a fairly steady levelling down of standards of education. The second is that because of the need of providing the professional skills called for by a growing society, our education has tended to become heavily utilitarian and vocational in character.

The third defect is that associated with fulfilling non-academic responsibilities, with inculcating Americanism, nationalism, cooperation, tolerance, and other virtues; This tended to make American education at once non-intellectual and emphatically nationalistic, or provincial. A fourth is that responsibility to local interest and local control has created not only the most varied standards of accomplishment, but has made schools generally far more sensitive and responsive to local opinion than is considered healthy by many educators.

We are now discovering the price we have paid for permitting these inadequacies to grow up along with these virtues. Our schools, we feel, have not taught well enough. Our graduates are well behind the graduates of comparable schools in other countries. Our schools take too much time to cover the required ground, and the result is overcrowded schools, over-worked teachers, and over-age students. Our schools do not maintain uniformly high standards, and the result is that students whohave theoretically covered the same ground, may be well educated or wholly uneducated. Ad there is a fourth inadequacy, not yet generally recognized: by concentrating on the utilitarian and the vocational, our schools are turning out men and women without a broad education and without broad interests, and are thus accentuating the provincialism and the narrowness of our society.

The response to these discoveries has been feverish rather than reasoned. We have thought to find solutions by building more schools, by establishing more colleges, by spending more money to do what we are already doing. We have thought to solve our problem by insisting on more and more mathematics, or more and more science, as if salvation were to be found in the laboratory. Or we have attempted to concentrate ever more on the needs of society, on producing more students competent for special jobs, on emphasizing even more than in the past the service to society or the community, or the service to the nation.

These proposals are not solutions. They will, if carried through, aggravate rather than solve our problems.

Why is it that emphasis on science, and on the national purposes of education will aggravate rather than ameliorate or solve our educational problems? Let us look at these questions separately.

First, the emphasis on science, and to a lesser degree on national security, is tainted at the source, because the motives and purposes are wrong. The motives and purposes of all education should be the development of wisdom and the expansion of the frontiers of knowledge.

Education does not exist to serve immediate utilitarian needs. It will, if properly pursued, serve the best interests of our time and our nation because it will help to create a generation that is wise and mature and that is capable of dealing with the problems that confront it.

It is easy to understand why, in the 19th century, American education should have been so heavily utilitarian: after all, the need was for teachers, lawyers, doctors, engineers, architects, businessmen, financiers, and agricultural experts. And because we needed such men so urgently we placed upon colleges and universities the responsibility for providing them, and thus permeated our entire educational system with a utilitarian and vocational character. But schools do not exist merely to serve the interests of society, certainly not the current and popular interests.

They exist in part to serve these interests, but in larger part to serve the interests of the future and of all mankind.

There is, too, the elementary consideration that a very large part of what we regard as civilization has no apparent utilitarian value at all. What after all is the use of a Bach cantata or a Beethoven sonata? What is the use of a painting by Renoir or a sculpture by Rodin? What is the use of a sonnet or an ode or a novel? Or, to venture into the realm of learning, what is the use of the study of Greek and Latin, of classical archaeology, of the civilization of the Aztec and the Inca?

Yet, "untune that string, and hark, what discord follows." For this, after all, is what we call civilization, and it is impossible for us to imagine a world without music and art and literature and the disinterested study of science. An educational system that discourages or discounts the contributions of these useless pursuits and seeks to train up a generation of technicians is one that may forfeit our heritage of civilization.

Our crucial problem is not, then, to apply our educational system to the production of more scientists, more mathematicians, more technologists. This we must, of course, do, but not as the major purpose of education. Our crucial problem is to develop statesmen competent to direct a scientific and technological world, to use the products of science and technology benevolently instead of malevolently.

Science and technology—it is a familiar consideration but worth repeating, are neutral, and so, too, in a sense, are scientists and technologists. They do not ask what are the consequences of their findings. Questions of values and of consequences are moral and ethical questions. They are the qestions that statesmen must ask—and answer; or they are the questions that statesmen and philosophers and politicians ask when they turn away from the neutral and non-human world of science to the world of morality.

It is necessary to recall the experience of Nazi Germany as a horrible laboratory example of what happens when the training of technicians outstrips that of statesmen and moralists? There was nothing wrong with German scientists and technicians, but there was everything wrong with the German statesmen who directed the use to which science and technology was to be put, and who set the moral—or the immoral—tone of the nation.

BENEFITS DENIED

There has been a "major breakthrough in agricultural science and technology." A century ago an American farm worker fed himself and three others. Today he feeds himself and 20 others . . . farm production per man-hour has doubled since 1940.

The benefits of this astonishing progress have been denied both to farmer and consumer—and at a staggering cost in tax money.

Congress should have the political courage to deal, finally, with this situation—if not in the terms suggested by the President, then by methods of its own, designed to accomplish similar purpose.—Rocky Mountain News

The Voice Of The Turtle

Techniques In Transit

(The following is part of Life magazine's current series on "The Crisis in Education")

Confident of their own established values in ethics, law and culture, the old-fashioned teachers deliberately set out to pass down these values as part of a living tradition. They held that it was all one cultural heritage—everything from Boyle's Law to Cicero's First Oration against Catiline—and the more of it you learned, the wiser and more mentally alert you would be.

Dewey and his disciples revolted against this certitude, which had indeed grown more than a little ossified in its teaching methods. But history records no more egregious case of throwing out the baby with the bath water. "We agree," Dewey once said, "that we are uncertain as to where we are going and where we want to go, and why we are doing what we do." In a kind of country-club existentialism, Dewey and his boys genially contended that the traditional ends of education, like God, virtue and the idea of "culture," were all highly debatable and hence not worth debating. In their place: enter life adjustment.

The Deweyites thus transformed conditioning techniques into ends in themselves. Teachers' colleges assumed the dignity of lamaseries. Teachers were denied the chance of learning more about their subjects, in favor of compulsory education courses in how to teach them.

Within the schools, discipline gave way to increasingly dubious forms of group persuasion. "With teen-agers," one high school principal said proudly, "there is nothing more powerful than the approval or disapproval of the group. When the majority conforms, the others will go along."

It would not easily occur to the modern educationists that such blind fostering of group pressure is a travesty of free democracy. Such criticism honestly puzzles them, as do suggestions that they might concentrate more on dry "learning" subjects, like mathematics and languages, to the exclusion of teenage problems, beauty care, fly casting.

The poor performance of their students has proved the educationists wrong. U.S. high school students are plain ignorant of things grammar school students would have known a generation ago. Years of barren discussion courses in English have made a whole generation chronically incoherent in the English language. Cut off from any but the most obvious contact with his tradition, e.g., an occasional project visit to the local courthouse, the student has lost his sense of history. Surely the history of the Crusades can give a young American a better grasp of the problems implicit in the U.N. or NATO than dressing up as a Pakistani delegate in an imitation U.N. Assembly at school.

With Dewey's world so demonstrably in tatters, one might think the educationists would run up the white flag. Far from it. Entrenched in public school administrations, they defend with the adhesiveness of a band of brothers every article of their gobbledygook canons. In Holland, Mich. the Christian High School, a respected institution of impeccable academic standards, has recently been denied accreditation by the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools because it refused to dilute its academic standards with shop and cooking courses. A sample of the canons by which such schools are judged: "Is the control and atmosphere of the individual's rooms and classes based upon teacher authority or group self-control and group-defined standards? To what extent are opportunities provided for children to develop moral and spiritual values through the process of direct experience in working with each other . . .?"

We cannot expect to cure such lopsided standards just by giving teachers the pay they deserve, building the schools we need, and ordering up more science courses. (But) a few important steps can be taken by state and local authorities. Most of our state teachers' colleges should be abolished as such and converted into liberal-arts colleges, with subordinate education departments. There must also be some drastic upgrading of curriculum requirements.

But most of all, we need to do some thinking about the true ends of education. The worthwhile innovations in method brought by Dewey's educationists should be kept. But their exclusive devotion to techniques and group adjustment should never again be allowed to hide the fact that American education exists first of all to educate the individual in a body of learning, with a tradition and purpose behind it.

TELEVISION

7:00—Channel 4

The American Government series devotes tonight's half-hour to a consideration of "The Legislative History of a Bill."

8:30—Channel 2, 11

Climax! presents Michael Wilding in "The Volcano Seat"—a melodrama about the Air Force. Entertainment for those who have absolutely nothing to do.

9:30—Channel 2, 11

Also up in the air is Playhouse 90, which presents a ninety minute play about the conflict between love and war. It has been noted elsewhere and often that these two human activities have many similarities, but tonight's tale has nothing so amusing to propound. Forecast: gooey and shallow.

Desire Space Travel? Go To Inn Tomorrow

By MARY MOORE MASON

Have you ever been to outer space? Well you have the chance of a lifetime.

No, the physics department is not launching a rocket to the moon, and the religion department is not sending missionaries to convert the Martians.

Your trip will be sponsored by GMAB and the University Art League in the form of their first Beau Arts Ball this Friday night in Carolina Inn.

"Although the ball has as its theme "A Visit to Outer Space," the costumes do not have to all be on this theme. Any costume will be alright," said Dwayne Lowder, Art League member.

Two prizes will be given at the ball for costumes, one to the girl with the most original costume, and one to the boy with the most original costume.

"The Embers," well-known local dance band will play for the dance which will be from 9 to 12 p.m.

The tickets which are on sale at Graham Memorial and will be on sale in Y-Court on Friday and Saturday mornings are $1.50 a couple.

Interesting decorations are planned for the affair, which is one of the features of the first annual Fine Arts Festival. A large rocket will be one of the feature decorations.

for a jury system in our two honor councils.

"The jury concept is quite a departure from any past system. It was instituted, with the hope that the increased participation by the student body would make each of us more cognizant of the tremendous importance of the Honor System in the Carolina student community.

"Because of the great amount of debate and discussion which accompanied the acceptance of the new system ,many students are not familiar with the operation of our present honor councils. This situation is understandable, but here at Carolina, where the Honor System forms the nucleus of our way of life, it is mandatory that the student body receives the needed education immediately. If this is not done, we cannot expect much positive improvement of the Honor System to result from the new Councils.

"As I mentioned in a previous article, this year the president of the Student will find himself with only one month in which to perform many necessary tasks, because of the delay caused by the run-off and th espring vacation. Therefore, immediately upon entering the presidency, he must organize a body of students who are familiar with the new system (such as the Honor Council members, the Honor System Commission, etc.) to appear at chapter meetings and dormitory meetings to explain the jury system.

"We cannot expect our Honor System to magically work. For succesful operation, it requires the careful education of those who are to live under it. It is one of the duties of the president of the Student Body to provide for that education, especially at the present time."

Clemson Edges Heels 2-1 In First ACC Game

CLEMSON, S. C. (AP)—Harold Stowe of Clemson and Wayne Young of North Carolina each pitched four-hit ball here Wednesday and neither allowed an earned run. The Clemson southpaw, however, bested the Tar Heels' sophomore 2-1 to earn his fourth victory of the year without a loss.

Stowe Pitches Well

Stowe struck out 10 batters and didn't walk a man. At one stretch in the game he retired 11 men in a row and four times he set the side down in order.

Clemson rapped Young for two first inning runs. Larry Bagwell got a walk after one was out and all hands were safe when Oldham failed to touch the bag on an attempted force on Bus Spiers' grounder. DeBerry brought in Bagwell with a single and Spiers came all the way round with another run when Don Coker let DeBerry's hit roll to the fence.

NETTER NUMBER 3—Geoff Black is currently playing number four man on Carolina's unbeaten tennis team. The club's next match is an ACC event with State College next Monday. Yesterday's match with Wake Forest was cancelled.

Frosh Top Chowan 6-5

Carolina's Tar Babies won their second game in as many days here yesterday by nosing out Chowan College 6-5. John Stott's pinch-hit single in the bottom of the eighth inning with two men on provided the yearlings with the win.

Russ Hoke obtained credit for the win, as he came on in the top of the eighth with the frosh trailing to still the uprising.

Wayne Allen started for the Tar Babies and pitched four innings of hitless ball before leaving the game to save his arm. Bob Stokes relieved Allen in the fourth, gave way to Bill Rigden in the eighth, who was relieved by Hoke.

3-1 Record

The win brings the Tar Babies' season slate up to 3-1, their only defeat coming at the hands of Presbyterian in an 8-7 10-inning affair. The Tar Babies will play Oak Ridge here today at 3:30 on Emerson Field.

Basketball Star Goes Berserk

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP)-Jack Parr, Kansas State's all-Big Eight Conference basketball player, went berserk in a hospital room Wednesday, wrecked the furniture and cut his wrists with broken glass.

The 6-foot, 10-inch center drove physicians and nurses away, brandishing a chair leg, and was locked in the room more than an hour before he was induced to come out peacefully, his attending physician reported.

Tear gas and water hoses were used unsuccessfully in attempts to dislodge the giant 22-year-old basketball star.

Finally Parr talked with County Attorney Richard D. Rogers and the Rev. Samuel S. George, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, through an open window and agreed to allow them to enter the room. He threw the chair leg out the window.

He was taken immediately to surgery to repair the cuts on his wrists. Doctors said Parr had lost considerable blood but the cuts were not dangerous. The room was a shambles, they said.

Rogers said Parr would be taken to the state hospital at Topeka to be kept there until the arrival of Parr's father Thursday.

Golfers Edge Indiana 14-13; Third Consecutive Victory

Carolina's crack golf team edged out Indiana of the Big Ten 14-13 in a close match here yesterday. It is the Tar Heels' third consecutive win, the others coming against Princeton and Virginia.

Lookabill Fires 71

Medalist for the match was Indiana's Royer who fired a 2 under par 70. Carolina's medalist was Gene Lookabill with a 71, followed by Billy Thornton with a 72. Thornton went around in 65 against Virginia last week to, set a new course record for amateurs.

The turning point of the match came when Royer was playing Bill Thornton of Carolina on the 18th hole. Royer's second shot on the par 4 hole was only 33 feet from the cup, but Thornton holed it out with an eagle two, which eventually gave the Tar Heels the deciding margin.

Michigan Here Friday

Carolina will meet another Big Ten team in Michigan this Friday, once again on Finley Golf Course.

The Heels will be gunning for win number four, and right now they look like the class of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

SUMMARY

Royer (I) over Thornton (C) 2-1.

Dess Inks Contract

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Washington Redskins have signed Darrell Dess, North Carolina State tackle, for the 1958 National Football League season.

Dess, a 235-pounder from New Castle, Pa., was the Redskins' 11th draft choice.

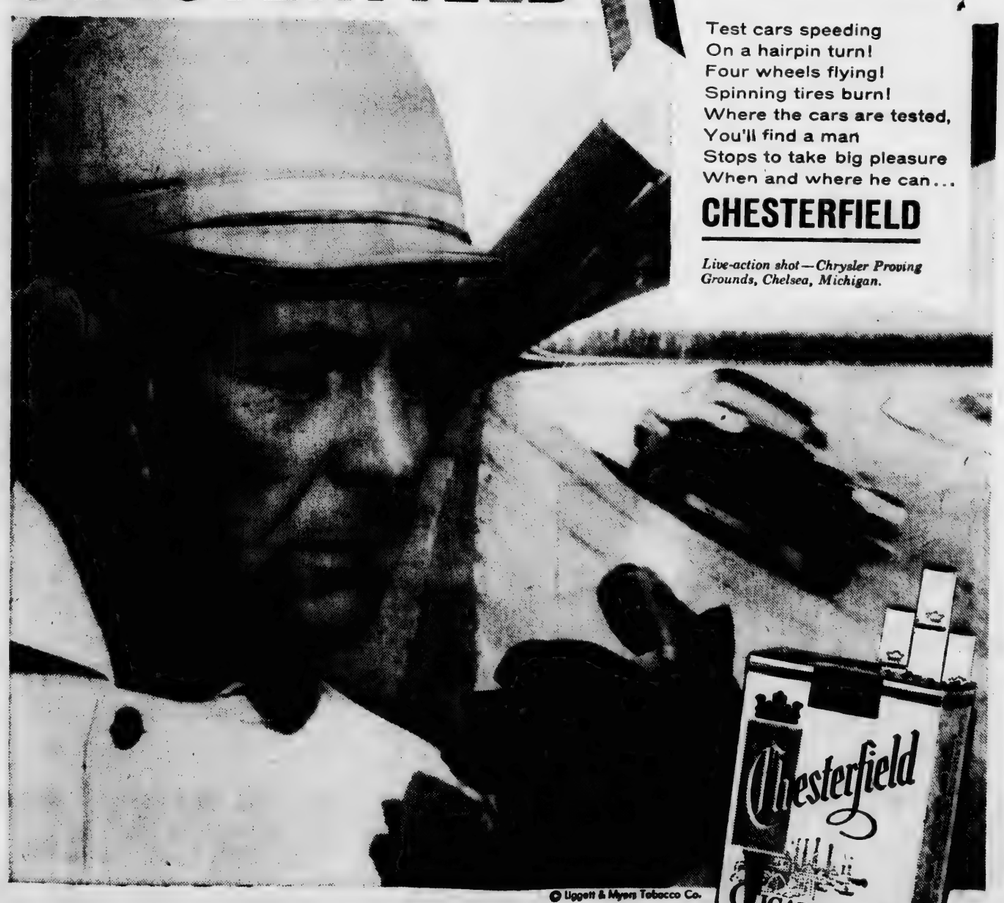
Soccer Practice

All students interested in playing on the soccer team next fall have been urged by Coach Marvin Alle to report for spring practice. The sessions are to be held on the Intramural field beside Woollen Gym and they begin today at 2:30.

Oriole Bonus Baby Moves To Knoxville

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP)-Knoxville of the Class A Sally League will provide the first professional baseball setting for the 18-year-old hope of the Baltimore Orioles, Dave Nicholson.

It's a promotion for the 19-year-old outfielder from St. Louis. Manager Paul Richards of the Orioles thought when spring training started that Nicholson would have to begin at the bottom of the minor league ladder with a Class D team.



At the end of training today, Richards said of his decision to send Nicholson to Knoxville.

"The boy has guts. He'll fight his way. If we find out he's over his head, we'll drop him a notch. We'll be in constant touch. He has improved greatly here this spring, but he's still got a long way to go."

Local Merchants Roll Carpet Out For 2-Day 'Spring Swing'

"You can go into any store in town today and tomorrow and have a big time." Those were the words of Milton of Milton's Clothing Cupboard yesterday afternoon on the eve of the second annual "Spring Swing."

Sponsored by the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchant's Association, the "Spring Swing" promises to be one of the leading days for both students and businessmen financially speaking.

Most stores will stay open until 9 o'clock tonight specifically for this occasion. At 8 p.m. there will be a concert to be held in Franklin Street. Then. from 8:30 until 10 p.m. there will be "dancing in the streets" to the sounds of the Sam Atwater combo from Durham.

Milton said. "this is the first time that we have ever had anything such as dancing in the street and we are all very enthusiastic about its prospect. Our only hope is that it won't rain."

All of the merchants will have "Spring Swing Specials" which are featuring great reductions in the retail price of their articles. Many of them will be below wholesale and students are expected to make a "real haul" over the two day period.

The "Spring Swing" was held in March of last year, but it was decided to put it off until April this year because of cold weather. Over $150 has been alloted by the Merchant's Association to cover the expense of the combo and other sidelights.

Milton called last year's affair "well received" and said that the store owners are "going all the way this year" to show their appreciation to the students for their

Poll Shows Notable Skid In Honor System Prestige

By DAVIS YOUNG

The latest study just completed by the Polls Committee of GMAB indicates that only 44 per cent of the students questioned would report a violation of the Honor Code. Over 48 per cent stated they would not with the rest undecided.

Commenting on this phase of the poll, chairman Jan Cobbs of the Polls Committee stated yesterday. "last year over 80 per cent of the students indicated they would uphold the principles of the Honor Code.

"This poll shows that 48.4 per cent of the student body would not turn in someone for an Honor Code violation. This all shows a lack of understanding on othe part of the students as to what are the Honor Code principles and the student duty toward the Honor Code."

Drama Group Slates Performances Here

"Antigone" of Jean Anouilh will be presented Saturday and Sunday nights in Gerrard Hall at eight o'clock.

This play will be the third of the productions of the Petites Dramatiques, a dramatic series sponsored by Graham Memorial Activities Board.

Taken from the play of Sophocles the story of "Antigone" is viewed by Anouilh in its modern significance. The story tells of the clash between the state and the individual. King Creon has forbidden the burial of his nephew, Polynices, who led a revolt against the city.

Antigone disregards her uncles' orders and buries her brother. Caught by the guards she is brought before the king, who offers her clemency if she will be silent. Her decision starts a chain of events which results in deep tragedy for all involved.

The role of Antigone will be played by Amanda Meiggs. Creon will be played by William Dixon and the Chorus will be Taylor Williams. Others in the cast are Kenneth Callender, Carolyn Marsh, Harold Williamson, Lucy Ann Dunlap, John Whitty, John Steed, William Pfefferkorn, Bobbi Dixon and Michael Okun.

'Antigone" will be directed by Peter B. O'Sullivan, graduate major in English.

According to producer, Seamon Gottlieb, the general public will be invited and no admission will be charged.

Beaux Arts Ball Set To Blast Off Tonight

Carolina's first trip to outer space will come off tonight when Carolina students take off for the Carolina Inn and the first Beaux Arts Ball, a costume ball, co-sponsored by Graham Memorial Activities Board and the University Art League.

"The Embers," well-known local band, will provide the music for the dance which will last from 9 to 12 p.m. n the ballroom of the Inn.

Although the theme of the dance is "A Visit to Outer Space," the costumes do not have to be on this theme. Students can also come in formals if they are not able to make or get costumes. However, a prize will be given to the boy and to the girl who have the most original costume.

The ball, which is to be patterned after the Artist's and Model's ball in New York City, will have unusual decorations featuring a large rocket and helium filled balloons.

The ball is part of a Fine Arts Festival which the student union is hoping will be successful and become an annual event.

Street Dance Leads 'Spring Swing' Affair

Carolina students will be treated to the second annual "Spring Swing" today and tomorrow.

Ty Boyd of the WCHL staff says that this year's affair will be a "real swinging session." All of the events are being sponsored by the merchants of Chapel Hill.

Permission has been received from the State to rope off Franklin Street on Friday night until 10 o'clock in order to provide for dancing in the street. Music will be supplied for this dance by Sam Atwater's combo from North Carolina College.

Boyd called Atwater's group the "hottest rock n' roll band in the South" and predicted they would provide the crowd with "great sounds."

All local stores will feature "Spring Swing Specials" expressly for the students. Many will be staying open until 9 p.m.

There is also some possibility that either or both of the local movie houses will have free flicks on Friday night at the late show.

Today Marks First Day Of Art Show

Part of East Franklin Street may look like the left bank of Paris or Greenwich Village today, Saturday and Sunday when the Recreation Committee of GMAB and the University Art League co-sponsor the first annual sidewalk art show in connection with the Fine Arts Festival.

The work exhibited will be the work of both students and townspeople, and it will be exhibited in the vacant lot next to the Methodist church. Some of the paintings will be for sale.

In case of rain the show will be moved to the Rendezvous Room of Graham Memorial.

Over thirty people had already submitted examples of their work by Thursday morning.

Softball And Dance Top Pharmacy Affair

This afternoon the School of Pharmacy will begin a weekend of festivities with a softball game followed by a picnic at the American Legion Hut. Kappa Psi and Phi Delta Chi, professional pharmacy fraternities, will be opponents in the sports event.

Later in the evening the group will enjoy informal dancing, at a Cabin Party in the Hut, to music provided by Sam Atwater's combo from Chapel Hill.

Saturday afternoon the Kappa Psi fraternity will hold a banquet at the Castle Club in Durham, and Saturday evening the School of Pharmacy will hold a formal dance in Woollen Gym. The "Duke Ambassadors" will play for the affair and during the evening the orchestra's entertainment group, composed of Duke coeds and several singing groups, will provide special attractions.

At intermission the officers of the School of Pharmacy and their dates will be presented in a figure.

Both fraternity houses will hold open house all day Friday and Saturday.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Alleyne Garten, Thelma Baughan and Martha Griffin and Hugh Clark, Francis Riggs, Sidney Bradfield, Philip Davis, Robert Dryer, William Davis Edwin Wilkerson, John Belmont, William Lewis, Lafie Bailey, Joseph Suggs, Charles Whedbee and Dan Fowler.

CAROLINA SOCIAL SCENE

Old South Ball, Sweetheart & Alumni

By JOAN BROCK

Old South Ball

Approximately 103 Kappa Alphas and their dates will leave Chapel Hill this afternoon about 3 o'clock to attend the annual Old South Ball to the held in Charlotte this year.

This group will arrive in Charlotte about 6 o'clock and will attend a dance tonight at the Red Fez Club. "The Gladiolas," a Negro instrumental-vocalist group, will be the featured entertainers for the evening.

Saturday noon will find the KAs distributing their Southern hospitality up and down the main streets of Charlotte, in their annual parade. The procession will end at the Mecklenberg County Courthouse where a secession ceremony will be held.

Following the parade, a reception and barbecue supper will be held for brothers, alumni, and guests at Radio Center. Tom Belk of Charlotte, province commander and ruler of North Carolina chapters, will be special guests for the events.

Saturday night Radio Center will be invaded by a Confederate atmosphere when the KAs and their dates assume roles of Southern Belles and Beaux. Billy Knauff's orchestra from Charlotte will provide music for the occasion.

Each of the five KA chpaters in North Carolina has selected a KA Rose to compete for the title of Province Rose. During the evening, the sponsors and their dates will be presented in a figure and a new state queen will be crowned.

Orientation Group Applications Due

Men applying for orientation counselorship have been urged to get in their applications as soon as possible. Application blanks and study manuals are now available at the YMCA, Lenoir Hall, Graham Memorial and the library. The deadline is Monday.

A general test on the study manual will be given to all applicants on April 15 at 7 p.m. in Room 268 Venable. Individual interviews will be held April 16-23. Applicants will be notified by campus mail as to the time of their interviews.

Sigma Chis

The 1958 Sweetheart of Sigma Chi at UNC will be crowned tonight at a banquet at the Cavalier Hotel in Virginia Beach, Va.

The queen to be named from 11 UNC coeds will be announced at the Saturday night banquet, highlight of the weekend's actvities, and then honored at a party following the dinner.

Competing for the honor are Frances De Armon of Charlotte; Kay Wrenn and Joan Brooks of Grensboro; Norma Basnight, Greenville; Elizabeth Coleman Jenkins, Kinston; Sylvia Crumpler, Mebane; Allene Keith and Mary Ann Keith, twin sisters from Wilmington. Other candidates include Mary Ann Allsbrook of Bristol, Tenn.; Frances Newman, Birmingham, Ala. and Mary Kay Carothers of Houston, Tex.

The queen will be selected by members of the Sigma Chi fraternity. The 1957 Sweetheart of Sigma Chi, Nancy Jo Rush of Longmeadow, Mass., will also be on hand for the festivities.

Alumni

Alpha Delta Pi alumni from Chapel Hill and Duke will entertain both sororities at a party at the local ADPi house Tuesday night. The party will take the form of an informal get-together, the main purpose being to cement relations between the two sororities and enable the girls to become better acquainted.

During the evening the girls will participate in group singing and the local chapter will present its Valkyrie skit for the Duke girls and the alumni.

Officials Urge Use Of New Parking Lot

A joint statement was issued yesterday afternoon by Ralph Cummings, chairman of the Traffic Advisory Committee and Jack Spain, chairman of the Bell Tower Parking Lot Committee, which pertained to the opening of the new Bell Tower Parking Lot.

The statement said, "With Chancellor Aycock's announcement of the opening of the Bell Tower Parking Lot, the problem of making best use of it has been placed squarely in the hands of the students.

"This lot which was originated in the summer of 1957, has spaces for about 577 cars. The entrance to the area is just past the Morehead-Patterson Bell Tower as one drives from Woollen Gym. The lot is graveled and well lighted at night.

"The traffic problem on our campus is grave and is becoming more serious as enrollment spirals. With approximately 7,000 students on this campus, there are over 3,000 cars registered.

"For these cars there are slightly over 1,000 parking spaces for students. Thus, a large number have to park off campus and about 50 persons per day park in illegal spaces.

Bomb Test Suspension

The Soviet Union's recent announcement of their suspension of nuclear testing has made Adlai Stevenson look like a prophet of the decade, for it was not two years ago when he proposed that the United States do the same thing, and lost an election partly because of this proposal.

What Stevenson realized at that time, and what American leaders have failed to realize until now, was that at that time the Soviet Union had possessed the propaganda advantage over the United States for only a short time, and that the United States by discontinuing nuclear testing at that time could reassert her leadership as a peace loving nation and call the Soviet Union's peace bluff at the same time.

Now that the Soviet Union has announced suspension of nuclear testing, there still remains in the United States a complete lack of leadership.

The general reaction from Washington was to treat the Soviet announcement as a propaganda move, which indeed it was. However, there seems to be such a void of imagination among the leaders in Washington, as to come up with no concrete proposal to match the Russian announcement.

The President has announced that the U.S. will continue to test weapons in the face of the very real protests by neutral states such as India.

Again the President has let the Soviet Union be pictured in the light of a peaceloving nation, and leads the world to believe that the United States is the warmonger nation whose sole aim is to attain atomic supremacy over the Soviet Union.

This is not the picture that the United States should give to its allies or to its potential allies.

It makes very little difference in the eyes of the world that the Soviet Union has just completed a large series of tests or that the United States is experimenting with a "clean" hydrogen bomb. What the people of the world are looking for is concrete action toward the ending of the nuclear menace.

It makes very little difference also to have statements in the paper about the necessity for testing for scientific progress, when the only thing the United States seems to be testing is materials for warfare.

The United States can at least break even with the Russians on the latest propaganda move, by announcing suspension of American nuclear testing. By this the United States will be pacifying the potential allies like India, and at the same time calling Russia's bluff. If Russia does not test any more, the United States will have gained one of the goals that it wanted to gain at Geneva. If Russia does test in the future, Russia is put in the light of a war monger, and the U.S. will be free to test.

The United States still cannot lose by the suspension of the tests, and the people of the world will rest quite a bit easier without the threat of additional Strontium-90 in the air.

Problems In The Atomic Age

Nuclear Tests: Another Viewpoint Policy Needs Revision

(David Lawrence is publisher of U. S. News and World Report. It is from this week's issue that this article is taken.)

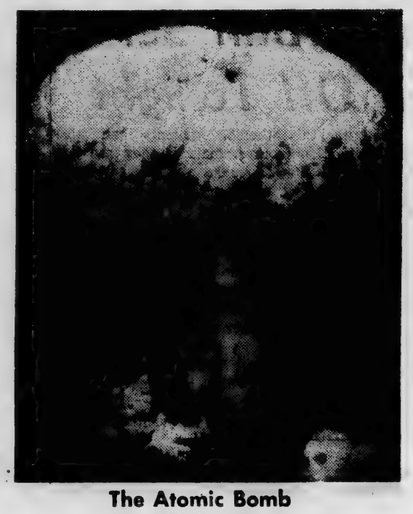
The Soviet Union's proposal temporarily to suspend, of its own accord, the testing of H-bombs has been hailed by some newspapers here and abroad, and by some partisan politicians in Congress, as a great "propaganda victory" for the Communists.

To the gullible and the craven, to the weak-kneed and the "practical"—who used to advocate doing business with Hitler and who now want to do business with Khrushchev—the Moscow proposal is a "stroke of genius."

But to the President of the United States, who has faith in the truth, the Communist stratagem is a "gimmick" and a diversionary tactic. To all straight-thinking people throughout the world, the Soviet proposal is a transparently phony scheme.

For the Communists have just completed their own series of tests, and they know that the United States is about to begin a new series of tests. Prime Minister Macmillan told the House of Commons last week that Great Britain new has "specific evidence" that not all nuclear tests can be detected by other governments. The Soviet Union, indeed, rejected the resolution overwhelmingly adopted last November by United Nations General Assembly calling for a supervised ban on nuclear tests and the ending of the production of nuclear weapons, with controls. Khrushchev now says he favors "international control" of tests but avoids endorsement of the U. N. plan. What the really wants is his own kind of supervision.

Why, incidentally, was the offer made by the Soviet Union to ban only the tests of H-bombs? Why didn't Moscow announce a decision to accept proposals already made by Western governments to abandon completely the manufacture and use of nuclear weapons under an inspection system that would insure compliance? If testing is a crime against humanity, then the use of nuclear bombs hereafter would be an even worse tragedy for mankind.



Throughout the 8,000-word speech of Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko, there is only one sentence about a possible abolition of the use of atomic bombs, and this is couched in the vaguest terms as an aim or hope. Yet every word uttered against nuclear tests could be applied even more effectively against the production and use of any nuclear weapons.

The argument of the native in our midst is that the suspension of the tests will be a "good beginning." After this—it is wishfully argued—may come other agreements. It is familiar refrain. It has been heard every year since 1954. Yet after we engage in talks and conferences, we find out what we knew before—that the Communists break their pledges and will not accept anything but the unconditional surrender of the Western world. Once we agree to stop testing, and the agreement is subsequently broken by the Soviets, then—as the cliches goes—we will at least know where we stand. "To put it more realistically, Khrushchev will be in a position to terrorize the Western nations and tell them where they will by "buried."

Every one of the Soviet proposals, including the recent demand that American bases be abandoned and our troops by withdrawn from Western Europe, has a single military objective—to win domination for the communists without firing a shot.

There are group—here and abroad—who are tired of the fight for ideals. They want to appease the Communists—by accepting the present enslavement of the captive countries as irretrievable. Why do not some of these same unwitting apologists for the cause of the Communists demand the suspension of a few other things besides the testing of H-bombs? Have they no interest in the fate of the Hungarian people and the peoples of the captive countries who are being tortured every day, not by Soviet tests" but by Soviet acts of brutality?

Under certain conditions, we would agree to suspend the use of nuclear weapons althougether, and we have indicated this position frequently in the past. But the Soviet Union first must establish the sound conditions that would warrant the taking of such steps by the free nations of the world today.

The Atomic Bomb
. . . with it questions

(The following is an editorial which appeared in this week's issue of "The Nation.")

The president and Mr. Dulles must realize that the United States is in grave diplomatic trouble and that trying to get out of it with quips and evasions just isn't going to work. By their unilateral suspension of nuclear testing the Russians have got us on the diplomatic hook. It makes little difference that the Russian move is tainted with some blatant hornswoggling. The fact remains that they correctly gauged the state of public opinion in part of the world vital to us, and acted with boldness, orginality, and superb timing. By all the rules, they have earned their diplomatic triumph.

The outlines of what they accomplished are only beginning to become clear and the spectacle is neither pleasant nor reassuing. Mr. Dulles feared to lose his shirt at a summit conference: He has already lost it without the conference.

The Russians had indicated a willingness to cease nuclear testing with some sort of inspection system backing up the agreement. This was one of the practical questions on which we could have negotiated (freeing the Soviet satellite, re-unifying Germany on our terms, etc., are issues on which no serious diplomat would waste his time); and, had an agreement been reached, we could have shared the credit with Moscow and reaped some advantages from the inspection arrangement. Now the Russians take all the credit, leaving us to incur obloquoy for our tests in the pacific proving grounds, while their own recent tests escape practically scot-free. If all this is a "gimmick", one can only wish to God that our statesmen could concoct such gimmicks once in a while.

Aside from the diplomatic defeat, we are in an uncomfortable position militarily. The big fission-fusion-fission bombs are obsolete. In a sense, they work too well: they kill ho indiscriminately and on such a grand scale that no nation can afford to use them. The rational line of development—insofar as rationality can play a part in these affairs—is "miniaturization" of missile warheads, as well as the familiar miniaturization of components in the guidance system. We must ask ourselves: Why are the Russians so ready to suspend tests? One reason is that they would like to reduce their armament expenditures, which are far more onerous to them than ours to us. To this extent they are acting in good faith, and indeed it is as stupid to postulate that they are always wholly Machiavellian as to believe that their motives are as pure and humanitarian as they say. But there must be other reasons, and one, which must be asumed as a matter of elementary prudence, is that they are satisfied with their present missile technology. In other words, they are ahead, of us, and probably the best we can hope for is to catch up with them in our forthcoming series. These races tend to be neck-and-neck, and by all indications we are a neck behind.

Mr. Eisenhower must therefore try a new line. It would be best, of course, if the new line did not include Mr. Dulles, but since it will, the President should acknowledge to his own private self that Mr. Dulles doesn't know where he is going. For his own sake and that of the country, the President must take the reins in his own hands. And as he prepares to do so, he should bear in mind that the reason the Rusians have been able to get away with a certain amount of transparent propaganda is simply that the world welcomes any move at all towards a cessation of the nuclear-armaments race.

New Report On Fallout

(Dr. Libby is a member of the Atomic Energy Commission. His article appeared in this week's issue of U. S. News and World Report.)

The biological hazard from the radioactive fall-out from weapons testing is not well known, and, like many biological problems, the determination of the hazard in any exact way seems to be almost impossibly difficult.

Fortunately, however, it is possible to compare the radiation from radioactive fall-out with the intensities of natural radation to which we are always exposed.

For example, it is clear that the present level of radiostrontium in bones of young children, which are, of course, closest to being in equilibrium with the fall-out—since adults have had their bones some time even before there was any radioactive fall-out—is about 2 milliroentgens per year, as compared to an average natural dosage of 150 to 200 milleroentgens per year, or about 1 to 2 per cent of the dosage from natural sources to the bones, depending upon location.

Natural radioactivity present in the ground, building materials and even in our own bodies gives us an average total dose at sea level of about 150 milliroentgens per year, and medical x-rays add something like another 150 milliroentgens.

The radiocesium taken into the body and the penetrating radiations from non-assimilable radioactive fall-out contribute perhaps another 3 or 4 per cent to the whole body dosage.

Thus, the total dosage to freshly formed human bone is at most 5 per cent of the natural dosage.

Furthermore, we do know that the variations in natural background dosages from place to place are enormous in magnitude as compared to the fall-out dosage.

For example, it has been found that exposure from external radiation rise from a value of about 110 milliroentgens per year at sea level to something like 230 milliroentgens per year to 5,000 to 6,000 feet altitude in the United States. These numbers are considerable larger than those expected on the basis of earlier calculations and measurements, the increase apparently being due to the cosmic rays and their increase with altitudes.

In addition, the effects of radioactivity in the soil and in building materials made of stone or soil are considerable, amounting in some instances to 50 to 100 per cent of the average natural background dose at sea level; and the magnitude of the medical exposures to x-rays approximates, on the average, those due to all natural sources.

We see, therefore, that whatever the extent of our ignorance of the biological effects of radiation, we do know that these effects are not unexperienced by the human species, even from the genetic point of view, since it is clear now that persons living at high altitudes on granitic rocks always have received extra radiation many times greater than is contained in the radioactive fall-out from the testing of nuclear weapons, and that even those living on certain sedimentary rocks at sea level always have received about 10 to 20 times the present fall-out dose.

Of course, this does not mean that any of the effects from radioactive fall-out are in any way negligible, and it does not mean that certain numbers of people will not be injured by radioactive fall-out radiations, even though these numbers be very small relative to the total population of the world.

Science Paves Way For Nuclear Detection

David Bird

(This article is taken from this weeks "Nation." Mr. Bird is on the staff of The New York Times.)

There can be no doubt that if a nation wants to carry out (nuclear) tests in secrecy, observation will become difficult and uncertain—Dr. Edward Teller, University of California physicist who is commonly referred to as "the father of the H-bomb."

On the technical matter of whether you could develop a system to enforce the test ban, I think you can do this—Dr. Willard F. Libby, scientific member of the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission.

The Soviet Union's unilateral renunciation, pro tem, of further nuclear tests simply points up the need to settle once and for all the controversy now pervading the question of whether nuclear—disarmament agreements can be made to stick through workable inspection methods. It is a controversy that is carried on mainly in the dark because the United States Atomic Energy Commission, presumably to keep the Russians in equal darkness, has held nuclear—explosion detection methods under a cloak of secrecy ever since it made it first cryptic announcement almost nine years ago that the Russians had set off their first atom bomb.

Since then the AEC had regularly announced Russian nuclear tests, but its sparse reports have never mentioned how these were detected or how accurate the detection methods are. Actually, the most the Government has revealed came in a statement from President Eisenhower at a recent news conference. He said that "with proper inspectional facilities, seismic and electronic, and so on, (nuclear tests) ought to be detected."

If this dearth of information leaves the average citizen with little basis to make an intelligent judgment in the face of emotional appeals for and against nuclear-inspection systems, it has also left at least some atomic scientists in a similar position. Dr. Harrison Brown, a professor of geochemistry at the California Institute of Technology who worked on the development of the first atomic bomb at Oak Ridge, Tennessee, said in testimony before the Senate Disarmament Subcommittee that it was easier to get information on radioactivity and its detection from Japan than from the Atomic Energy Commission. He added that the Japanese regularly and voluntarily sent him this information, while the AEC required a "special plea," although he has the highest type of security clearance.

Dr. Brown suggests that this with-holding of information gives those in control excessive power in policy formation, since they can make statements which cannot be checked or refuted by critics.

As Dr. Brown's testimony indicates, there has been considerable activity outside the AEC's security net on methods of detecting nuclear tests. Much work has gone on in Japan; some has been done by American scientists independently of the AEC. A great deal has been published without any type of security label. Unfortunately, most of the nuclear news that reaches the American public is channeled through government. And the AEC, adhering to its policy of secrecy, refuses to recognize this information from outside domain. That this domain is effectively extended to other government agencies is illustrated by the Weather Bureau official who, when asked recently about the detection of nuclear blasts through minute barometric variations, refused to comment on the grounds of security.

Barometric variation as a means of detecting nuclear explosions—which hasn't rated public comment in this country—has been under experimentation and perfection for several years in Japan. With it the Japanese have been able to pinpoint quickly the location of the U. S. and Russian nuclear tests. It is one of the four main techniques, developed outside the AEC, of detecting these tests, according to Dr. Jay Orear, a Columbia University physicist who has been exploring the field in nonclassified research. The other methods are through seismic waves, visible light and radioactivity.

Barometric variations can measure the energy that is transmitted to the air from an explosion. This energy travels the way sound does and with the same speed. Then the energy reaches a sensitive microbarometer (similar to those used to check weather conditions by changes in air pressure) it causes a sharp movement in the markings on the recording drum. By noting the time the shock wave is recorded on microbarometers at varying distances and different points in relation to the blast, the exact location can be determined. Judging by the accuracy with which the Japanese have detected Russian and U. S. tests more than 2,000 miles away, this method appears to be the most sensitive and quickest for detecting a nuclear explosion.

Seismic waves can detect nuclear tests through another set of disturbances—in the earth. Both earthquakes and explosions are picked up by seismographs, but each phenomenon has its own signature. Earthquakes, a long and complex pattern of shifting of the earth, manifest a long and complex pattern on the seismograph chart. Explosions, on the other hand, are sharp and compact movements and show up this way on a seismograph. Another difference is that an explosion is to tally outward in its movement from its point of origin, and thus shows up with a similar outward initial movement on all seismographs, no matter where located with relation to the blast. Earthquakes show up as different patterns on seismographs, depending on whether the instruments are situated on the "push" or to the "pull" direction in relation to the quake. Seismographs are generally the only means of detecting underground blasts. Their effectiveness is attested by the fact that the ACE's underground test last September in Nevada was detected in College, Alaska, more than 2,000 miles away.

All nuclear explosions above the ground give off tremendous amounts of light and this provides for the third method of detection—visible light. The hot gases generated by a nuclear explosion produce the characteristic large ball of fire. While not admitting that this is a means of detection that it utilizes, the AEC has stated that "the fireball from a -megaton nuclear bomb would appear to an observer sixty miles away to be more than thirty time as brilliant as the sun at noon." In several of the nuclear tests made at the Nevada test site, in all of which energy yields were less than 100 kilotons, the glare in the sky, in the early hours of the dawn, has been visible 400 or more miles away. The AEC goes on to say that "as a general rule, the luminosity does not vary greatly with the energy or power of the bomb." The light from an atomic blast can be seen many miles away because of reflection from the upper atmosphere in much the same way that we see the sun in the form of twilight long after it has disappeared below the horizon. An inspection station checking on nuclear tests could be equipped with sensitive electric eyes to detect the brightness from a bomb blast. Generally, the limit of effective detection by this method would about 500 miles.

The fourth detective technique measures the "dirt" that comes from a nuclear explosion—radioactivity.

Every nuclear bomb—even the "96 per cent clean" ones that have been tested recently — releases radioactive particles into the air. Some of these fall to earth quickly, but others are carried into the upper air currents. These particles eventually come down to earth and a nuclear explosion is indicated when the radioactivity count rises, as shown on a geiger counter. The location of the bomb blast can be determined by charting the speed and direction of the air currents from which the samples were taken. The length of time that has elapsed since the blast released the radioactive particles can be measures by the age of the particles, which decay at a determinable rate. The main drawback in this method is that it may take weeks for the particles to drift into a detection station. Thus where speed in identification is necessary, other techniques will be used and radioactivity samples will serve only a backstop check.

Using these four methods, Dr. Orear, the Columbia physicist, feels that inspection stations within three hundred miles of each other would be able to detect even low-yield tests in the low-kiloton range. Transferring this to a map, for example, it would require only some twenty-five outposts in the Soviet Union to detect a test anywhere within that country's 8.7 million square miles of area. It should be pointed out, in this connection, that the USSR has agreed in principle to the establishment of inspection posts.

All four of the detection systems can check on nuclear explosions above the earth— the most dangerous type because they release deadly radioactive fallout into the air. Deep underground tests, which do not release contamination and are more useful for the non-military applications of atomic power, can still be detected by at least one method—seismic waves.

While nuclear tests above and under the ground have been the most frequent types, there remains one other general method; underwater testing. This has been claimed to be somewhat difficult to detect in spite of the fact that underwater tests at Bikini were recorded on seismographs. But even with these, there are at least two methods of detection: by measuring samples of water for increases in radioactivity and by using hydrophones to check disturbances in the water in precisely the manner in which microbarometers are used to detect air vibrations.

It has no doubt been noted elsewhere, but it merits being noted again here, that the normal furtherance of "co-recreational" relationships is sadly hindered at Carolina. There is no place on this campus for two people to be alone together (excepting parked cars and Kenan Woods on warm evenings).

The philosophy, conscious or unconscious, behind this state of affairs seems to be that affection between Carolina ladies and gentlemen (Note: those terms are used advisedly) is a Bad Thing, and should be carefully controlled.

The end result is that local young lovers are forced either to abstain from even the most simple and innocent love-making, or engage in some degree of public display which is uncomfortable for everyone concerned.

This is but an outline of a problem for which there is no easy solution; nevertheless, it is a matter of considerable importance, applying in lesser degree to many areas of social activity on the campus.

The present situation is serious enough to cause concern, but it will get much worse before it gets better. Whatever the present magnitude of these and many other problems with which the University is faced, the imminent sizable increase in student population will serve to compound the difficulties.

The causes and the ramifications of the existing situation are many. The American moral climate surrounding love, both platonic and physical, is a part of what is commonly referred to as our "Puritan heritage"; thus it is a current in the mainstream of the development in the Western world of that physical-intellectual-emotional complex which we call 'love.'

Obviously, the American attitude toward love and related activities is often self-defeating, encouraging and making more pleasurable nominally illicit activities when it strives to control; and, at the same time, seriously undermining the mature marital relationship which it is supposed to strengthen and sanctify.

Putting aside, for the moment at least, all far-reaching considerations, we are faced with a Friday evening, and hundreds of couples are faced with the choice of one of several available ways to spend the evening.

It is safe to assume that the relationships existing between these couples constitute a continuum from absolute strangers to lovers.

Only for the absolute strangers does Chapel Hill provide any satisfactory surroundings; for the success of a blind-date, or of any first date, is often fostered by the security of either a movie or some form of public or group activity.

To be sure, any couple, no matter how intimate their relationship, may often enjoy such activities; but it is essential to the maturation and determination of such relationships that there be an occasion and sanction for privacy when it is desired.

Dr. Hopper Taps Wesley Weekend

The Wesley Foundation of University Methodist Church will present a series of seminars in the first annual Wesley Weekend at the Church Sunday.

The featured speaker will be Dr. Stanley R. Hopper, dean of the Graduate School at Drew University in Madison, N. J. The main topic of his sermon at the morning worship and the seminar will be the realtionship of Christian faith to contemporary literature.

Another discussion leader will be Dr. George Harper of the UNC English Department.

The weekend is planned to provide answers and discussions on the question: "Why is our generation the "silent" one?" "How much has Freud affected modern philosophy?" "Is it possible to depict love or goodness appealingly in literature?"

Dr. Hopper is professor of Christian philosophy and letters at Drew, as well as dean of the Graduate School. He is chairman of the Commission of Literature, Department of Worship and the Fine Arts of the National Council of Churches of Christ.

He is an editor of Religion in Life, a religious journal; has edited Spiritual Problems in Contemporary Literature and has written an exposition for the book of Jeremiah in The Interpreters Bible.

All students are welcome at the seminars the Weekend director said.

The schedule of Wesley Weekend events for Sunday is:

9:30 a. m.—Wesley Seminar, church basement. Dr. George Harper discussing "The Condition of Man in the Modern Novel."

11:00 a. m.—Sermon; Dr. Hopper talking about the relationship of Christian faith to contemporary literature, stressing Thomas Wolfe.

12:30 p. m.—Lunch at Lenoir Hall. Dr. Hopper answering questions on topics in morning sermon.

5:45 p. m.—Wesley Forum; supper in church basement. Dr. Hopper leading open discussion on theological concerns in modern literature.

Scabbard And Blade Sets Ball Saturday

The UNC Company of Scabbard and Blade will hold its annual Military Ball Saturday evening from 9 til midnight. The theme of this highlight event of the weekend of military events is "The Twin Services."

The Queen of the military ball beauty court will be crowned by Midshipman Commander John Alexander of Lake Wales, Fla., captain of the local company of Scabbard and Blade, national military honor society. The crowning and the presentation of the seven member court, at intermission, are based on voting already completed.

Bary Clark, announced for WCHL and WBT will act as master of ceremonies.

"The Embers" will provide the music for dancing. The decorations are in keeping with the theme, "The Twin Services". Every member of the local company of Scabbard and Blade has served as committee worker in preparing this event, co-sponsored by GMAB. The weekend's first event will be a reception for the members of the court and their dates at 3 p. m. Saturday.

At 4 p. m. and again at 8 p. m. the Air Cadet Choir, under the direction of Navy Lt. H. E. Howey, will be in concert as part of their annual tour of the eastern United States. These concerts will be held in Hill Hall and are open to the public without charge.

UNC midshipmen and cadets are looking forward to a full round of social events this weekend, to bring to a close a year of unit activities.

Angelo Testa Showing Textiles And Patterns

The current showing of patterns and textiles by Angelo Testa, nationally known Chicago designer, now in the Person Hall Art Gallery, makes spring in Chapel Hill a double barrelled affair.

The textiles are hung in panelled groups that alternate on the walls with the original painted designs which reveal the details of Testa's various color combinations as a harmonious whole.

Along with the designs and finished products in the exhibit are drawings and photographs. Architectural details for the altar of the First Universalist Church and a tile mural for the lobby of another Chicago building are also shown in the gallery display.

Plastic fabrics, household linens, wood block prints and a wool rug woven by V'Soska of Grand Rapids add to the interest and character of the exhibit.

Most of the materials were printed by the screen-stencil method. Visitors interested in the process will find an actual printing table set up for use and information.

Angelo Testa has designed wallpapers, paper products, laminated surfaces, lamps and other home furnishings. His abilities in design for everyday use coupled with an artistic competence have won for him numerous awards.

A native of Springfield, Mass., Testa has studied at the New York School of Fine and Applied Art and at the University of Chicago. He has also done work at the Institute of Design in Chicago.

The current display in Person Hall marks Testa's 50th exhibit. His work has been shown at art museums, universities and art schools across the country during the past 10 years. During this time he has also contributed to various magazines in the field of home furnishing.

Testa's designs and textiles will be on exhibit in Person Hall through Sunday, May 11. The gallery hours on Monday through Friday are from 8:30 a. m. to 5:30 p. m.; Saturday, 8:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m. and 2:30 until 5 p. m. and Sunday, 2:30 to 5 p. m. The gallery is also open evenings, Monday through Thursday from 7 to 9 o'clock.

Little Difference Says Polling Of Scholarship

Statistics just released from the Office of the Dean of Student Affairs reveal that apparently it makes little difference—from the standpoint of scholarship—whether or not a student belongs to a fraternity.

According to the figures, the all-fraternity scholastic average is 2.86-19, which is valued as a letter grade "B", while the average of men students taken from a crossection sample including fraternity and non-fraternity men reads 2.8696, an average not quite as good as the fraternity average.

Ray Jefferies, assistant to the dean of student affairs, who drew up these averages for the fall semester, stated this is the first time in many years that the fraternity average has been better than the all-men's average.

The scholastic average of women in sororitories is 2.4220, which is a higher average than both the all-fraternity and all-men's averages. These averages are computed on the basis of rosters of membership as submitted by the sororities and fraternities including active members and pledges.

Leading the 24 social fraternities with the highest scholastic average is Phi Delta Theta followed by Pi Kappa Alpha, Beta Theta Pi, Zeta Beta Tau and Delta Kappa Epsilon in the top five positions. The Phi Delta Theta average for the past semester was 2.4788.

Other top-ranking fraternities are Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Alpha Tau Omega, Sigma Chi, Kappa Sigma and Chi Phi in that order.

Kappa Delta is the leading sorority at UNC with a average of 3.2742. The remaining sororities and their positions in the scholastic ranks are as follows: Chi Omega, Pi Beta Phi, Delta Delta Delta, Alpha Delta Pi and Alpha Gamma Delta.

Musicale Features Leland

The seventh Petite Musicale program of the spring semester will be given Sunday in the main lounge of Graham Memorial at 8 p.m.

The recital which is open to the public at no charge will feature William Leland, pianist from Jacksonville, Fla., who is currently organist and choir director of St. Johns Cathedral in Jacksonville.

A native of Pennsylvania, Leland studied at the Philadelphia Conservatory of Music on a scholarship and received a bachelor of music degree. During his two years in the Army, he did organ work and choral studies at the National Cathedral in Washington.

Later he went to Jacksonville where he studied with the late Hans Barth, pianist, teacher and composer. On Sunday evening's program, Leland will play a work by his former teacher, Hans Barth's "Ninth Sonata" composed in 1956.

He will also perform two sonatas by Domenica Scarlatti; the Beethoven "Waldstein" Sonata in C major, Op. 53; Chopin's Waltz in E minor; Debussy's "Claire de Lune"; and Schumann's Toccatta in C major.

Carolina Grad To Represent Marine Corps

Maj. Charles B. Redman, the Marine Corps officer procurement officer for the Carolinas, announced Wednesday that 2nd Lt. Hugh L. McColl Jr. has been assigned as his assistant for the next two weeks.

A 1957 graduate of Carolina, Lt. McColl was active in campus affairs. While at the University Lt. McColl was a member of Beta Theta Pi social fraternity.

He was president of his fraternity in his senior year and was twice awarded the fraternity trophy for it's outstanding intramural athlete. He was also awarded the trophy given annually to the outstanding brother of the fraternity. He was a member of the Naval ROTC unit and an active member of the drill team.

Upon graduation, Lt. McCall was commisioned in the Marine Corps and has attended the Basic Officers Course at Quantico, Va., for the past eight months.

Maj. Redman and Lt. McColl will be at UNC April 14-16 to talk with students who may be interested in obtaining a Marine Corps commission.

Maj. Redman will be located in the Naval ROTC Armory while Lt. McColl may be contacted at the Beta Theta Pi House. Representatives will also be in Y-Court.

All interested persons have been urged to apply as soon as possible so that they may be assured of being accepted in time for this year's program.

Foundation Schedules Scholarships

CHARLOTTE — The Jefferson Standard Foundation will award three full scholarships to high school students interested in attending "The Eighth Annual North Carolina High School Radio-TV Institute" at Chapel Hill June 8-22.

Competition for the scholarships is now open and interested students may obtain application forms by writing to the Jefferson Standard Broadcasting Co. (WBT-WBTV) in Charlotte.

Applications must be returned by April 26 in order to be considered for the scholarships.

After a preliminary screening, those persons whose applications survive will be invited to WBT-WBTV's studios on Saturday, May 3, 1958, for personal interviews and auditions.

From these, three winners will be chosen by a board of Judges selected from among the directors of the Institute and other members of the radio-television profession.

The two-week workshop will afford students an opportunity to receive instruction in the fundamentals of broadcast writing, acting, announcing and production.

The Institute is co-sponsored by the North Carolina Association of Broadcasters and Broadcasting Foundation and the Department of Radio, Television and Motion Pictures at UNC.

POLL

received questionaries recently, stated that they attended some evening sessions of the Carolina Symposium. A slight majority did not, but of those that did, 74 per cent indicated that the programs were worth while.

Over eight of every ten who returned the questions to GM do not want to City of Chapel Hill to install parking meters.

Responding as to whether "nonmembers of UNC should be admitted free to UNC school and cultural functions," 63 per cent said no.

It was decided by an overwhelming majority that high school student should not be permitted to use the facilities of Graham Memorial. The final question pertained to voting participation in campus elections. Over 87 per cent stated that they do vote.

An interesting sidelight to this poll is the fact that only 122 people of the 300 who received cards bothered to fill them out and return them to the Polls Committee.

Miss Cobbs said she was "very disappointed in the number of returns." She called it the "worst response to any poll we've had."

This will probably be the last poll of the year. Anyone interested in being chairman or a committee member should sign up now at Graham Memorial's Information Desk.

"The new parking lot will give the students an opportunity to solve their own problem. Until the fall of 1958, it will be open to anyone who wishes to park there. This will be on a trial basis to see how well students take advantage of this effort.

"We are encouraging all students, and especially commuters to make use of these facilities. If it is not adequately used, there is a strong possibility that some of the space will be taken from the students when the space is definately allotted in the Fall.

"We urge every student to at least drive by and see the lot and to make use of it if possible."

DEATH TOLL

HAVANA, April 10 (AP)—The death toll of the Havana revolt yesterday and a related uprising in Santa Clara reached 55 today.

The Havana count was 45 rebels, 2 policemen.

Contributing to this was the finding of two rebels shot dead on the east side of Havana Bay. They apparently had been killed in a clash with police.

Carolina Whips Gamecocks 5-3

COLUMBIA (AP) — Carolina handed the South Carolina Gamecocks their third straight Atlantic Coast Conference baseball defeat Thursday, winning 5-3 in Capital City Park.

Tar Heel pitcher Ben Harding overcame the handicap of giving up eight bases on balls to receive credit for the victory, although he needed help from relief pitchers Johnny Johnson and Wayne Young.

Johnson save his team from real difficulty in the eighth when he threw a third called strike past the Gamecock's Buddy Nidiffer with the bases loaded, the tying run at third base and two outs.

Carolina added its insurance run in the ninth.

It was another close ACC setback for South Carolina. The Gamecocks lost to Duke 3-2 and North Carolina State 4-3.

Highlights of the Gamecock performance was the relief pitching of Leon Norton, a lefthander, who took over in the sixth inning and allowed the Tar Heels only two hits the rest of the way.

The leading hitter was Carolina second baseman Carson Oldham, who had three singles in five trips.

Frosh Games Called

The freshman baseball game wth Oak Ridge Military Academy yesterday was cancelled because of rain. Today's scheduled contest with Duke's Blue Imps was also postponed. The next frosh baseball game is tomorrow against Chowan Junior College away.

Track Team Leaves

The Carolina track team will leave Chapel Hill today at 1:45 for Columbia, S.C. where they will meet South Carolina Saturday in a dual meet. The thin-clads lost their last outing to Clemson in a surprise upset.

The status of star middle-distance man Dave Scurlock is still uncertain, and it is not sure whether or not he will run, although he is making the trip with the team.

Tennis Meet

There will be a meeting of all varsity and freshman tennis team members tonight at 7 o'clock in room 304 of Woollen Gym. Vladimar Cernik has returned to Chapel Hill and will assume the position of varsity coach.

Golfers Play Mich. Today

The University of Michigan furnishes the competition for the varsity golf team this afternoon, and the Tar Heel golfers will be out to preserve their undefeated record and pick up win number four at the same time.

In their last outing the Carolina team edged out a one point victory over Indiana by a 14-13 score. Prior to the match against the Hoosiers, coach Chuck Erickson's golfers had beaten Virginia and Princeton.

Thornton Number One

Billy Thornton and Charlie Erdman will be in the one-two positions for the Tar Heels this afternoon. Gene Lookabill and Joe Callicott will play three and four followed by Tom Langley and John McKee in the last two spots.

The Wolverines lost five of the six starters from last year's team and will have to depend heavily on the sophomores and juniors who made the squad this season. Yesterday the Michigan team was supposed to have met Duke, but rain forced the cancellation of the match.

Campaign Continues As Run-Off Nears

New Ideas Suggested By Furtado

Changes" to make the life of the Carolina student better" were outlined yesterday, by Don Furtado, Student Party candidate for president of the student body in the special run-off election Tuesday.

"In the past few weeks, I have given my views and plans on a number of our campus problems —the need for a men's dormitory visiting agreement, for a new student union, for fraternity self-government, for faculty pay raises and paid leaves of absence, for familiarizing the students with the new Honor System, and for the abolition of self-liquidating dormitory payment.

"These problems are evident to each of us, but their solution will require much time and effort by the Presdent of the student body and many others before we can see tangible results.

"Presently, men at Carolina have few acceptable places to study at night. The Library in addition to often becoming a social thoroughfare, closes at 10:30, just about the time that many students these groups understand each other and even work with each other from time to time.

"3. Encourage dorm presidents and advisors to encourage

Agreement: Run-Offs Are Easier

By WYNDHAM HEWITT

The run-off campaign has been cited as easier than regular campaign by the UP candidate and SP party leader. It was agreed that most of the real issues of the campaign were hashed out in the regular campaign.

Both sides said they were pretty sure in the original election that a run-off would be necessary, although they were hoping for a majority.

Pta Adams, SP party leader, said the campaign had "certainly not been as hard' for his party since they were just pushing one candidate in the run-off. Adams said he thought, "The heat of the campaign got hold of the UP of late and their desire to win has made them over eager."

Al Goldsmith, candidate for president of the student body on the UP ticket, said he thinks this has been a "clean and hard fought campaign." He said the run off was good and it gave the students a chance to narrow down their choice.

Adams said he was impressed with the leadership of Furtado. He said he that he thought most of the people working on Furtado's campaign were of the same feeling.

Goldsmith said. "Things look good in the run -off and I am especially happy that many of Bob Carter's supporters have come over to my side."

Assistance Asked By Goldsmith

Al Goldsmith, University Party candidate for president of the student body, called for more cooperation among campus groups in a statement yesterday, which said:

"Closer cooperation among various groups on campus and a system by which the president of the student body can bring a more representative group of people close to him for advice are two great needs on campus today.

"I do not think we can ignore the fact that there is great disunity on our campus and likewise that exists a situation where too few persons are in a position to advise the president.

"This situation disturbs me greatly. I have noticed, especially during these weeks of campaigning the split between dormitory men and fraternity men as well as other factions on our campus. I believe that instead of allowing excessive factionalism to remain we should strive to have better understanding and more unity here at Carolina.

"A start to improving this situation can be made in student government. During my campaign I have enumerated several things I would attempt to do if elected. They are:

"1. Revise the president's cabinet to include heads of specific campus organizations in addition to members at large.

"2. Work closer with the IFC and IDC in an effort to help

Sociology Professor Prints Books Fast

Three books in the past six months—that is the record of Dr. Alan Keith-Lucas of the School of Social Work.

His latest book, "Readings for House Parents of Children's Institution," has sold 1,400 copies since publication date two weeks ago.

It is the first book of its kind published in the United States and reflects Dr. Keith-Lucas's work in workshops and courses for matrons, superintendents, counselors, housemothers and others who help raise children in orphanages and other child care institutions.

His previous books are "Decisions About People in Need," published by the UNC Press in Sept. 1957, and "Some Casework Concepts for Public Welfare Workers," published in Nov. 1957.

His latest work, published by the Workman Book House, in Chicago, and is a paperback volume, selling for eighty cents.

Professor Keith-Lucas is director of the Group Child Care Project of Southeastern Conference of Workers in Children's Homes and the School of Social Work of UNC.

The project is unique in that it teaches houseparents in children's institutions on their own campuses and is financed in most part by the institutions themselves —23 institutions in Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia, Alabama and Florida. Eight of the institutions are in North Carolina.

Dr. Keith-Lucas is a native of Cambridge, England, and is a graduate of Cambridge University, of Western Reserve in Chicago and of Duke University.

news in brief

Summit

MOSCOW, April 11 (AP) — The Soviet Union offered tonight to join the West in swift preparations for a summit conference but demanded that the top level meeting be held even if preliminary talks fail.

The Soviet attitude was set forth in notes to the United States, Britain and France. Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko delivered them today and the contents were made public later.

The Russian communications answered a joint Western declaration of March 31 which outlined terms for arranging and preparing summit talks.

(American and British officials immediately termed the Soviet reply a turndown of the Western proposals.)

Hit-Run Attacks

HAVANA, Cuba, April 11 (AP)— The long rebel campaign against President Fulgenico Batista fell back into its old rut of hit-run attacks today after futile uprisings in Havana and Santiago.

Fidel Castro's guerrillas attacked transportation in Oriente Province, long their stronghold. Rebels with bombs and guns wrecked a train in Pinar del Rio, in westernmost Cuba.

Havana was quiet except for scattered shooting in the early morning hours. The army said most public utilities disrupted by bombings in Wednesday's uprising in this capital had been restored.

Art Display To Continue Rain Or Shine

The first annual Sidewalk Art Show, being held here in conjunction with the Fine Arts Festival, will continue its exhibits today and Sunday in the vacant lot next to the Methodist church on Franklin Street, if the weather permits. The Recreation Committee of GMAB and the University Art League are cosponsoring the show, which will be held in the Rendezvous Room of Graham Memorial Friday in case of cloudy skies.

The work of both students and townspeople is being exhibited, and it was reported that several of the items on sale were sold Friday in what was described as a successful day.

May 4

Parents' Day Set

The internationally-known U. S. Air Force Drill Team will appear as a highlight of the eighth annual Parents' Day celebration at Carolina Sunday, May 4, according to an announcement Wednesday by Larry Hayer, chairman of the event.

Other activities planned for the affair, which is sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity, are to include special demonstrations and exhibits in various departments of the University. Also, visiting parents will be guided to points of interest on the campus.

At a faculty reception durng the afternoon the guests will be entertained by the UNC Glee Club. Following this Chancellor Emeritus Robert B. House will address the visitors.

The day will conclude with a concert by the University band.

All dormitories will be open from noon until 2 p.m. in order that parents may visit students' rooms.

Hayer, in announcing the proposed program, urged all students to encourage their parents to visit UNC for Parent's Day.

Navy Air Cadet Choir Singing Twice Today

The U. S. Naval Aviation Cadet Choir from the Naval Station in Pensacola, Florida, will give two concerts in Hill Hall on today in connection with the Fine Arts Festival being held here through Sunday. The concerts to be given at 4 p. m. and 8 p.m. are sponsored on campus by the NROTC unit and Graham Memorial Activities Board.

Sixty student Naval Avaltors presently in flight school at the Naval Air Basic Training Command make up the group, which has gained a national reputation as one of the finest acapella choruses in the country. They have made televsision appearances on such programs as the Perry Como Show, the Ed Sullivan Show and the Fred Waring Show.

Other events of the Fine Arts Festival taking place today will be the Sidewalk Art Show from 10 a.m. to 5 p. m. and the Petites Dramatiques production of Jean Anouilh's "Aantigone" in Gerrard Hall at 8 p. m.

ALEC TEMPLETON
Pianist and Wit

Templeton To Perform On Thursday

Alec Templeton, concert pianist, composer and improviser and wit, will appear Thursday in Memorial Hall the Student Entertainment Committee announced yesterday.

The program, which will begin at 8 p.m., will be free to students upon presentation of ID cards. A charge of one dollar wil be made for student wives and two dollars for others.

Templeton has appeared as soloist with nearly every major American symphony orchestra, and has given concerts throughout the United States, Canada, the Brtish Isles and Australia. He is known to millions through his radio and television programs, including "Alec Templeton Time," in which he combines fine performance of standard works for piano, and his own highly original impersonations and improvisations

APO Elects New Officers

Bob Cowan; second vice president, Angus Duff and Bob Mathews; recording secretary, James M. Scott; corresponding secretary. Randall Etheridge; alumni secretary, Allan Atwell; historian, Jerry Morgan; sergeant-in-arms, Larry Hayer and treasurer, Robert Pearce.

Coeds Get Late Grant For Valkyrie Sing

Lucy Posgate, acting secretary of the Women's Residence Council, has issued the following statement:

"It is a joint decision of Women's Residence Council and the office of the dean of women to extend closing hours on Monday, April 14, till midnight for those attending Valkyrie Sing. Girls wishing to attend Valkyrie Sing must sign out in their dorms for late permission and sign in again as soon as it is over."

New Freshman Girls To Get Stiffer Rules

By STAN FISHER

An expected increase in the number of freshman women enrolled at UNC has led to the drafting of new rules to govern all freshman women. The new regulations will become effective in the fall of 1958.

Fifty additional women are expected at the University next fall. They will be enrolled in pharmacy, medical technology, dental hygiene, and physical therapy. The physical therapy program has recently become available to women students.

All freshman women, other than those in the school of nursing will be housed in the new wing of Spencer dormitory.

The new rules grew out of a concern for all freshman women by the Women's Residence Council. They were drafted after approval by the Women's Residence Council, the School of Nursing, and the Dean of Women. In the past freshman women have lived on the University campus, but not in great enough numbers to warrant special rules.

These special rules are based on those of the School of Nursing and those of Women's College. They will govern all freshman women beginning next year.

New Rules

Main provisions in the rules for first semester women are as follows:

Hours Monday through Thursday will be 11 p.m.; Friday through Sunday 12 p.m.

House regulations will include closed study Monday through Thursday from 8-10:30 p.m. (One excuse per week may be granted to attend a campus function lasting after 8 p.m. and study time must be made up within 48 hours.)

Out of town permission may be granted for three nights (not to exceed 6 overnights during the fall semester in addition to University holidays and between semesters.)

Second Semester Rules

Rules for second semester women will be slightly altered.

Women without C averages must have closed study.

Lights must be out at 11:30 Monday through Thursday. Six cuts will be permitted on this rule per semester. (This rule does not apply to the exam period.)

Dean of Women Katherine K. Carmichael, when questioned about the present rate of dropping out or transferring to other courses among women students already enrolled at the University, said the rate is presently negligible, but that no forecast can be made for the future.

'Quite Helpful'

"I think the rules the students have drawn up for freshman women will be quite helpful to young women in forming good study habits and will be conducive in helping girls learn to live in an organized society. These rules are nearly standard for freshman women in this area. I hope the men will be understanding of these rules," she added.

Personnel Adviser to Women, Luann Thornton, said "In the past the freshman women not living on the main UNC campus have been governed by rules different and more strict than those governing freshman women on the main campus. In the fall of 1958 all freshman women enrolled in the University and living in University housing will be governed by a uniform set of rules for the first time."

More rules concerning special permission and fraternity visiting are currently being discussed. They will be available in their completed form in approximately three weeks, Miss Thornton said.

'Antigone' Opens This Evening At 8

By SEAMON GOTTLIEB

"Antigone" by Jean Anouilh will be presented tonight and tomorrow night at 8 in Gerrard Hall. This will be the third production of the Petites Dramatiques this year.

Amanda Meiggs, who plays Antigone, played St. Joan in "The Lark," the Green-Clad in "Peer Gynt," and the part of Lavinia in "Caligula," the first Petite Dramatique production. William Dixon, who is King Creon, is new on campus and has appeared here in "These Cornfields."

Taylor Williams, the Chorus, has played the Inquisitor in "The Lark," Death in "Even the Gods," and Cherea in "Caligula." Carolyn Marsh, who plays Ismene, starred in Judith earlier this year and has also appeared in "The Lark."

Kenneth Callender is Sargeant Jonas. He is a popular M.C. around campus and has played Captain Fisby in "Teahouse of the August Moon," Beaudicourt in "The Lark," and Joey Puccini in "Thieves' Holiday." Recently he made a dramatic triumph as Eddie Carbone, the tragic hero of "A View From The Bridge."

Harold Williamson has played roles in "Stranger In the Land," "Cat in Gloves," "Hymn to the Rising Sun," and "Judith."

Others in the cast are Lucy Ann Dunlap, John Whitty, John Steed, William Pfefferkorn, Bobbi Dixon, and Michael Okun.

"Antigone" is a tragedy resulting from the clash of idealism with realism. Antigone rebels against the orders of her uncle by burying the body of her traitorous brother. Although she has a chance to go free, her stubbornness leads her into tragedy.

The play was written during the German occupation of France and is a subtle attack against Nazism. It was originally produced under the eyes of a German censor, who did not realize the full meaning of the play.

"Antigone" is directed by Peter B. O'Sullivan, graduate major in English.

Frosh Need Orientation Counselors

This year the Orientation Committee is making a concerted effort to secure the most qualified and interested men to serve as Orientation Counselors for the fall program. With this in mind, the committee has devised the following method of selection.

Tuesday at 7 p.m. in Room 268 Venable Hall a comprehensive test based on the 1957 training manual will be given to all applicants. Then through the period April 1-April 23 there will be scheduled interviews conducted in the Woodhouse Room of Graham Memorial.

Last year's manuals are now available at the Information desk of Graham Memorial and in the Reserved Reading Room of the library. All interested men have been strongly urged to become familiar with this material before the test.

Deadline on turning in application blanks has been set for Monday. These blanks can be secured at the Y, Graham Memorial, Lenoir Hall and the library.

"If there are any questions about counselor selection, or any other phase of orientation, please feel free to discuss it with me at the Orientation Office on the second floor of Graham Memorial, phone 9460."

First Day Of 'Swing' Is Success

The first day of the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchant's Association sponsored "Spring Swing" was referred to as a success by merchants yesterday.

The second annual sale featured many reductions in retail prices by local merchants.

The two-day sale promised to be a leading event for both students and merchants financially speaking. Some local businessmen were expected to price certain articles at below wholesale prices.

"Spring Swing" was held in March last year, but was postponed until April this year because of cold weather.

A concert and street dance was scheduled for Friday night in Franklin Street, with the Sam Atwater combo from Durham booked to furnish music for the events.

Order Of The Old Well

Students who feel they qualify for membership in the Order of the Old Well and have not received a point sheet have been asked to notify Jerry Oppenheimer at the ZBT House (phone 6031) or Dean Mackie, 312 South Building immediately.

Petites Musicales To Feature Pianist

The next program in Les Petites Musicales series will feature William Leland, pianist from Jacksonville, Fla. The concert which is open to the public will be given Sunday at 8 p.m. in the lounge of Graham Memorial.

A native of Pennsylvania, Leland is currently serving as organist and choir director of St. Johns Cathedral in Jacksonville. He has given recitals in New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Florida.

Two other programs are scheduled in the current series of Les Petites Musicales. On April 20, Gene Strassler, tenor, will give a recital and the final concert set for May 4 will be presented by Francis Hopper, organist.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Elizabeth Carr Nicholson, Thelma Louise Vaughan, Nancy Elizabeth Pearson and Martha Coltrane Griffin and Hugh Mercer Clark, Sidney Smith Bradfield, David Faulkner, Stanley L. Brennan, Wayne A. Babb, Robert Stanley Drye, Edwin Wilker, John Fernando Belmont, Max Kermit Holland, John William Colescott, William H. Colenna, William Weston [illegible] Rhodbee and Bruce F. Caldwell.

Election Board

Every year the Election Board comes in for criticism, and this Spring is no exception.

In several dormitories there was an inadequate supply of ballots. This should never happen. The board could just as easily have prepared an adequate supply of ballots for every person in the dormitory.

Unused ballots are easily disposed, but an inadequate supply of ballots prevents students from voting.

The Election Board is at least in part responsible for the small turnout in the elections.

Furthermore, there were more than forty potential voters in the infirmary with measles. The Election Board neglected to have ballots sent to the infirmary. There were several elections, including one of the four major student government officers elections which hinged on less than forty votes. The Election Board may have cost some people the election.

The Election Board in fact did cost one person the election in a student council race, when it did not print the candidate's bi-partisan section board endorsement next to his name on the ballot. This candidate was lucky in that he had previously been elected an officer of this group and hence is a holdover member. There is considerable doubt as to whether there should be holdover members. However, although he was lucky, someone in the future might not be so fortunate.

The night of the election, the Election Board was also lacking in vision. Usually by 7 p.m. ballots have been sorted and are at that time ready for counting. This spring it took a person not on the board to see to it that the ballots were sorted, after nothing had been done by 7. The procedure cost the ballot counters an hour, and stretched the counting procedure to sometime after 9 a.m.

There was another area where there was some trouble. However, this was only partly the Election Board's fault. In some areas there were no poll tenders. Thus, there was no one to see that the Election was conducted correctly. This was only partly the Election Board's fault in not providing enough ahead of time for poll tenders, but it is also the fault of a student body, which takes no interest in campus affairs, when there not enough available volunteers to tend polls for one hour on one or two days of the year.

On the credit side the Election Board did a capable job of handling the melee of counting on Tuesday night and in getting a speedy recount of the elections in doubt.

Another factor on the credit side of the Election Board picture, but definitely on the debit side of the student body picture is that they handled the election fairly adequately with a minimum amount of members. The job of the Election Board is a thankless one, but surely more students could help out to see that the job is done right rather than just griping about it afterward.

The entire problem of student unwillingness to do anything for anybody else is pictured in the entire election picture.

Next Tuesday the student body has a chance to help out the Election Board by serving in those capacities which are unfilled. There will be a need for poll tenders, for counters, for sorters, and for people to keep the Election Board on their toes to see that they remember the things they forgot this election. A small group of people can't think of and do everything.

The student body has another small obligation—to take two minutes of their time and vote.

There's more than one way to make the headlines, and a former UNC law student has found the way.

The fact that he is a former Tar Heel may help explain the fact that he has embarked upon an enterprise such as he has, and that enterprise is—walking for Sheriff of Durham County. The candidate is Alonzo G. Squires who is presently employed as zone manager for Investors Diversified Service, Inc.

The unusual nature of his candidacy has come as a pleasant surprise to many Durham residents, for Mr. Squires has been blind since birth. This has not been a particular handicap to him however, for previous to his position with the investment firm he was a successful radio advertising executive for twelve years.

Proof of the fact that the actually intends to run is the $80.08 filing fee which he has already paid, becoming the sixth man to enter the sheriff's race.

Squires admits that his platform is somewhat shaky, but he intends to run because he needs the $8,000 per year salary the job offers. How honest can a candidate be? How sincere? It's a shame that more of the campus politicos dont' follow this example, then the students would know for sure what they are getting when they vote.

Commenting on his motive for running, Squires said, "I feel that it would be in the best interest that I walk for the office . . . I want everyone to be fully aware even I am doubtful as to whether I would make much of a sheriff, but my motive is purely and simply that I need the $8,000 that the office pays each year."

Concerning his campaign staff: "I didn't have the filing fee. However, my brothers in an organization to which I belong, Dead Broke Anonymous, were not willing to see one of their brothers flonder around in such a dilemma, so they raised it for me." (Sounds a bit like student politics on the march.)

Concerning his competition: "Although some deputies are running against me I take no offense at it, because all they want is the job. So, when I get to be sheriff they can have the job; all I want is the $8,00."

Concerning bottlegging (a major problem in Durham County): "I have the distinct impression that sheriffs are sometimes faced with capturing a great deal of illegal liquor, and that in most cases it is poured out. Well, I believe that liquor, illegal as it may be, was made for someone to enjoy, and although I do not drink a drop of it, I feel that my friends who come down to the office to see me would enjoy it, so I don't plan to pour out any of it."

Concerning sheriff's censorship rights: "I'm afraid that if I declare war on pretty pictures of pretty women, some people will say I'm just jealous because I can't see them myself. I believe that almost every human being has to have some weaknees, and for that reason every night when I say my prayers I say 'If every man does have to have some weakness, then please let mine be women.' "

Concerning personal dangers: "Some folks feel that since I am blind, it's too big a risk for me to take, that I might get shot at and the like. Well, I don't want anyone laboring under any misapprehensions, for I don't plan to do enough to get shot at. I'll let those who wanted the job in the first place take that risk."

Concerning what the public can expect from him; "When I'm your sheriff you won't have to hide anything, for whatever goes on in the county, you can depend on me not to see it. I promise never to miss a payday and, further, that if you elect me as your sheriff you'll have at least one sheriff in these United States that you know is blind."

Squires' candidacy did not go unnoticed outside of Durham County either. In a nationwide CBS newscast, Eric Sevareid devoted his entire program to Squires and his campaign, commending a man who can laugh at his affliction and at the same time do a public service.

There will be a minimum of five red faces in Durham if he wins, and why not?

A Sane Nuclear Policy

Norman Cousins

ial by Mr. Cousins in this week's ial by Mr. Cousins inthisweek's Saturday Review)

The same set of facts abou the ideological struggle and nuclear terror has produced two opposing and fast-growing viewpoints.

The facts are profoundly disturbing, but at least they are visible. The Soviet Union is in a considerably stronger position than it was only a short time ago and is getting even stronger with each passing year. This strength is measured not solely by scientific advances or the ability to make nuclear weapons in quantity but by the increasing acceptance of Soviet leadership by the peoples of Asia and Africa who consititute the majority of the world's people. The imaginative thrust of the Soviet in ending it bomb tests has given dramatic momentum to this claim for leadership. Within a few years the West may be confronted with the bristling and bulging reality of a Soviet sphere of influence embracing perhaps two-thirds the globe.

Meanwhile, there has been a steady and costly shrinkage of American influence in the world, especially among peoples of darker skins, which is to say, the preponderance. While we have managed from time to time to come before the world with bold visions, such as the Marshall Plan and economic assistance for underdeveloped areas, by and large our standing and influence have been steadily receding. What we have said and done in our relations with other nations have not always reflected careful knowledge about the actual conditions in those nations. Indeed, it has sometimes seemed that we were actually playing to a domestic gallery with our foreign policies rather than to living history. We constructed a fantasy in which security was compounded at least partially of self-serving legends and myths of invulnerability and superiority.

Two extreme and conflicting viewpoints, as we say, have grown out of these facts.

One viewpoint, now only expressed, is that nuclear war is inevitable and that the United States is not under the obligation to wait until it is hit first. According to this argument, our only chance of victory is to be the first to drop the hydrogen bomb. Besides, it is contended that the advantage of surprise attack is so great that we can almost count upon it as certain that the Soviet Union will strike the moment it is ready. Therefore, we have to hit whether we like it or not.

The contrasting viewpoint, generally identified with Bertrand Russell, is that the West should submit to the Soviet Union as the best way of preventing a nuclear war that would expunge life on earth. The price of submission may be high, Lord Rusell admits, but it will not continue indefinitely, for Communism may eventually succumb to its own weaknesses. But if war should come, then all life will be expunged.

The first viewpoint leads to mutual suicide, for it precipitates the very nuclear war it ostensible seeks to limit. The second viewpoint leads to the annihilation of the free man, for it equates survival with surrender.

But it is false—tragically and hideously false—to say that these are the only alternatives. We don't have to be run by our jitters and drop the big bombs that could put an end to the age of man. Nor do we have to fall on our knees before a colossus in order to keep him from waging nuclear war.

What we can do, first of all, is to stop deceiving ourselves as to the nature of peace and the requirements of peace. We can recognize that peace and unfettered national sovereignty cannot go together in a world which can be circled in ninety minutes by a device than can vaporize whole cities in one blow. We can make a total commitment to the cause of a United Nations with the effective powers of government adequate to deal with the basic causes of tension and conflict.

We can emancipate ourselves from the seductive nonsense to which we have given our energies and allegiances in such large measure since the end of the war. We can decide that the most important thing in our lives is not the height and sweep of automobile tail-fins but the height and sweep of our ideas on creating a world under law.

"This is what we own, this is what we believe, this is what we can do," we can say to the world. "We make a total and unequivocal commitment to a safe world and a better one. Our preoccupation is to sustain and serve the gift of life. We state readiness to accept and support the concept of a federated world to replace the present anarchy. We will work for such a concept to any extent that may be required."

The alternative to either suicide or surrender is still sanity.

Columnist

The editor is looking for anyone who wishes to write a column on national and international politics, music, art, or on local student government.

There is also a need for one or two persons to help out with research for the editorial page.

Anyone interested in any of these jobs is asked to please come by the editor's office any afternoon during this week or next week.

"By The Way, Don't Expect 100% Cooperation"

VARIATIONS

Springtime And Sunbathing

Gail Godwin

Now that springs is here and the fur-lined jackets are hung in the closet to rest and all self-respecting sports care have their tops down, Carolina gentlemen and coeds are faced with new problems. They amble through the arboretum, sprawl in deck chairs on fraternity, house porches, sneak that extra sunbath between classes, and don wearing apparel suitable for the bright new season—bermudas and sun glasses. But there are still the problems.

Different people have different problems.

The alkies are trying to decide whether it is quicker to the ABC store in Durham or to the one between Raleigh and Chapel Hill. It would seem that Durham would win out, but there is always less traffic on the Raleigh road.

For the girls in general one black trouble looms in the foreground. How to possibly keep all those summer clothes stiff and starchy and stand-out-ish. How to keep looking cool when one is roasting inside and out.

And for both coed and gentleman, there is the problem of what to do with all the free time one has during one's class cuts. Whether to sit in Y Court or on the steps of South Building. Whether to walk across campus crosswise or lengthwise. Whether to buy a coke or a "big orange."

And now that studying is well nigh impossible, the nights must be planned and arranged and scheduled so that there is not a minute in which one is not having fun. Will it be a show? What if one has seen all the shows? How about the local night spots? But shall we drink coffee or beer or shall we get up and dance? But which record shall it be? "Billy," or "Tequila," or "Mosquito" (same as "Tequila" only the word "mosquito" is subsituted.)

Yes siree! Even such a season as spring brings its problems for us college folks. Mother and dad never had it so good. Ike thinks he has problems with the recession! Ha. Let them come down here and try to cope with our problems.

And the funny thing about all this is that when we get their age we will probably look back and say: "Ah, good old college days. They were the best we ever had. No problems."

Postscript

Jonathan Yardley

I think I am going to sit down this afternoon and read Winnie the Pooh. What a revolutionary thought that is; a college student, supposedly mature, is going to spend an afternoon perusing a book which twelve year olds scorn as being childish.

It might be suggested that it is not this student who is being immature, but the twelve year olds and his peers who scorn him for occasionally reading Winnie the Pooh or Alice In Wonderland. The wisdom contained in these books is considerably greater than that of such as, well, the highly heralded On the Road.

It may be, of course, that my outlook is a little too idealistic, a little too starry eyed. Yet, in the final estimate, which outlook is the best? Is it better to be cynical, "worldly" — I cannot resist the quotes, because I don't think that many people who read and revel in On the Road and the like are really terribly worldly—and disillusioned, or to be optimistic, essentially peaceloving, and regularly defeated in one's contention that the world could be a nice place to live in? I don't profess to have the answer, but I have my ideas.

All this is getting me a long way from Winnie, but what I really want to talk about is the "Beat Generation"—its critics and its members. And most of all whether or not it really exists.

The idea of the "Beat Generation" was made popular in Jack Kerouac's On the Road. The name and the idea caught on fast, and now a lot of boys and girls who once looked perfectly respectable in their quasi-Ivy League clothes are wandering around pretending to be "beat."

Apparently the word "beat" does not signify rock and roll or a good solid crack on the jaw, but the word as used in that languid good old South phrase "Ah'm beat." So Jack Kerouac has placed the stigma of "Ah'm beat" upon us all. Ah aint beat, and ahm gonna fight these beat boys to the last day of my life.

Personally, I dont think the "Beat Generation" exists any more than the Lost Generation did. The so-called Lost Souls of the twenties were nothing more than a bunch of confused kids who got the brilliant idea that they were lost. Well, they were not at all lost. They were just confused—confused because they were in the aftermath of the most terrible war the world had ever known and no one knew just what to do, and confused because so many new ideas were popping around their heads. They were lost in the sense that they didn't know what was going to happen, but they did have at least one and a half feet on the ground.

The "Beat Generation" is in the same fix, but this time it is even worse because we have to contend with great big, powerful bombs, rockets, sputniks, Dulles, Eisenhower, the Republicans, the fundamentalists—bless their God-fearing souls — the Reader's Digest, and Elvis Presley. But we'll come out of it—unless we get so involved in our beaten-ness that we beat ourselves out of existence.

In reality all these trick names for generations are nothing but meagre attempts at self glorification. We, as did our predecessors, feel insecure, unsure of ourselves, and incapable of meeting the demands this twentieth century is going to toss on our un-padded — thank God — shoulders, so we invent an excuse in the form of an apologetic phrase, in this case the Beat Generation.

I got pretty annoyed in one of my classes a few days ago when the instructor suggested that we —the college students of America—are complacent and in general not worth a tin penny. He's wrong—dead wrong. If not wanting to go out and tear the world down in search of some misguided principle is wrong, he's right. But, again, he's wrong.

Adults keep telling us what a lousy world we're going to inherit, and that we've got to do something about it—now. Well, we aren't going to be in much of a position to do something about it for quite a while. Until then, why don't the elders shape up a little. For instance, why not think before you vote. We wouldn't have MacCarthy or Eisenhower problems then. We want to give a decent world to our kids, but in the meantime they might start the job for us.

Education: To Train Citizens, Statesmen

Henry Steele Commager

(This the second of two parts of Dr. Commager's article which appeared in the March edition of Hadassah Newsletter. The first part appeared Thursday.)

The ultimate decisions that confront our society are, in a broad sense, political decisions. To be healthy and prosperous, to be secure, a society must train statesmen rather than scientiststatesmen who can be trusted to find the scientists and the technicians who are needed and to apply their findings to ends that are not only useful but moral.

The training of statesmen is not a formal affair. It is nothing that can take place, in some formal fashion, through a series of courses in some school of politics or through a series of conferences among civil servants. In the training for statesmanship, as in the training of moral values, a straight line is not the shortest distance between two points. Broad civic and moral values are not so much taught as they are learned; they are the product not of formal courses but of the intellectual and moral atmosphere of a society.

There is no assurance that any one kind of education will produce the statesmen who are needed, but our own experience, and that of Britain, gives us ground to believe that an education grounded on the study of earlier civilizations, of literature, philosophy, mathematics, the arts and music, will be more likely to provide us with the kind of leadership we need than will any other.

Only less dangerous than our emphasis on science and technology is over-emphasis on the national character and national ends of education. At the lower and intermediary levels, education is, of necessity, local, but on the higher level it should emancipate itself from localism, provincialism, and even nationalism, and attempt to become cosmopolitan. For learning is, by its very nature, cosmopolitan and universal. Philosophy, literature, art, music, science, these are not the property of any one nation or people, nor can they be; they are the property of mankind, and of the future as well as the present age.

If learning is required to serve only the obvious interests of the nation that is of the dominant forces in the politics and economy of the nation—it will betray its own nature. For the university is the guardian of the great cultural inheritance of the past, and the vehicle whereby it is transmitted—in enlarged form—to the future. In order to serve these functions it must be free from overt pressures, pressures of the state, the church, the economy, and even society. It must be free to pursue the disinterested search for truth. If it consents to be an instrument of government, it cannot remain disinterested.

Once again the experience of Nazi Germany is relevant to this problem of what happens to learning when it is required to be the hand-maiden of the state. But we need not go abroad for our example; our own history furnishes an example.

The ante-bellum South persuaded itself that slavery was not an evil but a positive good. It would not tolerate any criticism of that institution, or any questioning of its ultimate good. To obtain general approval of this position, the South silenced criticism of all kinds, and drove out critics. It required schools to teach that slavery was a blessing. It imposed this principle on colleges and universities, driving out scholars who questioned the virtues of slavery? It closed the doors to disinterested research in the history, the economy, the sociology, or the science of slavery and of race. And because institutions of learning were not allowed to question and to challenge the course of the South, it was not possible for education to raise up a generation able to deal with slavery by any means except that of violence and counter violence.

All efforts to use the schools and scholarship to advance nationalistic ends are fraught with peril. It is not irrelevant to remember that the great men who won our independence and set up our nation were not trained on American history, but on the history of Greece and Rome and Britain. If we are to solve the problems that will confront us, we must keep education, science, scholarship, free from all improper pressures that would deflect them from their true function— the disinterested inculcation of wisdom, the disinterested search for truth.

FREE FLICK

Tonight's free flick, scheduled for 7:30 and 10:00 in Carrol Hall, is the film version of Arthur Miller's "All My Sons." Mr. Miller has had varying degrees of success in his examinations of the modern situation, but his efforts are almost always provocative and skillful.

PETITES DRAMATIQUES

The main attraction on campus tonight is the opening of the Petites Dramatiques' production of Anouilh's "Antigone." The play is a resetting of the "Antigone" of Sophocles, the last play of the Oedipus Trilogy.

The performance begins at 8 p.m. in Gerrard Hall, and admission is free. The show will be repeated on Sunday evening.

ROBERT FROST

Those interested in poetry, and particularly those who have been entertained and enlightened by Robert Frost during his annual visits to Carolina, will enjoy the treatment of Frost's "Stopping By Woods on a Snowy Evening" in the current issue of the Saturday Review.

John Ciardi, the magazine's poetry editor and himself a poet of some reputation, gives this most famous of Frost's poems a thorough analysis; in the process, he makes some interesting and well considered comments on the art of poetry in general.

SP Candidate Asks Late Study Halls

are becoming absorbed in their studies.

"A student may return to his dormitory or fraternity, but he often finds it difficult to study in either place because of noise or because of people coming into his room every few minutes. Quite often a roommate is trying to sleep, and the student may not wish to disturb him with a study light.

"Such examples merely illustrate our need for a few classrooms which can remain open at night for the use of those students who wish to study late. I believe that through Dean Godfrey we could gain permission to keep one or two large rooms open at night for this purpose.

"Another problem which we have encountered this year is that often various individuals and groups desiring information concerning other student activities are unable to get adequate material. A file containing the names of the members, the officers, the constitution, and financial report of each student organization should be prepared and maintained in the Student Government office. This file would enable information seekers to expeditiously gather any material which they might need.

"It is true that such ideas as these are not as important as those other areas with which all of us are concerned. However, improvements of this nature do contribute to making Carolina a finer place at which to live and work. It is, therefore, the duty of the president of the student body to concern himself with such problems."

THE POSTMAN COMETH

I have recently received several letters from readers which have been so interesting, so piquant, so je ne sais quoi, that I feel I must share them with all of you. The letters and my replies follow:

SIR:

Maybe you can help me. I came up to college eight years ago. On my very first day I got into a bridge game in the student union. I am still in the same bridge game. I have never gone to class, cracked a book, or paid any tuition. All I do is play bridge.

To explain my long absence and keep the money coming from home, I told a harmless little lie. I said I was in medical school. This made Dad (my father) terribly proud. It also enabled me to keep playing bridge. We were both very happy.

But all good things must come to an end. Mine ended when I came home for Christmas vacation. I arrived to find that Sister (my sister) was in the hospital with an ingrown spleen. Dr. Norbert Sigafoos, the eminent ingrown spleen surgeon, was scheduled to operate, but unfortunately he was run over by a hot-food cart on the way to the scrubbing room.

"Oh, never mind," chuckled Dad (my father). "Harlow (me) will fix Sister (my sister)."

Well sir, what could I do? If I told the truth I would make a laughingstock out of Dad (my father) who had been bragging about me all over town. Also I would get yanked out of school which would be a dirty shame just when I am beginning to understand the weak club bid.

There was nothing for it but to brazen it out. I got Sister (my sister) apart all right, but I must confess myself completely at a loss as to how to put her back together again. Can you suggest anything? They're getting pretty surly around here.

Sincerely,
Harlow Protein

Dear Harlow:

Indeed I do have the solution for you—the solution that has never failed me when things close in: Light up a Marlboro! Knots untie as you puff that fine rich tobacco. Shade becomes light as that grand flavor comes freely and friendlily through that splendid filter. Who can stay glum when Marlboro gives you such a lot to like? Not I. Not you. Not nobody.

SIR:

Just off the campus where I go to school there is a lake called Lake Widgiwagan. Thirty years ago when my father was an undergraduate here he went fishing one day in Lake Widgiwagan and dropped his Duke pin in the water. He dived for days but never found it.

Just yesterday—thirty years later, mark you!—I went fishing in Widgiwagan. I caught a four-pound bass. I took the fish home, cut it open, and what do you think I found inside?

You guessed it! Two tickets to the Dempsey-Firpo fight.

Sincerely,
Willis Wayde

Covering The University Campus

PRESS CLUB

Howard White, managing editor of the Burlington Daily Times-News, will be guest speaker at the next meeting of the Press Club Monday at 7:30 p. m. The meeting will be held at the home of Nerval Neil Luxon, dean of the School of Journalism.

Following the discussion, new officers of the Press Club will be elected. Members will also hear a report from the Sigma Delta Chi committee on its work toward establishing a local chapter of the honorary journalism fraternity.

According to Davis Merritt of Hickory, president of the Press Club, plans will be made for the May Awards Banquet, annual highlight of the club's activities.

GOLDEN TO SPEAK

Harry Golden, editor of the Carolina Israelite and speaker at the recent Carolina Symposium, will speak at the Community Church service at 11 a. m. Sunday in Hill Hall.

SUMMER JOBS

Summer jobs for student planning sales careers are available in several companies reports the director of the placement service.

These jobs are training positions for juniors in business or liberal arts who definitely want to sell when they graduate. Two of these companies will recruit on campus. For further information see the Placement Service.

PLANETARIUM PROGRAM

"Easter, the Awakening," the story of the Resurrection and a tribute to spring, will be given at the Morehead Planetarium here the last time this year Monday night at 8:30 o'clock.

As of Thursday none of the five performances on Saturday and four shows on Sunday were sold out. If they are filled meantime, additional ones will be opened.

However, the Easter story will not be extended beyodd Monday night, because a new program is scheduled to open on Tuesday evening.

MAJORETTES TRYOUTS

Tryouts for majorettes will be held today at 2 p. m. Coeds interested in trying out have been asked to contact Jo Carpenter in Smith Dorm.

VADE MECUM WEEKEND

The Canterbury Club will hold its annual trip to Vade Mecum this weekend., leaving here in private cars today after classes and returning Sunday afternoon. Vade Mecum is the Episcopal camping grounds located near Mt. Airy. The group will be the host of the Duke Canterbury Club. Dean Roy Holder of the Episcopal Theological Seminary in Lexington, Ky. will be the guest speaker on a program entitled "Christian Marriage." Students going on the trip are reminded to bring blankets, sheets, and warm clothes. The trip will take the place of the regular Canterbury Club meeting Sunday night.

AYCOCK TO SPEAK

Chancellor William B. Aycock will speak at the United Congregational Christian Church at 7:30 p. m. on Sunday. "The University Looks to the Future," will be the title of the Chancellor's address. The meeting will be open to the public.

Following Chancellor Aycock's address Clyde Allen will lead a brief devotion. Refreshments will be served.

STATISTICS COLLOQUIUM

Dr. S. D. Chowla will be the guest speaker at the Colloquium. He will speak at 4 p. m. Monday. The meeting will be in Room 206 Phillips Hall.

His subject will be "Difference Sets and Their applications to Incomplete Block Design."

Dr. Chowla will also speak at the Mathematics Colloquium on "Zeta Functions and L-Series." This will be at 4 p. m. Wednesday.

Drew Graduate Dean At Wesley Weekend

Dr. Stanley R. Hopper, dean of the Graduate School at Drew University in Madison, N. J., will be the featured speaker when the Wesley Foundation of the University Methodist Church presents a series of seminars in the first annual Wesley Weekend at the Church Sunday.

The weekend is planned to provide answers and discussions on the question: "Why is our generation the 'silent' one?," "How much has Freud affected modern philosophy?," and "Is it possible to depict love or goodness appealingly in literature?"

Another discussion leader will be Dr. George Harper of the UNC English Department.

Dr. Hopper is professor of Christian philosophy and letters at Drew, as well as dean of the Graduate School. He is chairman of the Commision of Literature, Department of Worship and the Fine Arts of the National Council of Churches of Christ.

He is an editor of Religion in Life, a religious journal; has edited Spiritual Problems in Contemporary Literature and has written an exposition for the book of Jeremiah in The Interpreters Bible.

The schedule for Sunday's events is:

9:30 a. m.—Wesley Seminar, church basement. Dr. George Harper discussing, "The Condition of Man in the Modern Novel."

11 a.m.—Sermon; Dr. Hopper talking about the relationship of Christian faith to contemporary literature, stressing Thomas Wolfe.

12:30 p.m.—Lunch in Lenior Hall. Dr. Hopper answering questions on topics in morning sermon.

5:45 p.m.—Wesley Forum; supper in church basement. Dr. Hopper leading open discussion on theological concerns in modern literature.

All students are invited to come to the seminars the director said.

Bell Tower Parking Lot Filling Slowly

Use of the new Bell Tower Parking Lot has been small on the first two days of its operation.

At one time on Friday there was a total of 16 cars in the lot. Nevertheless, Jack Spain, chairman of the Bell Tower Parking Lot Committee, expressed confidence that as students become aware of the presence of the new lot, they will take more advantage of its generous capacity of 500 cars.

Heavy rains the past two days have made the gravel surface of the lot somewhat soft and have eroded it slightly in some spots. It is expected that increased use of the lot will pack it down, eliminating this problem expect in severe rain.

The new lot os intended to relieve to some extent the pressing parking problem on campus, especially in the vicinity of the library and the hospital.

Dorm Participation Aids Campus Unity more dorm men to participate in activities.

"4. Arrange periodical meetings of dorm and fraternity presidents to discuss problems concerning their relations.

"In addition to these things the president should go out and consult with dorm and fraternity president. I feel that not only will the problem of disunity be helped greatly by the above measures, but that the president will have a more representative group of persons serving as advisors.

"It is important that we have a president and an adminstration which understands and is sympathetic to all areas of campus life. Too often we have had people in controlling positions who see only one side of the picture. As an ex-dormitory officer and an ex-fraternity officer as well as a participant in many fields of campus life,

"I feel that I am qualified to represent the entire campus as president. If elected I will do my best to further unity on campus by calling on people from all areas and parties for advise, but I will never allow one group to gain the upper hand as I feel that this completely ruins any attempt to promote cooperation."

Baseballers Return Home, Meet Canisius Today At 2

The Carolina Tar Heels return home today to battle Canisius College after a four-game sweep through the Southland this week. The Heels split the series, dividing two with Georgia, to Clemson and whipped South Carolina.

Carolina now stands 7-5 overall, with a 1-1 conference record. Georgia had previously whipped the Tar Heels twice in the Rollins baseball Tourney.

The first conference game of the season saw pitcher Wayne Young lose a real heart-breaker to Clemson's Tigers. Young allowed only four safeties in going the route, and he gave up no earned runs. The Bengals won the contest via two unearned runs resulting from Carolina errors. The Tar Heel infield showed its diamond prowess by pulling two double plays in the game; Carson Oldham led the hitting with two hits in four trips.

Thursday the Chapel Hillians won their first conference game from the South Carolina Gamecocks 5-3. Ben Hammet gained credit for the victory, but not before needing help from fireman Johnny Johnson in the eighth. Johnson struck out Gamecock second sacker Nidifer with the tying run in third and two out.

Hammet is slated to start against Canisius today, but probably will not go the distance due to a sore arm. Dave Floyd will spell him in the event he tires.

READY FOR LATHAM—Carolina track star Wayne Bishop, wide eyed and bushy tailed, is prepared to meet South Carolina's Billy Latham today. Latham won the ACC cross country championship when Bishop was unable to finish the race.

Track Team Seeks First Win Against South Carolina Today

By DAVE WIBLE

With Dave Scurlock still on the doubtful list. Carolina's track squad has motored to Columbia for a duel meet with the South Carolina Gamecocks this afternoon.

It will be the second meet of the season for the Tar Heels who were barely edged by Clemson in their opener before Easter. Scurlock who is recovering from a sprained ankle did not run in that meet.

Scurlock Gets Points

Scurlock can almost always be depended on to win the 440 and half mile. The mile relay team seldom loses when he carries the anchor leg. A little calculation and you find that he finishes a meet with 15 points. Carolina needed those 15 against Clemson.

If he runs today it will probably be only one event. He has had only a few workouts on his bad ankle and is not ready for all out work.

Bishop Meets Latham

The hottest race of the day is expected to be the two-mile. In the event Wayne Bishop, Carolina's top flight distance man will get a crack at Gamecock Billy Latham—a long awaited meeting. Bishop and Latham have yet to meet on even terms. When the two squads have met during the year, one or the other has been injured before or during the race.

In the ACC cross-country championships last fall, Bishop had a long lead going into the last half mile, but had to watch Latham go by when he threw a knee out of joint. South Carolina claims Latham was catching up. The issue would have been settled at the conference indoor championships, but Latham could not run because of a bad ankle. Today's race should quell the controversy.

Another good battle will be in the hurdle events where Carolina's Lyndon Debord will meet ACC indoor high ad low hurdle champion Don Goodroe. Deborde finished third in the highs in a very close race.

South Carolina has the ACC indoor shot put champion Dave Cotes, who set a new indoor mark this. year. Don Kemper will be throwing against him for Carolina.

Golf Match Cancelled

The varsity golf match with Michigan yesterday was cancelled because of a wet course. The Tar Heels will meet Davidson Monday at Charlotte.

Whitt Takes First Round Lead In GGO

GREENSBORO, (AP)—Don Whitt, a 27-year-old Alameda, Calif., professional who has been battling a prolonged slump, putted his way into a shaky one-stroke lead wtih a 67 yesterday in the first round of the $15,000 Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament.

His 34-33-67, four under par for the Starmount Forest Country Club Course, was a fitting birthday present for his wife, Monica, who is traveling with him and their two children.

Whitt was only one shot ahead of five finals: Canadians Jerry MaGee and Al Bladin, Tommy Bolt of Chattanooga, Tenn., Johnny Pott of Shreveport, La., and Cane Bone of Detroit.

Another shot back at 69, two behind the leader, came five more professionals—Bob Keller, former Air Force pilot from Eglin Field, Fla.; Bruce Crampton of Sydney, Australia; Chuck Alexander of near by High Point and two promising California youngsters, Tony Lema of Napa and John McMullin of Fain Oaks.

Netters Score 9-0 Win Over Deacs, Frosh Open Against State Today

By ELLIOTT COOPER

The varsity tennis team opened its Atlantic Coast Conference schedule yesterday by handing the Wake Forest net squad a 9-0 beating on the home courts. The victory preserved the Tar Heels undefeated record and provided them with their fourth win of the season. The match had originally been scheduled for last Wednesday, but due to a mixup in dates it was postponed until Friday.

Yesterday's shutout win was the first time that Coach Vladimar Cernik had seen the varsity in action. Prior to Cernik's arrival at Chapel Hill the Carolina netters had beaten Williams, Harvard, and Illinois.

Wake's Second Loss

For Deacon mentor Al DePorter, the outcome of the match resulted in the second Wake Forest defeat of the year. In their only other outing this season the Baptists dropped a 5-4 decision to M.I.T.

The win over Wake Forest represented the second time this year that the Tar Heels have been able to shutout an opponent. In their first match the team turned the trick by skunking Williams 13-0. Individually, however, the scores in yesterday's matches were more impressive since no Deacon won more than two games in any one set, and the entire team won only 13 games in nine matches.

Bortner Wins

Carolina took all of the singles matches to assure victory even before the doubles competition began. Tar Heel captain Bob Bortner got back on the winning track after losing three matches and took Bill Jones in straight sets 6-2, 6-2. Geoff Black won his fifth match by downing Harry Nelson 6-1, 6-2, and Steve Bank picked up his fourth win when he whipped Walt Connor.

In two matches the Deacs were unable to rack up a single game. In the number five singles Ben Keys put the hex on Jerry Mitchell and won the match love and love. Black and Dick Makepeace also scored a complete shutout in their doubles match against Mitchell and Henry Helms.

Freshmen Play Today At Chowan

Carolina's freshman baseballers travel to Chowan today for a return match with Chowan's diamond men. Carolina won the first tiff April 4 here.

The freshman nine have been plgaued by rain recently with their last two outings with Duke and Oak Ridge canceled. Thus far in the season the freshmen have chalked up three wins to their credit over Chowan, Campbell, and Presbyterian Junior College.

Starting for Carolina will be Ferguson Norton, 2b; Tommy Camp. 3b; Bud Ellerbe, ss; Carroll Bolick, catcher; Dee Frady. lf; Dickie Horde, cf; Joe Grimsley, rf; John Stott 1b; with either Henny Supplee or Wayne Allen assuming the mound.

Next week the frosh take on Duke here on the 15, and at Duke on the 16. Following these two outings they travel away from home for games with State the 17 and Oak Ridge the 18.

Don Furtado Urges Students To Think Before Balloting

Don Furtado, Student Party candidate for President, has urged, every student to take time to think and to vote in Tuesday's election.

"During the past month, the Carolina campus has been the center of a heated contest for the presidency . . . On Tuesday, the final verdict of the students will be known," began Furtado.

"I urge everyone—undergraduate and graduate—to take the few minutes that will be required to cast his vote in this final election," the candidate continued.

"In this last statement, I do not intend to deliver an exposition on my plans or my background. I believe that one month has given everyone ample opportunity to familiarize himself with the experience and capabilities of the presidential candidates.

"The needs of the campus are obvious—the solutions are not so obvious. I can only pledge to devote my full time and experience in attempting to solve those problems.

"No matter who is elected," continued Furtado, "I hope that the students will grant him their whole

SP Leaders Praise Furtado And Evans

By DAVE JONES

Interdormitory Council President Rudy Edwards and Attorney General Sonny Hallford have both released statements in support of the candidacy of Don Furtado.

IDC President Edwards' enumerated the accomplishments of Student Government under its recent leaders, including Sonny Evans and Don Furtado. In it he refuted the idea that "It is time for a change."

Attorney General Hallford's statement emphasized Furtado's experience and ability and the unity of the Student Party organization behind him.

The text of Edward's statement began. "This year Student Government under the leadership of Sonny Evans and Don Furtado has made great progress. These two Student Party leaders have been instrumental in deriving new gains for the student body."

"Probably the most notable," continued Edwards, "has been the revision of the Honor System. For the past several years there had developed an apathetic and indifferent feeling toward the Honor System . . . It was something remote and out of the student's reach.

"Hence the Student Party became very concerned and under the leadership of Sonny Evans and Don Furtado has introduced the Jury System."

He touched on the parking problem by saying: "With the completion of the Bell Tower Parking lot, this problem has been greatly alleviated. This too was due to the competent leadership of the executive branch.

"For many years the students have wanted a rebate on their money spent in the Book Ex and in vending machines. Today, through much hard and delicate work, Student Government has been able to channel part of this money into such benefits for the student as television repair funds.'

"I feel that the majority of the students know that the Student Party is the party of action and advancements and are not fooled by the false cry of 'It's time for a change.'

In conclusion the president of the IDC said, "We hope and feel that the students will continue to place their faith in the Student Party. They can express their faith in continued progress by electing Don Furtado student body president."

Sonny Hallford began by saying "Don Furtado is one of the best qualified candidates for the presidency of the student body appearing on the campus political scene in some years.

"He is a fast, independent thinker who has a thorough understanding of Student Government and campus problems. The Student Party pledges to support Don and his program 100 per cent during the coming year. Don's wisdom has been demonstrated by his proven ability to distinguish between critical campus problems and trivialities in his recent debates with the opposition.

"One of the real problems facing student government next year is that of proving the need for a new Student Union and of helping Mr. Henry become acquainted with the Carolina method of student administered activities. Don Furtado has served on the Board of Directors of Graham Memorial for two years and was a member of a special delegation that visited Mr. Henry, the new director of Graham Memorial, and which recommended him for the directorship. Don is most qualified to lead in solving this all campus challenge."

"Having been a resident of Mangum Dormitory for two years, Don knows the reality of dormitory griefs and forsees the problem arising from the annexation of a new dormitory district."

Cooperation Needed Declares Goldsmith

Al Goldsmith, University Party candidate for student body president, cited the need for a vigorous chief executive and a unified administration to solve the pressing problems of the campus in his final statement Saturday before Tuesday's balloting.

"If student government is to keep up with the needs of the students and the rapid growth of this University there must be a change to a more vigorous and realistic administration." began Goldsmith. "To provide the type of leadership needed we need people in office who will devote their unwavering attention not so much to such theoretical and philosophic questions as to whether one honor council is better than two, or whether discrimination is good or bad, but to such down to earth problems as improvement of dorm social facilities, a new stu-

Opposition To New Coed Rules Expressed By Student Leaders

Present President of the Student Body Sonny Evans, candidates for president Don Furtado and Al Goldsmith, and chairman of the University Party Syd Shuford spoke out yesterday against the new rules for Freshman women scheduled to be instituted this fall.

Evans said he doesn't "believe that rules ought to be made unless there is a situation existing which realistically demands restrictions. It is my opinion, according to the information already gathered, that the admission standards for freshman women are such that forced study rules are both unnecessary and inconsistent.

"Since I don't think that freshman women ought to have separate rules, I can see no reason for segregating them since much of their development and maturity depends on their association with the older girls.

Furtado, in disagreeing with the change in rules, said, "My first reaction to the proposed plan is unfavorable. I don't believe in differentiating between college students merely because of their class status. However, I have not yet had an opportunity to discuss the new plan with Lillian Shannonhouse, Julia Ann Crater, or Dean Carmichael. It is possible, though not probable, that my opinion concerning the restrictions of freshman women students may change after talking to those primarily responsible for the measures.

Candidate Goldsmith commented, "I do not like the new freshman women's rules as they now exist. While recognizing the concern of the University over the scholastic performance of freshmen women, I do not feel these changes will completely solve the problem but will create more problems.

"Under the new rules freshmen women will be able to attend only one campus function a week. This rule alone will make it impossible for most freshmen to attend political party meetings, concerts, and lectures which are so much a part of a Carolina education.

"For example, if the Carolina Symposium were to be held in the fall no freshman women could attend more than one session. In the spring those girls without C averages could not be present more than

Coed Rules Clarified Statutes Not Final

The new rules for freshmen women have not been finalized as of yet.

Luann Thornton, personnel advisor to women, said that the rules are not yet in final form and will have to have the approval of the Dean of Women's office when they are in final form.

Dean of Women Katherine Carmichael and Miss Thornton clarified two points about the rules. These rules will take effect for both freshman coeds and freshman nursing students.

Miss Carmichael said that she felt that this would bring about some uniformity on freshman rules throughout the campus.

The second point that was clarified

Sing Follows Fleece

Seventeen campus organizations will perform in the annual Valkyrie Sing Monday night in Memorial Hall. The Sing will immediately follow the tapping of new members into the Golden Fleece honorary society which gets underway at 7 p.m.

Twelve o'clock permission has been extended to Coeds in case the Sing continues beyond regular closing hours.

According to Peggy Funk, chairman of the Valkyrie Sing, this year's number of entries is a considerable increase over previous years. "It is probably due to the change in the make-up of the Sing," she explained.

This year the Sing is divided into two subdivisions: a musical skit division and a sing division. Twelve campus organizations are entering the sing division, whereas only five are entering the musical skit. Another change from previous years is that there are more men's organizations entering than previously.

The Valkyries, senior honorary organization for women, recognizes women students "most outstandnig in character and achievement, with the number selected each year not exceeding two per cent of the women enrolled." Outside or their internal activity, this is their big public program of the year.
